Mr. JONES. The time limit will not permit me to discuss other issues.

Now, let me ask you to permit me to discuss two or three new features in the bill which the committee is preparing. We have the terms I spoke of a while ago, we have the ever normal granary, and then we have added two or three new features to the bill.

GRADUATED PAYMENTS

First, we have provided for a graduated system of benefit payments, so that the large producer who has gotten these great funds in individual cases will have them greatly reduced on a graduated-scale basis. The man, even on a soil-conservation payment, who has a great tract of land, can treat that tract at less expense than the man who has a small tract and who has to have all of his facilities just the same. I think it is correct philosophy, anyway. So we have put that provision in the bill, and that has not been in a general agricultural bill before.

RESEARCH LABORATORIES

Then we included a provision to the effect that there shall be established in each major agricultural producing area a research laboratory to search out new uses and new markets and new outlets for various commodities. It think that offers a vast field. There is a chemical revolution going on in America at this time, in fact, all over the world. I think there is a vast field there, and that tallies in with what my friend was saying a while ago.

FREIGHT RATES

Then we have another thing that I regard as of tremendous importance that has not been put in any bill. We give the Secretary authority to file with the Interstate Commerce Commission applications for adjustments in farm freight rates. [Applause.] That is a matter of tremendous importance. Various groups that are organized and have plenty of money are able to present their problems. The farmers in these wide stretches are not able to fight their problems through.

I just want to read to you two or three of the rank discriminations that have been built up in the agricultural rate structure. I want to call attention, before I do that, to the system that prevails about zones. Figuring a certain industrial zone in America as having rates at 100 percent, then the second zone, which is the southern, would be 139. In other words, the freight rates are 39 percent more in that zone. In the western trunk-line zone they are 47 percent more, or 147. In the southwestern zone, 175. In the Mountain-Pacific, 171.

I wish the Members would get that testimony which was heard before the Committee on Education and Labor, beginning on page 1023, by J. Hayden Aldrich.

INDIVIDUAL RATES

Now, I want to call your attention to some discriminations, just individual rates.

Let us take the case of two plows shipped from Indianapolis to Galveston, Tex., one for export, the other to be used by a farmer in Texas. The rate on the plow that stays in Texas is $1.04 per 100 pounds, but the rate on the plow that goes abroad is 44 cents per 100 pounds, both loaded at the same city and unloaded at the same port. This is not right.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FORD of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 15 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RANDOLPH). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. JONES. I thank the gentleman from Mississippi. I am sorry to take so much time. Here is another illustration: The rate on agricultural implements from Indianapolis to New Orleans, La., taking plows, again, is 44 cents per 100 pounds for the plow that is to be exported, but it is 75 cents per 100 pounds for the plow that stays in Louisiana. This is a bonus to industry. Maybe it is justified, maybe it is in the interest of progress, but it is not fair unless the same low rates are given to the products of agriculture.

CORRECTING RATES

We authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to file applications for adjustment and to fight them through either himself or in cooperation with cooperative organizations of farmers.

I have other rates from Chicago to New Orleans and other points, but I shall not take time to go into them all.

Steel affords another interesting example. The rate on steel shipped from Chicago, Ill., to San Francisco, Calif., to be used in California, is $1.02 per 100. The rate on similar steel from Chicago for shipment abroad is 40 cents. The rate on steel from Gary, Ind., to New York, loaded at the same station and unloaded on the same dock, is 47 cents if the steel stays in New York but only 34 cents if it is to be shipped abroad.

COCONUT OIL

Coconut oil comes into Galveston and is shipped to Chicago, Ill., and Cincinnati, Ohio. The rate from Galveston to these cities on coconut oil is 35 cents, but if we cotton farmers of the South ship cottonseed oil from Galveston to Cincinnati, we have to pay 60 cents per 100 pounds—25 cents on 100 pounds difference against an American product, our own cottonseed oil. These things just illustrate the many different propositions that are involved. We want to provide a way to correct these unjust discriminations.

Then we have a control feature which I think should be linked up with this, but which we want to go into further, and it may be necessary to strengthen this.

DISPOSING OF SURPLUS

We have in our bill a further provision which enables a certain fund to be used for increasing the markets for a surplus commodity. I think we ought not only to have a control provision, but we ought to have a provision that will link distribution into control, because if you get wider distribution and use, you have accomplished the same purpose and more, because you have kept more people at work. In other words, the point I am trying to make here this afternoon is that we ought not to plant morning glory vines, we ought to try to plant oak trees. [Applause.]

Many glorious chapters have been written in American history, written in the blood and courage and zeal of pioneers, written in the ring of the axe in the primeval forests, written in the tunnels that pierce the mountains, written in the bridges that span yawning chasms, written in the creaking of the western-bound prairie wagons, written in the sweat of the toiling plowman, in the genius and magnitude of industry, in the skyline of great cities, and in the building of those things that are distinctly American.

PRODUCTION AND DISTRIBUTION

We have mastered the machinery of production to a greater degree than we have mastered the machinery of distribution. The problem, however, is not to destroy production, not to destroy distribution, but to get them properly yoked and linked. With all of our talk about surpluses, I have always felt that we have never produced building material but that somewhere in this land or in lands that are an open market to us, there is a human being that needs the shelter that material could furnish; that we have never grown a bale of cotton but that somewhere in this or in distant lands is a child, a woman, a man, some human being, who needs the warmth that clothing can furnish; that we have never grown a bushel of wheat but that somewhere out yonder under the stars is a hungry mouth that needs to be fed. We do not want to destroy production, we do not want to destroy distribution. Sometimes one gets ahead of the other and it is necessary to have control; but we want to march them side by side as handmaidens of each other [applause] and as twin evangels of the economic life of our common country. [Applause, the Members rising.]

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, as a Representative from the State of Mississippi, whose population is predominatingly of the agriculture class, and whose principal crop is cotton, I am very much disturbed as to what position they will be placed in within the next 60 days, because the gathering of this, one of our basic agricultural commodities, will be in full swing.

The chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Senator SMITH, of South Carolina, and the Chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, MARVIN JONES, of Texas, have stated to the membership of each body and the press generally, there will likely be no farm legislation enacted at this session of Congress.

I can appreciate these gentlemen's positions, both of whom are from the South, and whose constituents are farmers and their principal crop is cotton, and that they are familiar with their problems and are anxious when any legislation is passed, they, too, will be placed on an equal basis of benefits as the farmers in the other sections of the country who raise the other basic commodities, such as corn, wheat, and tobacco.

I understand why they will not further consider farm legislation at this session, until they can go into the different sections of the country and hold hearings to get the viewpoint of this class of our citizenship.

Mr. Speaker, realizing that there will likely be no legislation in behalf of the farmers passed at this session, and further realizing the position the cotton, wheat, and corn growers are going to be placed in when the gathering of their crop is in full swing, relative to the marketing of same with prices daily declining, it behooves this Congress at its present session to do something for the farmers of our Nation before adjournment so as to protect them in this, a moment which, in my opinion, is very critical.

A report recently submitted by the Department of Agriculture as to the acreage and condition of the crops of our major commodities—cotton, corn, and wheat—shows that on last year there was an acreage planted in cotton in round figures 31,000,000, and this year an acreage of about 34,000,000. Therefore, by reason of climatic conditions being more favorable this season, there will likely be produced around 15,500,000 bales of cotton, whereas on last year there was 12,148,000 bales produced; that there was an increase in the acreage of wheat and corn, and therefore a proportionately increased yield predicted.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure the membership is following daily the market reports on each of these major products of the farm and have noted that within the past 5 or 6 weeks there has been a very decided decline in the price of each. In fact, if you have noted these daily reports, you are aware there has been a constant decline for the past 45 days on each of them.

I want to call your attention to the fact that, in my opinion, even though there is likely to be an increase in the yield of the three major crops caused by an increase in acreage and favorable climatic conditions; that even though this is true, by reason of the increased demand from the European and Oriental countries, and by reason of the increased purchasing power of the people of this country, that such increase does not and will not justify the lowering of the prices of same, but should, in my opinion, justify the assertion there should be a material increase in the price of each.

Mr. Speaker, those of our people whose avocation is to speculate on the boards of trade and exchanges of our country for a livelihood are using this fact—that is, an increase of production by reason of the small increase in acreage and the benefaction of our Creator of weather conditions—as a means and method of hammering down the prices of same for the personal benefit and gain of those who follow this method of making a livelihood.

Mr. Speaker, there is but one way to thwart this method of depriving this patriotic class of our citizenship, who are not asking this body to restrict their hours of labor, who principally work 12 to 15 hours per day to produce their crops, not only by the labor of themselves but of their wives and children, and who are only asking this body for a fair deal and that they be placed in line with the people following other avocations and receive a remuneration for their days, weeks, months, and year of labor, commensurate with those following other avocations, and that way is for Congress to pass an act authorizing loans on their products that will at least cover the cost of production, unless the President will exercise the authority already given him by Congress.

Since it is so open and apparent that the speculators are using the conditions stated as a means to increase their earnings and deprive the farmers of their just dues, it behooves this body, who only can control the situation, to pass legislation protecting them, thereby keeping the basic people of our country in a prosperous condition, for the Nation only prospers when the farmers prosper.

I have, therefore, introduced a bill authorizing and directing the Department of Agriculture, through whatever agency it may designate, to make loans unto these people whom I represent, and who are raising the products of the farm that is not only clothing the people of our Nation but the people of the world, the price of which has been hammered down within the past 5 weeks almost 2 cents per pound; that is, cotton.

The provisions of this bill, which would enable our Government, through the Department of Agriculture, to loan to them a price of not less than 12 cents per pound, ⅞-inch Middling basis, woul dnot give them a profit but would merely remunerate them for their labor for the year of toil in the production of same.

Legislation for the benefit of every class of our farmers throughout the country has been introduced and is now pending before the committees of each branch of our legislative body, but because of the differences of opinion by the Representatives from the different districts representing the different classes of our agricultural people, each of whom have at heart the welfare of that class in their several sections, are of the opinion that the bill that is being fostered by the Department of Agriculture and administration will not give equitable relief to all classes of same as it should.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say that, even though I come from an agricultural State whose principal crop is cotton, I want to see the corn, wheat, tobacco, barley, cotton, and all classes of our farmers who raise the same to be placed on an equitable basis and will support legislation that will do so.

As stated, the bills that are pending now, and especially those fostered by the Department of Agriculture, do not give to the cotton farmers of the South the same fair and equitable benefits as they do to other classes of our farmers; that is, wheat, corn, and tobacco. Hence no Representative of that class of our people who raise cotton would support and foster legislation of that kind, because the cotton farmers of the South are citizens of this great country of ours and their hearts and souls pulsate with that same patriotism for the preservation of each and every class of our citizenship, as do those in any other section who are the producers of other commodities of the farm.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for 5 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, I want to call the membership's attention to the fact of the disparity that was placed on the cotton farmers of the South in the enactment of the Agricultural Adjustment Act by this Congress 3 or 4 years ago, which was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. The present legislation pending, passage of which is being urged by the Department of Agriculture and administration, is even more disparaging when, as stated, every class of our people whose avocation is agricultural pursuits should be on an equitable basis.

Under the act we labored under and as passed by this Congress in 1933 the cotton farmer received an average payment per rented acre of $8.53; he received an average payment per rented acre, including cotton price-adjustment payment, of $9.98. The tobacco farmer received an average payment per rented acre of $52.43; the corn farmer received $9.06 per acre; and the wheat farmer received $16.46 per acre. The average return per planted acre of these farmers on which their basis acreage were adjusted from 1928 to 1932 is as follows:

Cotton	$23.21
Tobacco	107.22
Corn	14.01
Wheat	8.96

The average return per planted acre of these farmers from 1920 to 1929 was as follows:

Cotton	$35.99
Tobacco	146.83
Corn	20.67
Wheat	14.99

The payment per rented acre as a percent of the average return per rented acre from 1928 to 1932, on which parity payments were made, is as follows:

	Percent
Cotton	36.8
Tobacco	48.9
Corn	64.7
Wheat	183.7

The payment per planted acre, including cotton price-adjustment payments as a percent of the average return per planted acre from 1920 to 1929, was only 27.7 percent.

These figures will show unto the Members of Congress that the cotton farmer received under this act a much lower percentage of the benefits from the payments made from the rented acreage to the Government than those growing corn, tobacco, and wheat.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 4 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I shall not object if I can get 10 minutes at the end of the gentleman's speech. Will the gentleman yield for a unanimous-consent request?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is improper to couple a condition with an objection. The gentleman from Kansas must either object or not object. Does the gentleman object?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. No. I wanted 5 minutes last night. I do not object to a new Member using 10 or 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has a right to object, but he cannot couple an objection with a request. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman if he will answer one or two questions at the end of his speech?

Mr. McGEHEE. I will be glad to answer the questions.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection.

Mr. McGEHEE. As I have stated, I am sure the membership desires, just as I do, to see that our agricultural people and their status in any legislation passed by Congress is equitable and just to each class of our producers. But the legislation now pending, just as that passed in 1933, is not giving to the cotton farmers whom I represent that same equitable distribution as it does to the other classes.

Permit me to state to the membership, in the event under the act passed by Congress in 1933, if the cotton farmer had received a proportion in benefits to the tobacco, corn, and wheat farmer, the price per acre would have been as follows:

In proportion to that as received by the tobacco farmer, the cotton farmer would have received in the place of their benefits and adjustment $9.98 per acre, the sum of $12.85 per acre; in proportion to what the corn farmer received on the same basis, he would have received $15.76 per acre and in proportion to what the wheat farmer received, he would have received $39.52 per acre, or, in other words, the cotton farmer received payment per pound at the average yield per acre of 5.02 cents, and with the adjustment payment an average of 5.87 cents per pound. But if he had received in proportion to what the tobacco farmer received, he would have received 7.6 cents per pound; in proportion to what the corn farmer received, 9.3 cents per pound; and in proportion to the wheat farmer, 23.2 cents per pound.

Now, if H. R. 7577 should be passed, as the Department of Agriculture and many of our farm organizations insist, the cotton farmer would be further penalized insofar as returns are concerned about as follows: Cotton, 50 percent plus; tobacco and corn, between 60 and 70 percent plus; and wheat, about 80 percent of parity prices.

Now, my fellow Members, I am calling your attention to this with a view of awakening the membership of the House, who are representing the corn, wheat, and tobacco farmers, to the fact that the cotton farmers have been discriminated against in all legislation passed since the beginning of the New Deal, which I know was not intentional on the part of their Representatives, but my purpose is to call it to your attention, with a view of thwarting another wrong on the Southern cotton farmers of the country and to see that they are placed on an equitable basis with those whom you represent.

Mr. Speaker, realizing the nonequitable distribution that has been paid to the farmers, especially in my section, and my intense desire as their Representative to see that they receive that same equal benefit in proportion with the other classes of our agricultural people, I have introduced this bill and am pleading with the membership for its passage, so as to loan to the cotton farmers of the South moneys at a price per pound, which, as stated, will return to them at least the cost of production and a meager wage on their part for same.

The measures that are being fostered by the Department of Agriculture and recommended by the administration have provisions in them which are far more inequitable and proportionately as disparaging insofar as the benefits to our Southern cotton farmers are concerned, as the legislation heretofore passed in behalf of our agricultural people in the past 4 years.

I cannot stand by and see this done without appealing to those of you who represent the corn, wheat, tobacco, and other agricultural sections, to join hands with me in asking for relief for my people, and your people if you should deem it necessary, at this critical moment, and to embody the same benefits in my bill.

I am further reciting to you the facts of that which has existed in your actions heretofore. I am aware of the fact that through legislation heretofore passed by Congress our President has the authority by Executive order to authorize the Commodity Credit Corporation to make loans on the basic crop production of the farms, at whatever price he may desire to fix, and that the machinery is already set up whereby this can be done and sufficient moneys are available for the carrying out of that Executive order, if so given. But I am fearful that on account of no farm legislation being enacted at this session, and because of the President's statement that it was one of his "must" bills, this Executive order will not be taken advantage of. Hence my reason for the introduction of this bill and urging its passage by Congress so as to in this way peg the price of cotton at a percentage that will give a return to my people of a living wage and stop the speculators from hammering it down to a price that is not commensurate with the cost of living and a meager return for their labor.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 additional minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may have 2 additional minutes. I would like to ask him some questions.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. McGEHEE] asks unanimous consent to address the House for 1 additional minute. Is there objection?

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is heard.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. McGEHEE] may have 2 additional minutes to address the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection?

Mr. McGEHEE. Mr. Speaker, I am not selfish in asking for this legislation. I only want to see justice done by the Representatives of the people throughout the land. If the Representatives of the corn, wheat, and tobacco sections, by reasons of conditions existing on the speculative market, are of the opinion that the products grown by their constituents will be hammered down by the speculators below the cost of production, I am willing that the committee who considers this bill I have introduced shall amend it pegging the price of their products and add an appropriation sufficient to take care of same unless an Executive order should be given taking care of the situation.

I am for the prosperity of this Nation as a whole. I realize that legislation should not be enacted for any particular section, but it should be equitable to all classes and none should ask for any legislation at the expense of another. We must work as Representatives in uniformity for our agricultural people, for they form the foundation of the structure of any prosperous country.

My bill is only applicable to the crop grown in the year 1937, as I am assuming, and feel safe in that assumption, that this Congress when it convenes next January, through the efforts of the committees and of the Members of both branches, who I know to be vitally interested in the same, because the prosperity of our country absolutely depends on the prosperity of our agricultural people, will see that equitable and adequate farm legislation will be enacted, so as to in the future give the proper protection to this class of our citizenship, upon whom depend the very life, prosperity, and happiness of the whole people of the Nation.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McGEHEE. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. The gentleman speaks about the increased production of cotton. Has there been any increase in the exportation of cotton during the last year or two?

Mr. McGEHEE. Yes; there has been a material increase in the exportation of cotton.

Mr. RICH. To what extent?

Mr. McGEHEE. Some 2,000,000 bales. I do not have the exact figures.

Mr. RICH. A few years ago about 58 percent of our cotton was exported. What percentage of our cotton is now being exported?

Mr. McGEHEE. Last year about 40 percent.

[Here the gavel fell.]

BONNEVILLE PROJECT

Mr. PARSONS submitted a conference report and statement on the bill (H. R. 7642) to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted, as follows:

To Mr. FITZPATRICK, indefinitely, on account of official business.

To Mr. O'NEAL of Kentucky, indefinitely, on account of official business.

To Mr. SCRUGHAM, indefinitely, on account of official business.

To Mr. WHITE of Idaho, indefinitely, on account of illness.

SENATE BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION REFERRED

Bills and a joint resolution of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 1261. An act to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

S. 2583. An act to provide for the acquisition of certain lands for and the addition thereof to the Tahoe National Forest, in the State of Nevada, and the acquisition of certain lands for the completion of the acquisition of the remaining lands within the limits of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, in east Tennessee; to the Committee on Public Lands.

S. 2670. An act to provide that the United States shall aid the States in wildlife-restoration projects, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture.

S. J. Res. 191. Joint resolution to protect foreign diplomatic and consular officers and the buildings and premises occupied by them in the District of Columbia; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled a bill of the House of the following title, which was thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 2260. An act to provide for intervention by the United States, direct appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, and regulation of the issuance of injunctions, in certain cases involving the constitutionality of acts of Congress, and for other purposes.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on the following dates present to the President, for his approval, bills and joint resolutions of the House of the following titles:

On August 10, 1937:

H. R. 420. An act for the relief of Marjorie L. Baxter;

H. R. 827. An act for the relief of Fred P. Halbert;

H. R. 886. An act for the relief of Guideo Biscaro, Giovanni Polin, Spironello Antonio, Arturo Bettio, Carlo Biscaro, and Antonio Vannin;

H. R. 1207. An act conferring jurisdiction upon the United States District Court for the Middle District of Georgia to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claims of the estates of Marshall Campbell and Raymond O'Neal;

H. R. 1690. An act for the relief of Ralph Reisler;

H. R. 1734. An act for the relief of Sam Romack;

H. R. 1770. An act for the relief of the Farmers' Storage & Fertilizer Co., of Aiken, S. C.;

H. R. 1794. An act for the relief of the estate of Marcellino M. Gilmette;

H. R. 1869. An act for the relief of J. Roy Workman, Adelaide W. Workman, and J. Roy Workman, Jr., a minor;

H. R. 1915. An act for the relief of Charles Tabit;

H. R. 2488. An act for the relief of A. H. Sphar;

H. R. 2740. An act for the relief of John N. Brooks;

H. R. 3395. An act for the relief of J. H. Knott;

H. R. 3503. An act for the relief of George O. Claypool;

H. R. 3745. An act for the relief of W. H. Lenneville;

H. R. 3750. An act for the relief of Jack C. Allen;

H. R. 3866. An act to add certain lands to the Columbia National Forest in the State of Washington;

H. R. 3960. An act for the relief of the Southern Overall Co.;

H. R. 3987. An act for the relief of the estate of Col. C. J. Bartlett, United States Army;

H. R. 4156. An act for the relief of George R. Brown;

H. R. 4526. An act for the relief of Lake Spence;

H. R. 4543. An act to amend the Tariff Act of 1930 to exempt vessels arriving for the purpose of taking on ship's stores and certain sea stores from the requirement of formal entry;

H. R. 5229. An act for the relief of Carson Bradford;

H. R. 5622. An act for the relief of Marian Malik;

H. R. 5859. An act authorizing the Territory of Alaska to transfer a certain tract of land to Sitka Cold Storage Co., a corporation;

H. R. 5963. An act providing for the establishment of a term of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of New York at Malone, N. Y.;

H. R. 6059. An act for the relief of Edith Jordan;

H. R. 6482. An act providing for cooperation with the State of Oklahoma in constructing a permanent memorial to Will Rogers;

H. R. 6547. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works in or in the vicinity of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7274. An act to enable the Department of Labor to formulate and promote the furtherance of labor standards necessary to safeguard the welfare of apprentices and to cooperate with the States in the promotion of such standards;

H. R. 7433. An act to advance a program of national safety and accident prevention;

H. R. 7714. An act to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to transfer the two unused lighthouse sites in Kahului town site, Island of Maui, Territory of Hawaii, in exchange for two plots of land located in the same town site and now occupied for lighthouse purposes under permission from the respective owners, the Kahului Railroad Co. and the Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co., Ltd.;

H. R. 7727. An act to authorize the administration of oaths by the Chief Clerk and the Assistant Chief Clerk of the office of the United States High Commissioner to the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7741. An act to amend the Adjusted Compensation Payment Act, 1936, to provide for the escheat to the United States of certain amounts;

H. J. Res. 284. Joint resolution authorizing the President of the United States of America to proclaim the 13th day of April of each year Thomas Jefferson's Birthday; and

H. J. Res. 288. Joint resolution to permit articles imported from foreign countries for the purpose of exhibition at the New York World's Fair 1939, New York City, N. Y., to be admitted without payment of tariff, and for other purposes.

On August 11, 1937:

H. R. 5969. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States", approved July 1, 1898, and acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto; and

H. R. 6384. An act to liberalize the provisions of existing laws governing service-connected benefits for World War veterans and their dependents, and for other purposes.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 10 minutes.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Illinois. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order a quorum is not present.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 55 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, August 12, 1937, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON NAVAL AFFAIRS

Special Subcommittee on Naval Affairs appointed by Chairman CARL VINSON will hold continued open hearings on H. R. 7777, to further amend section 3 of the act entitled "An act to establish the composition of the United States Navy with respect to the categories of vessels limited by treaties signed at Washington, February 6, 1922, and at London, April 22, 1930, at the limit prescribed by those treaties; to authorize the construction of certain naval vessels; and for other purposes", approved March 27, 1934 (48 Stat. 505), as amended by the act of June 25, 1936 (49 Stat. 1926; 34 U. S. C., sec. 496), Thursday, August 12, 1937, at 10:30 a. m.

COMMITTEE ON INVALID PENSIONS

There will be a meeting of the Committee on Invalid Pensions on Thursday, August 12, 1937, at 10 a. m.; hearings on H. R. 3580, H. R. 6884, and H. R. 6904.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. MALONEY: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 7348. A bill declaring Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, La., a nonnavigable stream; without amendment (Rept. No. 1492). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. MALONEY: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 8068. A bill to authorize the construction of bridges in Caddo Parish, La.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1493). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. WOLFENDEN: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. H. R. 8167. A bill to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Delaware River between the village of Barryville, N. Y., and the village of Shohola, Pa.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1494). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. COLE of Maryland: Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. S. 2761. An act authorizing the State of Maryland, by and through its State Roads Commission or the successors of said commission, to construct, maintain, and operate certain bridges across streams, rivers, and navigable waters which are wholly or partly within the State; without amendment (Rept. No. 1495). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. ROGERS of Oklahoma: Committee on Indians Affairs. H. R. 8027. A bill to authorize the reservation of minerals in future sales of lands of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Indians in Oklahoma; with amendment (Rept. No. 1496). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DEMPSEY: Committee on the Public Lands. S. 1889. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to convey all right, title, and interest of the United States in certain lands to the State of New Mexico, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1497). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DEMPSEY: Committee on the Public Lands. S. 2613. An act for the relief of certain applicants for oil and gas permits and leases; without amendment (Rept. No. 1498). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DEMPSEY: Committee on the Public Lands. S. 2614. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to patent certain tracts of land to the State of New Mexico and Cordy Bramblet; without amendment (Rept. No. 1499). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. GREEVER: Committee on the Public Lands. S. 2682. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to issue patents to States under the provisions of section 8 of the act of June 28, 1934 (48 Stat. 1269), as amended by the act of June 26, 1936 (49 Stat. 1976), subject to prior leases issued under section 15 of the said act; without amendment (Rept. No. 1500). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HILL of Washington: Committee on Indian Affairs. S. 558. An act amending acts fixing the rate of payment of irrigation construction costs on the Wapato Indian irrigation project, Yakima, Wash., and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1501). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. PALMISANO: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 2194. An act to provide for the semiannual inspection of all motor vehicles in the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 1502). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. HILL of Alabama: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 1551. An act to amend section 24 of the Judicial Code, as amended, with respect to the jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States over suits relating to the collection of State taxes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1503). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. MANSFIELD: Committee on Rivers and Harbors. S. 2650. An act to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of the Fort Peck project for navigation, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1504). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 305. A resolution providing for the consideration of S. 413, an act to create a commission and to extend further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects, and on Indian irrigation projects; without amendment (Rept. No. 1505). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 7649. A bill relating to certain lands within the boundaries of the Crow Reservation, Mont.; without amendment (Rept. No. 1506). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. TOWEY: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 7709. A bill to incorporate the American Chemical Society; without amendment (Rept. No. 1508). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. IGLESIAS: A bill (H. R. 8213) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to dispose of certain real estate of the Treasury Department; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona: A bill (H. R. 8214) to authorize the erection of additional facilities to the existing United States Veterans' Administration Facility at Tucson, Ariz.; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

By Mr. CANNON of Missouri: Resolution (H. Res. 306) relative to the enactment of legislation providing for the stabilization of agricultural prices; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. DIMOND: Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 24) requesting the President to prepare and submit to Congress a plan for development of resources and commerce of Alaska; to the Committee on the Territories.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CANNON of Missouri: A bill (H. R. 8215) for the relief of the State of Missouri; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CASE of South Dakota: A bill (H. R. 8216) for the relief of William M. Robertson; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

By Mr. JARMAN: A bill (H. R. 8217) granting an increase of pension to Grizelda Hull Hobson; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. McLAUGHLIN: A bill (H. R. 8218) for the relief of Thomas P. Dineen; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8219) for the relief of Bonnie Straley; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PACE: A bill (H. R. 8220) for the relief of Lizzie Ragan; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. PETERSON of Georgia: A bill (H. R. 8221) for the relief of Lee C. Brinson; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. REED of New York: A bill (H. R. 8222) for the relief of William H. Keesey; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. STACK: A bill (H. R. 8223) granting a pension to Elizabeth C. Conley; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

3218. By Mr. CURLEY: Petition of the Merchants Association of New York City, urging enactment of House bill 8129, introduced by Congressman KENNEY, providing an amendment to the Motor Carrier Act exempting motor-truck operations within metropolitan districts from the provisions of the act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3219. Also, petition of the Department Store Employees Union, New York City, urging enactment of the Allen-Schwellenbach bill; to the Committee on Appropriations.

3220. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York and vicinity, urging support of the wage and hour bill and the housing bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3221. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York and Vicinity, concerning the wage and hour bill and the housing bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3222. Also, petition of the International Agricultural Corporation, New York City, concerning the wage and hour bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3223. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the International Agricultural Corporation, New York City, concerning exemption of the fertilizer industry in the wage and hour bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3224. By Mr. KENNEY: Petition of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, urging enactment of the Federal train-limit law; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3225. By Mr. FITZPATRICK: Petition of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York and Vicinity, urging the passage of the wage and hour bill, also the housing bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3226. By Mr. DICKSTEIN: Petition of the Disabled American Veterans of the United States; to the Committee on World War Veterans' Legislation.

3227. By Mr. CLASON: Petition of Mayor Henry Martens and six members of the board of aldermen of Springfield, Mass., requesting Congress to give immediate consent to the Connecticut River interstate flood-control compact as approved by the legislatures of Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Massachusetts; to the Committee on Flood Control.

3228. Also, petition of Mayor Charles L. Dunn and five members of the board of aldermen of Northampton, Mass., requesting Congress to give immediate consent to the Connecticut River interstate flood-control compact as approved by the legislatures of Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Massachusetts; to the Committee on Flood Control.

3229. By Mr. CURLEY: Petition of Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, Associated Musicians of New York, urging enactment of the Allen-Schwellenbach bill; to the Committee on Appropriations.

SENATE

THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1937

(Legislative day of Monday, Aug. 9, 1937)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Wednesday, August 11, 1937, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT—NOMINATIONS AND APPROVAL OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION

A message in writing from the President of the United States nominating HUGO L. BLACK, of Alabama, to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States and also messages submitting sundry other nominations were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of the President's secretaries.

Mr. Latta also communicated to the Senate the intelligence that the President had approved and signed the following acts and joint resolution:

On August 6, 1937:

S. 1115. An act to amend section 22 of the act approved March 4, 1925, entitled "An act providing for sundry matters affecting the naval service, and for other purposes."

On August 10, 1937:

S. 81. An act to provide retirement annuities for certain former employees of the Panama Canal and the Panama Railroad Co. on the Isthmus of Panama;

S. 184. An act for the relief of Josephine M. Scott;

S. 1278. An act to authorize exchange of lands at military reservations, and for other purposes;

S. 1281. An act to authorize the sale of surplus War Department real property;

S. 2334. An act for the relief of certain disbursing officers of the Army of the United States and for the settlement of individual claims approved by the War Department;

S. 2399. An act for the relief of R. L. McLachlan; and

S. J. Res. 183. Joint resolution consenting to an interstate oil compact to conserve oil and gas.

On August 11, 1937:

S. 972. An act for the relief of Ethel Smith McDaniel;

S. 1453. An act for the relief of Maude P. Gresham and Agnes M. Driscoll; and

S. 2157. An act authorizing credits to disbursing officers for expenses incident to the creation of subsistence homesteads corporations.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed the following bills, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. R. 7985. An act to promote air commerce by providing for the enlargement of Washington Airport; and

H. R. 8174. An act to make available to each State which enacted in 1937 an approved unemployment-compensation law a portion of the proceeds from the Federal employers' tax in such State for the year 1936.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (H. R. 2260) to provide for intervention by the United States, direct appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, and regulation of the issuance of injunctions, in certain cases involving the constitutionality of acts of Congress, and for other purposes, and it was signed by the Vice President.

ADOPTION PROCEEDINGS IN THE DISTRICT

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2281) to regulate proceedings in adoption in the District of Columbia.

Mr. KING. I move that the Senate disagree to the amendments of the House, request a conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. KING, Mr. OVERTON, and Mr. CAPPER conferees on the part of the Senate.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. MINTON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	La Follette	Pope
Andrews	Copeland	Lee	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Davis	Lewis	Reynolds
Austin	Dieterich	Lodge	Schwartz
Barkley	Donahey	Logan	Schwellenbach
Berry	Ellender	Lonergan	Sheppard
Bilbo	Frazier	Lundeen	Shipstead
Black	George	McAdoo	Smathers
Bone	Gerry	McCarran	Smith
Borah	Gillette	McGill	Stelwer
Bridges	Glass	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Brown, Mich.	Green	McNary	Thomas, Utah
Brown, N. H.	Guffey	Maloney	Townsend
Bulkley	Hale	Minton	Tydings
Bulow	Harrison	Moore	Vandenberg
Burke	Hatch	Murray	Van Nuys
Byrd	Herring	Neely	Wagner
Byrnes	Hitchcock	Nye	Walsh
Capper	Holt	O'Mahoney	White
Caraway	Johnson, Calif.	Overton
Chavez	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper
Clark	King	Pittman

Mr. MINTON. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on official duty as members of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

I further announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I announce that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] is detained from the Senate because of illness.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] is absent on official business in connection with his duty as a member of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

NOMINATION OF ASSOCIATE JUSTICE OF SUPREME COURT

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, out of order, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate consider a message from the President of the United States.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator makes the request as in executive session?

Mr. ASHURST. As in executive session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I want to know what it is.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The message of the President of the United States is the nomination of an Associate Justice to the Supreme Court.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Is the request to take it up immediately?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arizona has asked that, as in executive session, it be laid before the Senate.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Is it the plan to take it up immediately?

Mr. ASHURST. I ask that it be laid before the Senate.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I object.

Mr. ASHURST. I ask that the message be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks that any message from the President of the United States is privileged to be laid before the Senate at any time. The Chair understood the Senator from Arizona to ask that it be laid before the Senate as in executive session. That can be objected to, and the Senator from California has objected to laying the message before the Senate as in executive session.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I have.

Mr. ASHURST. I now ask that the message be laid before the Senate as in legislative session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Clerk will report the President's message.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

I nominate HUGO L. BLACK—

The VICE PRESIDENT. Wait a moment, please. The Chair is not familiar with this rule, and the Parliamentarian advises the Chair that if objection is made he cannot lay down a message that should come in executive session in regular order of the Senate. If the Senator from Arizona should move to go into executive session, that would be another matter. The Senator from California has objected, and, under the rules of the Senate, the message cannot be laid before the Senate, because it should be laid before the Senate in executive session.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the clerk having read the nomination of Senator HUGO L. BLACK to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, I have the following to say:

It is an immemorial usage of the Senate that whenever the Executive honors this body by nominating a Member thereof, that nomination is confirmed without reference to a committee, for the obvious reason that no amount of investigation or consideration by a committee of the Senate could disclose any new fact or shed any new light upon the character, attainments, and ability of the nominee, because if we do not know him after long service with him, no one will ever know him.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. ASHURST. I cannot yield at this moment.

Mr. BURKE. I should like to ask the Senator a question.

Mr. ASHURST. I will not yield for the moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arizona declines to yield.

Mr. ASHURST. In this particular case the nominee having served in this body since the 4th of March 1927, has demonstrated that he is a lawyer, I will not say of more than unusual ability but a lawyer of transcendent ability, of great industriousness, courteous in debate, young, vigorous, and of splendid character and attainments. Indeed, for years he has stood in the fierce white light that beats about a public man and no taint of suspicion or breath of prejudice has ever dimmed the bright mirror of his character and reputation. I cannot conceive how the President could have made a wiser selection than the one he has made.

Administrations come and go, but justices of the courts of the United States remain as memorials of or as reproaches to that administration long after it has passed.

At this particular time I realize that the Senator who objects may carry this nomination over. I hope and believe the Senate will appreciate the compliment that has been paid to the Senate by this nomination. I now yield first to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. President, we are interested in the statement in reference to the immemorial custom that has prevailed in this body, but does the Senator from Arizona consider that, in the entire history of this country, there has ever been an occasion at all resembling the present one in reference to sending to the Senate the nomination of a Supreme Court Justice? If I may be permitted to go one step further, I would say that, regardless of any immemorial custom, and regardless of what my own attitude may be in reference to this nomination, I think it should certainly go to the committee for very careful study.

Mr. ASHURST. In reply to my able friend, let me say that, if the President of the United States had seen fit to send to the Senate the name of the Honorable EDWARD R. BURKE to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, I would have, without hypocrisy, been able to say of him precisely what I have said of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK].

I do not agree with some of the philosophies of the Senator from Alabama. He knows that. I do not, forsooth, agree with some of the philosophies of the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE]. But only fools would question the patriotism, the integrity, the ability, or the sound learning of either of these two Senators. No one whose opinion is worthy of the slightest consideration would for a moment imagine that either of these two gentlemen, the nominee, the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK], or the junior Senator from Nebraska [Mr. BURKE], could for a moment be actuated other than by the highest motives of conscience, patriotism, prudence, or guided by other than their respective luminous ability.

In view of the objection, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the nomination.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I withdraw the motion.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, I had just entered the Chamber, and upon coming in I was informed the nomination had been made. I do not want to consent to its immediate consideration, and I think it ought to pursue the regular course of such nominations. I say that without any reflection upon the Senator from Alabama, because that would be the least of my thoughts. But at this particular juncture, with a situation which has been fraught with very potential possibilities to the country, as some of us think, I believe a nomination to the Supreme Court is of paramount importance and that no custom heretofore pursued by the Senate should stand in the way of the rule requiring reference of the nomination.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. If a motion should be made to proceed to the consideration of executive business for the purpose of considering the nomination, would it then be in order for the Senate to proceed to consider it without reference to a committee except by unanimous consent?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It would not be in order. The rule of the Senate provides that a nomination must go over for one day if a single objection be made.

Mr. BARKLEY. Under those circumstances it seems to me it would be unwise and futile to go into executive session at this time. I suggest that we pursue the usual course with reference to such matters.

Mr. McNARY. Mr. President, the Chair has answered the parliamentary inquiry correctly. If objection is made on the day a nomination is submitted to the Senate, it must go over under the rule until the next day. The objection of one Senator would naturally and automatically send the matter over for the day.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The message of the President will lie on the Vice President's desk.

VIRGINIA DARE CELEBRATION, ROANOKE ISLAND, N. C.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following letters, which were read:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
August 12, 1937.

Hon. JOHN N. GARNER,
President, United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I find it impossible to attend the Virginia Dare celebration to be held at Roanoke Island, N. C., on August 18, 1937, and therefore tender my resignation as a member of the committee on the part of the Senate.

Very truly yours,

CARTER GLASS.

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, D. C., August 12, 1937.

Hon. JOHN N. GARNER,
President, United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: I find it impossible to attend the Virginia Dare Celebration to be held at Roanoke Island, N. C., on August 18, 1937, and therefore tender my resignation as a member of the committee on the part of the Senate.

Very truly yours,

CHAS. L. McNARY.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair appoints the Senators from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY and Mr. REYNOLDS] as members on the part of the Senate of the joint committee to represent the Congress at the celebration of the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, at Roanoke Island, N. C., on August 18, 1937, in place of Mr. GLASS and Mr. McNARY, respectively, who have tendered their resignations.

INVESTIGATION OF ELECTRIC AND GAS UTILITIES—INDEX

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, transmitting, pursuant to Senate Resolution 83 (70th Cong., 1st sess.) as extended by Senate Joint Resolution 115 (73d Cong., 2d sess.), part 84–D, being an index to parts 21 to 84–C, inclusive; part 84–D, together with parts 71–B and 81–A, constituting a general index to the 95 printed volumes comprising the record of the Commission's investigation of electric and gas utilities, which, with the accompanying index, was ordered to lie on the table.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS

Mr. LODGE presented petitions of sundry citizens of the State of Massachusetts, praying for the enactment of legislation to abolish the Federal Reserve System as at present constituted, and also praying that Congress exercise its constitutional right to coin money and regulate the value thereof, which were referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. TYDINGS presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation to permit Hawaii and Puerto Rico to send their sugar quotas to the United States in refined form, and favoring the enactment of the pending sugar-quota bill in the same form as passed by the House of Representatives, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. NYE presented a petition of sundry citizens of Olean, N. Y., praying for the enactment of Senate Joint Resolution 10, amending the Constitution so as to provide for a national referendum before war may be declared by the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. COPELAND presented a resolution adopted by the Great Kills Branch of the Home Owners' and Taxpayers' Association of Staten Island, N. Y., favoring the reduction of interest to 3 percent on mortgages held by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

He also presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Olean, N. Y., remonstrating against the enactment of the bill (S. 25) to prevent profiteering in time of war and to equalize the burdens of war and thus provide for the national defense and promote peace, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Olean, N. Y., praying for the enactment of House joint resolution 199, relating to the powers of Congress to declare war, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED

The following bills were each read twice by their titles and referred as indicated below:

H. R. 7985. An act to promote air commerce by providing for the enlargement of Washington Airport; to the Committee on Commerce.

H. R. 8174. An act to make available to each State which enacted in 1937 an approved unemployment-compensation law a portion of the proceeds from the Federal employers' tax in such State for the year 1936; to the Committee on Finance.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. KING, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (S. 2339) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the construction of certain public buildings, and for other purposes", approved May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 630), as amended, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1172) thereon.

He also (for Mr. HUGHES), from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6563) to define, regulate, and license real-estate brokers, business-chance brokers, and real-estate salesmen; to create a Real Estate Commission in the District of Columbia; to protect the public against fraud in real-estate transactions; and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1173) thereon.

Mr. COPELAND, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (S. 1629) to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate the sale of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products in the District of Columbia; to regulate interstate traffic in said articles; and for other purposes", approved July 1, 1902, to make it applicable to surgical ligatures and sutures, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1174) thereon.

Mr. TYDINGS, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7084) to provide that all cabs for hire in the District of Columbia be compelled to carry insurance for the protection of passengers, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1179) thereon.

Mr. ASHURST, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 2892. A bill to amend section 798 of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, relating to murder in the first degree (Rept. No. 1175); and

S. 2893. A bill to confer jurisdiction upon certain United States commissioners to try certain civil suits wherein the United States is plaintiff (Rept. No. 1176).

Mr. CLARK, from the Committee on Finance, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 8174) to make available to each State which enacted in 1937 an approved unemployment-compensation law a portion of the proceeds from the Federal employers' tax in such State for the year 1936, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1178) thereon.

Mr. PITTMAN, from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 186) providing for the participation of the United States in the continuing international exposition to be known as Pacific Mercado, to be held in the city of Los Angeles, Calif., commencing in the year 1940, and in the year 1942 commemorating the landing of Cabrillo, and for other reasons, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1180) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which were referred the following joint resolutions, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. J. Res. 197. Joint resolution authorizing an appropriation for the expenses of participation by the United States in the Inter-American Radio Conference to be held in 1937 at Habana, Cuba (Rept. No. 1181);

S. J. Res. 199. Joint resolution to authorize an appropriation for the expenses of participation by the United States in the Eighth International Road Congress in 1938 (Rept. No. 1182); and

H. J. Res. 385. Joint resolution authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the Oil World Exposition at Houston, Tex., to be held October 11 to 16, 1937, inclusive (Rept. No. 1183).

Mr. SMITH, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the bill (S. 2688) to provide for preliminary examinations and surveys for run-offs and water-flow retardation and soil-erosion prevention on the watersheds of the Rio Grande and Pecos Rivers, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1177) thereon.

PERMANENT AGRICULTURAL PROGRAM—REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE AND FORESTRY

Mr. SMITH, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 19) favoring the consideration of a permanent agricultural program on the convening of the next session of Congress (submitted by Mr. BILBO and Mr. BLACK on Aug. 3, 1937), reported it with amendments.

FINAL REPORT ON "MORRO CASTLE" AND "MOHAWK" INVESTIGATIONS (REPT. 184, PT. 4)

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, from the Committee on Commerce I submit the final report on the Morro Castle and Mohawk investigation, which has been going on for about 18 months. I ask that the first seven pages of the report be printed in the RECORD, and also that the entire report be printed, with an illustration, as part 4 of Senate Report No. 184.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The portion of the final report above referred to by Mr. COPELAND is as follows:

Supplementing the committee's Reports No. 776, submitted June 3, 1935; No. 776, part 2, submitted February 6, 1936; No. 776, part 3, submitted May 20, 1936; No. 776, part 4, submitted June 20, 1936; Preliminary Report No. 184 (75th Cong., 1st sess.), submitted March 17, 1937; and Preliminary Report No. 184, part 2, submitted June 8, 1937, the following final report is submitted.

REQUIREMENTS OF SENATE RESOLUTION 7

Senate Resolution No. 7, which was passed by the Senate on March 16, 1935, required the following:

"(1) To collect, collate, coordinate, and make available to the Senate the results of (a) the inquiry into the Morro Castle disaster conducted by the Secretary of Commerce through the Steamboat Inspection Service of the Department of Commerce."

This was covered by Report No. 776, submitted on June 3, 1935.

"(b) The inquiry into the Morro Castle disaster, and the actions taken in connection with or subsequent to such inquiry, by the United States attorney for the southern district of New York."

This was covered by Report No. 184, part 2, submitted June 8, 1937.

"(c) Such inquiries into the Mohawk disaster as have been or may be conducted by the Secretary of Commerce through the Steamboat Inspection Service of the Department of Commerce and by the United States attorney for the southern district of New York, and the actions taken in connection with or subsequent to such inquiry."

This was covered by Report No. 776, submitted June 3, 1935.

"(d) Such other inquiries into the Morro Castle disaster, the Mohawk disaster, and other maritime tragedies as would, in the discretion of the committee, be helpful for the purposes of this resolution."

This is covered in part by Reports No. 776, submitted June 3, 1935; No. 776, part 2, submitted February 6, 1936; No. 776, part 3, submitted May 20, 1936; No. 776, part 4, submitted June 20, 1936, and also in this report.

"(2) To make such further investigations of the Morro Castle and the Mohawk disasters, including the rescue operations carried on in connection therewith, as the committee shall deem advisable and necessary for the purposes of this resolution."

This was covered by Report No. 776, submitted June 3, 1935.

"(3) To investigate the adequacy and enforcement of the present legal standards of safety of ship construction and operation."

This was covered by Report No. 184, submitted March 17, 1937.

"(4) To investigate the prevalent methods and practices in the complementing of seagoing vessels, including all conditions of employment."

This is covered by this report.

"(5) To investigate the adequacy and efficiency of the Steamboat Inspection Service."

This is covered by this report.

"(6) To investigate whether the laws governing liability for loss of life and property at sea, the laws and usages of salvage, and the laws, usages, and practices of the business of marine insurance tend to encourage the installation and utilization of such devices and the promotion of such practices as are conducive to safety and to a paramount concern at all times for the preservation of life."

This was covered by Report No. 184, part 2, submitted June 8, 1937.

"(7) To make a preliminary report of the results of its investigations as soon as practicable, to make further reports from time to time but at least once during each regular session of the Senate until it has completed its investigations, and to submit a final report to the Senate, together with its recommendations for necessary legislation."

Including this report, seven reports have been submitted to the Senate, and, growing out of these, five recommendations have been submitted for new legislation.

In Report No. 776, part 2, recommendations were made for legislation to bring the Communications Act of 1934 up to date so as to promote safety of life through the use of radio. This legislation was finally passed by the Seventy-fifth Congress and now stands as Public, 97 (75th Cong.), approved May 20, 1937.

In Report No. 776, part 3, recommendations were made for legislation to implement the Convention for Promoting Safety of Life at Sea, 1929, insofar as it required the maintenance of an ice patrol in the vicinity of the Newfoundland Banks. This legislation, to promote safety at sea in the neighborhood of ice and derelicts, was passed by the Seventy-fourth Congress and now stands as Public, 799 (74th Cong.), approved June 25, 1936.

In Report No. 776, part 4, recommendations were made for legislation to make effective the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea which were agreed upon at the International Conference on Safety of Life at Sea, 1929. This legislation stands as S. 1273 and has been passed by the Senate.

In Report No. 184 recommendations were made for legislation to modernize our laws in respect to safety of ship construction and operation. This legislation stands as S. 1916 and, as an alternative, as S. 2580. These bills were considered by the committee after hearings held on May 5 and May 19, 1937, and S. 2580 was reported with the recommendation that it be passed.

In the present report recommendations are made for legislation covering certain phases of the laws governing the personnel engaged in manning merchant vessels of the United States.

From the above it will be seen that your committee has covered all requirements of Senate Resolution No. 7, and has, in each instance, submitted recommendations for legislation to improve the conditions found to exist and, in general, to promote safety of life at sea.

COMPLEMENTING SEAGOING VESSELS

The investigation of matters concerning ship's personnel has extended over a period of 2 years, and during that time there have been enacted several new laws having an important bearing on the subject. During the same period there has been marked unrest in maritime labor circles, so that it would seem at the present time the discipline and efficiency of the crews of our merchant vessels are worse than before the investigation.

Two of these laws are deserving of comment here.

PUBLIC, 808 (74TH CONG.)

Public, 808 (74th Cong.), approved June 25, 1936, was "An act to promote the welfare of American seamen in the merchant marine of the United States." It set forth the citizenship requirements for seamen serving on American ships, the issuance of "able seamen" certificates, "lifeboatman" certificates, certificate of service as "a qualified member of the engine department", and certificates of service for ratings other than as "able seaman" or "a qualified member of the engine department." It also provided for the revocation of these certificates for cause. It provided for a three-watch system and an 8-hour day for men in the deck and engine departments on ocean-going and Great Lakes vessels. It provided for each seaman, on vessels of 100 gross tons or upward (except river craft), to be provided with a book to be known as a continuous discharge book. It also provided, among other things, for the inspection of the crew's quarters on each vessel at least once each month.

The provisions enumerated above were acceptable to the International Seamen's Union of America and to other interested groups at the time the law was enacted. But during the west-coast maritime strike of 1936 a condition developed where the strike, so far as seamen were concerned, was being directed against the continuous discharge book instead of for the purpose of obtaining better pay, better hours, or better working conditions. The seamen's union conducting this strike had ceased to be a part of the International Seamen's Union and was, therefore, a law unto itself so far as organized labor was concerned. The strike against this statute continued and gained sufficient support to cause an amendment being passed by the Congress and approved by the President, on March 24, 1937 (Public, No. 25, 75th Cong.). This amendment made it optional with the seaman whether he should carry a continuous discharge book or a certificate of identification.

Also contained in this amendment (Public, No. 25, 75th Cong.) was a clause reading as follows:

"(g) Any person, partnership, company, or corporation who shall require any seaman employed or applying for employment to possess, produce, or carry a continuous discharge book, if and when such seaman possesses or carries an identification certificate, or to carry an identification certificate, if and when such seaman possesses and carries a continuous discharge book, or who shall exchange or give to any other person, partnership, company, or corporation information to cause discrimination against a seaman for electing to carry either an identification certificate or a continuous discharge book, or to prevent a seaman from obtaining employment on that account, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor; and, on conviction thereof, shall be punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than 1 year, at the discretion of the court."

This was intended to prohibit blacklisting, but there is clear evidence that certain of the labor organizations are blacklisting the men who continue to use the continuous discharge book. At the same time it appears that the majority of the men going to sea prefer the book and are well satisfied with it.

PUBLIC, NO. 835 (74TH CONG.)

Public, No. 835 (74th Cong.), known as the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, established the United States Maritime Commission and prescribed its duties. The following section of this statute has a direct bearing on the matter under investigation:

"SEC. 301. (a) The Commission is authorized and directed to investigate the employment and wage conditions in ocean-going shipping and, after making such investigation and after appropriate hearings, to incorporate in the contracts authorized under titles VI and VII of this act minimum-manning scales and minimum-wage scales and reasonable working conditions for all officers and crews employed on all types of vessels receiving an operating-differential subsidy. After such minimum manning and wage scales and working conditions shall have been adopted by the Commission, no change shall be made therein by the Commission except upon formal complaint, public notice of the hearing to be had on such complaint, and a hearing by the Commission of all interested parties, under such rules as the Commission shall prescribe. Every contractor receiving an operating-differential subsidy shall post and keep posted in a conspicuous place on each such vessel operated by such contractor a printed copy of the minimum manning and wage scales and working conditions prescribed by his contract and applicable to such vessel: Provided, however, That any increase in the operating expenses of the subsidized vessel occasioned by any change in the wage, manning scales, and working conditions as provided in this section shall be added to the operating-differential subsidy previously authorized for the vessel."

This section was necessary in order that there might be a definite agreement between the Maritime Commission and the contractor, who was to receive an operating-differential subsidy, as to the number of men to be employed on each ship and the wages the men were to receive. In no other way could a clear-cut operating-differential subsidy intended to establish parity of cost in operation be established.

As a matter of fact, it soon developed that if the Maritime Commission fixed the wages and working conditions for the ships receiving an operating-differential subsidy, all other ocean and coastwise shipping would have to follow the same rules. In consequence, successful collective bargaining would be out of the question except by aid of the Commission.

The injection of this problem into the already troubled maritime labor situation complicated matters considerably. It was but natural that one side would desire the Maritime Commission to fix the number of men to be employed, the wages, and the working conditions once for all, and the other side would desire no interference with any efforts that might be made, by strike or negotiation, to better wages and working conditions. Thus a part of this statute which was intended to make it possible for the Maritime Commission to decide in each case and write into the contract the payment involved by an operating-differential subsidy has resulted in considerable additional confusion in the maritime labor situation.

There appears to be no doubt that there is a group bent on getting control of the personnel on all ships of the American merchant marine, and the industry is the victim of the strife which results from the efforts of this new group to wrest control from the old-established unions. The shipowners and operators, by their procedure in the past and even in the present, have brought about much of the trouble and, too often, condone and accept conditions which are inimical to the best interest of the merchant marine.

PERSONNEL ADVISORY COMMITTEE

In order that proper study might be given to these personnel matters your committee considered it advisable to ask the assistance of certain qualified men to study and report upon the questions. Thereupon, on May 21, 1936, a Personnel Advisory Committee on Safety at Sea was formed, and the following agreed to serve:

Admiral Harry G. Hamlet, United States Coast Guard, chairman.

Representing seagoing personnel: Edward T. Pinchin, Masters, Mates, and Pilots; Paul Scharrenberg, International Seamen's Union; David E. Grange, Marine Cooks and Stewards; John Bley, Marine Firemen's, Oilers', and Watertenders' Union.

Representing shipowners and operators: Paul H. Harwood, Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey; Robert C. Lee, Moore & McCormack Co., Inc.; H. Harris Robson, United Fruit Co.; W. A. Kiggins, Jr., A. H. Bull & Co.

Representing the public: Howard C. Cullman, vice chairman, Port Authority of New York; Philip F. King, Sailor's Haven, Boston; Karl R. Miner, legal assistant, Senate investigating committee; C. S. Joyce, captain, United States Navy (retired), technical assistant, Senate investigating committee.

As will be noted, the first group was in a position to know the problems and desires of all branches of the seagoing personnel. The second group was in a position to know the problems of all classes of ship operators, as they represented subsidized lines and unsubsidized lines, as well as tankers, cargo carriers, and carriers of both passengers and cargo.

At the Personnel Advisory Committee's first meeting on May 21, 1936, the chairman of the subcommittee charged with making the investigation required by Senate Resolution 7 (Senator COPELAND) made the following statement:

"Under Senate Resolution 7, dated March 16, 1935, the Senate Committee on Commerce was directed to investigate the Morro Castle and Mohawk disasters. The Senate Committee on Commerce appointed a subcommittee consisting of Senators Fletcher, Sheppard, Johnson, White, and myself as chairman. This committee was authorized to study the methods and practices used in the complementing of seagoing ships and to report regarding the adequacy and efficiency of the Steamboat Inspection Service.

"During our committee investigation it has become increasingly clear that there are great difficulties in administering present laws; but it has also become clear that additional legislation is required to clarify the personnel situation.

"The manning of ships is an involved problem, demanding detailed study. This study must cover the following points:

"The fitness and efficiency of licensed officers; the fitness and efficiency of seamen; the number of officers and the size of crew required properly to man each vessel; the employment of seamen; and the working conditions of all personnel employed on board ship.

"To a certain extent, our present laws deal with these factors of sea safety. We must decide whether or not these laws are adequate. We must determine what additional legislation, if any, is necessary to guard the public welfare.

"The responsibility for administering the laws rests upon the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection of the Department of Commerce. The determination of the fitness of the officers and crews rests with the Steamboat Inspection Service. The manning schedules are prepared by the Bureau. Employment of seamen is under the shipping commissioners, another branch of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection. The working conditions, to a certain extent, are also under the control of the Bureau. At least, its officials must be satisfied that the quarters on shipboard are adequate and satisfactory, and that the crew is sufficient in number to function properly within the required working hours.

"The shipping commissioners have under their jurisdiction a portion of the responsibility. The shipping articles record the rate of pay; but apparently there is no way under present organization to check up on the subsistence.

"There is available a considerable amount of information on all of these subjects; but each require a study and analysis in order that a satisfactory solution of many a problem may be reached.

"You gentlemen have been invited here to assist the Senate committee, primarily in connection with the questions involving personnel. In inviting you the committee had in mind assembling a group that would seriously consider the whole question and then recommend the best and most practicable legislation to fit our present needs. I am confident that each of you is prepared to approach the matter in a spirit of patriotism and to deal with it without prejudice.

"Perhaps I may suggest that a study be made of the following matters:

"1. The prevalent methods and practices in the complementing of seagoing vessels, including all conditions of employment. This study may be divided into five categories, as follows:

"(a) The methods of determining the fitness and efficiency of licensed officers.

"(b) The methods of determining and recording the fitness and efficiency of seamen and other members of the crew.

"(c) The adequacy of the manning schedules.

"(d) The methods of employing the members of the crew.

"(e) The working conditions, including hours of work, quarters, subsistence, and pay.

"2. The organization and adequacy of the Steamboat Inspection Service, especially as it deals with ships' personnel.

"I want it understood, in that connection, that this committee is as free as it can possibly be to pass judgment upon the Steamboat Inspection Service. If you have criticisms to offer, if you have suggestions to make as to the improvement of that Bureau, that is your duty. There is no one here in the Commerce Committee who desires to shield anybody. The committee desires to have perfect justice done, but you need not feel that you have to 'hold your punches', if you have any to make, because out of this investigation we hope to improve conditions so that there may be an assurance of greater safety at sea, and so that the public, itself, may be sure that there is safety at sea.

"It is desired that a study be made of all the duties which fall to the Bureau which may be summarized as follows:

"(a) The organization for determining the qualifications of all licensed officers.

"(b) The organization for determining and recording the qualifications of unlicensed personnel.

"(c) The organization for supplying crews for ships.

"(d) The organization for the inspection of ships, as to operation, drills, and efficiency of crews.

"All these matters have to do with personnel. Unless the Bureau has an adequate, suitable, and successful organization, it cannot carry out its present duties, and certainly it cannot cope with new ones which may be assigned to it.

"The Committee on Commerce is convinced that ship safety, both as to construction and operation, can only be attained when the proper Government department has the authority and responsibility of enforcing the laws covering operation of all merchant ships. This responsibility can neither be divided nor evaded. The organization itself and all governed by it must concede its responsibility and authority.

"You have been furnished with a tentative agenda. It is hoped that this will start you on your course. Your part, as I see it, is the formulation of legislation necessary for the better administration of all those things having to do with ship personnel.

"And then, from this committee and through Captain Joyce and myself, we shall make reports to the public of our activities. And we should prefer to have it done in that way if you do not mind.

"In the name of the Committee on Commerce, I thank you for the sacrifices you are making to do this work. The increased safety of the traveling public and of American seamen will be ample reward, I am sure."

The chairman then handed the committee the following agenda and asked them to be guided thereby:

"AGENDA FOR PERSONNEL ADVISORY COMMITTEE

"1. To make a study of the prevalent methods and practices in the complementing of seagoing vessels, including all conditions of employment, and particularly the following:

"(a) The methods of determining and recording the fitness and efficiency of licensed officers.

"(b) The methods of determining and recording the fitness and efficiency of seamen and other members of the crew.

"(d) Manning schedules.

"(e) Working conditions, including hours of work, quarters, subsistence, and pay.

"2. To make a study of the adequacy and efficiency of the steamboat inspection service and the shipping commissioners' service, and particularly the following:

"(a) The organization for determining the fitness and efficiency of licensed officers.

"(b) The organization for determining and recording the fitness and efficiency of seamen and other members of the crew.

"(c) The method of organization for making up manning schedules.

"(d) The organization for supplying crews to ships.

"(e) The organization for the inspection of ships as to their operation, drills, and efficiency of the crews.

"3. To present a summary of these studies, together with suggestions for necessary legislation."

The Advisory Committee proceeded at once to deal with its problems. We owe its members a debt of gratitude for unfailing devotion to its duties.

Herewith is the latest report of that committee. It tells its own story.

ROYAL S. COPELAND, Chairman.
MORRIS SHEPPARD.
WALLACE H. WHITE, Jr.

Mr. COPELAND. I also ask consent to introduce two bills, for reference to the Committee on Commerce, to carry out the recommendations of the report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bills will be received and referred as requested by the Senator from New York.

The bill (S. 2958) to establish a fleet auxiliary reserve in the Coast Guard for the training of merchant marine officers and seamen, and for other purposes; and

The bill (S. 2959) to regulate the issuance of licenses to officers of the merchant marine, to define the duties of shipping commissioners, to establish in the Coast Guard special training for seamen for the merchant marine, and for other purposes, were each read twice by their titles and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on August 10, 1937, that committee presented to the President of the United States the enrolled bill (S. 1160) for the relief of Troup Miller and Harvey D. Higley.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. SMATHERS:

A bill (S. 2952) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment upon the claim of the Bolinross Chemical Co., Inc.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MURRAY:

A bill (S. 2953) to provide a measure of damages for trespass involving timber and other forest products upon lands of the United States; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

By Mr. JOHNSON of California:

A bill (S. 2954) relating to the retired pay of officers, warrant officers, members of the Nurse Corps, and enlisted men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Public Health Service; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. GUFFEY:

A bill (S. 2955) to extend the times for commencing and completing the construction of a bridge across the Delaware River between the village of Barryville, N. Y., and the village of Shohola, Pa.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. CAPPER:

A bill (S. 2956) for the relief of Orville D. Davis (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. ASHURST (by request):

A bill (S. 2957) to amend section 224 of the Criminal Code so as to penalize the making of false claims for the loss of insured mail matter; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

(Mr. COPELAND introduced Senate bills 2958 and 2959, which were referred to the Committee on Commerce, and appear under a separate heading.)

By Mrs. CARAWAY:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 206) to authorize the painting of the painting "The Signing of the Constitution", for placement in the Capitol building; to the Committee on the Library.

SUGAR QUOTAS AND TAXES—AMENDMENT

Mr. BROWN of Michigan submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 7667) to regulate commerce among the several States, with the Territories and possessions of the United States, and with foreign countries; to protect the welfare of consumers of sugars and of those engaged in the domestic sugar-producing industry; to promote the export trade of the United States; to raise revenue; and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

INVESTIGATION OF MUNITIONS INDUSTRY—LIMIT OF EXPENSE

Mr. NYE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 176), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the special committee appointed by the Vice President pursuant to resolution 206, agreed to April 12, 1934, to investigate the munitions industry, hereby is authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate $754.64 in addition to the amounts heretofore authorized to be expended for the purposes set forth in said resolution.

LEASE OF DESTROYERS TO SOUTH AMERICAN COUNTRIES

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs an editorial in this morning's Washington Post entitled "Rented Warships." I do not understand all of the implications involved in this proposal but believe it is sufficiently important to receive the serious study of the committee. I think explanation should be found for the fact that one nation above others is singled out for the proposed leasing of obsolete destroyers by the United States. Is this program a part of the general policy of the administration in foreign affairs to break down our trade protection, involve us in foreign complications, and make our Nation a partner to international rivalries?

There being no objection, the editorial was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

RENTED WARSHIPS

The proposal to lease obsolete destroyers to Latin-American countries raises some fundamental questions of foreign policy. Evidently the Department of State is sincerely trying to be helpful to the Brazilian Government. But in doing so, it has become involved in a tangle of implications not entirely compatible either with the good neighbor policy or with the traditional American attitude toward arrangements which smack of military alliance.

Argentina is plainly annoyed by the project. Possibly the Argentine Government places too much importance upon the seeming favoritism to Brazil. Under the agreement the six destroyers designated for that country would be used only for training purposes. The Department of State emphasizes, also, the general nature of the offer. Yet the fact remains that the policy was adopted for the specific benefit of a single Latin-American power. "I would urge again", said Secretary Hull at Buenos Aires last December, "the wisdom of avoiding discrimination in our commercial policy." Why not in our diplomacy, too?

If the proposal is to be considered on its general merits, various other questions arise. The United States has 158 overage destroyers which are kept in condition as a reserve force. The Navy would use them in case of emergency. Brazil wants only six. Presumably the others would be available to Latin-American countries for a general strengthening of their naval forces, and their incipient naval rivalries.

The Department of State likes to claim credit for this country as a leader in the movement for world disarmament. It will be harder to do so effectively if we are now to pursue a policy of encouraging naval expansion among countries that heretofore have wasted very little of their substance in building up fighting squadrons.

That unpleasant aspect of the destroyer-leasing policy is not eliminated by the fact that these ships would be used primarily for training purposes. Training for combat is a vital part of any armament program. Moreover, it is difficult to see how the United States could retrieve the leased destroyers in case the lessee went to war. No country will give up any advantage it may have when hostilities once break out. In event of such a war, the United States would have to choose between retaking its vessels by force and showing favoritism between the belligerents.

It is suggested that Brazil needs additional naval strength to protect her coast from foreign aggression and as a safeguard against possible revolution. But if Brazil is really in danger of attack, the agreement reached at Buenos Aires last December should call for consultation among the American republics and possibly joint action. In no circumstances would it be the responsibility of the United States, acting alone, to fortify Brazil against either internal or external strife. To do so is to go a long way toward forming an alliance with the present Brazilian Government.

Secretary Hull insists that the proposal would not violate the London Naval Treaty of 1936, forbidding signatories to sell or transfer war vessels to any foreign navy. Each lease would contain a "recapture clause" permitting the United States to recall the ships at any time. Whether or not that would satisfy the literal requirements of the treaty, its effect upon its spirit would clearly be destructive. For the treaty stipulates that signatories shall not "by gift, sale, or any mode of transfer" dispose of warships for service "in any foreign navy."

ECONOMIC DIVISION OF FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION

[Mr. REYNOLDS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a letter addressed to him by Mrs. John Boyle, of Washington, D. C., in reference to the Economic Division of the Federal Trade Commission, which appears in the Appendix.]

WORK ON THE BONNEVILLE PROJECT—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. COPELAND submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7642) to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses, as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with two amendments as follows:

In section 2 (a) of the amendment in the 22nd line of this section, strike out "administrator is authorized and empowered to direct and require the" and in line 24 strike out the word "to" and insert "shall", so as to make the sentence read "The Secretary of War shall install and maintain additional machinery, equipment, and facilities for the generation of electric energy at the Bonneville project when in the judgment of the administrator such additional generating facilities are desirable to meet actual or potential market requirements for such electric energy."

At the end of section 11 of the amendment, strike out the period, insert a comma, and add the words "including installation of equipment and machinery for the generation of electric energy and facilities for its transmission and sale."

And the Senate agree to the same.

ROYAL S. COPELAND,
CHAS. L. MCNARY,
MORRIS SHEPPARD,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
J. J. MANSFIELD,
RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
GEORGE N. SEGER,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

PREVENTION OF AND PUNISHMENT FOR LYNCHING

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] to proceed to the consideration of House bill 1507, known as the anti-lynching bill.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, on my motion I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho yesterday outlined in splendid fashion the position of those who do not believe that at this time we should disrupt the legislative program by taking up this very controversial measure. As all Senators know a rather long legislative program is yet to be considered by the Senate and the House. One of the measures on the program is the sugar bill which has been before the Congress for a considerable period. Another measure of great importance, with which it seems now the Congress will probably have to deal, is the farm-relief measure. Another bill awaiting hearings is the revenue measure.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, a point of order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state the point of order.

Mr. BORAH. I make the point of order that the Senate is not in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is well taken. The Chair has called for order several times, but it seems that Senators have to go through regular routine conversations on the floor of the Senate. The Chair asks that Senators desiring to converse will retire to the cloakroom and accommodate the Senator from Texas, who desires to be heard.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Idaho and I thank the Vice President; but, frankly, the Senator from Texas feels that it is his own fault. If he is not able to interest Senators in the matter under discussion, he does not expect to ask the charity of the Senator from Idaho, although it is well meant, or the power of the Chair in preserving order. The trouble about this bill is that some Senators do not want to hear about it; do not want to hear discussed the constitutional issues involved.

The Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is willing to tie up the legislative program of the session in order to inject the measure and thereby create endless discussion, create embarrassment for the President of the United States, who wants to put over his legislative program, create embarrassment for the leadership of the Senate, simply for the purpose of bringing forth one of the Senator's pet measures.

Mr. President, we shall soon celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States. In May 1787 there gathered at Philadelphia the greatest body of statesmen, publicists, lawyers, patriots, according to their number, that has ever been assembled on this planet of ours. When their labors were concluded on September 17, 1787, they gave to 13 theretofore independent sovereignties a framework of government known as the Constitution of the United States, a framework of government which a great foreigner once described as being "the greatest work ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man." While that was a noble tribute, it was not exactly an accurate tribute, because the Constitution of the United States was not struck off at a given time but was simply the accumulation and the culmination of constitutional development in the Colonies and the States over a long period of years.

In that Convention sat George Washington, late Commander in Chief of the Continental Army. There also sat Alexander Hamilton, a captain on Washington's staff and a gallant continental soldier, who, though born in a foreign land, brought to his adopted country an intellect which probably has never been surpassed in the history of the United States and a vision of the development of the Constitution and republican institutions which has not been surpassed even by the author of the bill now under discussion.

Mr. President, in that Convention also sat Benjamin Franklin, wise old man. I would that we could summon back to this Chamber today some of the wisdom of Benjamin Franklin; and if we might, this bill would not now be before us. I wish we could bring back to this Chamber some of the far-sightedness of Elbridge Gerry, of Massachusetts, and of Roger Sherman, that old Connecticut shoemaker who helped fashion the fundamentals upon which this Government rests. I wish we might bring back to this Chamber today the brilliance of Charles Pinckney, of South Carolina, in order that he might counsel those who, spurred on by a thirst for partisan political advantage, are willing to do violence to the great instrument that emerged from the Constitutional Convention of 1787.

Mr. President, that Constitution recognized the sovereignty of the then 13 States. Its problem was to preserve that sovereignty and yet give to the Federal Government only those limited powers which were necessary to attain national unity and to carry on those functions essential and requisite to the establishment of a Federal Government.

Under that system, Mr. President, the prosecution of all domestic crimes in violation of the police power was left entirely within each State. The regulation of all domestic concerns that do not cross State lines, that do not pertain to national sovereignty, that do not relate to the conduct of foreign affairs, that do not affect the maintenance of an army or a navy—is still within the exclusive jurisdiction of State authority. But the proponents of this bill say that on account of the adoption of the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution there was taken away from the States jurisdiction to control so-called lynching.

Mr. President, I desire to say to the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] that the Senator from Texas is as much opposed to lynching as ever could be the Senator from New York. The Senator from Texas is opposed to murder by one man or by a group of citizens. He is opposed to murder, whether it be committed on Broadway in New York or on an isolated farm down in the Commonwealth which I have the honor in part to represent in this body. The Senator from Texas is as much opposed to lawlessness as is the Senator from New York, wherever that lawlessness may occur; but I assert here today that there is no warrant in the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, nor is there any warrant in any other portion of the Constitution of the United States, for the enactment of the measure which is proposed here by the Senator from New York.

Mr. President, what is the history of the fourteenth amendment?

After the Civil War, with all of its tragedy and with all of its blood and with all of its ruin, had left the South prostrate and broken, State legislatures in various parts of the South had undertaken legislation with relation to the lately enfranchised colored race. So when the fourteenth amendment was adopted it was directed at State action, at State statutes, at State policies; and the debates in the Congress when the fourteenth amendment was pending here, when the fourteenth amendment was originally submitted to the States, reveal that it was directed at State statutes and State action and never comprehended direct Federal jurisdiction over individual citizens within the States. Therefore the amendment was so framed as to limit it to State action.

I should like to read the fourteenth amendment. I should like to have Senators know the basis upon which the Senator from New York undertakes to erect this new statute of his.

Section 1 of the fourteenth amendment:

All persons born or naturalized in the United States and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside.

Is there anything there that authorizes legislation of this character? The first part of the amendment simply declares that all persons either born in the United States or naturalized in the United States, and subject to its jurisdiction, are citizens of the United States. But it is said that in the remainder of the amendment may be found authority for this bill. What does it say?

No State—

Nothing about individuals; nothing about the neglect of sheriffs; nothing about the indifference of constables.

No State—

Shall do what?—

No State shall make or enforce any law—

"Any law"; it must be a law—which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State—

Not an individual, not a corporation, not an association of persons, but—nor shall any State—

Acting as a State; not a fiction, not an imaginary State, but a real State, acting as a State—deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

So, Mr. President, as was so clearly and ably demonstrated by the great Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] on yesterday, the fourteenth amendment is leveled and directed at State action and State action alone. If a State enacts a law which discriminates between citizens on the ground of race or color or religion or any other artificial test, the law falls, because it transgresses the Constitution of the United States; but unless the State as such transgresses the fourteenth amendment, individuals are not brought within the scope of Federal power but must be under the jurisdiction of the State police power.

So, Mr. President, the Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly and frequently upheld and maintained that statement. The Senator from Idaho on yesterday cited the Senate to the case of Harris against the United States. The Supreme Court there held that a Federal statute directed against public assemblages of a certain number of persons who would go out on the public highway and molest or interfere with citizens of the United States was invalid, and why? The Court held that the statute was invalid because it was not authorized under the fourteenth amendment, since the statute was directed at individuals and was not directed at State action, and that since the State had enacted no law, since the State as a sovereign had done nothing to transgress the fourteenth amendment the statute was void.

Mr. President, there are many other cases which have been passed upon by the Supreme Court. I desire to quote to some Senators some of the debate when the amendment was originally submitted to the Congress. I direct the attention of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY] to the remarks of Mr. Thaddeus Stevens, of Pennsylvania. I want to say that the zeal of Mr. Stevens in behalf of the colored race was great, but perhaps not as great as that of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER].

Mr. Stevens, in reporting from the Committee on Reconstruction the first section containing the equal-protection clause, used the language which I am now about to read, and I now invoke it here. Strange to say, on the floor of the United States Senate I invoke the shade of Thaddeus Stevens, bitter partisan that he was, hater of the section from which I come, frenzied by passion—I invoke his spirit to come back now and speak a word of caution to the wild passions of some Senators on this floor.

Here is what Mr. Stevens said:

The Constitution limits only the action of Congress, and is not a limitation on the States. This amendment supplies that defect and allows Congress to correct—

What? To correct the action of individuals? Oh, no! To subject private individuals to prosecution in Federal courts? Oh, no!—

supplies that defect and allows Congress to correct the unjust legislation of the States—

That is the language of Thaddeus Stevens—

so far that the law which operates upon one man shall operate equally upon all. Whatever law punishes a white man for a crime shall punish the black man precisely in the same way and to the same degree.

Mr. President, those are the words of the author of this amendment. Thaddeus Stevens never dreamed that the fourteenth amendment would be so stretched or so contorted or so mutilated as ever to furnish the excuse for legislation directed at individuals. But Mr. Stevens pointed out, and he pointed out clearly, that what the fourteenth amendment proposed was to afford Congress the power of negativing State laws, enacted by the legislature and approved by the Governor, which undertook to discriminate between the races or between any other classes of American citizens. That was the limit of it. That was the limit of the fourteenth amendment when Mr. Thaddeus Stevens proposed it, and that has been the limit of the fourteenth amendment until this good hour.

Mr. President, I should like to quote James G. Blaine. There was a time in this Republic when the silvery voice and the waving plume of James G. Blaine had their followers. There was a time when the voice of that great statesman from Maine was heeded. What did he say as to the purpose of the fourteenth amendment? He was a Member of Congress when the fourteenth amendment was proposed. In his Twenty Years of Congress he clearly expressed his view of the purpose and the scope of the amendment. I should like to have the Senator from New York listen to the words of James G. Blaine.

Of course, Blaine is dead. Of course, Blaine is not involved in the campaign to get votes at the present time. Of course, Blaine is not engaged in a rivalry as to who can show the greatest zeal, not for all American citizens, but for a certain group of American citizens.

Mr. President, I do not propose to discriminate between citizens of the United States. Every citizen, whether he be black or yellow or white, according to the view of the Senator from Texas, is entitled to the same legal and constitutional rights. I respect men of all colors, but I have never yet come to the point where I love other colors more than I do my own. So when there is discrimination by legislation such as that proposed now it is a fraud on its face. It is theoretically directed to equality, and to the maintenance of absolute equality under the law, but its real purpose, its real design, is to select a certain group and give to it and to it alone rights and privileges which are denied to other citizens.

Mr. President, what did James G. Blaine say about this question? In his Twenty Years of Congress, he clearly expressed his view of the purpose and scope of the fourteenth amendment. Let me read his words regarding the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments. This is Mr. Blaine speaking. These are not the words of the Senator from Texas, or of the Senator from New York; this is the declaration of one who was present when the fourteenth amendment was born. He was one of the midwives who delivered it, and he ought to know something about what the fourteenth amendment meant. This is what he said, speaking of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments:

Both of those amendments operate as inhibitions upon the power of the State—

Nothing about individuals—

upon the power of the State, and do not have reference to those irregular acts of the people which find no authorization in the public statutes.

Could there be a clearer denial of the jurisdiction of Congress to enact this proposed law? Mr. Blaine says that the fourteenth amendment was directed at State action. He said the amendments—

Operate as inhibitions upon the power of the State and do not have reference to those irregular acts of the people which find no authorization in the public statutes.

What was he talking about? Senators, he was talking about the very thing the Senator from New York has in mind, those irregular acts of citizens, those acts of private citizens, outside the State law; those acts of gangsters on Broadway; those infrequent acts of people in my section, so-called mobs. That is what Mr. Blaine had in mind when he said that those amendments—

Operate as inhibitions upon the power of the State and do not have reference to those irregular acts of the people which find no authorization in the public statutes.

As was so clearly pointed out by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] yesterday, unless the so-called infringement of the fourteenth amendment is some affirmative act by the State as such, the fourteenth amendment has no application. Mr. Blaine said that was true, Mr. Thaddeus Stevens said that was true, but the Senator from New York says it is not true.

What else did Mr. Blaine say? I want to reiterate that Mr. Blaine was in Congress when the amendment was submitted. He voted for it. He voted for it because he favored it. He voted for it because he wanted to inhibit State action. He voted for it because he did not want to go any further than to inhibit State action. This is what he said further:

The defect in both amendments, insofar as their main object of securing rights to the colored man is involved, lies in the fact that they don't operate directly upon the people.

Could there be anything clearer than that—"that they do not operate directly upon the people." The Senator from New York says they do. Mr. Blaine, who helped write the amendments, and who supported them, and who aided in their submission, says they do not.

I quote Mr. Blaine further. I was hoping that the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] would listen to what Mr. Blaine had to say. I do not suppose the Senator cares, though. I do not suppose he cares what Blaine, who helped write the fourteenth amendment, said it meant. I do not suppose he is concerned with what Mr. Thaddeus Stevens, who was the author of the amendment, said it meant. I do not suppose the Senator from New York is concerned with the report of the committee on reconstruction, which reported the fourteenth amendment and secured its submission to the States. He seems to be indifferent to those things. I can understand his necessity. I know something of the spur that is whipping him on. I sympathize greatly with the Senator from New York. But this is what Mr. James G. Blaine said further:

And therefore Congress is not endowed with the pertinent and applicable power to give redress.

Could there be a more scintillating statement as to the compass and scope of the fourteenth amendment? It operates only on the State and State action, and does not affect individuals, and Blaine says that under it Congress has no power to enact legislation such as that proposed.

Mr. President, in the Slaughter House cases, with which all Senators who are lawyers are familiar, the fourteenth amendment was first most exhaustively considered and construed by the Supreme Court.

What did the Supreme Court hold in those cases? In those cases it was sought to overturn an act of the State of Louisiana and administrative acts thereunder seeking to regulate slaughterhouses near the city of New Orleans. It was strongly urged in those cases that such acts discriminated against certain citizens theretofore engaged in such business, and therefore were violative of the fourteenth amendment. The decision of the Court—one of the really great decisions—in part, reads as follows. Mr. President, this is the Supreme Court speaking—not during a political campaign. Thank God, the Court does not have to run for office! This is the Supreme Court speaking, and it is not involved either in a municipal or senatorial campaign, but speaking under its solemn duty, under the Constitution, to interpret and rule under the law, and nothing but the law. The Justices of the Supreme Court with uplifted hands had sworn to support the Constitution of the United States. That Court was under no pressure when it handed down this decision. It was being spurred on by no effort to corral a certain group of voters. It had no throbbing ambition to get a corner on certain voters. Here is what the Supreme Court said:

> Was it the purpose of the fourteenth amendment by the simple declaration that no State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities of the citizens of the United States [I will add, "Nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law"].

Listen, now! This is the Court speaking:

> Was it the purpose of the fourteenth amendment • • • to transfer the security and protection of all the civil rights which we have mentioned from the States to the Federal Government?

This is the Court speaking—

> And where it is declared that Congress shall have the power to enforce that article, was it intended to bring within the power of Congress the entire domain of civil rights heretofore belonging exclusively to the States?

The Supreme Court of the United States said that the fourteenth amendment did not bring the civil rights within Federal jurisdiction, but that they remained within the States where the Constitution put them in 1787, or rather, where the Constitution recognized and maintained them, because they existed theretofore.

The Supreme Court in the Slaughter House cases further said:

> All this and more must follow if the proposition of the plaintiff be sound.
>
> For not only are these rights subject to the control of Congress whenever in its discretion any of them are supposed to be abridged by State legislation, but that body may also pass laws in advance limiting and restricting the exercise of power by the States in their most ordinary and usual functions, as in its judgment it may think proper on all such subjects, and still further, such construction would constitute this Court a perpetual censor upon all legislation of the States on the civil rights of their own citizens, with authority to nullify such as it did not approve, as consistent with those rights as existed at the time of the adoption of this amendment. The argument, we admit, is not always the most conclusive which is drawn from the consequences urged against the adoption of a particular construction of an instrument. But when, as in the case before us, these consequences are so serious, so far-reaching and pervading, so great a departure from the structure and spirit of our institutions, when the effect is to fetter and degrade—

I should like to have the attention of Senators. I should like to have the attention of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. The Supreme Court further said:

> When the effect is to fetter and degrade the State governments by subjecting them to the control of Congress in the exercise of powers heretofore universally conceded to them of the most ordinary and fundamental character, when in fact it radically changes the whole theory of the relations of the State and Federal Governments to each other and of both these governments to the people, the argument has a force that is irresistible in the absence of language which expresses such a purpose too clearly to admit of doubt.

I see that the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] has returned to the Chamber. The Senator and his great committee are now considering the tremendously important question of a farm-relief bill which this Congress may enact at the present session, but the Senator from New York has injected his motion, to disrupt and impede and to hinder the consideration of the whole useful legislative program at this session. He does it without consulting the leader on this side. The senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] is the representative on this floor not alone of the Democrats of this body but of the Democratic administration, and it does seem to me that if the Senator from New York is in harmony with the purposes of this administration, if he enjoys as much confidence as he is reputed to enjoy at the White House, he would not without consulting the leader on this side undertake to take charge of the Senate program and inject his own personal desires above the welfare of the party and of the administration. That is the inescapable conclusion arising from the action which he demonstrated here yesterday and today.

Let me say to the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] that I hope his committee reports out a farm-relief bill. As a representative of one of the great agricultural States of this Union I hope it will not be necessary, but the Senator from Texas is willing to remain here until the 1st day of January, if need be, to complete this legislative program. We shall not have to stay here until January, however, unless the Senator from New York persists in throwing this monkey wrench into the administration machinery.

Mr. President, I was discussing the decisions of the Supreme Court on the scope and meaning of the fourteenth amendment. Here is what the Supreme Court says, furthermore, talking about personal rights:

> It would be the vainest show of learning to prove by citation of authority—

That is true today. It is only a show of learning on the part of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] to cite Supreme Court decisions. It is only a vain display of profound legal knowledge and construction to cite the Constitution to the Senator from New York, or to cite the decisions of the Supreme Court to the Senator from New York, when on the one hand there is the Constitution and the Supreme Court decisions and on the other hand the desire to corral a little bunch of votes. My God, what a decision! What a great problem! Here on the one hand is our duty to the Constitution. Here on the one hand is our duty to respect the decisions of the Supreme Court. But on the other is a thirst and a craving to corral a certain little segment of voters.

Mr. President, the Constitution of the United States was bought by the blood of our forefathers. The Declaration of Independence was but the opening door to the final culmination of their aims and their ambitions in the Constitution of the United States. Every drop of blood that was shed, from the time the first shot was fired yonder at Concord, at the bridge, until the Battle of Yorktown, was shed in behalf of realizing and putting into permament form what was finally enacted into the Constitution of the United States. Eight long years of warfare took place. We have had 150 years of glory under the Constitution!

We have had 150 years of national advancement and national development which has left America's record during that century and one-half unrivaled in all of the days of recorded history.

That Constitution is on one side in this scale. Its construction by the Supreme Court is as clear as language can make it in every decision that the Senator from Texas has been able to find. On the other hand, is this little desire to prove a loyalty and a devotion to a certain little group above and beyond a devotion to all of the people of the United States and so the decision must be made.

For myself, I shall take the Constitution of the United States and the decisions of the Supreme Court to guide my actions in this Chamber, and also when I leave it, if I have to leave it, because of my devotion to its principles.

Mr. President, I would rather go back home and practice law in the justice of the peace court there—and I can. That is one court I know. [Laughter.] I would rather go back home and practice law in the justice of the peace court than, for the sake of getting a few votes, advocate a measure that violates the Constitution and is in direct conflict with the unchanged line of decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. Those who want to make that choice, let them make it, and I hope that their new-found associates and their new-found brothers will detest the association as much as I detest it.

Mr. President, as I was suggesting a moment ago, the Supreme Court said further in the Slaughter House cases:

It would be the vainest show of learning to prove by citation of authority that up to the adoption of the recent amendments—thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth—no claim was set up that those rights depended on the Federal Government for their existence or protection beyond very expressed limitations which the Federal Constitution imposed on the States, such, for instance, as the prohibition against ex-post-facto laws, bills of attainder, and laws impairing the obligation of contracts. But, with the exception of these and a few other restrictions, the entire domain of privileges of citizens of the States, as above defined, lay within the constitutional and legislative powers of the States and without that of the Federal Government.

Mr. President, how could language be clearer; how could meaning be plainer; how could the import of words stand out in sharper outline than in these pronouncements of the Supreme Court of the United States?

We had in reconstruction times a Federal statute known as the Civil Rights Bill. I am sure that if the Senator from New York had been here when that bill was passed he would have voted for it. The Civil Rights Bill provided that any American who denied equal privileges in hotels, boarding houses, theaters, public conveyances, and public amusements to any other American citizen because of his race or color was guilty of a penal offense. What happened to that act? The Supreme Court of the United States—a republican court, an honest court, a brave court, a courageous court, a patriotic court, a court that respected its oath to uphold the Constitution, a court that respected its duty to the people of the United States—held that that act of Congress was unconstitutional. The act is still on the statute books, and all in the world that would have to be done to revive it would be for the Supreme Court now to overrule its previous decision. It has just been lying there forgotten, not enforced. Here is what the Supreme Court said in that case:

It is a State action and of a particular character that is prohibited.

That is under the fourteenth amendment.

State action, not failure to do something. What is action? The Senator from Indiana [Mr. MINTON] on yesterday said if a police officer or anybody just happened to be present and did not do something or was indifferent that he would be guilty. What is action? Action is something affirmative. The State must do something to deny the rights of citizens under the fourteenth amendment.

It is State action of a particular character that is prohibited. Individual invasion of individual rights is not the subject matter of the amendment.

That is the Supreme Court speaking. Individual invasion of individual rights is not within the scope of the fourteenth amendment.

What does this bill deal with? This bill deals only with individual invasion of individual rights. It does not say anything about State action. It does not lay any prohibition on State action. It is directed at individuals who may compose a mob. It is directed at State officers who may, as it is stated, fail to protect a man within their custody. But the Supreme Court says, referring to the fourteenth amendment that—

Individual invasion of individual rights is not the subject matter of the [fourteenth] amendment. It has a deeper and broader scope. It nullifies and makes void all State legislation and State action of every kind which impairs the privileges and immunities of citizens of the United States or which injures them in life, liberty, or property without due process of law, or which denies to any of them the equal protection of the law.

In other words, here the Court again without any hesitation, without any equivocation, without any backing and filling, without any dodging, without any straddling, without any desire to catch the popular ear, without the exigencies of a political campaign—here the Supreme Court again and again and again declares that individual invasion of personal rights is not within the fourteenth amendment.

To adopt appropriate legislation for correcting the effects of such prohibited State laws—

The Supreme Court says that the fourteenth amendment is directed at State laws and State action. No State can pass a law that impairs the right of a citizen of the United States. It must be State action and not individual action.

To adopt appropriate legislation for correcting the effects of such prohibited State laws and State acts, and thus to render them ineffectual, null, void, and innocuous. This is the legislative power conferred upon the Congress, and this is the whole of it.

Says the Supreme Court, under the fourteenth amendment all that the Congress can do is to nullify State legislation or State acts which may impair the rights of citizens of the United States.

This is the legislative power conferred upon the Congress and this is the whole of it.

In other words, there is nothing else. Whenever the Congress exercises its power to nullify State acts and State legislation, it exhausts its power under the fourteenth amendment and it has no other jurisdiction. The Supreme Court says that it has then gone to the very extreme boundaries of its authority. Yet the Senator from New York wants to explore unknown regions of jurisdiction. With the courage of a crusader or of a Christopher Columbus, he wants to go out and discover untrodden pathways in legislative fields far beyond the safe boundaries of the Constitution, over the precipice into chaos, anywhere that it may extend beyond the constitutional authority.

Mr. President, there are innumerable decisions of the Supreme Court to which I should very much like to direct the attention of those Senators who are interested in the Constitution—and I am happy to say that I think most Senators in this body are interested in the Constitution, and most of them are interested in maintaining it, although some of them apparently would like to dodge it or get around it.

Mr. President, I want to quote further from the Supreme Court, if there is no objection. Here is what the Supreme Court of the United States says in the Civil Rights cases:

It is absurd to affirm that because the rights of life, liberty, and property (which includes all civil rights that men have) are by the amendment sought to be protected against invasion on the part of the States without due process of law, Congress may therefore provide due process of law for their vindication in every case.

The Supreme Court says it is absurd. The Senator from New York says it is wonderful and delightful and ought to be adopted by the Congress. The Supreme Court said it is absurd to assume that Congress has the power to go in and look after all the civil rights of the citizens within the States.

Where do they get those rights? They do not get them from the United States; they do not get them from the Constitution. The ordinary civil and personal rights of individuals who live within the States are derived by them, if they get them anywhere, except those that are inherent in a free government, from the State authority. Mr. President, they had those rights before the Battle of Lexington; they had those rights before the Declaration of Independence; they had those rights before the Constitution of the United States was adopted. They had them because they were free citizens within free commonwealths, 13 of them. And when the Constitution of the United States was adopted they still retained every right they ever possessed, except those expressly delegated to the Federal jurisdiction. This was not one of them, and the Supreme Court repeatedly and repeatedly has said the same thing. The Supreme Court says it is absurd to affirm, absurd even to affirm it, to say nothing of maintaining it—that because the denial by a State to any persons of equal protection of the laws is prohibited by the amendment, therefore Congress may establish laws for their equal protection.

Here again the Supreme Court assaults this bill amidships. It attacks it in front and by flank and in the rear. The Supreme Court absolutely destroys this measure or it will destroy it if it ever gets by the Congress. The Supreme Court will destroy it. But, Senators, there are those who think that Congress should not consider the constitutionality of an act when it is voted upon, but that we should leave that to the Supreme Court. I do not agree with that doctrine. We are under the same obligation as the Supreme Court to maintain the Constitution of the United States. We took an oath to uphold and defend it and protect it. When we examine a measure in the House of Representatives or in the Senate, it is just as much the duty and obligation of a Representative or a Senator, when he thinks a bill is unconstitutional, to vote against it as it is for a judge on the bench to hold it is beyond the power of Congress to enact it into law.

The other doctrine is a cowardly doctrine. The doctrine of saying, "We shall vote for it and let the Court pass upon its constitutionality" is a cowardly doctrine. It is a doctrine that shirks and dodges and undertakes to evade the solemn responsibility which rests upon every Senator and every Representative in the Congress of the United States.

It is our duty to be guided by that standard and when we are convinced that a bill is beyond the power of Congress and then vote for it, we are violating our obligation and our duty. I do not mean to say that if a Senator or a Representative is in doubt about the matter he is not free to act and he violates no obligation, but where he is clearly convinced that it is beyond the constitutional power of the Congress and then votes for it anyway, he is untrue to the obligations of his office.

The Supreme Court said the Federal Government has no power to go out and devise schemes of taking care of individual civil rights within the States. Speaking of civil rights legislation the Supreme Court said:

> If this legislation is appropriate for enforcing the prohibitions of the amendment, it is difficult to see where it is to stop. Why may not Congress with equal show of authority enact a code of laws for the enforcement and vindication of all rights of life, liberty, and property?

That might have been said of this very bill. The Supreme Court no doubt was looking into the future. The Supreme Court no doubt was undertaking to envisage just where that kind of doctrine would lead us. It probably saw the shadowy outline of the figure of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] advancing with the bill in one hand and some ballots in the other hand, because here is what the Court said:

> If this legislation is appropriate for enforcing the prohibitions of the amendment, it is difficult to see where it is to stop. Why may not Congress with equal show of authority enact a code of laws for the enforcement and vindication of all rights of life, liberty, and property?

I digress to discuss that statement briefly. The distinguished Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] yesterday pointed out that very aspect of the matter. If the Federal Government may go into a State to regulate State officers in the performance of their functions under State laws, if it may say to them, "We, the Federal Government, will supervise you in the discharge of your State functions and your State duties as to murder", why may it not also go into the States and regulate theft, regulate highway robbery, and every other matter that affects either the life, liberty, or property of the citizen? There is no answer to it.

Every right which we possess comes within the fourteenth amendment if this one does. Every right of property, every right that I possess in my pocketknife, every right that I possess in my personal belongings, every right that I possess to be free, every right that I possess to live and enjoy life and to enjoy the protection of my country is within the jurisdiction of the Federal Government if this particular matter is within the jurisdiction of the Federal Government.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWARTZ in the chair). Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. Does not the Federal Government now have some laws against robbery?

Mr. CONNALLY. Oh, yes; it does.

Mr. MINTON. And with reference to larceny?

Mr. CONNALLY. Yes.

Mr. MINTON. Would there be any objection to having a law against murder?

Mr. CONNALLY. Does the Senator from Indiana believe that the Federal Government ought to invade the States and make all crimes Federal offenses?

Mr. MINTON. No; unless the States fail to do their duty.

Mr. CONNALLY. Suppose the Federal Government decides the States are not enforcing their laws against theft, would the Senator from Indiana advocate a Federal law against theft?

Mr. MINTON. Oh, yes, of course, because we already have such a law. The Federal Government came to the conclusion that the States were not enforcing the law in reference to stolen automobiles and enacted a law relating to stolen automobiles. The Federal Government came to the conclusion that the States were not enforcing the law with reference to kidnaping and enacted a Federal kidnaping law.

Mr. CONNALLY. Does the Senator contend, as to the law relating to stolen automobiles, that the Federal Government can go into a State where a car was not transported across State lines and punish or attempt to punish for the stealing of that automobile?

Mr. MINTON. Oh, no; but it was still an offense under the State law to steal a car used in interstate commerce, and the State was not enforcing the law, so the Federal Government said it came under the interstate-commerce provision of the Constitution and enacted a Federal law relating to such thefts.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Indiana is driven to making some kind of argument to maintain his position and tries to draw a parallel between the interstate transportation of a stolen automobile and a crime committed wholly within the State. What the Senator from Texas was undertaking to point out was that to go into a State and regulate its domestic affairs is beyond the power of the Federal Government. Of course, the Federal Government has the right to prohibit the transportation in interstate commerce of any kind of stolen property. That is all the law relating to stolen automobiles transported across State lines attempts to do. If it is wrong to steal an automobile and take it across State lines, why did not the Senator offer an amendment to that bill when it was before the Senate to make it a Federal offense to steal an automobile and carry it across the street within a State? It was because he knew he had no authority under the Constitution to do it. But now, because of his advocacy of this measure, he has to seek somewhere to find some kind of shadowy, flimsy foundation upon which to base something that cannot be supported under any circumstances.

Mr. President, of course there is a Federal law against theft. It relates to national banks or any national agency of the Federal Government. Of course, Congress can enact a law to make it a criminal offense to steal from such a national agency, but we all know that the Federal Government has no right to go into the State of Illinois, for instance, and regulate transactions between the people of that State which are now within the police power of the State and nowhere else.

Mr. LEWIS rose.

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. I merely wish to ask a question of the Senator from Texas. My neighbor in the adjoining seat, the able Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], and I, while the Senator from Texas has been making his very able and full argument, have been discussing whether he might not be mistaken in assuming that the bill allows judgments against individuals in their respective localities. Does the Senator from Texas feel that the bill does authorize judgments against individuals? I am opposed to such a provision and tried to get it out of the bill.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am speaking now of the penal sections of the bill. They are directed at individuals.

Mr. LEWIS. We thought the able Senator was directing himself to judgments against individuals.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am not so much concerned about money judgments. I am, of course, opposed to the provision in the bill to give a money judgment against an innocent county or the innocent taxpayers of a county. I am talking about the penal provisions which would put a man in jail or in the penitentiary. I am more concerned with the liberty of my constituents than I am with their dollars. I am more concerned with my liberty of body and mind than I am with my dollars.

The Senator from Illinois pays me the great compliment of advising me that he and the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] were busily engaged in discussing something during my interesting speech. [Laughter.] If he had listened more attentively he would not have had any doubt as to what the Senator from Texas is undertaking to indicate.

Mr. LEWIS. I am very sorry the able Senator's argument leaves us so confused that we could not tell just what he was talking about.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Texas is always delighted when he has the attention of the Senator from Illinois, and wishes he could get it more often.

Mr. LEWIS. He will. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. What the Senator from Illinois says about confusion leads me to say that it is not the speech of the Senator from Texas that is confusing anybody unless they have been listening to the citations of the Supreme Court and of the Constitution, and if they have I can well understand how there is some confusion as to what their duty might be when they want to go in another direction. When all of their impulses are going in one direction, and they suddenly run up on a red traffic light in the form of the Constitution of the United States, and then another red traffic light in the form of decisions of the Supreme Court from the very beginning down to the present moment, I can well understand how the Senator from Illinois would be in a state of some confusion.

The Supreme Court says:

> Why may not Congress, with equal show of authority, enact a code of laws for the enforcement and vindication of all rights of life, liberty, and property?

That is an interrogatory which the Supreme Court propounded many years ago. It has never yet been answered. It cannot be answered; it cannot be refuted by those who now propose this legislation. I assert, Mr. President, that if the Federal Government may go into a State and pass a law like this relating to murder, it may go into a State and regulate how fast automobiles may be driven within a State. I assert that it may go in and regulate the laws as to theft, the laws as to all criminal offenses, and probably even go into the civil courts—because they relate to property, which is associated in the same clause of the amendment with liberty and with life—and take over the control of all the courts and all the internal affairs of the States of the Union. I say if they may do this, they may do that; but, Mr. President, the Constitution gives them no warrant to do either.

Again, the Supreme Court says:

> If it is supposable that the States may deprive persons of life, liberty, and property without due process of law, and the amendment itself does suppose this, why should not Congress proceed at once to prescribe due process of law for the protection of every one of these fundamental rights in every possible case, as well as to prescribe equal privileges in inns, public conveyances, and theaters?

That was the Civil Rights case; and the court asked, if that act had been upheld, why should not the Federal Government then pass a law regulating in every State the conduct of inns and theaters and boarding houses and public conveyances, and completely oust the jurisdiction of the State?

Mr. President, that is not the only time the Supreme Court has spoken. That was the Civil Rights case, involving a statute which, had it not been stricken down, would, for motives that are the same as those behind this bill, have dragged the section of America from which I come down to a state of degradation and social debasement by law, by the fiat of Congress, which would have brought to the white civilization of the South the most terrible agony, the most terrible gloom that has ever been threatened in this or any other republic.

In the case of Barbier v. Connally (113 U. S. 27), Mr. Justice Field, a great judge from the State of California, used the language I am about to read. Mr. Justice Field was appointed right after the Civil War, or perhaps during the Civil War. A new circuit had been created for California and the adjoining States, and Mr. Justice Field was appointed from California. I desire to read what he said about the fourteenth amendment. He was not a Democrat. He did not live in New York. He did not belong to any political clubs in New York. He was not running for office in New York or anywhere else, thank God. Here is what he said:

> The fourteenth amendment, in declaring that no State "shall deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws", undoubtedly intended not only that there should be no arbitrary deprivation of life or liberty or arbitrary spoliation of property but that equal protection and security should be given to all under like circumstances in the enjoyment of their personal and civil rights; that all persons should be equally entitled to pursue their happiness and acquire and enjoy property; that they should have like access to the courts of the country for the protection of their persons and property, the prevention and redress of wrongs, and the enforcement of contracts; that no impediment should be interposed to the pursuits of anyone except as applied to the same pursuits by others under like circumstances; that no greater burdens should be laid upon one than are laid upon others in the same calling and conditions; and that in the administration of criminal justice no different or higher punishment should be imposed upon one than such as is prescribed to all for like offenses.

But listen:

> But neither the amendment, broad and comprehensive as it is, nor any other amendment, was designed to interfere with the power of the State, sometimes termed its police power, to prescribe regulations to promote the health, peace, morals, education, and good order of the people.

Mr. Justice Field, of the Supreme Court, in handing down the opinion of the Court, said that as broad and sweeping as were the terms of the fourteenth amendment, neither that amendment nor any other amendment was designed to interfere with the power of the State, sometimes termed its police power. Yes; the fourteenth amendment cannot afford the basis for an invasion by the Federal Government of the province of the police power of the States.

Mr. President, that is not all the Supreme Court has said; but what is proposed in this bill? I have undertaken, in a rather unarranged and loose fashion, to point out the limitations of the fourteenth amendment, not only by the plain language of the amendment, not only by the debates in the Congress when the amendment was submitted, the language of Mr. Blaine, the speeches of Mr. Stevens and others, but I have undertaken to point out that that interpretation and construction has been maintained over a long period of years unwaveringly and unflinchingly and unvaryingly by the Supreme Court of the United States.

Let us see what this bill, this great measure, proposes to do.

Mr. President, we in the South have problems that some of the Senators do not understand. We have undertaken as best we could to solve them. We shall struggle along, notwithstanding the impediments and the burdens that may be put upon us, notwithstanding the harassments and the annoyances which prejudice and passion and political expediency seek to inflict on us. Over half a century ago the South emerged from the Civil War. She was bleeding from many wounds. Her fields were wasted, and many of her gallant sons were left in the green valleys of Virginia or on the hillsides throughout the South. A victorious North had conquered us, and we were in political chains. It was not of our seeking, but the war left us with a population some of whom had been lately enfranchised. My father never owned a slave, but he walked forth with a gun in his hand when he thought the rights under the Constitution of his section and his State were violated.

Mr. President, the war left with us social burdens and problems which I would to God some of the Senators in other States could understand. We are trying to solve them, and we have done pretty well with them. In the matter of lynching, we are opposed to lynchings. I am opposed to lynchings, and over the years the problem has largely been solved. Very few of them now occur.

In my own State, the other day, in the county-seat town of Athens, Tex., a brute committed a heinous offense upon an innocent woman. A crowd gathered. Somebody thought he was going to be mobbed; but a brave and a wise sheriff stepped forth in his own single person, took charge of the situation, and there was no lynching. He was acting under his sworn duty as a State officer. He was not driven to the performance of that duty by a threat from Washington. If that had been the only incentive, he probably would have been down on the creek fishing, and would have let the mob take the prisoner without undergoing any risk on his part of going to the penitentiary; but he was an honest man. He was a brave officer. He performed his duty, and nothing happened. But what does this bill provide?

Mr. President, we of the South do not believe in lawlessness. We are not advocating lynching. We have laws against murder. We have laws, and they are enforced—not, of course, in every case. No law is enforced in every case in any State of the Union. When any Senator rises on this floor and points his finger at me and says, "Your State does not enforce the law on so and so," I shall be able to rise up and point the finger back at him and point out that under the laws and the courts of his State some laws are not enforced as they should be enforced. But, Mr. President, nobody gave the Federal Government power to supervise the States as to how they enforce their own laws. Nobody gave it that power, because no living man possessed the power to confer it.

We speak about two sovereignties, a Federal sovereignty and a State sovereignty. How can a State remain a sovereign if the Federal Government tells the State how and when, and so on, it may enforce its own laws? The State ceases to be a sovereign when a higher sovereign imposes its will and its power upon it.

Let us see what the bill provides:

> That the provisions of this act are enacted in the exercise of the power of Congress—

Listen to this. It starts out with a legislative falsehood:

> That the provisions of this act are enacted in exercise of the power of Congress to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States and for the purpose of better assuring under said amendment equal protection to the lives and persons of citizens and due process of law to all persons charged with or suspected or convicted of any offense within the jurisdiction of the several States.

Mr. President, I say that is a legislative falsehood. It states that the provisions of this bill are to be enacted in the exercise of the power of Congress under the fourteenth amendment, and I have demonstrated, I hope, that there is no such power under the fourteenth amendment. So the assertion here that it is to be so enacted is what I very generously, and very softly, and very euphemistically, term a "legislative falsehood."

> A State—

Who is this speaking? Who is going to tell a State, a sovereign, what it can do? It is a great sovereign when it can be ordered and kicked around by a congressional act—

> A State shall be deemed to have denied to any victim or victims of lynching equal protection and due process of law whenever that State or any legally competent governmental subdivision thereof shall have failed, neglected, or refused to employ the lawful means at its disposal for the protection of that person or those persons against lynching or against seizure and abduction followed by lynching.

Mr. President, Congress is asked to say that a State shall be held to have denied equal protection of the laws under those circumstances. Notwithstanding there is a State law against what may have occurred, notwithstanding State officers are ready and willing to enforce the law, it is the effort of the bill I am discussing to hold that a State has denied equal protection of the law if a lynching happens in the State.

Why did the proponents of the bill insert that provision? Because the fourteenth amendment is directed only at State action, and they must have some sort of a hook on which to hang the theory of the bill, so they undertake to say that the State has denied equal protection, so as to bring it within the fourteenth amendment, if a lynching under the circumstances set forth occurs within the State. That is another legislative falsehood as to the actual facts. It is a subterfuge in a frantic effort to find something upon which to hang the authority to enact the proposed legislation.

What is a mob under the bill? I read:

> Any assemblage of three or more persons which shall exercise or attempt to exercise by physical violence and without authority of law any power of correction or punishment over any citizen or citizens or other person or persons in the custody of any peace officer or suspected of, charged with, or convicted of the commission of any offense, with the purpose or consequence of preventing the apprehension or trial or punishment by law of such citizen or citizens, person or persons, shall constitute a "mob" within the meaning of this act.

Mr. President, if two men conspired to go down and drag a citizen out and cut his throat, they would not be within the provisions of the law, but if three did it, they would immediately be subject to Federal jurisdiction and Federal power. I am against murder by one man, or two men, or three men, or four men, or five men, or any other number of men. I am against murder whether it is under the gangster section of the bill and over on Fifth Avenue, or down on Second Avenue, or over in the Bowery, or up in Harlem, just as I am if it is in any other part of this Republic.

> Any such violence by a mob which results in the death or maiming of the victim or victims thereof shall constitute "lynching" within the meaning of this act: Provided, however—

I want Senators to note this; I want the press to note this:

> Provided, however—

We have to take care of our own. We want to pass a bill in order to get all the votes we can of a certain color, and so on, but we do not want to drive any votes away from us, so it is—

> Provided, however, That lynching shall not be deemed to include violence occurring between members of groups of lawbreakers such as are commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers.

They are exempted. Gangsters and racketeers are not a mob. If there is a mob on Broadway, or over on the Bowery, it will go free. If there is a mob in the South we are put in the penitentiary.

If there were a mob over in Harlem—and I saw a statement in the press that there was one not long ago. "Father" Divine resides in Harlem, as I recall, and the "father" has a good many followers, and he has a good many opponents. So, not long ago it was stated in the press that some, I do not know whether it was his opponents or his own group, had ganged up together and were creating a disturbance and breaking the peace. But under the broad and generous provisions of this measure "Father" Divine is given absolution, "Father" Divine can organize all the mobs he wants to up in his section of Harlem, and "Father" Divine will sit among the anointed; but if a mob occurs somewhere down in the South we are to be put in the penitentiary. If a mob occurs in Harlem they give the members of it reserved seats. If it occurs in my section they give us reserved cells in the penitentiary.

Mr. President, this bill is advanced in order to guarantee to all citizens of the United States the equal protection of the laws. How can we exempt gangsters? If we are to guarantee the equal protection of the laws, and guarantee to every citizen of the United States his rights and privileges and immunities, how can we except anybody from its provisions, whether he is gangster or "gangee"? I wonder who put that provision into the bill? I think I can recognize the handwriting. I think I know the handwriting, although I am not an expert on handwriting.

Provided, however—

I want Senators from the prairie States who are figuring on voting for the bill to note this. If there is a bunch of cattle rustlers out in Idaho, and a vigilance committee catches them and runs them out of the country, that vigilance committee would come under the law; that would be a mob. If there is a vigilance committee in a mining town, or out in the cattle country, and they take a horse thief or a cattle thief and stretch him up or run him out of the country, they become a mob, and they will be put in the penitentiary. But if the same kind of men, with the same kind of motives, organize a little gangsters' association, they can be a mob and kill somebody, and they can plead, "We are not amenable to the law; we are gangsters", and they will go free. So I want the Senators from the West, from Colorado and Wyoming and the Dakotas, from Montana, New Mexico, and Arizona, where the cattle are still on the ranges, and where the wild horses and the bucking bronchos still make picturesque that wonderful region—I want them to know that there are still going to be horse thieves out in that country, there will still have to be vigilantes, perhaps, but if the vigilantes catch a thief, even if they do not hang him, if they simply whip him, or commit any violence on that horse thief or cattle thief, they violate the antilynching law.

But if "Gyp the Blood", or "Billy the Greek", or "Sam the Dago", in New York, organizes a gang and goes out and highjacks some of his antagonists of a rival gang, and does a little violence to them, he can come into court and say, "Well, I am a gangster. I am exempt under this law." And if the Senator from New York should appear as his counsel, we can imagine him pointing out, "I wrote this law, and I know exactly what it means, and lynching shall not be deemed to include violence occurring between members of groups of lawbreakers such as are commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers. It meant just what I said, and my constituents are not going to be subject to any such outrageous law. I am willing to put it on the boys from the other sections, perfectly willing to put it on the South, perfectly willing to put it on the West, but I am not going to put it on my beloved constituents on Broadway, or on Second Avenue, or in Harlem. I am going to leave 'Father' Divine and the beloved secure." [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I have been dealing with the general outline of the bill. Let us see what else it provides. I read section 3:

SEC. 3. Whenever a lynching of any person or persons shall occur, any officer or employee of a State or any governmental subdivision thereof who shall have been charged with the duty or shall have possessed the authority as such officer or employee to protect such person or persons from lynching and shall have willfully neglected, refused, or failed to make all diligent efforts to protect such person or persons from lynching, and any officer or employee of a State or governmental subdivision thereof who shall have had custody of the person or persons lynched and shall have willfully neglected, refused, or failed to make all diligent efforts to protect such person or persons from lynching, and any officer or employee of a State or governmental subdivision thereof who, having the duty as such officer or employee, shall willfully neglect, refuse, or fail to make all diligent efforts to apprehend, keep in custody, or prosecute the members or any member of the lynching mob, shall be guilty of a felony and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding 5 years, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] a little while ago made inquiry as to whether this bill would allow judgments. It not only allows conviction and confinement in prison but, under section 3, it also authorizes a fine as high as $5,000. Of course, the Government could proceed to collect that fine by imprisonment, I suppose, or by judgment. But what the Senator had in mind no doubt was the next section, section 4.

Before I go to section 4 let me make a further suggestion. In section 3 a doctrine is laid down that the Federal Government has the right to go inside a State and pass judgment on a State officer as to how he performs his duty. His duty to what? His duty to the State. The only obligation that officer has is to the State.

Mr. President, where does he get his authority? He gets it from the people who elect him or from the Governor who appoints him. He gets his authority and his duties from the constitution of his own State and from the acts of the legislature of his own State. Whose business is it to see that he obeys the law? It is the business of the Governor of the State, of the legislature, and of the State officers, under their own constitution. Where did the Federal Government get any right to supervise the duties of State officers under the State constitution and under State law? But this bill says that the Federal Government will cross State lines. It will invade a State—not with an army. I would rather it would come with an army, because when it comes with an army we know what to meet and how to fight. But it comes in to destroy the very fundamentals of State sovereignty and State power; it comes in insinuatingly, all dressed up with a beautiful exterior. "We are trying to do away with lynching." Oh, yes; that is simply the little cellophane covering on it; but when the cellophane covering is torn off, we see that it is absolutely destructive of the sovereignty and of the independence and of the responsibility of the State.

Mr. President, how are we to maintain State authority unless we say to the States, "You must, in your own proper way, stand on your own legs. You must assert your own authority. You must meet your own responsibility." We have done enough already to weaken and enervate the States; but if we adopt this sort of a doctrine and follow it up, every vestige of State power to control its own internal affairs will in the course of time disappear.

Mr. President, I shall not vote to give the Senator from New York, or to give to any other Senator, or to give to any Federal functionary anywhere the right to tell the citizens of my State whom they shall elect to office or how that officer, when once elected, shall perform his duty, not to the Federal Government, but shall perform his duty to the sovereignty which creates him, which endows him with all the power that he possesses, and to which he owes every obligation. That is what this section does. It subordinates him. Instead of being an officer of a sovereign State, he begins to wear the red livery of a lackey of the Federal Government. "Oh, yes; I am a State officer, but I have got to do what the Federal Government tells me to do. It is the judge of my fidelity. It passes judgment on whether I am true to my obligation to my State and to my Constitution and to my Government."

Mr. President, I shall not vote to give that authority to anybody in Washington to regulate anybody in New York, or in Wyoming, or in Maine, or anywhere else.

Let us now see what else there is in the bill.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, would the Senator now advert to section 3?

Mr. CONNALLY. I should be very glad to.

Mr. LEWIS. I want the views of the able Senator on that section. Unless I misunderstood him——

Mr. CONNALLY. I think the Senator from Illinois is referring to section 5. I shall get to that in a moment.

Mr. LEWIS. Possibly that is the section I had in mind.

Mr. CONNALLY. I shall go to that section now. I shall skip section 4. I want to accommodate the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. President, the Senator from Illinois is interested in section 5. I read from it:

> Every governmental subdivision of a State to which the State shall have delegated functions of police shall be responsible for any lynching occurring within its territorial jurisdiction.

Does that answer the Senator?

Mr. LEWIS. I was anxious to get the construction of the able Senator from Texas as to what he feels is the meaning and operation of that section. I think we are at variance, but I should like to have his views.

Mr. CONNALLY. I shall quote the language of the bill, and then neither of us will be at variance as to our views.

Mr. LEWIS. It is not the language of the bill the Senator from Illinois desires, but what does the Senator from Texas construe that its operation would be by reason of which he would object to it?

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Texas would construe it this way, as was so well stated by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] yesterday. Here is a bill which says to citizens of a county, we shall say, citizens who believe in law, citizens who have passed laws, citizens who have elected officers to enforce the laws, citizens who pay taxes to pay the salaries of officers to enforce the law, and if by any chance a lynching shall have occurred in that county, the taxpayers must pay damages to the family of the victim, though they may have been at home asleep at the time, though they may have been at church worshiping their God and praying for the enforcement of all laws—notwithstanding all those things the taxpayers of the county or any municipal subdivision of the State are being punished by having to pay from $2,000 to $10,000 out of their treasury.

Does that answer the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. LEWIS. Yes; I appreciate the construction placed upon it by the Senator.

Mr. CONNALLY. Does the Senator favor that?

Mr. LEWIS. I must say again, though, not wishing to intrude myself at this time, that I tried to have that particular provision taken out of this bill. I did not favor it originally and I do not favor it now. I hope it can be dropped from this bill, and the whole subject left in the form that the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] has advocated, simply to avoid lynching by those who could prevent it. But placing a heavy fine in dollars and cents on the innocent has had no appeal to me.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. I knew that the Senator from Illinois could not approve all of this bill. He disapproves very bitterly that section. The only way that he can express that disapproval, so as to satisfy his own feelings, I am sure, and the responsibility that he owes his constituency in Illinois is to vote against the bill, because if he votes for it with that clause in it, he will be voting for what he says is wrong. He will be voting for that which he says is an outrage, and I know the Senator from Illinois will not do it. [Laughter.] I do not want to misrepresent the views of the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I did not quite understand the last observation of the able Senator from Texas. I was for a moment engaged on a legal suggestion made by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE].

Mr. CONNALLY. I beg the Senator's pardon.

Mr. LEWIS. What was it my able friend said that he thinks is misrepresenting me?

Mr. CONNALLY. I am not conscious of having made any misrepresentation, but the Senator from Illinois is so attractive in his personality——

Mr. LEWIS. I will not deny that. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. That it is difficult to get his attention because others are always pressing for it. [Laughter.] I shall answer the Senator. The Senator from Texas was just pointing out how gratified he was to know that the Senator from Illinois is so much opposed to section 5, which puts a heavy financial burden upon innocent people in the counties and subdivisions of a State, when they have nothing on earth to do with a lynching. Was I correct in that?

Mr. LEWIS. Yes; and I feel that section can either be eliminated from the bill, or so modified as not to obstruct the main purpose of the bill, and I hope something of the kind will be done.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is a hope which the Senator will never see realized. I said but awhile ago, knowing how strongly the Senator from Illinois feels against section 5, knowing how his spirit is outraged by the terms of section 5, that the only way he will have to voice that opposition will be to vote against the whole bill, because if he votes for the whole bill he will be voting for what he condemned and what he says is an outrage upon innocent people, and I know that the Senator, gallant spirit that he is, will never do that. [Laughter.]

Mr. LEWIS. The Senator embarrasses me very much, because in order to be worthy of his virtue I have got to "commit" his vice.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Texas knows no one more able to "commit" that vice, if he desires, than the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. Very well, since I have the permission to do so from the able Senator from Texas.

Mr. BORAH rose.

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. I was going to call the attention of the Senator from Texas and the Senator from Illinois——

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Illinois give heed?

Mr. BORAH. I think I will wait until questions relating to virtue and vice have been fully settled.

Mr. LEWIS. I apologize. I again was distracted by eminent men of great attraction. I did not know my able friends had risen to address me.

Mr. BORAH. I was going to ask, and I will direct the question also to the Senator from New York, under what clause of the fourteenth amendment does the Federal Government get the right to go into a State and establish civil liability for damages between citizens of the State or between citizens and a subdivision of a State?

Mr. WAGNER. I was hoping at some time to discuss that question——

Mr. CONNALLY. I hope the Senator from New York will not interfere with the Senator from Illinois, who wants to answer the Senator from Idaho, as I understand.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, the inquiry was equally addressed to the able Senator from New York in charge of the bill, and I yield in deference to my friend from New York first. [Laughter.]

Mr. WAGNER. The Senator from Illinois may proceed, so far as I am concerned.

Mr. LEWIS. I will answer the Senator from Idaho. He asks me under what provision of the Constitution one has a right to go into court for a civil judgment against a citizen. I answer it would be dependent on whether that citizen has violated the Federal Constitution. If he has, he has rendered himself amenable as decided in the case in 127 United States, which I took the liberty of bringing to the attention of the Senate yesterday.

Mr. BORAH. But what I am asking is, under what provision of the fourteenth amendment, what clause or provision of the fourteenth amendment, has the Federal Government the right to go into a State and establish a civil responsibility or civil liability between two citizens on the basis of damage done by one to the other?

Mr. LEWIS. My answer is that if we have passed a law under the Constitution upon the theory of our Government of protecting the life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness of a citizen, and a person in a State violates the provision both of the constitutional principle and the fourteenth amendment, which guarantees due process of law, he renders himself amenable in the form of penalty that has been provided by the Federal Government.

Mr. BORAH. What due-process-of-law conception has the county within which a crime happened to be committed violated?

Mr. LEWIS. It would depend on whether the officers of that county have either done their duty or ignored it.

Mr. BORAH. Does the Senator contend, by reason of the failure of an officer to do his duty, that the county has thereby become subject to civil responsibility under any clause of the fourteenth amendment;

Mr. LEWIS. No; it would be under law passed under the due-process provision of law drawn from the fourteenth amendment.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, of course the Senator from Idaho cannot get an answer from the Senator from Illinois, because there is no such clause in the Federal Constitution or in the fourteenth amendment. There is no such thing.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. The fourteenth amendment provides:

SECTION 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

What I am anxious to know is, under what clause of the fourteenth amendment is found the right upon the part of the Federal Government to go into a State and establish a civil liability between citizens or between citizens and a subdivision of the State by reason of the activities of citizens, either pro or con.

Mr. LEWIS. I must say to my able friend that I recall——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Texas yield further to the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. LEWIS. I apologize. My able friend has given great consideration, with his splendid ability in the law, to the features of the law which are recognized today in the decision called the Webb-Kenyon Act decision, and also under the eighteenth amendment. I ask him does he not realize if the Federal Government could go into a State and punish a man by fine of $10,000 for violating the prohibition laws that it can do so for the taking of the life of a man by murder?

Mr. BORAH. In the case referred to by the Senator from Illinois the action was taken under an amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. LEWIS. To which I reply we are now acting under an amendment to the Constitution—the fourteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. BORAH. What I am asking is, What provision, what clause, what phrase of the fourteenth amendment justifies the Federal Government establishing a civil responsibility between citizens of a State?

Mr. LEWIS. If established laws prevent the taking of life or the deprivation of liberty and if the Federal Government should assume that it can carry them out by a penalty in the form of civil liability instead of criminal liability could be prescribed as penalty, such is within the jurisdiction of the law-passing power.

Mr. BORAH. Then, as I understand the Senator from Illinois, section 5 is based on and comes within the purview of the fourteenth amendment?

Mr. LEWIS. As to section 5, I again may say that that is where I have had differences with my able colleagues on this side. I would agree that it be stricken out, and I announced my opposition to the committee. I answered the Senator, giving my views, and say that I have not insisted from my viewpoint upon the imposition of a great penalty in dollars and cents on innocent citizens of a county because of wrong upon the part of some county officer.

Mr. BORAH. Now, I ask the Senator from Illinois another question, if I may be permitted to do so.

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. First, I want to read again this provision of the bill:

SEC. 5. (1) Every governmental subdivision of a State to which the State shall have delegated functions of police shall be responsible for any lynching occurring within its territorial jurisdiction. Every such governmental subdivision shall also be responsible for any lynching occurring outside of its territorial jurisdiction, whether within or without the same State.

I presume that is based upon the proposition that the parties lynched had been denied due process of law.

Mr. LEWIS. Such is the way I understand it.

Mr. BORAH. Then, if the lynchers of Chicago who are sometimes called "gangsters"——

Mr. LEWIS. Not in Chicago, of course. [Laughter.]

Mr. BORAH. I will say New York, but I do not know how to differentiate between the two Senators on this proposition. If gangsters have seized a person and have taken his life without any form of trial or hearing, the person so seized and killed has certainly been deprived of his life without due process of law.

Mr. LEWIS. I should say so.

Mr. BORAH. Then, this bill would cover that?

Mr. LEWIS. No; this bill would be limited, as the able Senator must see, to cases where officers of the law who could have exercised their power to avoid it had failed to do so.

Mr. BORAH. Then, I go a step further. If the officers of the city of Chicago or the city of New York failed to do their duty in the eyes of the Federal Government in the way of eliminating or destroying the gangsters of the city, they are certainly failing in the discharge of their duty, are they not?

Mr. LEWIS. If they allowed any man to be lynched, though he would be called a "gangster", when they could have taken steps under the criminal laws to bring him properly to trial by a court and a jury, they would be just as guilty in that state of affairs as if the man did not have the appellation of "gangster."

Mr. BORAH. It all comes back to the question of whether the person has been deprived of his life without due process of law?

Mr. LEWIS. I think the Senator is correct. There is where we agree.

Mr. BORAH. I think a man is deprived of his life without due process of law if he is killed by a gangster just the same as if he is by lynching. Both are really lynching.

Mr. LEWIS. But if he had been deprived, may I say to the able Senator, of due process of law by the action of the law-enforcing officers of the community, then he would be so deprived by the government that names those officers as conceived in this proposed statute.

Mr. BORAH. Then we may assume it to be the Senator's position that if the officer has been derelict in his duty in either instance in not properly protecting the citizen, whether against so-called lynchers or so-called gangsters, the principle of this proposed law will apply?

Mr. LEWIS. The Senator is not asking me that I should apply it in point of money damages. I have expressed my views. It would apply to lynchers and to the officer of the locality in the State who would come within the law.

Mr. BORAH. Does the Senator see any limit to the authority of the Federal Government, under the bill, over the activities of the State with reference to the enforcement of the law?

Mr. LEWIS. I regret to say to my able friend, for we have discussed this phase many times in our court practice and many times in our tribunals of government, that the advance of the Federal Government has been so rapid and seems to multiply itself to such a degree as to drive the States rapidly back into the position of mere provinces or political divisions of the Government of the United States. We have, I deplore to state, reached a point where we have no longer a "union of States" but we have now a state of the Union. I say to the Senator that I deplore the advance, but since it has been made I feel that it may apply to citizens everywhere and wherever necessary.

I heard the able Senator, if he will allow me to say so, indulge the other day in the Senate on the wage and hour bill in a remarkable and to me an attractive discussion, in which he referred to the fact that the government of Rome, following precedent upon precedent, had reached such a point that after a while a ruler was adopted who became practically dictator of the law, and the government became a despotism. I am sorry to say something of that kind, following precedent upon precedent—as described by Tennyson, I think it is—has happened to us in the United States between the Federal Government and the States. I fear we have gone that far. And since my able friend has delivered that dissertation on the Roman advance, I know he will forgive me for reminding him that, as Julius Caesar reached the little river which we speak of as the Rubicon, desiring to cross the line, and as he pushed his horse forward in his imperial march, he uttered the expression, as is reported by his commentaries, "Illa facta est." In other words, "The die is cast." I am pained to say to the Senator that it is my judgment that the policy of my Government has cast the die, and that the policy now, sir, is no longer to preserve the branch of our Government, the localities called States, as sovereign, but to preserve the sovereignty of the Federal Government in its exercise of protection over its citizens as citizens of the United States.

Mr. BORAH. Does the Senator think that in the matter of the elimination of the States and reducing them to mere geographical expressions sufficient to elect Senators and Members of Congress——

Mr. LEWIS. I regret it; it is regrettable——

Mr. BORAH. That the people of the United States ought to be consulted by the submission of constitutional provisions for the elimination of the States?

Mr. LEWIS. One cannot avoid the fact that the question has got to be met as a direct issue before the country.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I have been entertained very greatly by the discussion between the learned Senator from Illinois and the able and eminent Senator from Idaho. As I understand, the attitude of the Senator from Illinois is that he is violently opposed to the consolidation of Federal power and the stripping of the States of their power, but since most of the crowd is going in that direction he will join the crowd and go with it.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Before the Senator leaves this branch of his discussion, I ask him whether he has considered the bearing of the eleventh amendment to the Constitution on this question? I confess that to me, as a member of the committee, section 5 of the bill seemed to transgress the prohibition contained in the eleventh amendment, which absolutely denies any judicial power over an action of law or in equity by a citizen against a State. What I want to ask the Senator is this:

First, is it not true that it makes no difference whether the action of the citizen is brought in his own name under one part of the section or brought on relation of the Attorney General, under another part of the section, it is nevertheless a suit by a citizen?

Mr. CONNALLY. It is.

Mr. AUSTIN. Secondly, is it not true that a municipality or governmental subdivision as described in the bill represents the State and is the State for all definite purposes under the eleventh amendment to the Constitution?

Mr. CONNALLY. It is.

Mr. AUSTIN. Thirdly, is it not true that no such subdivision of any State may be sued save by consent of the legislature of the State?

Mr. CONNALLY. That is true.

Mr. AUSTIN. Fourthly, is it not true that the instances in which a suit has been permitted against subdivisions of a State are extremely few in all the several States of the Union?

Mr. CONNALLY. I would say that is generally true.

Mr. AUSTIN. Then do we not come necessarily to the conclusion that here is an attempt to extend the judicial power beyond the grant by the people of the several States and, therefore, that section 5 ought to go out of the bill?

Mr. CONNALLY. That is correct. I thank the Senator. The Senator from Vermont is learned in the law, a very diligent and able Senator, and I am very happy to have his suggestion.

The eleventh amendment to the Constitution, to which the Senator from Vermont has referred, reads as follows:

> The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or in equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another State, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign state.

The judicial power, of course, is the power of the Federal courts. The bill seeks to authorize suits against subdivisions of States, but the only way a suit can be maintained against a subdivision of the State is to treat it as the act of the State, and the proponents of the bill undertake to do that in the first section of the bill by declaring that a State shall be deemed to have denied the equal protection of the laws if and when a lynching occurs in that State.

The Senator from Vermont is eminently correct in the assertion that a subdivision of the State is a part of the State, and derives its powers and functions from State authority. Most of the subdivisions of a State can be sued only by and with the consent of the State. In my own State of Texas there are certain statutes allowing suits against municipal corporations in certain kinds of cases, but it is clearly fundamental that they cannot be sued unless the State consents.

I think the Senator is correct in his view that section 5 of the bill is not warranted under the eleventh amendment to the Constitution.

I want to answer the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS]. I want to point out what section 5 of the bill proposes to do. It provides that—

> Every governmental subdivision of a State to which the State shall have delegated functions of police shall be responsible for any lynching occurring within its territorial jurisdiction.

Mr. President, every city, every county, in every State of the Union has had delegated to it by the State certain police powers, of course. Therefore, under the terms of the bill, every such governmental subdivision, if a lynching occurs within its borders, is responsible for money damages. Its citizens may be entirely innocent, but they have to go down into their tax money and pay tribute for something for which they are not responsible.

I am an individual. I am lynched. The lynching occurs in a certain county. Senators who urge the passage of the bill in a vain effort to vindicate my having been lynched are willing to assess fines and penalties against thousands upon thousands of innocent citizens who had nothing more to do with the lynching than the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] himself.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. Certainly.

Mr. WAGNER. I had intended not to interrupt the Senator at all.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am very glad to have the Senator interrupt me.

Mr. WAGNER. I have enjoyed his compliments very much during the course of his discussion. The Senator told us that he believes, as a matter of course, if a lynching occurs——

Mr. CONNALLY. I am going to read the rest of this. The Senator from Texas can only read one line at a time. He has read that much and is going to read the balance of it.

The authors of the bill start out with this language:

> Every governmental subdivision of a State to which the State shall have delegated the functions of police—

And that means all of them—shall be responsible for any lynching occurring within its territorial jurisdiction. Every such governmental subdivision shall also be responsible—

Not satisfied with the first provision, it is further provided that—

Every such governmental subdivision shall also be responsible for any lynching occurring outside of its territorial jurisdiction, whether within or without the same State, which follows upon the seizure and abduction of the victim or victims within its territorial jurisdiction.

Mr. President, under the terms of the proposed bill if three or more persons over in Gary, Ind., should seize a citizen on the streets of that city and transport him to Chicago, and then in Chicago do some violence to him, everybody in the county in which Gary, Ind., is located would be guilty under the law and subject to pay a penalty.

If, on the other hand, some balmy afternoon while the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] was promenading along Michigan Avenue, a mob of gangsters should suddenly attack a crowd of other gangsters, and one of the Chicago gangsters should seize and transport one of the gangsters over to Gary, Ind., the Senator from Illinois could be called to Gary, Ind., as a witness in a damage suit against his own city of Chicago, wherein his city of Chicago would be asked to pay from $2,000 to $10,000 because the gangsters had kidnaped a citizen of Chicago and taken him over the State line into Indiana, and tarred and feathered him.

That is the doctrine of the bill. Is that evidence of a desire to give the citizens of the United States the equal protection of the laws? Where is the equal protection of the law that condemns thousands of innocent citizens and makes them go down into their tax funds, collected out of their own toil and sweat and labor, and contribute $10,000 to soften the wrongs of a victim, when those who pay the penalty are innocent and had nothing whatever to do with the crime?

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. GLASS. Will the Senator be good enough to tell me exactly how the fine is to be collected? Suppose the taxing power of the State or the community declines to levy a tax to pay the fine, is the Federal Government to be authorized to levy the tax?

Mr. CONNALLY. The proponents of the bill say that judgment shall be obtained in the sum of $2,000 to $10,000 in the Federal court, and that if the taxing authorities do not levy the tax it is proposed to mandamus them in the Federal court and make the board of assessors or the city authorities or county commissioners levy a tax sufficient to pay the amount demanded.

Of course in most States the State constitutions limit the rate of taxation which may be levied on property. Most of the States already have probably gone to that limit, and the Federal courts in my State have refused to issue mandamuses in cases where the constitutional limit has been reached; but I am not worried about the collection of this money. Not a dime of it is going to be collected until the bill is passed; and my hope is that such a bill never will be passed.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. BYRNES. In States where county officials have no right to levy taxes, where they may be levied only by act of the legislature under the State constitution, would the legislature then be called into session by the Federal Government?

Mr. CONNALLY. I think it is the theory of those who advocate this bill that whatever is necessary to be done by the exertion of Federal power on any Governor or legislature or State judge or State officer must be done. They do not specifically say anything about that, but their theory is that the Federal courts would have power to compel those things to be done.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, if the Senator will further yield, if the Governor of a sovereign State should refuse to call the legislature into session, or if the legislators should not appear, would they be jailed for failure to do so?

Mr. CONNALLY. No; because there are some honest Federal judges, and they would not ever do it. The Federal courts would say, "What did the Senate mean by passing a law like that? Did they have no respect for State sovereignty? Did the Senate of the United States forget that States are States and that Governors and legislatures cannot be controlled by the Federal Government?"

Mr. President, we cannot levy a Federal income tax upon the salary of a State officer. Why? Because John Marshall, away back yonder in the case of McCulloch against Maryland, and the Supreme Court in other cases since that time, have held that the Federal Government has no right to lay any burden upon or require any obligation of an officer of a State, because in doing so the Federal Government is interfering with the sovereignty of the State. We cannot collect 10 cents; our tax collectors, our Federal Internal Revenue Commissioner, our Attorney General, our Federal courts, our marshals, our Army, and our Navy, all combined, cannot require the payment of a single dime of Federal income tax by the Governor of a State, or the attorney general, or a county sheriff, or a county judge, or a county commissioner—not a dime—and yet Senators who advocate this bill say that the Federal Government may take $10,000 from a county, which is a subdivision of a State, which derives its existence from the State, which has its life and its being from the State, which owes its obligation to the State, which gets its authority from the State. We cannot extract a dime from the officers of the county in the way of Federal taxes, but we may go down and practically destroy its economic life by requiring the county to pay $10,000 as a fine.

Mr. President, that is not all this bill does. This bill is said to be in behalf of the equal protection of the laws, equality of the law. Let us see what else it does. It is not limited. Under this bill, as I said a while ago about the Senator from Illinois, if a taxicab should stop by the sidewalk, and by any pretext a pedestrian were invited to get in, and those in the taxicab rode away, and afterward, while they were still in that county, they conceived the plan of kidnaping the pedestrian, and carried him over into another county and did some violence to him, the citizens of Chicago would still be liable to a fine of $10,000, even though that might take place in another State.

What is provided in the bill?—

Any such governmental subdivision which shall fail to prevent any such lynching or any such seizure and abduction followed by lynching shall be liable to each person injured—

Each person injured—

or to his or her next of kin if such injury results in death, for a sum not less than $2,000 and not more than $10,000 as monetary compensation for such injury or death: Provided, however, That the governmental subdivision may prove by a preponderance of evidence as an affirmative defense—

This is the great privilege that is given to the counties: They have to prove their innocence. The humblest citizen may be dragged into court now, but when he comes there he comes under the law with the cloak of innocence all about him. The law presumes that there is no stain of crime upon any defendant brought to the bar of justice; and until the State or the Government beyond a reasonable doubt strips him of that presumption of innocence, he stands clear. The Senator from New York calls my attention to the rule about the preponderance of evidence. I am now discussing a criminal case. In a criminal case the humblest citizen, the humblest gangster in New York, comes into the court with the presumption of innocence all about him; and until the Government or the State strips from his shoulders that presumption, he stands acquitted before the bar of his country.

But what is done here? The county, the innocent citizens of a county, are condemned, and the county is permitted to prove its innocence.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. WAGNER. That is exactly what we are trying to do here—to provide that the humblest person, whoever he may be, charged with or suspected of a crime, may go through the legal processes of being presumed to be innocent until proven guilty, and that instead of being lynched he may have a fair trial where it may be determined whether he is guilty or innocent. That is the objective of the proposed legislation, and I am sure the Senator knows that that is its objective.

Mr. CONNALLY. Why did the Senator exempt gangsters, then, if he wanted the measure to be of universal application? Why did the Senator exempt gangsters?

Mr. WAGNER. Gangsters are not in this proposed legislation because we are dealing here with lynching. There is ample law on the statute books, passed by us within the past 3 years, to apprehend and prosecute racketeers. The States have been very diligent and vigilant in prosecuting gangsters and racketeers; and if the time should arrive when there was any evidence that the States would not perform their duty and give equal protection of the law, Federal legislation would be justified to see that all citizens were equally protected by the law.

No such complaint exists today, however. Gangsters are being prosecuted in my own State and in the Senator's State and in other States; and there is no complaint that they are not being diligently prosecuted, and in many cases convicted. All we say is that the unfortunates who are now being lynched in some jurisdictions—I am sure against the will of many of their citizens—shall have the same treatment, namely, to be apprehended, to be indicted, to be tried by an impartial judge and jury, and then, if they are found guilty, to be sentenced and punished, or, if innocent, to be discharged.

That is the whole objective of the proposed legislation; and I think as a matter of plain justice the Senator certainly is in sympathy with the objective of the bill, anyway, even if he disapproves some of the bill's provisions. As to that, I may say to the Senator, if he will permit me to say that much, that all we are now asking is that the bill be brought before the Senate for consideration. Then we will consider each of its provisions, and if some of its provisions are objectionable, I am sure the Senate will amend the bill if in any respects it does not conform to the sentiment of the majority of this body. All I am now seeking is that the matter be brought before this body for the consideration of the Senate, and I will take their judgment upon the provisions of the bill.

Mr. CONNALLY. Oh, I realize that. It did not require a 10-minute speech to advise me that all the Senator is after is to get his bill up. I have known that ever since yesterday.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President——

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. GLASS. Before the Senator from New York leaves the Chamber I want to ask him if there is a sentence against lynching in the statutes of New York State.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am going to ask the Senator from New York that very question.

Mr. GLASS. Two years ago, when I presented the statute of Virginia severely treating all lynching cases, I asked the Senator from New York if there was a single sentence in the statutes of his own State against lynching, and he could not produce one.

Mr. CONNALLY. Why, of course not, Mr. President.

Mr. GLASS. And there are more crimes in New York in 1 day than there are in Virginia in 50 years.

Mr. SMITH. Right. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, the Senator from New York fires his artillery and then retires to the shade. He cannot answer the Senator. The Senator from New York says that the reason why gangsters are excluded—the Senator from New York has now returned.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, someone said that a reference had been made to my leaving the Chamber. I have been sitting here until this moment, and I was just leaving the Chamber to get a bite to eat. May I be excused that long?

Mr. CONNALLY. Just a moment; the Senator from Virginia desired to ask the Senator from New York a question. Shall I ask the Senator the question on behalf of the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. GLASS. Go ahead.

Mr. CONNALLY. Is there or not in New York a statute similar to this against lynching?

Mr. WAGNER. In New York?

Mr. CONNALLY. A State law.

Mr. WAGNER. I have heard of no lynching in New York; but——

Mr. CONNALLY. But is there a law against it?

Mr. WAGNER. Just let me answer.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Virginia wishes to know whether or not there is a law of that kind.

Mr. GLASS. I asked the Senator what I asked him 2 years ago, and that is, if there is any statute in New York against lynching.

Mr. WAGNER. Yes; there is. There is a statute against lynching, of course. There is a statute against murder.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from New York if there is any State in which there is not a statute against murder.

Mr. CONNALLY. I hope not.

Mr. WAGNER. This proposed legislation will apply to New York State just as it will to any other State in the Union.

Mr. GLASS. I am not talking about that. I asked the Senator from New York 2 years ago to point me to a sentence in the statutes of New York against lynching, in contrast to the severe statute in my own State of Virginia against lynching, and he could not do it.

Mr. WAGNER. I am talking about the enforcement of the law, and giving the equal protection of the law to the citizens of our States, and not having them deprived of their lives, their liberty, or their property without due process of law.

Mr. GLASS. Yes; but why does not the Senator devote himself, first, to New York, instead of coming here to Washington.

Mr. WAGNER. I may say to the Senator that this law applies to New York as it does to any other State.

Mr. GLASS. Oh, I know that just as well as the Senator does. This bill is not the law yet, however; so it does not apply to any State.

Mr. WAGNER. What I am trying to do is to prevent lynching in this country. I am trying to provide that all citizens in all of the States shall have the equal protection of the laws, so that if they are charged with a crime they may be apprehended like other citizens and prosecuted according to the laws of the particular State, receive a fair trial, and, if convicted, of course, then be punished.

I hope to have something to say later about the whole subject.

Mr. GLASS. I hope the Senator will say something more definite in response to my question. [Laughter.]

Mr. WAGNER. I am sure that when I get through I will have persuaded the Senator that those of us who are sponsoring the legislation are right.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, the Senator from New York indulges a phantasy as violent as when he thinks this bill is within the Constitution. Whenever the Senator from New York convinces the Senator from Virginia that the Senator from New York is right—well. [Laughter.]

Mr. GLASS. The Senator from Virginia will then be convinced that he is wrong. [Laughter.]

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Texas, is there any difference between a mob and a gang other than a geographical difference?

Mr. CONNALLY. Yes; there is a voting difference sometimes. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, what the Senator from New York said was that it was not necessary to include gangsters, that they expressly exempt them because in New York State there is a law against murder. So far as I know, there is a law against murder in every other State, and when a man commits a homicide he is responsible to the State, and to no other jurisdiction, because it is the State law he violates.

The Senator from New York says there is no complaint about violations of the law in New York. Pick up any New York paper, pick up any Associated Press paper, not only today, but tomorrow, and tomorrow, and the next day, and see the lurid headlines concerning the activities of the gangsters—gangsters' operations against innocent citizens, gangsters' operations against rival gangsters, gangsters' operations against policemen, rescuing their "pals" and "buddies" from peace officers. But if they are gangsters in Chicago—where is the Senator from Illinois? [Laughter.] If they are gangsters in Chicago and New York, they are exempt from the law, they are above the law. The Senator from Illinois said there were no gangsters in Chicago.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, the Senator from Illinois is here. Does the Senator from Texas call for the Senator from Illinois?

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Texas was adverting to the fact that a little while ago the Senator from Illinois said that there were not any gangsters in Chicago, as I understood him.

Mr. LEWIS. When the able Senator from Idaho referred to gangsters in Chicago, the reply of the Senator from Illinois was, "Not Chicago!" [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I would remind the Senator from Illinois that some years ago we read of what I think was known as the Moran gang in Chicago, when in a certain garage in Chicago they lined up a rival gang—I forget how many it was; 17 or 18 or 20—and shot 18 or 20 of them in one room. Does the Senator recall that?

Mr. LEWIS. Yes; and I am pleased to recall that we hanged seven of them for doing so.

Mr. CONNALLY. And the State did it. They did not have to go to the Federal Government to do it, and any other State that has red blood in it and knows its own responsibility and duty under the State constitution can do it.

The attitude of the Senator from Illinois is that Illinois can enforce her laws, but Illinois wants also to superintend and tell other States further to the south how to enforce and construe their laws.

Mr. LEWIS. I beg the Senator's pardon. He failed to catch the point, unless I failed to make it clear. Had Illinois failed to do her duty, had her officers not undertaken to punish those guilty, then the Federal Government would have have had a chance, under the proposed law, and a right to lay hands upon her.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Illinois is going the whole length. The Senator from New York is just about three steps ahead of the Senator from Illinois, which illustrates that whenever one begins to play with error, whenever one begins to compromise with error, he is inevitably drawn along with the current of the stream, and the first he knows he goes over the cataract and into the rapids to ruin. The Senator from Illinois started out against part of this bill, but he is going to wind up being for all of the bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Speaking of crimes of gangsters in Chicago, I read:

> In Chicago during 1926 and 1927——

Mr. CONNALLY. I think the Senator from Tennessee should turn and face the Senator from Illinois [Laughter.]

Mr. LEWIS. Yes; just a moment, if I may be pardoned. If this is intended as a reflection on Chicago, turn to me, and let us hear all of it.

Mr. McKELLAR. It is not a reflection on Chicago, unless the truth is a reflection on Chicago. This is what it says:

> In Chicago during 1926 and 1927 there were 130 slayings by gangsters.

Yet the Illinois Crime Survey reports there have been no convictions in crime murders in Chicago during the period covered by this analysis, 1926 and 1927.

In 1934 there were but 15 people lynched in the whole United States. In Chicago in 1926 and 1927 there were 130 gang slayings. Yet the bill exempts gangsters and racketeers in Chicago and New York, while it applies to the rest of the country. It seems to me that we ought to take the beam out of our own eye before we get to fooling with the motes in other people's eyes. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield. The Senator from Illinois is to be congratulated on receiving such a greeting.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I gather from the remarks of my friend that this applause in the galleries, which ought not to be allowed by the Presiding Officer, under our rules, was in view of the fact that I had risen to respond to something. For that I express my appreciation. [Laughter.]

I wish to respond to the Senator from Tennessee, who alludes to the fact that in the great city of Chicago there were these offenses, as read from some report, the origin of which I know not, the responsibility of which is not certified. But this much I beg him to understand, that if that report states that there were no punishments of these offenses, it is wholly in error, though I admit they continued for a considerable time, much to the distress of the great city, but they have been greatly overcome by the vigilance of its officers and the commendable course of its mayor.

This much I must answer my friend from Tennessee, if these gangsters, even confessing them to be such, had been seized by individuals and lynched, or attempted to be lynched, and our officers had failed to protect them and give them the due process of law, they would be under this bill, should it be enacted.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the Senator from Texas will yield to me to answer the Senator from Illinois——

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Illinois refers to the vigilance of the officers in Chicago. Let us see what the Illinois Crime Survey, a survey taken by the people of the Senator's own State, has to say about the vigilance of the officers there.

Mr. LEWIS. Who is it that makes the report?

Mr. McKELLAR. Just a moment. I read:

> In Chicago, during 1926 and 1927, a total of 85 persons were reported as having been killed by the police.

They were not very vigilant.

Mr. LEWIS. It may be that somewhere, somehow, somebody from somewhere has made some report about something, and it may allude to the police.

Mr. McKELLAR. I read from the Illinois crime survey, with which the Senator may be familiar.

Mr. LEWIS. I realize that there are people around who make what may be called a "survey", but I know this, too, that there has been great effort on the part of the great city, and her State, as well as her county, to punish these offenders wherever they have arisen, and I regret that they have arisen in such large number, though it must be recalled it is in a population of practically 5,000,000. But this much the able Senator will say, if it were all true, it would not justify the seizing and lynching of a human being in any part of the country without opportunity of hearing or being brought before the court. That act would not be justified.

I therefore say, had these people of whom my able friend speaks as gangsters been seized by those who, with violence, would prevent them from having a hearing in the court, should they be accessible to it, they would come within the provisions of this measure, just as well as any colored man who might be seized in the South, or one out on the Pacific coast in the oriental conflict which exists there.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield further?

Mr. CONNALLY. I am very glad to yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. None of us justifies lynching. It is a horrible crime, in my view, just as it is in the view of the Senator from Illinois and of every other Senator. No one can justify it, no honest man but deplores it, no good citizen but deplores it. We have all tried to bring lynchings down to the lowest possible number, and if we let the States take care of handling it, the number of lynchings will gradually diminish. It has come down from a total of 232 in 1905, I believe, to 15 in 1934, and there have been even fewer since that time.

I pray to God that the day may soon come when there will not be any such crime in this country. But I say that the method in which the Senator from Illinois and the Senator from New York are undertaking to deal with this matter is wholly foreign to the Constitution and wholly foreign to our laws, wholly foreign to the best method of succeeding. I wish to say that when the Senator, through this bill, undertakes to exempt from the operation of the law the horrible crimes which are committed by gangsters in this city and in the city of New York, he is advocating something which should not be.

If its provisions are constitutional they would apply to all persons, regardless of who they may be, regardless of whether they are gangsters or racketeers or lynchers. Murder is murder, and it is the State's duty to condemn that murder.

Mr. LEWIS. I reply to my able friend from Tennessee that in some form or other some inspiration has driven him to exaltation of language that has no foundation in fact. There is nothing in this bill that I am aware of—I have not heard any such thing or read of it—that exempts from punishment those who are designated here as gangsters from Chicago. What I gathered from my friend the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], unless I misunderstood him, was that he felt that those who ought to be punished were to be punished under the local laws.

Answering my able friend the Senator from Tennessee, I wish to say that I join him heartily, but I reserve the right to say that the mere fact that a man is designated as a gangster does not justify lynching him if he is charged with that offense. He should be taken before the court and punished. He should not be lynched. If an attempt were made to seize him because he is guilty of being a gangster, and an attempt is made to lynch him on the broad highways, such as now happens to people in our country, those having to do with such attempts would come under this law just exactly as in other cases.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, I will call his attention to something which recently occurred. I am sorry that the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] is not here. I read in a newspaper a few days ago that a little girl, 3 or 4 years of age, was brutally, criminally assaulted in the city of New York and then killed, and it was afterward alleged that the man who had committed this crime had destroyed more little girls during the last year than there were persons lynched in 1936. In that year, 1936, only eight lynchings occurred in the United States. Yet here was one man, who has not yet been punished, so far as I know, and no efforts have been made to punish him. I think he is going to be sent to an asylum for destroying 3- or 5-year-old little girls. Yet we find the Senator from New York here trying to pull motes out of the eyes of people of other States and letting his own State go to wrack and ruin.

While I am on my feet I wish to say something about the city of Chicago. The other day the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] had shown a picture of what took place during a riot in Chicago only a short time ago. The picture showed that the officers of the law brutally shot down persons who had gathered together for picketing purposes. I ask the Senator from Illinois, who is so much concerned about the 8 or 10 people who are lynched throughout the country during a year—and he ought to be concerned about them, and I say that I deplore the lynchings as much as he does—I ask the Senator from Illinois, Has he taken any steps in his own city to prosecute those police officers who brutally shot down members of that crowd?

Mr. LEWIS. In the first place, Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Tennessee a question. Does he, when he alludes to that unhappy and brutal incident that occurred in New York, advocate that the man who committed the offense should be lynched?

Mr. McKELLAR. No, Mr. President; but I think he ought to be punished.

Mr. LEWIS. He ought to be punished.

Mr. McKELLAR. He should be punished to the full limit of the law of the State of New York, but not by an attempt to pass a bill like this.

Mr. LEWIS. That brings us back again to whether New York shall punish according to what the able Senator or any humane man would think that man deserves.

I go to my city of Chicago. Since my able friend did not offer the illustration to prove that there are those whom he thought ought to be lynched, let me say that as to Chicago it is true a very unhappy labor dispute seems to have developed into such violence as cannot be denied as coming within a riot, and concerning that riot there is great dispute. One set of photographs in the hands of the able Senator from Wisconsin discloses a condition of assault utterly inexcusable, if true.

Mr. McKELLAR. Assault by the police officers, which is utterly indefensible, and I challenge the Senator from Illinois to say whether a single one of those so-called peace officers has been indicted by the State of Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. While another set of pictures and another report from the coroner's jury show just to the contrary, and both of those pictures and reports, which show this dispute, are before the committee, and I have no doubt at the proper time will receive very just consideration.

The State's attorney of the city of Chicago has reported that he has proceeded with a grand-jury hearing for the purpose of indicting under the criminal law all of those who were engaged in this undertaking, deplorable as it was. He is taking steps for the purpose of indicting those who appeared to have violated the State statutes of Illinois. I can answer the question only from the information that has come to me, and I give it to the Senator exactly as it was given to me.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is very different from having information in the hands of officers. Why does not the Senator include those infractions of the law when the officers seem to be utterly oblivious to what is right and proper? Why does not the Senator include that in this bill? Why does he want to go to other States to take the proposed action?

Mr. LEWIS. Does the Senator hold that because of these offenses, which I must say are deplorable, he advocates that those guilty of them should be lynched?

Mr. McKELLAR. No.

Mr. LEWIS. Does the Senator then answer and say that this bill should include a provision that the Federal Government should step into the State of Illinois to take charge of punishments for infractions of law in the case of a riot?

Mr. McKELLAR. No; I do not think so. I do not think this bill should include those crimes, or any of the crimes that are now attempted to be included in the bill. I do not think we have anything to do with them. I think punishment for such crimes is up to the State.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado in the chair). Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from Idaho to ask the Senator from Illinois a question, or vice versa.

Mr. BORAH. I want to ask if the Senator from Illinois can explain that which has not yet been explained—why it was thought necessary specifically to exempt gangsters from the operation of this bill? Here is a bill that was framed to apply against mob violence, and gangsterism is mob violence. Why was it thought necessary in legislating against violence carefully to exempt gangsters lest they might be caught in the web of the law?

Mr. LEWIS. I will say to my able friend that as he knows I was not on the committee which considered the bill, but I am informed that the able Senator gives a construction to the bill, as likewise does my friend the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR], that is not justified with respect to the question of lynching of people who are called gangsters.

Mr. BORAH. Let me read the provision of the bill to the Senator:

> Any such violence by a mob which results in the death or maiming of the victim or victims thereof shall constitute "lynching" within the meaning of this act: Provided, however, That "lynching" shall not be deemed to include violence occurring between members of groups of lawbreakers such as are commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers—

Tell me why, in framing a law against mob violence, against mass violence, it was so necessary carefully to exempt gangsters, lest you might get them in the web of the law? [Manifestations of applause in the galleries.]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Demonstrations on the part of occupants of the galleries are absolutely forbidden by the rules of the Senate. There must be no such demonstrations.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, as the Senator from Idaho knows, I am not on the committee. I did not help prepare the bill. I greatly opposed, as I have announced time and time again, and continue to oppose the feature of the bill that assumes to lay a penalty of dollars and cents against the innocent because of the offense of some officers who might violate the law. I can only assume that what is intended by the bill is not to take from the State authorities the right to punish those called gangsters under the provisions of the laws of the States wherein they are being prosecuted. I must say to my able friend that, despite the construction my able friend gives to the law, it is my judgment, as I have expressed it before, that if any gangster were seized and an attempt were to be made to take him out of the hands of the officers of the law and deny him the right of due process of law before court and jury and to lynch him, those guilty of such a crime would come absolutely within the law, because that would be lynching the individual, and such act would come within the provisions of this bill, and those guilty could not escape its provisions.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, if the Senator would carefully study the bill, I think he will find that his construction does not come within the terms of the bill.

We know that gangsterism for the last quarter of a century has been a serious evil. We know that gangsters have gone in with the underworld for their complete organization; they elect their officers, they have their counsel, and they have their complete organization, and it has been said over and over again by officers and by the public press that the officers of the States have been unable to cope with them.

To me it is the most astounding thing that I know of in legislation that in framing a measure against violence you are carefully exempting gangsterism from the operations of the law. I think the labor world will be pleased to know that the gangster and the picketer are placed upon the same level.

Mr. LEWIS. Would my able friend advocate by these observations that those who are called gangsters should be lynched?

Mr. BORAH. No; of course I do not advocate that they should be lynched. What I am saying is that you are legislating here and claiming the right to legislate within the State against violence. You claim that the States are not able to enforce the law. You say, therefore, the Federal Government should step in. If there is any exhibition of a failure to execute the laws of the States of this country, it is in connection with gangsterism.

It is more completely so than any other kind of crime, and when you come to write the law against violence on the theory that the State cannot enforce the law you carefully exempt gangsterism from the operation of the law. I say "you", not meaning the Senator; he is not making the law—but I refer to those who are offering it.

Mr. LEWIS. I understand my able friend and ask him this question: This bill, as I understand it, is not framed on the theory that the officers of the State cannot execute the law, because, if it were and the Federal Government assumed to enter upon the ground that the State was not able to execute the law, we would have a very important question of difference; but it is based on the theory that the officers of the State will not enforce the law, and, with an opportunity of protecting individuals, white or black, allow them to be seized by force, injured in one form or another, or maltreated to their death, with the officers of the law conspiring toward the deed, either by action or inaction. It is not a question of whether they are powerless.

Mr. President, this bill——

Mr. BORAH. I do not know just when it was, but it was not long ago, the Senator will remember, that an assistant district attorney in the city of Chicago was seized by gangsters and was killed. His killers have never been prosecuted. It was said it was because the prosecuting officers were afraid that would happen to them which had happened to the assistant district attorney. Why should you exempt that class of sordid brutes from the operation of this proposed law?

Mr. LEWIS. I beg to remind my able friend that he has been misinformed. We had a most remarkable prosecution in the city of Chicago of a man named Jacob Lingle. The charge was that he was guilty of just the offense to which the able Senator refers. I remind the able Senator that the prosecution was by the distinguished gentleman who has lately been the nominee for Governor upon the ticket of the great party known as the Republican Party. The prosecution was conducted with great power and great zeal. That there was an acquittal was due to the lack of evidence. I assure my able friend he has been misled in the assumption that there was no prosecution.

Mr. BORAH. The man of whom the Senator speaks is not the person I had in mind. The Senator refers to a man named Lingle?

Mr. LEWIS. Yes. There was a prosecution.

Mr. BORAH. I am speaking of the assistant prosecuting attorney who was murdered.

Mr. LEWIS. I think my able friend is alluding to a case involving a man named McSweeny or some such name. I read about that. He was an assistant State's attorney.

Mr. BORAH. He was assistant State's attorney.

Mr. LEWIS. I must say that I do recall that there was a killing, but I am not able to say as to what the subsequent and final legal action was. I must say frankly it is not now in my mind.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President——

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina, if the Senator from Illinois has concluded.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, a few moments ago the Senator from Tennessee referred to a case in New York where a man criminally assaulted a 5-year-old girl and then killed her. Under this bill that man could not be punished.

Mr. CONNALLY. Oh, no.

Mr. BYRNES. But if three men, relatives of that little innocent child, in sudden heat and passion engendered by the great wrong perpetrated, lost control of themselves and had killed that man, then that would have been a violation of this proposed law of the United States Government?

Mr. CONNALLY. Certainly.

Mr. BYRNES. And the preachers and other law-abiding people of the county where that occurred would have been forced to pay for the action of those three men in killing the scoundrel who had destroyed and taken the life of that little child.

Mr. CONNALLY. Exactly. Mr. President, the incident to which the Senator from South Carolina alludes, that of a horrible, unspeakable crime committed in New York, causes me to say this: I abhor lynching; I abhor violence; I abhor murder; but I can understand something of the feelings of a father or of a son when he returns to his household and finds it violated, when he finds that murder has been done, when he finds the bleeding and mutilated form of a wife or mother or sister weltering in blood. I can understand something of the terrible passions that, in a moment of frenzy, stir the hearts of loved ones and of neighbors and causes them in such a time rashly to take the law into their own hands. So I can understand the suggestions of the Senator from South Carolina. The fiend, the inhuman brute, who strangles an innocent child and violates her person would go free under this proposed law, but if the family or neighbors, in a moment of passion, should wreak vengeance upon the horrible beast they would be haled into a Federal court and the citizens of that county or State would be made to pay the penalty in money to the kindred of the perpetrator of the horrible crime.

Mr. President, the Senator from Illinois could not and did not answer the Senator from Idaho as to why gangsters are especially exempted from the provisions of this bill.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Texas yield for a question?

Mr. CONNALLY. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I have listened with a great deal of interest to the argument, and there has been so much discussion of "gangsters", and how utterly mad and abhorrent they are, that, as I examine the language of the pending bill, I wonder how it might be amended to accomplish what has been suggested and yet not put the measure in rather a peculiar position before the Senate.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Texas is talking about the bill as it is presented to the Senate. He is not talking about how it may be amended. The only way it can be amended to suit the Senator from Texas is to strike out all after the enacting clause.

Mr. BONE. I am only concerned as to whether the Senator is willing to have me ask him a question.

Mr. CONNALLY. Yes; I am willing to have the Senator ask me a question, but I cannot answer as to what may be introduced by way of amendment to the bill. If, however, the Senator wants to ask me something about the bill I shall answer.

Mr. BONE. Let us take the bill in its present form. That is what I want to ask about. Many references are made to "gangsters."

Mr. CONNALLY. Except by the authors of this bill, they are proposing to exempt gangsters from this bill.

Mr. BONE. Will the Senator permit me to ask the question?

Mr. CONNALLY. I assume that the Senator from Washington is for the bill as it is written?

Mr. BONE. It says in the bill, on page 9, that any such governmental subdivision shall be liable in damages to the family of a dead gangster if other gangsters "bump him off", although he had been guilty of bloody murder.

Mr. CONNALLY. Where does the bill say that?

Mr. BONE. Read the language on page 9:

> Any such governmental subdivision which shall fail to prevent any such lynching or any such seizure and abduction followed by lynching—

That is, in effect, the situation when gangsters "bump off" one another.

Mr. CONNALLY. Has the Senator read page 7, line 10?

Mr. BONE. I am not going to read out of the bill that which is written into it. I merely want to know whether it is bad to keep gangsters from "bumping" one another off. It is said that a bad social disease tends to eradicate itself, and I am not beating my breast because gangsters "bump" one another off.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Washington is, then, in favor of gangsters if they will "bump" each other off?

Mr. BONE. If the Senator has any objection to a bunch of underworld thugs and assassins "bumping" one another off, he can get what satisfaction he can out of it.

Mr. CONNALLY. I assume the Senator approves of two bunches of gangsters engaging in war with each other, and then, if they "bump" each other off, that is fine?

Mr. BONE. It does not pain me any if a bunch of assassins and thugs in the underworld "bump" each other off.

Mr. CONNALLY. Assassins and thugs! The Senator from Washington is willing for two groups of assassins and thugs to murder each other and not be amenable to the law, but he wants to punish two or three individuals, father and sons or brothers of a woman who has been mutilated and killed and whose person has been violated, because, they in a moment of passion, wreaked vengeance on the brute that assaulted her, and he wants to let walk free the streets for years gangsters who make war on other gangsters and murder them?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should like to call the attention of the Senator from Washington to this language, which I think modifies the effect of the language which he has quoted:

> Any such violence by a mob which results in the death or maiming of the victim or victims thereof shall constitute "lynching" within the meaning of this act: Provided, however, That "lynching" shall not be deemed to include violence occurring between members of groups of lawbreakers such as are commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers.

The effect of that would be that if the violence was committed by a mob, although it was a gangster mob, and resulted in the death or maiming of the victim or victims, having been committed by a gangster organization, it would be exempted under this bill.

Mr. BONE. I do not think the Senator from Idaho or any other Senator can find anyone in this body who condones violence or crime, but I do not think we need agonize over those whose hands are imbrued with blood, those who are prefessional killers. I do not think we need agonize over the fact that some professional killer "bumps" off another, if I may use a vulgar expression. I do not condone violence; but I cannot quite understand the argument of the Senator from Texas, who seems to be disposed or determined to put in the mouths and minds and wills of other Senators a defense of assassination and murder. The Senator is not fair in doing that, and he knows he is not fair in doing that.

Mr. CONNALLY. We shall see from the reporters' notes what the Senator said. The Senator from Washington is charging the Senator from Texas with not being fair. I ask Senators to bear witness to the fact that the Senator from Washington asked why should anybody complain if two bunches of gangsters "bump" each other off. Did not the Senator say that?

Mr. BONE. I said that gangsterism is like a social disease which has a tendency, like many other bad things, to eradicate itself, and gangsterism is a social disease largely confined to the large cities.

Mr. CONNALLY. In all fairness——

Mr. BONE. The Senator is making the speech. I am not making the speech.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator is not going to get away with that, either. The Senator from Washington has charged the Senator from Texas with being unfair. I suppose he means unfair in quoting him.

I challenge the reporter to bring his notes here, and I now ask the Senator from Washington whether he did not say on the floor of the Senate, in answer to the Senator from Texas, that he could see no reason why anybody should be worried about "two gangs of gangsters bumping each other off"?

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, the Senator may go ahead with his speech. [Laughter.]

Mr. CONNALLY. I challenge the Senator to say whether he said it or not, and he says nothing. Let the RECORD answer as to whether the Senator from Texas was fair or unfair.

Mr. BONE. I shall make answer with my vote when the proper time comes.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is what is in the mind of the Senator from Washington, to vote not only his own vote, but how he can get some other votes on the bill.

Mr. BONE. May I add another thing? Let me say to the Senator that the votes to which he is alluding are, in my own State, so infinitesimal a part of the population that the Senator's argument has little or no weight.

Mr. CONNALLY. No; but that infinitesimal group the Senator loves better than he loves his duty under the Constitution and the decisions of the Supreme Court. Does the Senator want me to yield again? [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I dislike to repeat, but Senators go out for lunch or to confer——

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, of course it is not to evade the speech of my able friend from Texas, who is much too attractive and too learned, and in his discussion too informal.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator from Illinois. If he were as wise as he is courageous and gallant he would not be voting for this bill.

Mr. President, let me say to the Senator from Washington [Mr. BONE] in all good temper—and I do not intend to be otherwise. The remarks I made were sharp, but they were sharp because the Senator from Washington first attacked the fairness of the Senator from Texas. I want to invite his attention to the language which was quoted by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] as it appears on page 7 of the bill:

> Any such violence by a mob which results in the death—

That is one thing—

> or maiming of the victim or victims thereof shall constitute "lynching" within the meaning of this act: Provided, however, That "lynching" shall not be deemed to include violence occurring between members of groups of lawbreakers such as are commonly designated as gangsters or racketeers.

That carries out the idea of the Senator from Washington. If two gangs of gangsters want to go out and kill each other, let them do it. Who is going to pass on it? Nobody. Let them pass on it themselves. Two gangs of gangsters, and it is said, "as long as they bump each other off, let them do it."

Mr. President, the Congress of the United States has no right to regulate either gangsters or other private individuals under the State laws and functions. If the States fail, then this Union fails because when the States fail to have a sense of responsibility, when the citizens of those States of ours cease to be patriotic, when they cease to have an interest in public affairs, the Government of the United States will fall because every citizen of the United States is a citizen of some State.

This theory of imperialism, this theory that the States are not able to govern their own affairs, but that there is here in Washington some all-seeing eye, some all-wise personality, some all-wise power, that knows better than the States themselves do as to what their laws ought to be and as to what the duties of their officers ought to be, involves a doctrine which is repugnant to every conception of free government and constitutional liberty that can be found anywhere in history. That is the doctrine of the Caesars. Well did the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] refer to Caesar. He said that when Caesar came to the Rubicon it was a question as to whether he would fight his enemies and take over the power of Rome or not. He said, "The die is cast", and plunged into the red tide of the Rubicon. From that day the liberties of the Roman people began to wane. From the day that Caesar's power began to increase, the rights and liberties of the Roman citizens began to decline.

He was followed by Augustus Caesar, a benevolent despot, Augustus Caesar, not by one stroke of the pen or one stroke of the sword. Augustus Caesar pleased the people and appealed to them as being a man who was just and fair and devoted to their interests. Gradually he gathered into his hands this bureau and that bureau, this power and that power and the other power. At last Augustus emerged as the Emperor of Rome and the liberties of the Roman people gradually disappeared, not because Augustus was not benevolent, for he was benevolent. He was a benevolent despot, but the power which Augustus Caesar gathered into his own hands under the plea of his benevolence afterward came to be exercised by a Nero and by a Caligula.

Mr. President, that is the dream of empires which the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LEWIS] suggests. Let Washington say whether the States are performing their functions. Let some distant authority here in Washington say whether the State officer has performed his duty not under Federal law but under a State law.

Mr. President, that is the doctrine of a Caesar. That is the doctrine of the czars who sent their emissaries and agents all over Siberia. That is the doctrine of the Roman emperors who sent their pro consuls and agents into all the known provinces of the world and compelled them to pay tribute to Rome. "Here in Rome sits imperial power, imperial wisdom, and the imperial power to do all things."

Mr. President, when that time comes in America there will no longer be an America. It may still exist in name, it may still be a shell, but America as its founders knew it, America as George Washington knew it, America as the founders of the Constitution knew it, America as the pen of Thomas Jefferson in prophecy flung the dream of America in the face of a foreign king will have disappeared from the life of the nations of the earth.

Mr. President, I am opposed to the Federal Government under the pretense, under the pretext, under the mere excuse of undertaking to guarantee the rights of citizens under the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, lynching the power of the States themselves and lynching innocent citizens in the counties and penalizing them and bringing them into the Federal courts in response to claims for damages.

Mr. President, such was our conception of the balance of power between the States and the Federal Government. Over the years, of course, there has been a gradual increase in the power of the Federal Government, and a lessening somewhat of the powers of the State, but that has been largely because of the development of quick communication by wire and rapid transportation by airplane and all that kind of thing. But the fundamental thing, the fundamental balance of power between the States and the Federal Government still exists. It is one thing left in the constitutional structure that we ought to preserve and maintain.

If we are going to exercise supervision over all the activities of the States, if the Federal Government is to sit in judgment on a State officer as to the manner in which he has performed his duty to the State, then there is no vestige of authority left to the States. Why, Mr. President, it is the business of the people of the States to pass judgment on whether or not an officer of the State has carried out and enforced the laws of the State. It is the business of the Federal Government to pass judgment on whether a Federal officer has performed his duty. What would be said of a State which should undertake to enact a law saying how a Federal officer located in the State should perform his functions? If a State should undertake to hold a collector of internal revenue or a United States marshal or any other Federal officer accountable for the manner in which he performed his duty to the Federal Government, those who interfered with him would not only have their authority stricken down, but they would probably be called into a Federal court to answer for contempt or be imprisoned for interfering with a Federal officer.

How can the Federal Government maintain its sovereignty and the prestige of its agencies and the integrity of its instrumentalities while at the same time saying to the States and their subdivisions, "We will go into your State and undertake to supervise the activities of your officers. We shall make their activities subordinate to our will. We shall dictate to them how and when and where they shall perform their duty"—not their duty to the Federal Government, but to the States themselves.

Mr. President, a few more words, and I shall have concluded.

Earlier in the day I quoted some of the decisions of the Supreme Court. Their books are full of decisions on the fourteenth amendment. On yesterday the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] referred to the case of Harris and others. I shall not again burden the RECORD with that reference. That was a case in which a Federal act prohibited persons from congregating on the highways and interfering, just as this bill seeks to prevent, with persons in their civil rights. The Supreme Court invalidated the act because the Court said the act was beyond the power of Congress under the fourteenth amendment.

In Virginia against Reeves, Mr. Justice Strong said what I am about to read. Mr. Justice Strong was a Republican judge, a great judge from Pennsylvania. He said:

> These provisions of the fourteenth amendment have reference to State action exclusively, and not to any action of private individuals.

Holding that the Federal Government under the fourteenth amendment could not deal with individuals, but could deal only with State action and State laws.

Mr. President, we are appealing to the Senate today. We are appealing to its judgment and not to its prejudice. We are appealing to the limitations of power upon the Congress, and not to its extravagances in grasping for an unjust power. We are appealing to the patriotism of Senators, rather than to their political proclivities; but, Mr. President, we are contending, and I believe justly, that the pretensions of this bill are wholly beyond constitutional power. If we believe that to be true, it is our solemn duty to reject the bill, notwithstanding the political pressure that may be brought to bear upon us to enact it.

Mr. President, if the Constitution of the United States is maintained, it ought to be maintained here in this Chamber. This is a great forum. This is a great assemblage, made up of 2 representatives from each of the 48 States.

I know of no place on the planet greater in authority of its kind, greater in dignity, or attracting more the respect of the world, than the Senate of the United States. But, Mr. President, though we come here with the commissions of our States, though we come here as a result of our election by the voters of our several Commonwealths, we cannot perform our duties in the Senate until we first hold up our hands and take a solemn oath to maintain and defend the Constitution of the United States. That is a prerequisite. So, Mr. President, if the Constitution is to be maintained, it ought to be maintained here, in this sanctuary, as it were.

I plead with Senators not to be influenced in voting on this proposed legislation simply by the passing fancy of an hour. Read the bill; consult the Court decisions; read again the fourteenth amendment; and I am convinced that when the appeal is made to your judgment, when it is made to your sense of fairness, you will not vote to take up this bill, and thereby disrupt the legislative program which is now before us.

It was once said here in the Senate—

> This house is a sanctuary, a citadel of law, of order, and of liberty. Here will resistance be made to the storms of political frenzy and the silent arts of corruption; and if the Constitution be destined ever to perish by the sacrilegious hands of the demagogue or the usurper—which God avert!—its expiring agonies will be witnessed on this floor.

Mr. President, if we here in the Senate do not respect the Constitution, if we do not observe its injunctions, if we are not faithful to our obligations under it, how can we expect the citizenry of the Republic to respect it, and look up to it, and revere it, and honor it, and love it?

Mr. President, by no vote of mine shall I transgress the powers that belong to the Federal Government in behalf of the States; neither by any vote of mine shall I strip from the States, in violation of the Constitution, the powers that from the day of its birth to this living moment have been possessed by the States of the Union.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, there is no Senator in this body for whom I have learned to have a greater affection and esteem than I have for the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. Neither is there anyone in this body who has more the right to say that he comes from the soil of the South than have I; for since long before the days of our national independence I have never had an ancestor who was not born in, did not labor with, and did not finally leave his bones to bleach in the soil of the South that I love.

Neither, Mr. President, have I one word of sympathy to extend to any man who does not appreciate the loyalty, the generosity of spirit, and the faithfulness of the colored race. I was born amongst them. I grew up with them. I have literally lived in their environment all of my life; and I have not one word to indicate countenance for any man who deals an injustice to one of these of another color. But I do believe, Mr. President, that the aspirations of the Senator from New York and the others who are the proponents of this measure are to be deemed better than the judgement with which they push this proposal; and that is the reason why I address myself to it before the issue has come directly before us for consideration.

Mr. President, I respect any laudable aspiration. I appreciate the sentiments of the Senator from New York, who has labored as few men have to ameliorate the conditions of the underprivileged in every part of the Nation.

My heart goes with his in the sympathy which he extends to the man or the woman or the child who needs help, a better economic opportunity, a larger spiritual and mental horizon, a greater objective in life. But, Mr. President, I do not believe that the Senator from New York would like to see the monumental achievements which he has caused to be written into the annals of this body disparaged in the minds of those who will hereafter be critical observers of our conduct by any measure unworthy of the great objects which he has been able to attain in the past.

I am sure the Senator desires that he be not castigated as one who would level the sharp weapon which he wields, both in hand and in mind, not against a condition, but against a particular section of the country which he has tried so hard to help; and yet I am sure there is no man in this Chamber who does not appreciate that the purport, the intent, and the primary effect of this proposal are directed against the Southeastern portion of the United States of America.

Mr. President, lynching is no new crime in the United States, nor is it an increasing offense.

In the period from 1889 to 1899 in the United States there was an average of 187.5 lynchings per year. In the period from 1900 to 1909 that average had fallen to 92.5 per year. In the succeeding 9 years, 1910 to 1919, the average had fallen to 61.9 per year. From 1920 to 1924 the average was 46.2 per year. From 1925 to 1929 the number was 16.8 per year. The greatest decline in all the era of which I have spoken was contemporaneous with the greatest economic prosperity this Nation has ever enjoyed.

Now note what the tendency thereafter, and the correlations, were:

In the year 1931 the number of lynchings in the United States fell to 13.

In the year 1932 the number throughout the entire United States fell to nine, and that marked the period when we began to reach the pit of the depression and all of the social ills which ensued therefrom. In the year 1933 the lynchings, not in the United States but in the South, jumped from 9, in 1932, when the accumulated savings of the people of this Nation had been dissipated and destroyed, and when the national aspiration was at the lowest point then within the memory of this generation, back to 29.

Then, for the year 1934 the number was 17. In the year 1935 it was 23, and in 1936, when economic conditions in this country were again on the upgrade, under the masterful leadership and guidance of the Democratic Party and its incomparable leader, the number went down to 10. For the year 1937, more than one-half of which has passed, the number has been five.

Mr. President, I propound this inquiry to my friend the Senator from New York and to the other proponents of this measure: Have the people of the South endeavored to prevent this crime from occurring within their borders? Have they indicated their desire that human blood shall never be spilled in that violent and illegal manner by the improvement in public sentiment, the enforcement of the law, and the amelioration of the circumstances out of which the passions which result in lynchings arise? Have the people of the South tried to do their duty in the elimination of this offensive crime? If they have, are their efforts to be rewarded by appreciation from their fellow citizens, or are their efforts to be stigmatized by such humiliating coercion as is attempted by the proposed legislation?

In the first place, Mr. President, this measure is futile. I am sure that it is not necessary that I be other than frank in discussing whether or not any legislation can effectively go contrary to the sentiments of a people. A long time ago this Nation wrote into the organic law which governs this country a prohibition against interference with the right of the colored man to vote, because that was the intent of the fifteenth amendment. Within the memory of my own father that was followed up by Federal soldiery, which stood at the ballot box in my own native State of Alabama and tried to put into effect, under the bayonets of the Federal Government, that constitutional provision.

The amendment to which I refer has not been repealed; it is still a part of the Constitution of this country. It still is an elemental part of the organic law of this Nation, which every Executive is sworn to enforce. Yet how many of the colored race vote in my section of the country? And why do they not vote? Because it is not deemed a permissible policy that they should, under existing circumstances, exercise the privilege of sovereignty through the ballot.

Whatever may be written into the Constitution, whatever may be placed upon the statute books of this Nation, however many soldiers may be stationed about the ballot boxes of the Southland, the colored race will not vote, because in doing so under present circumstances they endanger the supremacy of a race to which God has committed the destiny of a continent, perhaps of a world.

Mere legislation does not change dynamic social conditions. Legislation will not restrain those whose passions have been aroused by some crime which provokes lynching in certain places, because there are offenses for the correction and retribution of which any man would not only suffer the penalty which might be exacted by this statute, but would forfeit the life an Almighty God has given him.

Mr. President, if the sheriff who is to be prosecuted in the district court of the United States under this measure is not to have the right of trial by jury taken away from him, he is not going to be convicted of a violation of the proposed statute if he has made any semblance of effort to prevent the crime of lynching. So do I say that if the right of trial by jury in a civil case is not to be taken away, a jury impaneled from the district court of the United States and its jurisdiction is not going to award damages against a citizenry which was not responsible for the violation of the law.

Do southerners, Mr. President, have thrust upon them a greater burden in the selection of their officeholders than citizens of any other section of the country? Are they to be the guarantors of the conduct of their officers, whereas other citizens simply exercise their best judgment, without penalty for any error in judgment?

It is worse than that, however. As a matter of fact, the proposed legislation, the legislation which is now proposed by the gentlemen who live in the financial and economic centers of this Nation, raises a very great and interesting moral question. Do Senators know that statistics reveal that there is a direct relationship between the price of cotton and the number of lynchings? I repeat, if I may, do Senators know that there is a direct statistical relationship between the price of cotton and the number of lynchings in the South? Any Senator in this body will obviously see the cause of the correlation.

I raise the moral question, Is the man who crazes the mind of the lowly and uneducated with strong drink an innocent causative force behind the crime the victim of such intoxication will commit? If the answer is that he is not innocent, I ask another question. Is the economic power which impoverishes a section of the country and a portion of the people, and drives them into a state in society in which a condition of ignorance and in which a condition of poverty exist—is that economic force innocent as a causative force of the crime of lust or of passion that may be behind a crime committed as a direct result of those conditions?

Mr. President, I say to my friend the Senator from New York, the greatest humanitarian in this body, in my opinion, if he wants to alleviate lynching, if he wants to prevent the recurrence of that crime, then let him join in making it possible for the children of the Southland to get an education by so distributing the wealth of the country, through Federal legislation, that we, who are incapable, by a given percentage of our wealth, to educate our colored people, may be enabled to lead them in the direction away from crime rather than toward it.

I ask those who would be the proponents of this measure if they would not better repent for the sin that has been inflicted upon the consuming sections of this country for generations by a vicious tariff system, and redistribute the wealth which has thus been exacted from the section which this bill is designed to penalize.

I ask, Would not breaking the throttle monopoly has upon the throats of the people of this Nation resident in certain sections of this country do more in the long run to prevent this sort of crime than legislation of this character?

I ask, If such regulation of the transportation facilities of this country as would give to the Southland a fair freight-rate structure and enable a manufacturer in Florida and Georgia and Alabama and the other States of the South to enter as a competitor in the markets of this country, and thereby enable him to pay a fair wage for those who render a fair day's service, and therefore to get an education and live in a decent house and wear decent clothes, and thereby live in an environment that leads away from crime, would not do more toward freeing the South from the seed from which such offenses grow than the proposed legislation?

And, Mr. President, one other inquiry. Referring to those from the North—and many of them we welcome—who come to the southland and find there our resources that grow in plenitude in the bowels of the earth, which God has blessed with His munificence, would not they better abstain from exploiting the labor of the South while their pockets are filled with ill-gotten wealth, in many instances wrung from the sweatshop methods that our children and women and impoverished people have to countenance? Would not they do better, Mr. President, to pay a fair wage and a fair part of the profit which is justly theirs, rather than to pauperize our people and then come back and condemn them for the inevitable consequences of their impoverishment?

So, Mr. President, I raise in the minds of Senators who are conscientious proponents of this bill the question, Is it not better that they try to alleviate the lot of the unprivileged of our people rather than that they should humiliate us with legislation of this character? And would it not be better, Mr. President, for them to aid us in the efforts we are making to eliminate this condition rather than to castigate every effort we have made toward self-improvement?

Therefore, Mr. President, may I paraphrase the words uttered long ago by one of the greatest and most eloquent of the southerners, when Henry W. Grady said there was an old South, a South of slavery of secession; "but that South", he said, "thank God, is dead." I say now there is another South. It is the South which has tried to maintain intact the best of its traditions of the past, which has come into the birth of a new day as an economic entity in the area of this Nation; a South whose aspirations, Mr. President, reach far beyond the horizon even of tomorrow; a South which dreams of a time when it may be permitted to come back into the confederacy of States without discrimination against its people and may enjoy full fellowship and complete brotherhood in the family of States that make up this the greatest nation under the sun or the stars at night.

So I say, Mr. President, I appeal to the humanitarian sentiments of my friend from New York [Mr. WAGNER] and his colleagues: Do not turn your hands against those who are trying to progress. Do not lay your heavy hands upon this beautiful flower of a new civilization which is emerging from the dear Southland to glorify and to ennoble the traditions and the history of the United States.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have attempted all during this discussion to impress upon the Senate the fact that I had no desire to delay or prevent the consideration of this bill. I have felt all along, and I feel now, that it is entitled to be considered on its merits, free from entanglement with any other legislation.

The bill has passed the House of Representatives by a very large majority. It has been reported from the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate and has now been on the calendar for several months.

The importance of the subject and the interest of millions of persons in it entitle it to consideration. I think those who oppose the bill are compelled to recognize the fact that it ought to be considered during this Congress. I certainly think it ought to be considered during this Congress, and it is my desire that it be considered during the present Congress.

However, in the juncture in which we find ourselves at this time, I have felt it my duty to confer with the authors of the bill, the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. VAN NUYS], and other Members of the Senate who are sponsoring and supporting the proposed legislation. I have also conferred with as many as I could reach among those who at the time are not able to support it. Therefore, with the cooperation of the Senator from New York and the Senator from Indiana and others, I should like to suggest that the wisest and best way to dispose of this question at this time is to make the bill a special order for consideration immediately upon the conclusion of the crop-control legislation at the next session of Congress. I have a motion to that effect, which I cannot make unless the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] withdraws the motion which is now the pending business; and I ask the Senator from New York if he is willing to take that course.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I have been endeavoring to cooperate with our distinguished leader, and so have others of us who are interested in this measure, and in securing its final passage. If it is posible to procure a definite place for it upon the calendar following the consideration of the crop-control bill, I wish——

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the motion I have prepared and will offer makes the bill a special order to be considered immediately upon the conclusion of the consideration of the crop-control legislation at the next session of Congress, whether that is in January or at a session held sooner than that.

Mr. WAGNER. Very well.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the suggestion of the able Senator from Kentucky to make the bill a special order has certain implications of which the Senate may not be aware. The Senator from New York must remember that if the bill is made a special order, and is not voted upon, it will go back to the calendar. A special order is valid only during the time the bill is considered. If the Senator wishes consideration of the bill, he will ask that the motion contain the language "shall be made the unfinished business"; not a special order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I have taken the precaution to confer with the parliamentary clerk about the matter. If the motion I shall offer shall be agreed to, the bill will not only become the special order but will become the unfinished business, and will remain such until it is disposed of. Like any other bill that is made the unfinished business, it will be subject to whatever action the Senate may take.

Mr. ASHURST. Does the motion declare it to be the unfinished business?

Mr. BARKLEY. No.

Mr. ASHURST. Then I wish to add, after the words "the special order", the words "and shall be and remain the unfinished business until disposed of."

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no objection. Let me send the motion to the desk and have it read for the information of the Senate. I think there will be no difficulty about it.

Mr. ASHURST. I wish to have in the motion the language "and shall be and remain the unfinished business until disposed of."

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask the clerk to read for the information of the Senate the motion that is to be offered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the motion.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

I move that the bill H. R. 1507, the so-called antilynching bill, be made the special order of business for consideration immediately following the disposition of the bill to be reported at the beginning of the next session of Congress by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry pursuant to Senate Resolution 158, relative to farm legislation.

Mr. ASHURST. "And said bill H. R. 1507 shall thereby become and remain the unfinished business until the same is disposed of." I offer that amendment.

Mr. WAGNER. I do not think there ought to be any objection to that amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no objection to the amendment, though I do not think it is necessary.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, there is a good deal of difference between the present status and the order proposed by the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], to which, however, I shall not object. I want Senators who are opposed to the bill to know, though, that the motion, when it shall have been agreed to, will put the bill in a very different light in January than today. It seems to me all of us ought to agree that the status of the bill in January shall be the same as it is now. Let the motion be made; let the bill be taken up; but the suggestion of the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] that it shall remain the unfinished business to the exclusion of everything else, no matter what may come up in January, it seems to me is going pretty far, although I am not going to object.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Mississippi upon reflection will not insist that we simply allow the bill to remain in January in the same status in which it is now situated. The present parliamentary status is that there is pending simply a motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill. That motion has not been voted upon. What I am attempting to do is to have the bill automatically follow the farm legislation at the next session, whether it is in January or at some earlier time, in order that the bill may take its place before the Senate, and that the Senate may be assured that it will be taken up and considered.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is quite a different proposition from that suggested by the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that any bill that is made the unfinished business, of course, is subject to whatever disposition the Senate wishes to make of it, and it enjoys no preferred status above any other bill in that respect; but if the motion of the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] were to be adopted this afternoon, the bill would become the unfinished business and remain the unfinished business until disposed of by the Senate by any motion that is parliamentary.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Texas was going to suggest that this session of Congress cannot bind the next session to keep the bill continually before the Senate to the exclusion of everything else. If the Senate wants to make it the unfinished business following the farm bill, very well. But I am not going to agree now to a hard-boiled promise to sign on the dotted line on the spot so that we cannot do anything else after we meet except talk about this bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think that is involved either under the motion I have made or under the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. ASHURST. The motion made by the able Senator from Kentucky, and certainly the suggestion made by the Senator from Arizona, would not bring the condign consequences glimpsed by my imaginative friend the able Senator from Texas. They would only, in my judgment, make this bill the unfinished business and give it the same status as any other unfinished business; but the Senate at any time could displace it, if it chose to do so, and every Senator would be at liberty to vote to displace it whenever he chose; but the words "shall remain the unfinished business until disposed of" ought to be included in the motion.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, may I suggest that those words be added to the motion?

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no objection to the addition.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will again read the motion as amended.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

I move the bill H. R. 1507, the so-called antilynching bill, be made the special order of business for consideration immediately following the disposition of the bill to be reported at the beginning of the next session of Congress by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry pursuant to Senate Resolution 158, relative to farm legislation.

Mr. ASHURST offers the following amendment:

"And the said bill, House bill 1507, shall thereby become and remain the unfinished business until the same is disposed of."

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. BARKLEY. I accept the amendment offered by the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. WAGNER. Mr. President, I temporarily withdraw my motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York withdraws his motion to proceed to the consideration of House bill 1507.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I just came into the Chamber. May I ask to have the motion again read?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will again read the motion as completed.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

That the bill H. R. 1507, the so-called antilynching bill, be made the special order of business for consideration immediately following the disposition of the bill to be reported at the beginning of the next session of Congress by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry pursuant to Senate Resolution 158, relative to farm legislation; and said bill shall thereby become and remain the unfinished business until the same is disposed of.

Mr. BARKLEY. I now offer that motion.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. GEORGE. Is a record vote required upon this motion?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion may be adopted by unanimous consent or the Chair can declare that two-thirds of the Senate have voted in the affirmative and that the resolution is agreed to.

Mr. GEORGE. If there is not to be a record vote, I desire to record myself as definitely against the bill, now or hereafter, and I therefore am against the motion.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Kentucky as amended. [Putting the question.] In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds of the Senators present having voted in the affirmative, the motion, as amended, is agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7051) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7642) to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

S. 2520. An act declaring Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, La., a nonnavigable stream; and

S. 2639. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to lease the Fort Schuyler Military Reservation, N. Y.

SUGAR PRODUCTION AND CONTROL

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 7667, being the so-called sugar bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Mississippi that the Senate proceed to consider House bill 7667.

Mr. McKELLAR. What is the bill? Let the title be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the bill by title.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. A bill (H. R. 7667) to regulate commerce among the several States, with the Territories and possessions of the United States, and with foreign countries; to protect the welfare of consumers of sugars and of those engaged in the domestic sugar-producing industry; to promote the export trade of the United States; to raise revenue; and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Mississippi.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider House bill 7667, which had been reported from the Committee on Finance with amendments.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, I desire to make a brief explanation of the principal provisions of the bill. It will take but a short time to do so. Substantially the bill reenacts the Jones-Costigan sugar bill, which was enacted in 1933 and which was effective for 3 years, but has not been effective for the past year.

The bill divides American sugar production into two main parts. It provides that substantially 55 percent of the sugar consumption of the United States shall be produced by what are known as domestic producers. The term "domestic producers" includes American sugar-beet producers, continental sugarcane producers, and producers in Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. Forty-four percent and a fraction of our sugar business is given to foreign producers, Cuba, the Philippine Islands, and a few others. I will, for the RECORD, briefly give the percentages for each.

Domestic beet producers are given 41 percent of the American production.

Mainland cane-sugar producers, largely Louisiana and Florida, are given 11 percent.

Hawaii, 25 percent.

Puerto Rico, 21 percent.

About one-fourth of 1 percent is given to the Virgin Islands.

The so-called foreign production is divided between the Philippine Islands, Cuba, and others.

The Philippines are given 34 percent.

Cuba, 64 percent.

Other countries, less than 1 percent.

These allotments are based on an estimate of total consumption to be annually made by the Secretary of Agriculture. These provisions of the bill are not substantially different from the Jones-Costigan Act, which was in effect for 3 years.

Payments to farmers are to be made if certain conditions set forth in the bill are complied with. Those conditions are as follows, in the main:

First, there must be no child labor on farms where sugar beets are produced, excepting such labor as may be performed by members of the farmer's own family.

Second, labor must be paid a fair wage, not less than deemed to be fair by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Third, the farmer must limit the production of sugar beets on his own farm according to the formula or the quota established by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Lastly, the farmer must conform to such reasonable regulations as will increase soil fertility, or at least maintain it, as the Secretary of Agriculture may establish.

Upon complying with these provisions, the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to pay sugar-beet farmers 60 cents per 100 pounds of sugar. That means substantially $1.80 per ton of beets. The average farmer in the eastern section of the United States will produce about 10 tons to the acre. I think the general average is around 15 tons per acre in Colorado, California, and other Western States. This is in addition to the payment of about 35 cents per ton of beets to those who comply with the provisions of the soil-conservation law enacted last year.

To the cane farmer benefit payments, based on the amount of sugar produced, are substantially similar. Limitations upon these payments are fixed in the bill.

Senators will remember there was considerable complaint about large payments to large producers of sugarcane. I do not believe there were any large payments to producers of sugar beets. This bill, in section 304, provides a limit. There would have to be approximately 400 acres of sugar beets planted by one farmer before the limitation would apply. I am not so familiar with the sugarcane situation, and I will ask the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] if he will advise the Senate as to the size of farm which would be affected by the limitation in the sugarcane area.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, in reply to the inquiry, the scale of reduction begins at 500 short tons raw value, and 300 acres will produce about 500 short tons raw value.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. The tax feature of the bill provides a tax of 53 cents per hundred pounds on refined sugar, levied against the processing of sugar beets and sugarcane. An import tax is levied on all sugar coming in from foreign countries, called an import compensating tax, which is the same in amount, and makes the sugar tax against foreign sugar the same as the sugar tax on the processing of domestic sugar.

The money obtained from this tax will be more than sufficient to pay the benefit payments which I have heretofore outlined.

The final provision of the bill which is of interest provides that it shall not remain in force longer than 3 years, and shall cease to be operative on December 31, 1940.

Mr. President, I have briefly covered the features of the bill about which there is no controversy. When the committee amendments are reached if necessary I will discuss the controversial features. Therefore, unless some question is to be asked I suggest that we proceed with the committee amendments.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the committee amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Finance was, on page 5, line 16, after the word "sugar", to insert "(including the amount of direct-consumption sugar)", so as to read:

The Secretary shall determine for each calendar year the amount of sugar (including the amount of direct-consumption sugar) needed to meet the requirements of consumers in the continental United States; such determinations shall be made during the month of December in each year for the succeeding calendar year and at such other times during such calendar year as the Secretary may deem necessary to meet such requirements.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 7, after the word "conditions", to strike out:

And in order that the regulation of commerce provided for under this act shall not result in excessive prices to consumers, the Secretary shall make such additional allowances as he may deem necessary in the amount of sugar determined to be needed to meet the requirements of consumers, so that the supply of sugar made available under this act shall not result in average prices to consumers in excess of those necessary to make the production of sugar beets and sugarcane as profitable on the average, per dollar of total gross income, as the production of the five principal (measured on the basis of acreage) agricultural cash crops in the United States.

And insert in lieu thereof the following:

And in the regulation of commerce provided for under this act the Secretary may make such additional allowances as he may deem necessary in the amount of sugar determined to be needed to meet the requirements of consumers, so that the supply of sugar made available under this act shall not result in excessive prices to consumers: Provided, however, That in carrying out this purpose and in making any determination or adjustment the Secretary shall not cause the price of sugar to be so reduced that the percentage representing the relation between the index of the price of sugar and the index of the average price of all domestic foods will become less than the percentage representing the index relation existing in the period 1932–34 (according to indexes officially published by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, on the basis in effect Jan. 1, 1937).

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 201. The Secretary shall determine for each calendar year the amount of sugar (including the amount of direct-consumption sugar) needed to meet the requirements of consumers in the continental United States; such determinations shall be made during the month of December in each year for the succeeding calendar year and at such other times during such calendar year as the Secretary may deem necessary to meet such requirements. In making such determinations the Secretary shall use as a basis the quantity of direct-consumption sugar distributed for consumption, as indicated by official statistics of the Department of Agriculture, during the 12-month period ending October 31 next preceding the calendar year for which the determination is being made, and shall make allowances for a deficiency or surplus in inventories of sugar, and changes in consumption, as computed from statistics published by agencies of the Federal Government with respect to inventories of sugar, population, and demand conditions; and in the regulation of commerce provided for under this act the Secretary may make such additional allowances as he may deem necessary in the amount of sugar determined to be needed to meet the requirements of consumers, so that the supply of sugar made available under this act shall not result in excessive prices to consumers: Provided, however, That in carrying out this purpose and in making any determination or adjustment the Secretary shall not cause the price of sugar to be so reduced that the percentage representing the relation between the index of the price of sugar and the index of the average price of all domestic foods will become less than the percentage representing the index relation existing in the period 1932–34 (according to indexes officially published by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, on the basis in effect January 1, 1937).

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 14, after line 23, to strike out section 207, as follows:

SEC. 207. (a) Not more than 29,616 short tons, raw value, of the quota for Hawaii for any calendar year may be filled by direct-consumption sugar.

(b) Not more than 126,033 short tons, raw value, of the quota for Puerto Rico for any calendar year may be filled by direct-consumption sugar.

(c) None of the quota for the Virgin Islands for any calendar year may be filled by direct-consumption sugar.

(d) Not more than 80,214 short tons, raw value, of the quota for the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands for any calendar year may be filled by direct-consumption sugar.

(e) Not more than 375,000 short tons, raw value, of the quota for Cuba for any calendar year may be filled by direct-consumption sugar.

(f) This section shall not apply with respect to the quotas established under section 203 for marketing for local consumption in Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

And insert a new section 207, as follows:

SEC. 207. Quotas for direct-consumption sugar for distribution in continental United States for each calendar year are hereby established as follows:

(a) For the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands not to exceed 80,214 short tons, raw value; for Cuba, not to exceed 375,000 short tons, raw value.

(b) The remainder of the amount of direct-consumption sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers as determined by the Secretary pursuant to the provisions of section 201 shall be allocated by the Secretary on the following basis for each calendar year:

Area and percent

Hawaii	0.4756
Puerto Rico	2.024
Mainland	97.5004

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 27, to strike out lines 15, 16, 17, and 18, as follows: "Notwithstanding the foregoing exceptions, sugar in liquid form (regardless of its nonsugar solid content) which is to be used in the distillation of alcohol shall be considered manufactured sugar", so as to make the paragraph read:

SEC. 401. For the purposes of this title—

(a) The term "person" means an individual, partnership, corporation, or association.

(b) The term "manufactured sugar" means any sugar derived from sugar beets or sugarcane, which is not to be, and which shall not be, further refined or otherwise improved in quality; except sugar in liquid form which contains nonsugar solids (excluding any foreign substance that may have been added) equal to more than 6 percent of the total soluble solids, and except also sirup of cane juice produced from sugarcane grown in continental United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 31, in line 6, to strike out the subhead "Exportation and livestock feed" and insert "Exportation, livestock feed, and distillation."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 32, line 1, after the word "feed", to insert "or for the distillation of alcohol", so as to make the paragraph read:

(b) Upon the use of any manufactured sugar, or article manufactured therefrom, as livestock feed, or in the production of livestock feed, or for the distillation of alcohol, there shall be paid by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to the person so using such manufactured sugar, or article manufactured therefrom, the amount of any tax paid under section 402 with respect thereto.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That completes the committee amendments.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 8, line 15, after the words "Puerto Rico", it is proposed to insert "and each State", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 203. In accordance with the applicable provisions of section 201, the Secretary shall also determine the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers in the Territory of Hawaii and in Puerto Rico, and each State, and shall establish quotas for the amounts of sugar which may be marketed for local consumption in such areas equal to the amounts determined to be needed to meet the requirements of consumers therein.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, this proposed amendment would amend section 203 in accordance with the applicable provisions of section 201, so that section 203 would read as follows:

SEC. 203. In accordance with the applicable provisions of section 201, the Secretary shall also determine the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers in the Territory of Hawaii, and in Puerto Rico, and each State, and shall establish quotas for the amounts of sugar which may be marketed for local consumption in such areas equal to the amounts determined to be needed to meet the requirements of consumers therein.

The second amendment which I have handed in, on the same piece of paper, inserts, after the word "areas", the words "which shall not be less than the amount determined to be needed to meet the requirements of consumers therein."

If we are providing that the producers in Hawaii and Puerto Rico shall have the right to produce at least the amount of sugar used by their own consumers, certainly such a right cannot be denied to the people of each State. As provided in this bill, there are States in the Union which are not allowed to produce enough sugar from their own lands to feed their own people. What would be the situation in Alabama, for instance, if the people in Alabama were not allowed to produce enough cotton to clothe their own inhabitants? That is exactly the situation that arises under this amendment as to Florida.

In accordance with the applicable provisions of this bill, the Secretary shall also determine the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers in the Territory of Hawaii and in Puerto Rico——

And there I have inserted "and each State."

Why should we not receive the same consideration that the people of Hawaii and Puerto Rico receive? I do not believe the Senate should allow such a provision to go through for the island possessions unless the same provision is made for each State of the Union.

Mr. President, I move the adoption of the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I hope the amendment will not be adopted. The committee gave due consideration to this proposition. It seems to me almost an impossibility to extend quotas to each State in the Union, applying them to sugar beets as well as to sugarcane.

I hope the amendment will be rejected.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. AUSTIN. I understood that the sugar bill had been passed by the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator is in error about that. The Chair was about to put the question on the passage of the bill, but the Senator from Florida was on his feet offering an amendment. The Senate now is about to vote on that amendment.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I offer another amendment, which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment offered by the Senator from Florida will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 8, line 17, it is proposed to strike out the words "equal to" and insert in lieu thereof the words "which shall not be less than", so as to read:

And shall establish quotas for the amounts of sugar which may be marketed for local consumption in such areas, which shall not be less than the amounts determined to be needed to meet the requirements of consumers therein.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, I insist that this amendment be adopted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have an amendment reading as follows:

On page 7, strike out lines 14 to 20, inclusive; and on page 8, strike out lines 1 to 2, inclusive, and the table which follows and insert:

"(a) For domestic sugar-producing areas:

"Quotas (short tons)

	1937–38	1939	1940
Domestic beet sugar	1,550,000	1,550,000	1,550,000
Louisiana	357,000	357,000	357,000
Florida	90,000	150,000	175,000
Hawaii	938,000	938,000	938,000
Puerto Rico	798,000	798,000	798,000
Virgin Islands	9,000	9,000	9,000
(b) For the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands	1,002,782	970,000	970,000
(c) For foreign countries
Cuba	1,911,476	1,884,258	1,859,258
Foreign countries other than Cuba	26,412	26,412	26,412

"(d) In the event that the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers is less than 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall first establish the quotas for the areas and in the respective amounts set forth in subsections (a) and (b) and after deducting the total thereof from the determined consumption requirements shall prorate the difference on the basis of the quota established for Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba, in subsection (c); if the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers exceeds 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall deduct the total of the quotas set forth in the subsections (a) to (c), inclusive, from the determined consumption requirements and shall prorate the balance among the domestic sugar-producing areas set forth in (a) and Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba, on the basis of the quotas set forth in subsections (a) and (c)."

Mr. President, before I begin my remarks I shall be glad if the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the chairman of the Finance Committee, will be good enough to answer an inquiry which I shall propound.

I should like to inquire whether it is not the fact that, under the Tydings-McDuffie Act, under which independence is to be accorded to the Philippine Islands, the Philippines are limited to the exportation to this country free of duty of 970,000 short tons a year, and whether it is not the further fact that, if they send in more than that, they must pay $1.87½, that is, the full duty, upon every hundred pounds of sugar that comes in in excess of 970,000 short tons.

I shall be glad if the chairman of the committee, or some other one of the proponents of the bill, will be good enough to answer that inquiry.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, am I to understand that the Senator asked me a question?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes. I will repeat the question.

I desire to ask the chairman of the Finance Committee if it is not a fact that it was by the Tydings-McDuffie Act that the Philippine Islands were accorded whatever rights they have heretofore enjoyed with regard to the exportation of sugar to this country free of duty?

Mr. HARRISON. That is my recollection.

Mr. PEPPER. Is it not a further fact, if the Senator will permit me, that under the Tydings-McDuffie Act the Philippines may send into the United States 970,000 short tons of sugar a year without payment of any duty?

Mr. HARRISON. That is my recollection.

Mr. PEPPER. Is it not a further fact that, if the Philippines send into the United States in any year sugar in excess of 970,000 short tons, the Philippines will have to pay $1.87½ a hundred pounds duty on the excess over 970,000 tons?

Mr. HARRISON. Yes. It is true that the proposed legislation permits some 60,000 tons, I think, to come in from the Philippines each year in addition to the amount we said we would permit to come in under the Tydings-McDuffie Act; but that is due to the fact that the administration was very anxious that the Secretary of State should be able to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with some other countries, and he desired that much for negotiating purposes.

Mr. PEPPER. Now, may I propound to the Senator an additional inquiry? I hope the Senator will forgive me. What is the difference, therefore, between the 970,000 short tons allowed to the Philippines, excise free, under the Tydings-McDuffie Act, and the number of short tons allowed the Philippines under the bill now under consideration?

Mr. HARRISON. I think it is about 56,000 tons.

Mr. PEPPER. Is it not about 59,000 tons?

Mr. HARRISON. I believe it is 59,000. I shall not dispute the figures with the Senator.

Mr. PEPPER. I want the Senate to be good enough to observe two facts, and I want to say to the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the chairman of the Committee on Finance, that this is not a facetious or dilatory comment I am making.

We have a situation whereby the State of Florida is adapted by nature to the production of sugarcane if any State of the Union is so adapted. We have been growing sugarcane in Florida effectively and efficiently since 1929, when a sugar mill was opened in the Everglades of Florida. There is a sugar mill there which has a sugar production capacity of 75,000 short tons a year.

The soil there, as Senators who have familiarized themselves with the Everglades of Florida know, is perhaps unique among all the States of the Union. It is known as the "muck land" of the Everglades. At one time it was covered with water, and the depth of that muck is anywhere from 4 to 7 feet. It is so rich that it will literally burn, and constant fire-prevention operations are being carried on upon it.

We began to experiment with the production of sugarcane effectively, as I have said, in 1929, and there are hundreds of thousands of acres of that fallow soil of the Everglades ideally adapted by content and by climatic conditions for the production of sugarcane.

The United States Government has an interest in this matter, because it was due to the aid of the Government that a good bit of the facility of Florida for sugarcane production came about. Senators will remember the terrible hurricanes and floods which came to my State in 1926 and in 1928, and from the shallow, saucerlike basin of Lake Okeechobee, the largest body of fresh water in the United States, the water was washed out all over this flat country round about, resulting in the drowning of thousands of people and the destruction of a great deal of property.

The Federal Government came to our aid in that situation, and they made it possible for us to build great dikes around Okeechobee, a flood-prevention process which is now, thanks to the generosity of the Federal Government, complete. The soil is being employed primarily in the production of sugarcane and in the production of vegetables, and I see within the range of my vision on this floor many Senators who have been there and observed the fertility of that soil.

I wonder whether Senators are aware of the fact that sugarcane in the Everglades of Florida grows to a height of from 15 to 20 feet, and that it does not necessarily have to be replanted except once every several years. I wonder whether Senators are aware of another fact, that the soil is so perfectly adapted and the efficiency of the operation is so well worked out, that Florida produces sugar within less than one-sixth of a cent of the production cost in Cuba. So that we have not only our natural right to the production of this commodity, but by our own operations we are qualified to be entrusted with this opportunity for the production of an essential food.

Mr. President, when the Jones-Costigan law was enacted Florida was accorded a quota of 40,000 tons, our neighbors in Louisiana a quota of 220,000 tons, and our brethren in the West engaged in the production of sugar from sugar beets a very much larger quota; in fact, I think historical facts require me to state it is a quota which they have reached but once in the whole history of their sugar-beet production.

I am not quarreling with what was done when we were given a quota of 40,000 tons and Louisiana one of 220,000; I am willing to admit that that was a natural handicap under which we were to labor in the future. But I do deny that it is right, upon any theory of government or economy, to put the sugar-producing facilities of Florida in a vise through and against which they can never possibly expand, however worthy may be our natural qualities, and however deserving our own conduct.

Mr. President, it would have been assumed that the historical base which was the criterion for that quota of 40,000 tons and for the 220,000-ton quota of Louisiana, and perhaps a given tonnage to the beet-producing area would not forever exist, but that it would be like a golfer in a golf game, who begins under a handicap, but if he makes a par score between successive holes he gets the credit for it. Therefore it would have been assumed that when the consumption requirements of the United States made it possible for more sugar to be consumed we would have been permitted to come fairly into the family of sugar-producing entities and States in the United States. But not so. The Government said to us, "You came late into this picture and we shall apply to you the yardstick of the historical base."

What does that mean? It means that, if that principle were applied to others, our friends in Louisiana would have a quota which gave them the right to produce all they were able to produce before our friends in the beet-producing area were allowed to produce anything at all, because long ago, before beet production ever started in this country, the State of Louisiana was effectively and economically producing sugar from sugarcane. They, the earliest arrivals, and we, the latest, are treated with equitable disparagement. Consequently we are denied anything like the ratio of production to capacity to produce which other States enjoy, or which is our natural right.

The whole theory of sugar-quota restriction, Mr. President, has certain phases to it which perhaps are not ordinarily observed. I wonder whether the American people recognize what is being done to them. I wonder whether they realize whose pocketbook is paying the sugar subsidies of the United States. It would be well to take a calculating machine and go to every sugar producer within the confines of the continental United States and see how many there are, and then take the calculating machine and get a summation of the total subsidies paid by the Government of the United States to sugar producers under this bill, and see what a price the people of the United States are paying to make it possible for a few people to produce sugar.

We are not one of those who come here as petitioners for subsidy indulgence. We come and say that we are, in the first place, fitted by divine providence for the production of an essential element of American food. That is the first point. We come and say that we have shown ourselves by actual performance, capable of rendering that service. That is the second point.

We come here, Mr. President, and say that we are one of the sovereign States of the American Union, and that by reason of that sovereignty we have certain natural rights. We are not producing something that is a hazard to the health of America. Surely no one will contend that the production of a necessary food product is the necessity for the operation of the police power of the Uinted States.

Simply because Nature has fitted us to grow sugarcane, Mr. President, what wrong have we done that requires the Federal Government to come to us and to say, "We admit your capacity to produce. We admit that you have hundreds of thousands of acres adapted to the production of this commodity, and that you have only a sparse handful of those acres so employed. We admit that you do not seek a subsidy, and that you have lived, and are willing to live, on your actual performance capable of rendering that service. That points itself at us and it is said, "You may not produce sugar in the United States because"—and the chairman of the Finance Committee has just said it in the Senate—"because the Secretary of State wants to have some sugar with which he can bargain for commercial advantage with foreign countries."

Mr. President, I am not talking about sugar that comes from the beet area of the United States. Florida is so humble that it is not asking for any of that. I am not talking about a pound of sugar that comes from Louisiana. The people of that State are our neighbors, and we are fond of them. We come too humbly even to ask a pound of their quota. I tell the Senators also that away across the Pacific Ocean are islands inhabited by a people in whose veins does not run the blood of Americans, and that under the law they are not permitted to send a pound of sugar to this country, duty-free, in excess of 970,000 short tons annually, but that they must pay such a duty upon it that it is not economically feasible for them to send it here, and they will not send it here. Therefore it is not the Philippines that say to us, "You are taking away from us the nourishment of our national economy." We have not even been so full of temerity as to ask a pound from the Philippines, Mr. President.

Well, from whom do we ask it? I do not know. I do not know what country it is with which the Secretary wants to bargain some sugar. I do not know whether perhaps the Secretary has automobiles in mind for which he may be trying to provide a market in some foreign countries to the south or to the east or to the west of us.

I do know, Mr. President, that the natural birthright of Florida—and I speak only for that State—has been bargained away by a government which has increased automobile production and sales from the State of Michigan and other States. I ask, Mr. President, if I may, why not turn that process around? The great Commonwealth of Canada, just to the north of us, loves to consume the citrus products of Florida; but Canada is engaged in the automobile market in fierce competition with the middle section of the United States.

Mr. President, I might propose by the same standard of moral fairness that we should restrict the automobile production of Michigan so that Canada might sell more automobiles, so that Canada would have more money with which to buy the citrus fruits of Florida. Yet, Mr. President, that has not been the theory that has been applied to Florida.

So what do we find? The Secretary of State has launched upon a great enterprise. He is charged with the responsibility of cultivating our relations with our neighbors to the south of us, an enterprise with which I am in hearty accord. But, Mr. President, if it is necessary that the natural produce of my State shall be used as a subsidy with which to purchase the good will of another country, we shall pay a high price for the peace we may enjoy.

I never knew before, Mr. President, that my country was willing to bargain away an inch or a mile of its soil, whatever might be the practical material benefit which might ensue. Are we in Florida being kept in the family of States—we in Florida, who, we think, have a very attractive peninsula down there—are we being permitted to remain in the federation of States simply because no one will pay enough for us to make our sale worth while?

Why not take the peninsula of Florida and bargain it away to some sovereign who would not otherwise restrain his economic hand against us as a Nation? Or why not take the Great Lakes, Mr. President, and our shores contiguous thereto, and bargain them away in order that we may enjoy some natural advantage? What a price, Mr. President, we could get for the various sections of this country, if we ever became so base as to be willing to bargain them away to anybody for anything!

By the same reasoning, Mr. President, what right has my country, because there may be economic profit in it, to bargain away the right of a part of the citizenry of this country to grow the natural produce of its soil? Is there any more logic or reason for the exercise of that power than for the one to which I have just adverted? So we come here in the embarrassing role of not being considered worthy of privilege by our country.

Senators, remember the lines of him who said:

> Breathes there the man with soul so dead
> Who never to himself hath said,
> This is my own, my native land!

Has our fealty been so questionable, Mr. President, has our loyalty been so subject to concern, that we are not entitled to enjoy the same pride and the same privilege which attends upon membership in the great Nation of the United States?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair). Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I am very much interested in the remarks of the Senator from Florida. They appeal to me with great force. They almost persuade me to vote against this bill. I do not know that they will succeed in that direction. But the Senator's remarks are a commentary upon what may be expected from the change of our Government from a free government into a despotic one, in which power is centered at Washington to reach out into the several States and control their production, manufacturing, and mining. It is inevitable that some States somewhere will be injured by the exercise of that power.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. ADAMS. Did the Senator from Florida vote for the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act?

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator did, after offering two very significant amendments, Mr. President. One of those amendments provided that no commodity shall come within the confines of continental United States unless there is levied upon the imported commodity a tariff equal to the difference between the cost of production abroad and here, which is right. I voted for the amendment, and so did a majority of the Senate, Mr. President, until the forces of the administration corralled all their votes and defeated the amendment by three votes on the floor of the Senate.

The second amendment was that trade agreements which would result in restricting the production of a commodity which we did not produce in quantities sufficient to meet our needs be prohibited, so that to the extent of our productive capacity we would supply the American market. That received a considerable number of votes, and that is and was right as a matter of principle. I venture to say, Mr. President, as I recently said, that any party, any administration, or any government will rue the day that it ever committed its destiny to a contrary course.

I am ashamed that I have to show myself worthy of being considered deserving of the privileges which I thought attended American citizenship, but I believe we could even meet that kind of requirement. I mean that by being allowed to produce what we can produce we will be more prosperous than by any such bargaining with foreign countries as the Secretary of State is carrying on. My humble opinion is that it is better for the prosperity of the United States to give work to our own people and then sell our surplus to them. I am talking not about a sovereignty which says "However humble and however expensive you are, we thank God that you are a part of our country." I am not even making that kind of suggestion. I am saying that I live under a government where I have to show that I am worthy of its concern, and on that basis I say that it is better for the prosperity of America to sell Michigan automobiles—and I use that just as an example, and not with reference to the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] or his State—or automobiles of any other State in the United States to the agricultural labor in the South who get employment in sugar production, when they otherwise would not have employment, and let them take their purchasing power and buy those automobiles a short distance away at home, rather than have to send such automobiles miles beyond the sea and invoke transportation costs which would raise the price of the commodity and therefore reduce the number of purchases and the effective part of the purchasing power.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I agree so cordially with the Senator's theory about these reciprocal-trade agreements that I remind him that in spite of their value to the automobile business of Michigan I voted against the extension of power, but the Senator from Florida voted for the extension of power.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator from Michigan will find that as long as I am here I will go just as far as my conscience and the decent self-interests of my State will permit in an endeavor to live in harmony with the administration and the party of which I am a member, and I make no apology for that, although I do commend the judgment of the Senator and his temerity in following the course which he has indicated he did follow.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. The Senator realizes, of course, that automobiles produced in Michigan are used in carrying great numbers of people to Florida in the wintertime, and that they spend a considerable amount of money there.

Mr. PEPPER. I am aware of that, but I say to the Senator that I am sure the attraction of Florida is so great that, did they not come, others would come who had gained their ability to be there in a much worthier way than at the expense of the people among whom they enjoy themselves.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President, will my colleague yield?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. ANDREWS. Is it not a fact that under the provisions of the bill, if it should be enacted into law, the State of Florida would not be allowed to produce one-half as much sugar as its own people consume?

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct, and it is proper to say that the Jones-Costigan Act—an emergency measure—allowed Florida to produce but one-third of its consumption requirements, and that this measure, which is not an emergency measure, allows Florida to produce less than one-half of its consumption requirements. Senators must be mindful of the fact that the bill not only forbids Florida the right to produce more than about one-half of what it consumes, but it would forbid us by law to sell more than the quota to our own people, inside the confines of our own State, without ever having crossed the boundary of any other State of the Union.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. What percentage of its consumption does Florida produce now?

Mr. PEPPER. It produces a smaller percentage.

Mr. MINTON. Did it ever produce as much sugar as was given it under the quota provided in the pending bill?

Mr. PEPPER. The State of Florida is the one State which plowed up 5,000 acres of growing sugarcane, and I challenge anybody else to show that they have done likewise.

Mr. MINTON. Has Florida ever produced as much sugar as she would be allowed to produce under the quota provided in the pending bill?

Mr. PEPPER. Answering the Senator's question, I answer "no", and I likewise state that I have never without wings flown to the moon, because I did not have the power to do it.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President——

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. OVERTON. In line with the interrogatory propounded to the Senator from Florida by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. MINTON], will he state whether or not under the terms of the bill Louisiana would be permitted to produce as much sugar as she has produced in the past and as much as she produced during the past year?

Mr. PEPPER. She would not.

Mr. OVERTON. Then, under the bill, as I understand, Florida would be able to produce more than she ever has produced and Louisiana would be required to produce less than she has produced.

Mr. PEPPER. That is almost correct. Louisiana a long time ago was a very large producer of sugarcane and sugar, but there came upon Louisiana a plague in the form of the mosaic disease, and the State of Louisiana was therefore sharply reduced in the quantity of sugar which it brought forth. Along about that time, when Louisiana was just getting back on its feet, Florida was coming into the sugar-producing picture and making a very full contribution, because it was in Florida that the chief beneficial experimentation was carried on which made it possible for Louisiana to come back into the picture as one of the major sugar producers of the country.

I hold no brief for the treatment the Senators from Louisiana have received; but if two wrongs do not make a right, then wrongs to two do not make a right. Consequently, I have as much sympathy for the position of the Senator from Louisiana, though not in quite the same degree, because the degree of their difficulty is not as great as ours, but as much as is possible in comparison with the discrimination of which we are the victims.

Mr. OVERTON. Under the terms of the bill now under consideration, would the beet-sugar areas be able to produce as much sugar as they have produced in the past?

Mr. PEPPER. My understanding is that the beet-sugar area once did produce a little in excess of what they are awarded as their quota under the bill, and that it is the common judgment of all the experts dealing with the problem that the production of the sugar-beet area next year will not come within thousands—in fact, not within 150,000—of tons of the quota which they are accorded under the terms of the bill. Is not that the opinion of the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, in answer to the Senator's question I will say that in the year 1933 the sugar-beet area produced 1,756,000 tons, and its quota is considerably less than that under the provisions of this bill. I will also say that Louisiana in different years has produced more than 400,000 tons of sugar, and last year she produced 386,000 tons of sugar, but under this bill she will not be able to produce what she produced last year or what she produced in previous years.

Now, I desire to ask the Senator from Florida a question. Under the amendment he offers, does he propose to increase solely the quota of Florida on the mainland, or does he also propose to increase the quota which will be assigned to Louisiana and Florida in conjunction, and to the beet area?

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator has propounded two queries, and I shall try to answer them in order.

Under this bill Louisiana is receiving, we estimate, a quota of 357,000 tons a year. Why? Because the Department of Agriculture has divided the quota which goes to the cane area 15 percent to Florida and 85 percent to Louisiana. Why? On a historical basis; not because of our ratio of capacity to production—or production to capacity, to state it more accurately—being a given figure, but because the Department says we came late into the sugar arena, and therefore we are to be penalized for the tardiness of our arrival upon the scene—a principle of priority which would operate rather advantageously to the American Indian. But in addition to that Louisiana has never produced more than a little over 400,000 tons a year. That was her maximum production at a time when her ratio of production to capacity to produce was very, very considerable, many, many times in excess of the ratio which we enjoy. I am not quarreling about the right or the privilege of Louisiana to carry on the same ratio of capacity and production that has obtained in the past; but I do deny that that principle can rightly be applied to Florida to suppress us forever into the state to which we early came.

To answer the second question of the Senator from Louisiana, my amendment does not propose to add any quota to anybody except to the State of Florida. That happens to be the only State for which I have the opportunity to speak. I am sure the eloquent Senators from Louisiana, if they have a grievance, will make themselves heard to their colleagues here; and I do not venture to express an opinion as to whether or not they need or should have an additional quota. I am trying to perform the duty for which I have a responsibility here; to present to my colleagues the fact that I represent a State in the American Union, and that that State proposes to grow sugarcane for the production of sugar, and that sugar is an essential element in the food supply of the people of this country, and that we do not produce in this country enough sugar to meet home requirements, and that even in Florida itself we are not permitted to and do not produce enough sugar to meet more than one-half the requirements of our own consumption. Therefore, I say to the Senate of the United States, are we not entitled to ask that at least we should have a place in the family of States, and a fair opportunity to enjoy what nature has fitted us to do that is good for the American people? And, I ask, is not the contrary of that wrong, whoever may do it, or however it may be done?

Mr. President, I was guilty of a bit of inaccuracy in saying that the first amendment I offered would take nothing from any State or country except the Philippines. I should have added that it would take something like 11,000 tons from Cuba, because the amendment was based upon 90,000 tons for 1937–38, 150,000 tons for 1939, and 175,000 tons for 1940. What I should like to do is to point out that Cuba last year got the quota which it enjoyed. Why? Because of the deficiency in sugar production in the beet area of this country; in other words, not due to their initial quota. There was a deficit under the terms of the Jones-Costigan Act, and they had a right to enjoy a proportion of 70 percent of that deficit. Consequently, that is how they got the quota they enjoyed last year. That was not written in the Jones-Costigan Act in terms of tons.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to his colleague?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes.

Mr. ANDREWS. Is it not also true that there are thousands of acres of land in Florida that it cost millions of dollars to drain for this purpose that are lying idle, and were taken off production because they were not allowed to raise enough sugar for their own people? Is it not also true that the Government of the United States has been paying a million dollars a year to the people who own that land to let it lie idle and remain uncultivated, and the people of this country are having to pay that tax in order to satisfy the Cuban condition, and Cuba is allowed to ship 2,000,000 tons of sugar a year into the United States while the State of Florida is allowed to produce only 63,000 tons, not enough for its own people? Is not that correct?

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct, Mr. President.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President——

Mr. PEPPER. I am glad to yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. Before the Senator concludes his remarks, and in connection with the query propounded to him by his colleague, will he discuss the phase of the unemployment which is being brought about by this deprivation worked on the State of Florida?

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Nevada for the recognition of that point.

Far be it from me to be desirous of giving up statehood for Florida; but if I were seeking mere practical advantage for my State in the ability to produce sugar, I should come to the Senate and say, "Senators, we have enjoyed fellowship in the American Nation. We were proud of the time when we came into the confederacy of States. We are grateful for the pleasant recollections of our association with you; but, finding that we profit more by being a Territory than a sovereign State, we ask your leave to bid you a State's adieu in the American Union."

I say, Mr. President, if I put our statehood upon the material basis with which the bill under consideration deals with this subject—that is, pecuniary gain only, without a principle being involved—that is what I should have to say. So I suppose I shall have to go home and say to my people, "I have failed as your Senator because sympathy or sentiment or something inclined me against asking a relinquishment of statehood in a nation of which I am proud, and you will just have to go along the best you can not being a Territory." Perhaps that constitutes an additional argument for the Florida ship canal.

Mr. President, permit me to add, as I said a minute ago, that I believe it is better for this country to reserve whatever economic assets we have to our own people, because if we could raise the purchasing power of the bottom third of the population of this Nation we should be better off than if we could gain many new foreign markets, because these are our people. There is a sentimental reason for our so desiring. They are in immediate proximity to our production centers, and the cost of transportation is very greatly diminished in comparison to persons living beyond the seas.

In the South, Mr. President, we have farm laborers who are generally not otherwise employed at the season of the year when sugarcane production is under way. These transient laborers are brought into Florida in many instances from Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, and others of the Southern States. They are paid in cash. There is a commissary there which will not take anything but cash, which will not sell an employee a dollar's worth of goods on credit. There is not, in this operation, an instance of taking advantage of the employee by the so-called check system.

In addition to that, those who leave are put in a train car, if they do not go in their own automobiles, and furnished a guard, who goes with them to the point of separation, so that they will carry home as many of the hard-earned dollars as can possibly be made available to them.

In addition to that, it will be found that the wages paid those who labor in this enterprise start at the noteworthy low of $2.70 per day, in cash, plus perquisites, and reach in some instances as high as $11 a day, which is exceptionally high, generally speaking, for farm employees, even skilled operators. So that if we are permitted to add an additional quota to what we may produce, money will be found flowing out of the Everglades of Florida into the channels of purchasing power of this country, which will redound directly to the greater prosperity of this Nation.

Mr. President, just as honesty is the best policy is a profitable maxim in business conduct, so it is that fairness in economic treatment of segments of this country has economic as well as moral advantage. Thousands of employees not now working would go into employment off the relief rolls if we were able to produce a fair sugar quota for Florida.

Now, may I mention one other aspect? In Florida the farmers produce vegetables. Vegetables, unfortunately, are subject to two primary hazards. The first one is a natural hazard. As good and as equable as is our climate, there are exceptions even to a Florida climate, and there are times when vegetables are not a stable crop even in the Everglades of Florida. There are times when floods and excessive rainfall come our way.

Senators will remember that, during the same calendar year when I proposed the amendment I mentioned a moment ago, I read a telegram from the people of the Everglades engaged in vegetable production in which they said they had lost something like $1,000,000 worth of their vegetables due to a flood which had come suddenly upon them.

The second hazard is the market, and the trail winds again along the serpentine path that certain departments of our Government have heretofore laid out comparable to what is involved here today. We used to grow avacados in Florida, we used to grow tomatoes and peppers and beans and commodities of that character. We had a flourishing production, and a pretty good market, because with our own produce we did not flood that market. Then what happened? The tariff on Cuban tomatoes and other comparable commodities was lowered, and Cuba began to take the American market away from the producers in Florida and a little while later we found ourselves in the condition described by one farmer not long ago. After sending all of his produce to market he got back a bill of $1.15. After giving all his produce away he owed the railroad $1.15. He owed that money to those who made it possible for him to put his commodity where it could not be sold.

Mr. BORAH. Who lowered the tariff?

Mr. PEPPER. It was lowered by the same instrumentality and the same principle involved in the proposal being considered today.

Mr. President, while we are considering the farmers who have to compete with producers in Cuba, let us think of the inconsistency of our course. A few days ago by a tremendous majority and very solemnly we dedicated this Nation to the principle of fair-wage and fair-hour conduct. But here it is proposed that we permit to come into this country commodities produced under conditions which are the very antithesis of those we stipulated in the bill recently passed in this body. The Philippines, Cuba, and some of the other foreign competitors, are names synonymous with the suppression of the people under a despotic if not an unfair government, and conditions where the workingman does not enjoy a very large share of the produce of his labor.

When our products go into competition with the products of those countries, it is easy to observe how poorly we fare. The result is that in Florida some crops formerly produced are not even grown now. We are fast losing our tomato and other vegetable crops due to the same causes.

What have we done? We have been filing petitions and having hearings before the various departments. We have pointed out the burdens under which we have been suffering, and what have we been told? They say, in substance, "We can give you figures to show that because of the fact that your vegetable production has been reduced by law, the United States has been more prosperous." They do not say "we." They say we have paid by the produce of our soil for somebody else's prosperity, and they expect us to be lulled into a sense of security because somebody else lives off of our vitals.

I started to say that we want to make it possible for the farmers engaged in the production of a crop which is unstable because of natural hazards and unstable because of market conditions which we have largely brought on to produce a commodity for which there will be a fair market, and which can be produced under rather stable natural conditions. If they were permitted to grow sugarcane, we would not insist that they be able to grow all of their crop in sugarcane. We just want them to be able to grow a part of their crop in sugarcane—we will say a sort of backlog, as it were. They would have that to rely upon, a sort of a stable crop. We would still let them go ahead in competition with Cuba, and try to produce the tomatoes, for which they have almost a hopeless market. Just give us a little backlog, and we will be contented with that.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. Some of the Senators have been inquiring about how long they would have to remain. I understand the Senator from Florida would prefer to proceed in the morning, and that he will finish in a reasonably short time.

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator would prefer to go on in the morning?

Mr. PEPPER. I should prefer that.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, with that understanding, we will not proceed further with the bill today.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter received last evening from the President of the United States with reference to the proposed sugar legislation. The letter was read to the Finance Committee this morning, and the committee took action after the letter was presented to it. However, I think the views of the President ought to be placed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, August 11, 1937.

Hon. PAT HARRISON,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR PAT: The amendment to H. R. 7667 adopted yesterday by the Senate Finance Committee has just been brought to my attention.

I am delighted to note that the committee recognizes that our Territories and island possessions are integral parts of the United States and cannot be discriminated against, and that the restrictions on refining in those Territories contained in H. R. 7667 constitute such a discrimination.

I regret that an examination of the committee amendment shows that it not only does not eliminate the discrimination, but introduces a new and highly objectionable feature. The discrimination contained in H. R. 7667 is that sugar producers in Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands are prohibited from refining there the sugar which they are permitted to produce under the quota, while there is no similar prohibition on the other areas in the United States. The amendment, which places a refining quota on continental United States at a figure far in excess of the largest quantity of sugar grown there, merely perpetuates this discrimination.

The amendment proposes to limit by law the quantity of sugar that may be refined in various geographical parts of the United States. This introduces a principle of geographical limitations on manufacturing in our country which has no economic or social justification in this instance and would constitute a dangerous precedent.

Agricultural legislation, so desired by our farmers, should not be further delayed by the insertion in an otherwise acceptable agricultural bill of manufacturing restrictions. Their elimination would serve the best interests of our agricultural producers, who desire legislation at this session. If interested parties think there should be manufacturing restrictions on sugar refining, that can be embodied in a separate bill and be considered separately.

Sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

EXTENSION OF AIR MAIL SERVICE

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, Calendar No. 1097, being House bill 6628, is a bill to permit the further extension of the Air Mail Service. As the Senate knows, the law now provides that the Postmaster General shall not extend air-mail routes in excess of 32,000 miles, and the Department has used up that mileage, and it desires to make some further extensions. The bill simply provides that 3,000 miles of additional routes may be established from time to time.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6628, being Calendar No. 1097.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I should like to inquire if this is a bill which has been studied generally, and whether Senators generally are acquainted with the bill?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes. It is a bill that has come over from the House, and is recommended by the Department.

As the Senator knows, and as all other Senators know, the law now places a limit of 32,000 miles upon air-mail routes. The Department has used up that mileage and desires to establish several small lines, and the bill provides for an additional 3,000 miles.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, this legislation relating to the air mail is very controversial legislation. I am not certain that this particular bill is controversial. I know nothing about it, and I have reason to believe that many Senators know nothing about it. For that reason I shall object to its consideration at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

PORTRAIT OF THE LATE SENATOR ROBINSON

Mr. BARKLEY. From the Committee on the Library, I report back favorably, without amendment, Senate Resolution 173, submitted by the Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY] on August 10, 1937.

Mr. President, the resolution refers to a portrait of the late Senator Robinson which hangs in the office of the Secretary of the Senate. The late Senator's widow, Mrs. Robinson, desires to present the portrait to the Senate. The resolution merely authorizes the Architect of the Capitol to accept it. I think Mrs. Robinson presents this portrait to the Senate in a very generous spirit.

I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be now considered and agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution reported by the Senator from Kentucky?

There being no objection, the resolution (S. Res. 173) was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Architect of the Capitol is authorized and directed to accept a portrait of Hon. Joseph T. Robinson, late a Senator from the State of Arkansas, as a gift to the Senate of the United States from certain friends of his, and to cause such portrait to be hung in a suitable place in the Senate wing of the National Capitol.

TRANSFER OF SCOTLAND COUNTY TO MIDDLE JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF NORTH CAROLINA

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House bill 7092, to provide for the transfer of Scotland County to the middle judicial district of North Carolina. It provides for the transfer of that county from the eastern judicial district to the middle judicial district.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I inquire of the Senator whether there has been a report from the Committee on the Judiciary with respect to the bill.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Yes. The bill was passed by the House, and has been favorably reported by the Committee on the Judiciary of the Senate.

Mr. KING. Does the Senator know whether the Department of Justice approves of it?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I am sure the Department does.

Mr. ASHURST. A letter from the Department approving the change is printed in the report of the committee.

Mr. HARRISON. Is there any political controversy in either of the counties?

Mr. REYNOLDS. None whatsoever.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, can the Senator say whether the Committee on the Judiciary considered the matter fully?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Yes.

Mr. AUSTIN. Was there any opposition to it?

Mr. REYNOLDS. None whatsoever. The bill has passed the House. It provides merely for the transfer of one county to another judicial district for the convenience of the Federal court.

Mr. AUSTIN. Will it involve any expense?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Not at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. REYNOLDS] for the immediate consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7092) to provide for the transfer of Scotland County to the middle judicial district of North Carolina, which was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 98 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. II, title 28, sec. 179), is amended to read as follows:

"The State of North Carolina is divided into three districts to be known as the eastern, the middle, and the western districts of North Carolina.

"The eastern district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of January 1926 in the counties of Beaufort, Bertie, Bladen, Brunswick, Camden, Carteret, Chowan, Columbus, Craven, Cumberland, Currituck, Dare, Duplin, Edgecombe, Franklin, Gates, Granville, Greene, Halifax, Harnett, Hertford, Hyde, Johnston, Jones, Lenoir, Martin, Nash, New Hanover, Northampton, Onslow, Pamlico, Pasquotank, Pender, Perquimans, Pitt, Robeson, Sampson, Tyrrell, Vance, Wake, Washington, Warren, Wayne, and Wilson.

"The terms of the District Court for the Eastern District of North Carolina shall be held at Raleigh, a 1-week civil term, on the second Mondays in September and March, and at the following places on each succeeding Monday thereafter: Fayetteville, Elizabeth City, Washington, New Bern, Wilson, Wilmington, and Raleigh, the term at Raleigh being a criminal term only. The clerk of the court for the eastern district shall maintain an office in charge of himself or deputy at Raleigh, at Wilmington, at New Bern, at Elizabeth City, at Washington, at Fayetteville, and at Wilson which shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of the court.

"The middle district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of January 1926 in the counties of Alamance, Alleghany, Ashe, Cabarrus, Caswell, Chatham, Davidson, Davie, Durham, Forsyth, Guilford, Lee, Hoke, Montgomery, Moore, Orange, Person, Randolph, Richmond, Rockingham, Rowan, Scotland, Stanly, Stokes, Surry, Watauga, Wilkes, and Yadkin.

"The terms of the district court for the middle district shall be held at Rockingham on the first Mondays in March and September, at Salisbury on the third Mondays in April and October, at Winston-Salem on the first Mondays in May and November, at Greensboro on the first Mondays in June and December, at Wilkesboro on the third Mondays in May and November, and at Durham on the first Monday in February and the fourth Monday in September: Provided, That the cities of Winston-Salem, Rockingham, and Durham shall each provide and furnish at its own expense a suitable and convenient place for holding the district court until Federal buildings containing quarters for the court are erected at such places.

"The western district shall include the territory embraced on the 1st day of January 1926 in the counties of Alexander, Anson, Avery, Buncombe, Burke, Caldwell, Catawba, Cherokee, Clay, Cleveland, Gaston, Graham, Haywood, Henderson, Iredell, Jackson, Lincoln, Madison, Macon, McDowell, Mecklenburg, Mitchell, Polk, Rutherford, Swain, Transylvania, Union, and Yancey.

"Terms of the district court for the western district shall be held in Charlotte on the first Mondays in April and October, at Shelby on the fourth Monday in September and the third Monday in March, at Statesville on the fourth Mondays in April and October, at Asheville on the second Mondays in May and November, and at Bryson City on the fourth Mondays in May and November: Provided, That the cities of Shelby and Bryson City shall each provide and furnish at their own expense suitable and convenient places for holding the court at Shelby and Bryson City. The clerk of the court for the western district shall maintain an office, in charge of himself or a deputy, at Charlotte, at Asheville, at Statesville, at Shelby, and at Bryson City, which shall be kept open at all times for the transaction of the business of the court.

"There shall be a judge appointed for the said middle district in the manner now provided by law who shall receive the salary provided by law for the judges of the eastern and western districts, and a district attorney, marshal, clerk, and other officers in the manner and at the salary now provided by law.

"All causes in the said middle district in equity, bankruptcy, or admiralty, in which orders and decrees have already been made and which are now in process of trial, shall continue and remain subject to the jurisdiction of the judge of that district by whom the same shall have been made and before whom the same shall have been partially tried and determined."

RESOLUTIONS REPORTED FROM COMMITTEE TO AUDIT AND CONTROL THE CONTINGENT EXPENSES OF THE SENATE

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate I report back favorably without amendment Senate Resolutions 171, 124, and 165; also with amendments Senate Resolutions 15, 117, and 154; and I ask unanimous consent for their consideration at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolutions reported by the Senator from South Carolina? The Chair hears none, and the resolutions will be considered in their order.

LILLIAN V. JOHNSON

The resolution (S. Res. 171) submitted by Mr. BYRD on August 9, 1937, was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate to Lillian V. Johnson, widow of Newton Johnson, late an employee of the Senate under the supervision of the Committee on Rules, a sum equal to 6 months' compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

CHARLOTTE C. RIDGLEY

The resolution (S. Res. 124) submitted by Mr. LEWIS on April 29, 1937, was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate hereby is authorized and directed to pay from the contingent fund of the Senate, to Charlotte C. Ridgley, widow of Cornelius J. Ridgley, late an elevator conductor under supervision of the Architect of the Capitol, a sum equal to 6 months' compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered inclusive of funeral expenses and all other allowances.

INVESTIGATION OF CLAIMS OF NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.

The resolution (S. Res. 165) submitted by Mr. MOORE on August 3, 1937, was read, considered, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee composed of three members of the Committee on Claims, to be appointed by the chairman of said Claims Committee, is hereby authorized and directed to investigate the claims of the city of New Brunswick, N. J., for compensation for municipal services furnished to purchasers of lands from the United States Housing Corporation, the title to which lands still remains in the United States.

Such committee to be so appointed is authorized to hold hearings and to sit during recesses or sessions of the Seventy-fifth Congress, at such times and places as it may deem advisable, to send for persons or papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings, the cost of which shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words, the expenses of such investigation to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

INVESTIGATION OF RECEIVERSHIP AND BANKRUPTCY PROCEEDINGS

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S. Res. 15) submitted by Mr. MCADOO on January 6, 1937.

The amendment reported by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate was, on page 1, to strike out all after line 8 and to insert:

Congress, for the purpose of enabling the said committee to complete its work and prepare and file reports of its investigation, and for such purpose is authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate not to exceed $5,000.

So as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That Senate Resolution 78, agreed to June 13, 1933, authorizing an investigation of the administration of receivership and bankruptcy proceedings in the courts of the United States, and other matters pertaining thereto, and supplemented by Senate Resolution 72, agreed to February 15, 1935; Senate Resolution 170, agreed to July 25, 1935; Senate Resolution 282, agreed to June 6, 1936; and Senate Resolution 308, agreed to June 5, 1936, is hereby continued in full force and effect during the Seventy-fifth Congress, for the purpose of enabling the said committee to complete its work and prepare and file reports of its investigation, and for such purpose is authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate not to exceed $5,000.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask whether the chairman of the committee has been informed of this amendment.

Mr. BYRNES. I will say to the Senator that the amendment is in accord with the statement that was made at the time the Senator who is the chairman of the committee was in the committee room; but I am entirely willing to let the resolution go to the calendar if the Senator wishes that that be done.

Mr. President, for the time being I withdraw the request for the consideration of the resolution.

CONSERVATION AND UTILIZATION OF AQUATIC LIFE

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S. Res. 117) submitted by Mr. SCHWELLENBACH on April 15, 1937.

The amendments reported by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate were, on page 2, line 7, after the word "employ", to insert "and call upon the executive departments for", and on the same page, line 15, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$20,000" and insert "$5,000", so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That a special committee of five Senators, to be composed of three members from the majority political party and two members from the minority political party, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, is authorized and directed (1) to investigate all matters pertaining to the replacement, conservation, and proper utilization of aquatic life (including marine and freshwater food and game fishes and shellfish) of the United States, its Territories, and waters adjacent thereto, with a view to determining the most appropriate methods for carrying out such purposes, and (2) to report to the Senate as soon as practicable, but not later than the beginning of the first regular session of the Seventy-sixth Congress, the results of its investigations, together with its recommendations for necessary legislation.

For the purposes of this resolution the committee, or any duly authorized subcommittee thereof, is authorized to hold hearings; to sit and act at such times and places during the sessions and recesses of the Senate in the Seventy-fifth Congress until the final report is submitted; to employ and call upon the executive departments for such clerical and other assistants; to require by subpena or otherwise the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such books, papers, and documents; to administer such oaths; and to take such testimony and make such expenditures as it deems advisable. The cost of stenographic services to report such hearings shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words. The expenses of the committee, which shall not exceed $5,000, shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman.

The amendments were agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

VIOLATIONS OF FREE SPEECH AND RIGHTS OF LABOR—LIMIT OF EXPENDITURES BY COMMITTEE

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S. Res. 154) submitted by Mr. LA FOLLETTE (for Mr. THOMAS of Utah and himself) on July 22, 1937.

The amendment reported by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate was, on page 1, line 7, to strike out "$50,000" and insert "$35,000", so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That the limit of expenditures under Senate Resolution 266, Seventy-fourth Congress, second session, agreed to June 6, 1936, and under Senate Resolution 70, Seventy-fifth Congress, first session, agreed to February 19, 1937, to investigate violations of the right of free speech and assembly and interference with the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively, is hereby increased by $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

NOMINATION OF HUGO L. BLACK—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. O'MAHONEY in the chair) laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 12, 1937.

To the Senate of the United States:

I nominate HUGO L. BLACK, of Alabama, to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suppose that nomination should go to the Judiciary Committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER also laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations (and withdrawing the nominations of two postmasters), which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(For nominations this day received and nominations withdrawn, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. HARRISON, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably the nominations of the following-named surgeons to be senior surgeons in the United States Public Health Service, to rank as such from the dates indicated: Harry E. Trimble, July 16, 1937; James E. Faris, August 1, 1937; and Mark V. Ziegler, August 2, 1937.

Mr. BULKLEY, from the Committee on Finance, reported favorably the nomination of Frank F. Gentsch, of Cleveland, Ohio, to be collector of internal revenue for the eighteenth district of Ohio, in place of Carl E. Moore, resigned.

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters.

Mr. VAN NUYS, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported favorably the following nominations:

Benjamin Harrison, of California, to be United States attorney for the southern district of California, vice Peirson M. Hall; and Frank J. Hennessy to be United States attorney for the northern district of California, vice Henry H. McPike, whose term has expired.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of William R. Furlong to be Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, Department of the Navy, with the rank of rear admiral, for a term of 4 years.

Mr. WALSH. I move that the nomination be confirmed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

FEDERAL BOARD FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Clarence Poe, of North Carolina, to be a member of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Diplomatic and Foreign Service.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations in the Diplomatic and Foreign Service be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations are confirmed en bloc.

IN THE ARMY

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations in the Army.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask that the nominations in the Army be confirmed en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the nominations in the Army are confirmed en bloc.

That concludes the Executive Calendar.

RECESS

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 12 o'clock noon tomorrow.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 28 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Friday, August 13, 1937, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 12 (legislative day of Aug. 9), 1937

ASSOCIATE JUSTICE, SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

HUGO L. BLACK, of Alabama, to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE

George F. Sullivan, of Minnesota, to be United States district judge for Minnesota, vice Joseph W. Molyneaux, retired.

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS

Benjamin Harrison, of California, to be United States attorney for the southern district of California, vice Peirson M. Hall.

Frank J. Hennessy, Esq., to be United States attorney for the northern district of California, vice Hon. Henry H. McPike, whose term has expired.

Victor E. Anderson, of Minnesota, to be United States attorney for the district of Minnesota, vice George F. Sullivan.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

Frank F. Gentsch, of Cleveland, Ohio, to be collector of internal revenue for the eighteenth district of Ohio, in place of Carl E. Moore, resigned.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The following-named officers in the United States Public Health Service, to rank as such from the dates set opposite their names:

TO BE PASSED ASSISTANT SURGEONS

Asst. Surg. Warren P. Dearing, July 10, 1937.
Asst. Surg. Alexander G. Gilliam, July 10, 1937.
Asst. Surg. Leonard A. Scheele, July 10, 1937.
Asst. Surg. Ralph J. Mitchell, July 10, 1937.
Asst. Surg. William H. Gordon, July 10, 1937.
Asst. Surg. Frederick J. Brady, August 20, 1937.
Asst. Surg. Thomas H. Tomlinson, Jr., August 22, 1937.

TO BE SURGEONS

Passed Asst. Surg. Kirby K. Bryant, July 4, 1937.
Passed Asst. Surg. William H. Sebrell, Jr., June 29, 1937.
Passed Asst. Surg. George G. Holdt, July 1, 1937.
Passed Asst. Surg. Edward R. Pelikan, June 29, 1937.
Passed Asst. Surg. Homer L. Skinner, June 29, 1937.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 12 (legislative day of Aug. 9), 1937

DIPLOMATIC AND FOREIGN SERVICE

TO BE SECRETARIES IN THE DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

Homer Brett
Edward A. Dow
Dudley G. Dwyre
John G. Erhardt
Carol H. Foster
Samuel W. Honaker
Wilbur Keblinger
Graham H. Kemper

George A. Makinson	Edward Caffery
O. Gaylord Marsh	Augustus S. Chase
Lester Maynard	Warren M. Chase
Myrl S. Myers	Alexander P. Cruger
John R. Putnam	Ernest E. Evans
Emil Sauer	Harvey T. Goodier
Hugh H. Watson	Franklin C. Gowen
George L. Brandt	Leonard N. Green
Charles Bridgham Hosmer	Knowlton V. Hicks
John D. Johnson	Frederick W. Hinke
Henry H. Balch	Carlton Hurst
Walter F. Boyle	John B. Ketcham
Parker W. Buhrman	Henry A. W. Beck
Ralph C. Busser	Kenneth C. Krentz
Harold D. Clum	Rufus H. Lane, Jr.
Leslie A. Davis	Harvey Lee Milbourne
Edwin Carl Kemp	Hugh S. Miller
Dayle C. McDonough	Nelson R. Park
Lucien Memminger	James E. Parks
Harold B. Quarton	Joseph P. Ragland
Walter H. Sholes	Albert W. Scott
Alfred R. Thomson	Winfield H. Scott
Richard F. Boyce	George E. Seltzer
Richard P. Butrick	Horace H. Smith
Cecil M. P. Cross	Harry E. Stevens
Hasell H. Dick	Alan N. Steyne
John W. Dye	Mason Turner
Louis H. Gourley	Robert S. Ward
Edward M. Groth	George H. Winters
Robert W. Heingartner	Lloyd D. Yates
Frank Anderson Henry	Gordon L. Burke
George D. Hopper	Horace J. Dickinson
James Hugh Keeley, Jr.	Edmund J. Dorsz
William R. Langdon	Andrew W. Edson
Robert D. Longyear	Carlos C. Hall
Robert B. Macatee	Monroe B. Hall
Charles J. Pisar	Thomas A. Hickok
John Randolph	Phil H. Hubbard
George P. Shaw	Charles A. Hutchinson
Samuel Sokobin	Robert Janz
Harold S. Tewell	John S. Littell
Henry S. Waterman	Odin G. Loren
Henry M. Wolcott	Edward S. Maney
Lawrence S. Armstrong	Harold B. Minor
Roy W. Baker	James B. Pilcher
William E. Beitz	Hugh F. Ramsay
Sidney A. Belovsky	Edward B. Rand
William A. Bickers	Joseph I. Touchette
Ellis A. Bonnet	Walter N. Walmsley, Jr.
Roy E. Bower	Thomas C. Wasson
Howard A. Bowman	John H. Madonne

TO BE CONSULS GENERAL

Harold H. Tittmann, Jr.
Joseph Flack

TO BE CONSULS

H. Freeman Matthews	Hugh Millard
George R. Merrell, Jr.	Walter H. Schoellkopf

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY

William R. Furlong to be Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, Department of the Navy.

FEDERAL BOARD FOR VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

Clarence Poe to be a member of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

MEDICAL CORPS

To be first lieutenants

Harold Robert Carter	Romeyn James Healy, Jr.
Philip Wallace Mallory	John Robert McGraw
Jacob Hal Bridges	Charles Harold Gingles

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY

TO QUARTERMASTER CORPS

First Lt. Clarence David McGowen.
First Lt. Andrew Thomas McNamara.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY

Olin Harrington Longino to be colonel, Coast Artillery Corps.
Peter Hill Ottosen to be colonel, Coast Artillery Corps.
William Ewen Shipp to be lieutenant colonel, Cavalry.
Carl Smith Doney to be lieutenant colonel, Coast Artillery Corps.
Neal Creighton to be major, Air Corps.
Alonzo Maning Drake to be major, Air Corps.

APPOINTMENTS IN THE NATIONAL GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES

Walter Perry Story to be major general, National Guard of the United States.
Lewis Bacon Ballantyne to be brigadier general, National Guard of the United States.
Harcourt Hervey to be brigadier general, National Guard of the United States.

WITHDRAWALS

Executive nominations withdrawn from the Senate August 12 (legislative day of Aug. 9), 1937

POSTMASTERS

LOUISIANA

Jesse D. McBride to be postmaster at Bastrop, in the State of Louisiana.
Virgil N. McNeely to be postmaster at Colfax, in the State of Louisiana.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THURSDAY, AUGUST 12, 1937

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, our Father, we pray Thee that we may cherish the greatest of gifts—a thankful heart. The emotion of gratitude is often too deep for words, only for expressive silence. We praise Thee that every blessing is a mercy from Thy bountiful hand. Inspire us to respond to Thy generous earth—the radiant, vitalizing sky with its manifold treasures of light and darkness. Thou hast greatly enriched the world with the river of God. Gracious Lord, life at times seems hard, unfair, and its claims excessive, but we rejoice that beneath all there is One eternally good and just. We pray Thee that our spiritual natures may not be dimmed either by disobedience or indifference. O Thou who takest away the sins of the world, assure us that we are not forsaken but forgiven. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S. 1567. An act authorizing the conservation, production, exploitation, and sale of helium gas, a mineral resource pertaining to the national defense and to the development of commercial aeronautics, authorizing the acquisition, by purchase or otherwise, by the United States of properties for the production of helium gas, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate disagrees to the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 2281) entitled "An act to regulate proceedings in adoption in the District of Columbia", requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints

Mr. KING, Mr. OVERTON, and Mr. CAPPER to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BIGELOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 15 minutes on Tuesday next following the special orders heretofore ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House at this time for 10 minutes.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Illinois. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I do not intend to object, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON] has been addressing the House for 1 or 2 minutes and then placing in the RECORD as an extension of remarks information that is coming to him from people in my city. So far as I know, the gentleman has never made any investigation to determine whether or not the statements furnished him were correct. I do not propose to get in a controversy with the gentleman on the subject, but it does seem to me that he should make some inquiry before accepting everything that is submitted to him.

Mr. Speaker, it was necessary for me to secure permission to extend my remarks because I had not completed my statement when taken off my feet by the demand for the regular order and the objection to the gentleman proceeding. About 2 years ago I stated my views on this subject when requested to do so by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SAUTHOFF]. I had not intended to make any further comment. My statement then explained my position.

Those opposing the grant by the Government for the Louisiana Purchase memorial project in St. Louis have taken the matter to the Federal courts. An injunction was sought and denied. The papers stated a few days ago another phase of the matter has been submitted to the United States District Court in St. Louis. It is true as the gentleman from Kansas has stated on several occasions that the question of opening the ballot boxes which contain the ballots cast in the bond-issue election is before the Supreme Court of Missouri.

What I wanted to comment on today when deprived of the opportunity was the resolution introduced by the gentleman from Kansas. This resolution provides for a congressional investigation of this project. I wanted to call the gentleman's attention to the fact that six Members of Congress are members of this Commission or I might say five Members of the present Congress and one Member of the Seventy-fourth Congress who was not returned to the present Congress. Two are Members of the House today, one a member of the gentleman's party, and three are Members of the Senate, one a Republican. Aside from this it so happens that William Allen White, a distinguished Republican from the gentleman's own State and a close personal friend of the gentleman, is likewise a member of the Commission. It will be seen that the gentleman desires to investigate Members of Congress as well as his personal friend. I have tried to learn if the gentleman from Kansas has consulted any of the Members of the House or Senate and discussed the matter with them. So far I have not found one that he has talked to. The gentleman himself advised me that his friend Mr. White had written him about the project and indicated, according to the gentleman's own statement, that he, Mr. White, did not agree with some of the remarks credited to him in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

There is but one other reference I desire to make and that is I know that a most honorable and trusted employee of the National Park Service has been assigned to handle this project insofar as seeing that there is absolutely no fraud in connection with the amount paid for land in this area. If there is one thing everyone, Republican and Democrat, most agree on, it is that the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, is an honest man and he will see to it that there is no scandal connected with the purchase of the land. I read in the paper the other day that steps had been taken to secure all the land by condemnation proceedings through the Federal court. In other words no private purchases. It is not my purpose to object to the gentleman extending his remarks but I do hope that he will in the future read with care what is furnished him before placing the matter in the RECORD.

Mr. RICH. Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Illinois. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I suggest the absence of a quorum, and make the point of order there is not a quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is not a quorum present.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

A call of the House was ordered.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

[Roll No. 141]

Allen, La.	Eaton	Kramer	Simpson
Atkinson	Ellenbogen	Lemke	Sirovich
Biermann	Farley	Lord	Smith, Conn.
Binderup	Fernandez	Luckey, Nebr.	Smith, Maine
Brewster	Fish	McGroarty	Smith, Va.
Buckley, N. Y.	Fulmer	McLean	Smith, W. Va.
Bulwinkle	Garrett	Maas	Starnes
Cannon, Wis.	Gasque	Meeks	Sullivan
Carter	Gilchrist	Mills	Taylor, Colo.
Case, S. Dak.	Goldsborough	Mitchell, Ill.	Teigan
Chapman	Gray, Ind.	Mouton	Thomas, N. J.
Clason	Hartley	O'Brien, Mich.	Vinson, Ga.
Crosby	Havenner	O'Neal, Ky.	Wadsworth
Crowther	Hill, Ala.	Palmisano	White, Idaho
Culkin	Hoffman	Pfeifer	Wigglesworth
Dean	Keller	Phillips	Wilcox
Dirksen	Kleberg	Rees, Kans.	Withrow
Douglas	Kloeb	Sadowski	Wood

The SPEAKER. Three hundred and fifty-seven Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

On motion of Mr. RAYBURN, further proceedings under the call were dispensed with.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker——

Mr. MILLS. I hope the gentleman will not object to my having 1 minute.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Reserving the right to object, and I may not object, but I do want to say that on Tuesday I asked for 5 minutes at the close of the day and the majority leader denied me the 5 minutes. I waited until the close of the day last night, and the gentleman from Chicago denied me the privilege of speaking for 10 minutes. I sat in this House for 6 years before I ever addressed the Chair, and I am going to insist on having 10 minutes this morning, so I object.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks and to include a short address by Dr. Walker, president of Wilberforce University, on the subject President Roosevelt, the Minimum-Wage Bill, and the Negro.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I am sorry, but I shall have to object.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks by including a brief tribute to our late Speaker, Joseph W. Byrns.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I am sorry, but, to be consistent, I shall have to object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. ASHBROOK. These are my own remarks, I may say to the gentleman.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I object, Mr. Speaker.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. KITCHENS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I may say that I was on the floor of the House night before last when the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON] asked for 5 minutes, which was denied. I was here last night when we granted the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. McGEHEE] 20 minutes, and then we extended his time 10 minutes, and then extended his time further. The gentleman from Kansas waited until the gentleman from Mississippi had concluded his remarks and then tried to get time, but there was objection. I think the gentleman is taking the proper course to get recognition in the House of Representatives. There is no reason under the heavens why he should have been denied time when the House was ready to adjourn. I think the gentleman is only asserting the rights that should belong to any Member of the House, because he waited until the House had been in session until nearly 5 o'clock before submitting his request.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas?

Mr. RICH. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. PARSONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON] have 10 minutes in which to address the House.

Mr. EDMISTON. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table and all other business today I be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I shall have to object.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL, 1938

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 7051) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes which I send to the desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas calls up the conference report on the river and harbor bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read the conference report.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the senate to the bill (H. R. 7051) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, and 52, and agree to the same.

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 5.

The committee of conference recommends the transfer of amendment numbered 47 to page 23 after line 10; and the transfer of amendment numbered 48 to page 23, after line 24.

J. J. MANSFIELD,
RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
GEORGE N. SEGER,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
Managers on the part of the House.
ROYAL S. COPELAND,
MORRIS SHEPPARD,
CHARLES L. MCNARY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7051) authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, submit the following written statement explaining the effect of the action agreed upon:

The river and harbor bill as it passed the House authorized new work the total estimated cost of which was $33,687,175.

The amount added by amendment in the Senate was $20,014,350.

Senate amendments to H. R. 7051, involving new authorizations for river and harbor work

Amount carried in H. R. 7051 as passed by the House	$33,687,175
Estimated cost of projects to be considered by Senate Commerce Committee:
Sandy Hook Bay, N. Y.	768,750
Indian River Inlet and Bay, Del.	283,000
Susquehanna River, Havre de Grace, Md.	1,000
Intracoastal Waterway from Apalachicola Bay to Withlacoochee River, Fla.	480,000
Clearwater Harbor, Fla.	15,000
Mobile Harbor, Ala.	76,000
Calcasieu River and Pass, La.	9,260,000
Bayou Dupre, La.	52,000
Bayous La Loutre, St. Malo, and Yscloskey, La.	48,000
Texas City Channel, Tex.	112,000
Racine Harbor, Wis.	72,600
Mississippi River at Minneapolis, Minn.	5,000,000
Monroe Harbor, Mich.	200,000
Sacramento River, Calif.	2,500,000
Sitka Harbor, Alaska	160,000
San Juan Harbor, P. R.	533,000
Arecibo Harbor, P. R.	468,000
	53,716,525

The Senate made 17 amendments to section 1 of the bill, which authorizes new improvement work. These amendments covered the adoption of new reports received since the Committee on Rivers and Harbors closed its consideration of the bill, except amendment no. 5, authorizing an appropriation of $15,000 for dredging in Clearwater Harbor, Fla., from which the Senate conferees receded. As the result of the conference the amount authorized by the bill for new work is reduced to $53,701,525.

The remaining amendments relate to survey items and verbal amendments, on all of which the House conferees receded.

On amendment no. 1, page 3: Corrects a typographical error.

On amendment no. 2, page 4: Sandy Hook Bay off Atlantic Highlands, N. J. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for the construction of a rubble-mound breakwater about 4,000 feet in length and the dredging of an area inside this breakwater to a depth of 8 feet. Estimated cost, $850,000. Local interests to contribute $81,250. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 3, page 4: Indian River Inlet and Bay, Del. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for the construction of parallel jetties 500 feet apart in the inlet and the dredging of a channel 200 feet wide and 15 feet deep from near ends of jetties to a point in the bay about 7,000 feet from the ocean shore line. Estimated cost, $443,000. Local interests to contribute 50 percent of initial cost, but not to exceed $220,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 4, page 4: Susquehanna River at Havre de Grace, Md. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for the maintenance of the existing small-boat harbor below Concord Point, 400 feet long, 380 feet wide, and 7 feet deep, with approach channel of the same depth, 75 feet wide, leading to deep water off Concord Point. Estimated annual cost, $1,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 5, page 8: Clearwater Harbor, Fla. Item adopts a project not favorably reported on by the Chief of Engineers, for experimental maintenance dredging, local interests to pay half the cost. Estimated cost to the United States not to exceed $15,000. Senate recedes.

On amendment no. 6, page 9: Intracoastal waterway from Apalachicola Bay to St. Marks River, Fla. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for construction of a channel 9 feet deep and 100 feet wide from Apalachicola Bay to St. Marks River, Fla. Estimated cost, $480,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 7, page 9: Mobile Harbor, Ala. (Rivers and Harbors Committee Doc. No. 44, 75th Cong.). Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for widening the existing channel in Mobile River below highway bridge to 500 feet throughout its length. Estimated cost, $76,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 8, page 9: Bayous La Loutre, St. Malo, and Yscloskey, La. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for a channel 5 feet deep and 40 feet wide from deep water in Lake Borgne to shore line at mouth of Bayou Yscloskey, a channel 6 feet deep and 40 feet wide from deep water in Lake Borgne through Bayous St. Malo, La Loutre, and Eloi to deep water in Lake Eloi, and the removal of snags. Estimated cost, $48,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 9, page 9: Bayou Dupre, La. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for a channel 6 feet deep from Highway Bridge at Violet, La., to deep water in Lake Borgne, with widths of 80 feet in canal and bayou and 100 feet in the lake with turning basin 100 feet wide and 200 feet long at bayou. Estimated cost, $52,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 10, page 10: Calcasieu River and Pass, La. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for a channel 30 feet deep and 250 feet wide from the wharves of Lake Charles Harbor and Terminal district to the Gulf of Mexico by way of Calcasieu River. Estimated cost $5,860,000. And for the extension of the jetties to the 15-foot contour, if found advisable to reduce maintenance-dredging costs. Estimated cost, $3,400,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 11, page 10: Texas City Channel, Tex. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for the extension of the harbor basin 1,000 feet to the southward at present depth of 34 feet and width of 800 feet. Estimated cost, $112,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 12, page 10: Corrects a typographical error.

On amendment no. 13, page 11: Item adopts project for extending the 9-foot channel of the upper Mississippi River project above St. Anthonys Falls, Minneapolis, Minn., the improvement being needed so that more adequate terminal facilities can be provided. The plans of improvement are to be subject to the final approval of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors. The following is a letter from Brig. Gen. G. B. Pillsbury, Acting Chief of Engineers, United States Army, regarding this amendment:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, August 10, 1937.

Hon. JOSEPH J. MANSFIELD,
Chairman, Committee on Rivers and Harbors,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR JUDGE MANSFIELD: In reply to your letter of August 7, I take pleasure in furnishing you a statement showing the estimated cost and the kind of work involved in the project covered by amendment no. 13 to the river and harbor authorization bill, H. R. 7051, providing for the extension of the 9-foot channel in the Mississippi River above St. Anthonys Falls, in accordance with the plan contained in House Document No. 137, Seventy-second Congress, first session, subject to such changes as may be found advisable by the Chief of Engineers, and the final approval of the plan by the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors as necessary to provide adequate terminal facilities for Minneapolis.

The Mississippi River flows through the lower portion of the city of Minneapolis in a deep gorge which restricts access to the river. This gorge terminates at the Falls of St. Anthony, above which the banks of the river are low and suitable for terminal development. The plan for improvement of this section contained in House Document No. 137, Seventy-second Congress, provided for the construction of two locks and channel excavation to afford a channel 9 feet in depth at an estimated cost of $6,384,500 for the construction work to be undertaken by the United States, and a total of $646,000 for bridge changes to be borne by the bridge owners. The report concluded that the costly industrial works required to carry navigation above St. Anthonys Falls were not then justified.

The Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors was requested by a resolution of the Committee on Commerce of the United States Senate adopted June 6, 1935, to review this item of the report with a view to determining if any modification of the conclusions therein with respect to this item is advisable at the present time. After a further study of the improvement, the district engineer presented a revised plan and estimates, including the locks in the upper and lower falls, respectively, at an estimated construction cost of $4,480,000 for the United States, $391,000 for the city of Minneapolis in lowering a water main and providing movable spans and three highway bridges, and at an estimated cost of $255,000 by the owners of the two railroad bridges to provide removable spans therein. The district and division engineers did not recommend the improvement. After a hearing before the Board, the division engineer was requested to give further engineering study to the report. His final report is not yet received.

The information before the Department indicates that the 9-foot channel, with two single locks, could be provided to reach the upper portion of the river in Minneapolis, at a cost to the United States of not to exceed $5,000,000.

Sincerely yours,

G. B. PILLSBURY,
Brigadier General, Acting Chief of Engineers.

On amendment no. 14, page 12: Racine Harbor, Wis. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for the removal of shoals one-half mile lakeward of the harbor entrance to a minimum depth of 25 feet, widening outer harbor basin on the southward to a total width of 825 feet and depth of 19 feet, with suitably increased depth at the entrance, and dredging the channel in Root River below the Fourth Street bridge to a depth of 19 feet and general widths of 95 to 190 feet. Estimated cost $72,600. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 15, page 12: Monroe Harbor, Mich. Item adopts project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for the modification of the present project to provide that the contribution by local interests toward the initial cost of the improvement shall total $300,000, payable in annual installments of $50,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 16, page 13: Sacramento River flood control, California. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for the construction by the United States of bank-protection works and levee set-backs substantially as included in the 5-year program recommended by the California Debris Commission and the maintenance, during construction of these works, of the enlarged river channel below Cache Slough, including the revetment of the banks of the cut. Estimated cost, $2,500,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 17, page 15: Sitka Harbor, Alaska. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for a small-boat basin, 10 feet deep and approximately 6½ acres in area, protected by about 1,900 feet of rock-mound breakwaters. Estimated cost, $160,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 18, page 15: San Juan Harbor, P. R. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for widening the Anegado Reach between entrance channel and anchorage basin to afford a channel 30 feet deep with width decreasing from 1,200 feet at its outer end to 1,000 feet near the anchorage basin, and for enlarging the anchorage basin to afford an additional area of 90 acres, with a depth of 30 feet. Estimated cost, $633,000. Local interests to contribute $100,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 19, page 15: Arecibo Harbor, P. R. Item adopts new project recommended by the Chief of Engineers for an entrance and approach channel and a maneuvering area of 25 feet depth protected on the north by a stone breakwater. Estimated cost, $756,000. Local interests to contribute $288,000. House conferees recede.

On amendment no. 20, page 15: Corrects a typographical error.

On amendment no. 21, page 18: Project for the construction of the Marshall Ford Dam wholly adopted by striking out words "first stage", which only partially adopted this work.

Preliminary examination and survey items

On amendment no. 22: Northeast Harbor, Maine.

On amendment no. 23: Presumpscot Harbor, Maine.

On amendment no. 24: Portland Harbor, Maine, north of House Island, to determine advisability of removing shoal.

On amendment no. 25: Ipswich River, Mass.

On amendment no. 26: Clinton Harbor, Conn.

On amendment no. 27: Waterway from Albany to Schenectady, N. Y., by way of Hudson and Mohawk Rivers, with a view to securing a depth of 27 feet and suitable width.

On amendment no. 28: Baltimore Harbor and Channels, Md.

On amendment no. 29: Channels to and near Jefferson Islands, Chesapeake Bay, Md., with a view to their establishment as an aid to navigation and the establishment of a harbor of refuge.

On amendment no. 30: Folly Creek, Accomac County, Va.

On amendment no. 31: Woods Creek, Middlesex County, Va.

On amendment no. 32: Dolls Creek, N. C.

On amendment no. 33: Channel from Edenton Bay, N. C., into Pembroke Creek to United States Fish Hatchery.

On amendment no. 34: Indian River (Vero Beach), St. Johns River Waterway, Fla.

On amendment no. 35: Caloosahatchee River and Lake Okeechobee drainage areas, Florida, with a view to constructing additional levees between Kissimmee River and Fisheating Creek.

On amendment no. 36: Bayou Teche, La. Upper portion with a view to improvement in the interest of navigation and flood control.

On amendment no. 37: Colorado River and its tributaries, Tex., with a view to its improvement in the interest of navigation and flood control.

On amendment no. 38: Goose Creek, Tex. Deep-water channel and port.

On amendment no. 39: Arroyo Colorada, Tex. A channel from a point at or near Mercedes, Tex., to its mouth, thence south in Laguna Madre to Port Isabel.

On amendment no. 40: Survey of channel for the purposes of navigation from Jefferson, Tex., to Shreveport, La., by way of Jefferson-Shreveport Waterway, thence by way of Red River to mouth of Red River in the Mississippi River, including advisability of water-supply reservoirs in Cypress River and Black Cypress River above head of navigation.

On amendment no. 41: Brazos River, Tex. A comprehensive survey with a view to preparing plans, estimates of the cost of improvements for navigation, flood control, water conservation, and reclamation, excluding therefrom work now in progress under the Works Progress Administration. The expense of such survey shall be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for examinations, surveys, and contingencies of rivers and harbors.

On amendment no. 42: Allens Creek, a tributary of the Brazos River in Austin County, Tex., in the interest of navigation and of flood control.

On amendment no. 43: Mill Creek, a tributary of the Brazos River in Austin County, Tex., in the interest of navigation and of flood control.

On amendment no. 44: Navidad River, Tex., in the interest of navigation and of flood control.

On amendment no. 45: Lavaca River, Tex., in the interest of navigation and of flood control.

On amendment no. 46: Channel or channels across Padre Island, Tex., from Laguna Madre to the Gulf of Mexico.

On amendment no. 47: Canal from Ouachita River to Huttig, Ark.

On amendment no. 48: Saginaw Bay, Mich.

On amendment no. 49: Erie Harbor, Pa. Beach no. 2.

On amendment no. 50: Rochester (Charlotte) Harbor, Genesee River, N. Y.

On amendment no. 51: Necanicum River, Oreg.

On amendment no. 52: Port Angeles Harbor, Wash.

The House conferees recede on all survey items.

J. J. MANSFIELD,
RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
GEORGE N. SEGER,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield.

Mr. RICH. Take amendment no. 29:

Channels to and near Jefferson Island, Chesapeake Bay, Md., with a view to their establishment as an aid to navigation and the establishment of a harbor of refuge.

Will the chairman of the committee inform us whether that harbor of refuge is to be a harbor for worn-out Democrats, or is it the purpose to establish a wildlife harbor of refuge? If you are going to have a wildlife harbor of refuge on Jefferson Island, then are they going to permit the Democrats to go to that island, especially the Jeffersonian Democrats, or will they all be New Deal Democrats who will be permitted to go to Jefferson Island?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, first let me say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RICH] that I hope that when this channel is made, Jefferson Island will be eligible for the best type of Republicans as well as Democrats. [Laughter.]

I do not desire to take up any time of the House unnecessarily. The conference report is embraced in the RECORD, which all Members may read for themselves, if they have not already done so. The amendments that have been added by the Senate are amendments that in nearly every instance came in through the regular course from the Chief of Engineers after the bill had passed the House. Of course, they were eligible for consideration by the Senate Committee on Commerce, just the same as they would have been by the House committee if they had come in earlier.

Mr. COLMER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Yes.

Mr. COLMER. Do I understand that any of these amendments suggested by the Senate did not have the approval of the Chief of Engineers?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Except one they all have the approval of the engineers. The only one not so approved was the Clearwater Harbor, Fla., provision, which was voted out by the House, and the House conferees did not accept it.

Mr. COLMER. Then, if these reports on projects added by the Senate had been made prior to the action by the Rivers and Harbors Committee in the House, in all likelihood they would have been included in the original bill?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Almost beyond question.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Yes.

Mr. MOTT. What is the item on page 2?—

Intracoastal waterway from Apalachicola Bay to St. Marks River, Fla.

Is that a part of the Florida ship canal?

Mr. MANSFIELD. No.

Mr. RICH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Yes.

Mr. RICH. How much did the conference report add to the origina! appropriation? Are there any increases from what it was originally?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Yes; there are two quite large items, and then there are minor ones. It adds $20,014,350 to the House bill.

Mr. RICH. Does the gentleman not think that he should do something, either by the House conferees or the Senate conferees, to eliminate items and not have these appropriation bills so increased?

Mr. MANSFIELD. This does not affect the appropriations for the coming year. These projects will be eligible for appropriations next year and thereafter. This is a legislative bill adopting projects and authorizing appropriations hereafter for prosecuting these improvements when Congress wants to make them. Of the two larger items I refer to, one is at Lake Charles, La., and the other is the Mississippi River at Minneapolis, Minn. They constitute more than half the increase and are very meritorious projects.

Mr. RICH. The only thing is this: If we authorize a lot of these projects, then there are many more people hounding the Committee on Appropriations to have the funds appropriated; and it seems to me, if the gentleman will look at the daily statements of the Treasury, he will see that we cannot continue to go on the way we are, because daily, ever since this year began, we have increased our Budget appropriations by over $7,000,000 a day, and something may crack some day if we do not cut down.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I compliment the gentleman from Pennsylvania for his earnestness in trying to cut down the cost of government, and I am with him 100 percent wherever it is practicable to accomplish that end. The improvements necessary for the handling of our commerce are things that we cannot disregard. Commerce is increasing enormously in various sections of the country and steps must be taken to care for the new conditions arising.

Mr. RICH. I would like to make this observation: That since the 1st day of August, up to August 6, we have spent at the rate of $4,933 a minute more than we have received. Think of it! Four thousand nine hundred and thirty-three dollars a minute; while you eat, while you sleep, while you work, and while you play, every hour of the day you are going that much in the red. Something, somehow, sometime, will crack in this Nation if we do not stop.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I notice the Senate has added amendments which total about $20,000,000.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The House has receded on many of the amendments. Do those amendments where the House recedes carry any considerable amount of money, or are they mostly immaterial matters?

Mr. MANSFIELD. The majority of them are surveys which may not cost anything. Unless they are proved to be very meritorious the cost will be infinitesimal. Those that are not surveys, some eight or nine, have been reported upon favorably by both the board and the Chief of Engineers of the War Department in the regular course of their duties.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Of course the distinguished chairman of this committee knows more about these flood-control matters than I do, although I have applied myself rather assiduously to keep posted. I notice the absence of any mention of projects that deal primarily with the control of floods in the Ohio Valley.

Mr. MANSFIELD. We do not handle flood-control matters in our committee unless they are incidental to improvements primarily for other purposes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I know; but does not your committee take into consideration the construction of some projects that have been accepted by the Army engineers as being a part of the flood-control program?

Mr. MANSFIELD. Where they are incidental to navigation and other purposes of improvement, yes, that is true.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Has there been any taking out of any projects in the vicinity of Pittsburgh and that section which have to do with the holding back of the water of the Ohio River?

Mr. MANSFIELD. None whatever. Furthermore, we favor everything that the engineering branch of the Government will recommend as necessary and useful for that section.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. As this bill passed the House it carried a provision with reference to the Scioto-Sandusky plan in Ohio. That is still in the bill, is it?

Mr. MANSFIELD. They took nothing out in the Senate. If that provision was in it when it passed the House it remains there yet, but I believe a provision to that effect was included in the omnibus flood-control bill instead of the river and harbor bill.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANSFIELD. I yield.

Mr. OLIVER. On page 5 of the report, amendment no. 23, "Presumpscot Harbor, Maine", I wonder if the gentleman would offer an amendment to change that "Presumpscot Harbor", that being a misprint?

Mr. MANSFIELD. This has already been approved by the Senate.

Mr. OLIVER. I am wondering whether anything could be done to correct that wording.

Mr. MANSFIELD. I do not think there can at this time.

Mr. Speaker, unless there are some other questions that Members desire to ask, I do not care to make any further statement at this time. I move the adoption of the conference report, Mr. Speaker, and on that I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

NAVIGATION FACILITIES ON THE COLUMBIA RIVER-BONNEVILLE PROJECT

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 7642) authorizing the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the conference report.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7642) authorizing the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

Amendment numbered 1: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with two amendments as follows: In section 2 (a) of the amendment, in the twenty-second line of this section, strike out "administrator is authorized and empowered to direct and require the", and in line 24 strike out the word "to" and insert "shall"; so as to make the sentence read "The Secretary of War shall install and maintain additional machinery, equipment, and facilities for the generation of electric energy at the Bonneville project when in the judgment of the administrator such additional generating facilities are desirable to meet actual or potential market requirements for such electric energy." At the end of section 11 of the amendment, strike out the period, insert a comma, and add the words "including installation of equipment and machinery for the generation of electric energy and facilities for its transmission and sale."

As so amended your committee of conference recommends that the bill do pass.

J. J. MANSFIELD,
RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
GEORGE N. SEGER,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
Managers on the part of the House.

ROYAL S. COPELAND,
CHAS. L. MCNARY,
MORRIS SHEPPARD,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT

No material changes were made in the provisions of the House bill by the Senate amendment.

The bill, as agreed to, reads as follows:

"An act to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes

"Be it enacted, etc., That for the purpose of improving navigation on the Columbia River, and for other purposes incidental thereto, the dam, locks, power plant, and appurtenant works now under construction at Bonneville, Oreg., and North Bonneville, Wash. (hereinafter called Bonneville project), shall be completed, maintained, and operated under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, subject to the provisions of this act relating to the powers and duties of the Bonneville power administrator provided for in section 2 (a) (hereinafter called the administrator) respecting the transmission and sale of electric energy generated at said project. The Secretary of War shall provide, construct, operate, maintain, and improve at Bonneville project such machinery, equipment, and facilities for the generation of electric energy as the administrator may deem necessary to develop such electric energy as rapidly as markets may be found therefor. The electric energy thus generated and not required for the operation of the dam and locks at such project and the navigation facilities employed in connection therewith shall be delivered to the administrator, for disposition as provided in this act.

SEC. 2. (a) The electric energy generated in the operation of the said Bonneville project shall be disposed of by the said administrator as hereinafter provided. The administrator shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior; shall be responsible to said Secretary of the Interior; shall receive a salary at the rate of $10,000 per year; and shall maintain his principal office at a place selected by him in the vicinity of the Bonneville project. The administrator shall, as hereinafter provided, make all arrangements for the sale and disposition of electric energy generated at Bonneville project not required for the operation of the dam and locks at such project and the navigation facilities employed in connection therewith. He shall act in consultation with an advisory board composed of a representative designated by the Secretary of War, a representative designated by the Secretary of the Interior, a representative designated by the Federal Power Commission, and a representative designated by the Secretary of Agriculture. The form of administration herein established for the Bonneville project is intended to be provisional pending the establishment of a permanent administration for Bonneville and other projects in the Columbia River Basin. The Secretary of War shall install and maintain additional machinery, equipment, and facilities for the generation of electric energy at the Bonneville project when in the judgment of the administrator such additional generating facilities are desirable to meet actual or potential market requirements for such electric energy. The Secretary of War shall schedule the operations of the several electrical generating units and appurtenant equipment of the Bonneville project in accordance with the requirements of the administrator. The Secretary of War shall provide and maintain for the use of the administrator at said Bonneville project adequate station space and equipment, including such switches, switchboards, instruments, and dispatching facilities as may be required by the administrator for proper reception, handling, and dispatching of the electric energy produced at the said project, together with transformers and other equipment required by the administrator for the transmission of such energy from that place at suitable voltage to the markets which the administrator desires to serve.

"(b) In order to encourage the widest possible use of all electric energy that can be generated and marketed and to provide reasonable outlets therefor, and to prevent the monopolization thereof by limited groups, the administrator is authorized and directed to provide, construct, operate, maintain, and improve such electric transmission lines and substations, and facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, as he finds necessary, desirable, or appropriate for the purpose of transmitting electric energy, available for sale, from the Bonneville project to existing and potential markets, and, for the purpose of interchange of electric energy, to interconnect the Bonneville project with other Federal projects and publicly owned power systems now or hereafter constructed.

"(c) The administrator is authorized, in the name of the United States, to acquire, by purchase, lease, condemnation, or donation, such real and personal property, or any interest therein, including lands, easements, rights-of-way, franchises, electric transmission lines, substations, and facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, as the administrator finds necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this act. Title to all property and property rights acquired by the administrator shall be taken in the name of the United States.

"(d) The administrator shall have power to acquire any property or property rights, including patent rights, which in his opinion are necessary to carry out the purposes of this act, by the exercise of the right of eminent domain and to institute condemnation proceedings therefor in the same manner as is provided by law for the condemnation of real estate.

"(e) The administrator is authorized, in the name of the United States, to sell, lease, or otherwise dispose of such personal property as in his judgment is not required for the purposes of this act and such real property and interests in land acquired in connection with construction or operation of electric transmission lines or substations as in his judgment are not required for the purposes of this act: Provided, however, That before the sale, lease, or disposition of real property or transmission lines, as herein provided, the administrator shall secure the approval of the President of the United States.

"(f) Subject to the provisions of this act, the administrator is authorized, in the name of the United States, to negotiate and enter into such contracts, agreements, and arrangements as he shall find necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this act.

"SEC. 3. As employed in this act, the term 'public body', or 'public bodies', means States, public power districts, counties, and municipalities, including agencies or subdivisions of any thereof.

"As employed in this act, the term 'cooperative', or 'cooperatives', means any form of non-profit-making organization or organizations of citizens supplying, or which may be created to supply, members with any kind of goods, commodities, or services, as nearly as possible at cost.

"SEC. 4. (a) In order to insure that the facilities for the generation of electric energy at the Bonneville project shall be operated for the benefit of the general public, and particularly of domestic and rural consumers, the administrator shall at all times, in disposing of electric energy generated at said project, give preference and priority to public bodies and cooperatives.

"(b) To preserve and protect the preferential rights and priorities of public bodies and cooperatives as provided in section (a) and to effectuate the intent and purpose of this act that at all times up to January 1, 1941, there shall be available for sale to public bodies and cooperatives not less than 50 percent of the electric energy produced at the Bonneville project, it shall be the duty of the administrator in making contracts for the sale of such energy to so arrange such contracts as to make such 50 percent of such energy available to said public bodies and cooperatives until January 1, 1941: Provided, That the electric energy so reserved for but not actually purchased by and delivered to such public bodies and cooperatives prior to January 1, 1941, may be disposed of temporarily so long as such temporary disposition will not interfere with the purchase by and delivery to such public bodies and cooperatives at any time prior to January 1, 1941: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to limit or impair the preferential and priority rights of such public bodies or cooperatives after January 1, 1941; and in the event that after such date there shall be conflicting or competing applications for an allocation of electric energy between any public body or cooperative on the one hand and a private agency of any character on the other, the application of such public body or cooperative shall be granted.

"(c) An application by any public body or cooperative for an allocation of electric energy shall not be denied, or another application competing or in conflict therewith be granted, to any private corporation, company, agency, or person, on the ground that any proposed bond or other security issue of any such public body or cooperative, the sale of which is necessary to enable such prospective purchaser to enter into the public business of selling and distributing the electric energy proposed to be purchased, has not been authorized or marketed, until after a reasonable time, to be determined by the administrator, has been afforded such public body or cooperative to have such bond or other security issue authorized or marketed.

"(d) It is declared to be the policy of the Congress, as expressed in this act, to preserve the said preferential status of the public bodies and cooperatives herein referred to, and to give to the people of the States within economic transmission distance of the Bonneville project reasonable opportunity and time to hold any election or elections or take any action necessary to create such public bodies and cooperatives as the laws of such States authorize and permit, and to afford such public bodies or cooperatives reasonable time and opportunity to take any action necessary to authorize the issuance of bonds or to arrange other financing necessary to construct or acquire necessary and desirable electric distribution facilities, and in all other respects legally to become qualified purchasers and distributors of electric energy available under this act.

"SEC. 5. (a) Subject to the provisions of this act and to such rate schedules as the Federal Power Commission may approve, as hereinafter provided, the administrator shall negotiate and enter into contracts for the sale at wholesale of electric energy, either for resale or direct consumption, to public bodies and cooperatives and to private agencies and persons. Contracts for the sale of electric energy to any private person or agency other than a privately owned public utility engaged in selling electric energy to the general public, shall contain a provision forbidding such private purchaser to resell any of such electric energy so purchased to any private utility or agency engaged in the sale of electric energy to the general public, and requiring the immediate canceling of such contract of sale in the event of violation of such provision. Contracts entered into under this subsection shall be binding in accordance with the terms thereof and shall be effective for such period or periods, including renewals or extensions, as may be provided therein, not exceeding in the aggregate 20 years from the respective dates of the making of such contracts. Contracts entered into under this subsection shall contain (1) such provisions as the administrator and purchaser agree upon for the equitable adjustment of rates at appropriate intervals, not less frequently than once in every 5 years, and (2) in the case of a contract with any purchaser engaged in the business of selling electric energy to the general public, the contract shall provide that the administrator may cancel such contract upon 5 years' notice in writing if, in the judgment of the administrator, any part of the electric energy purchased under such contract is likely to be needed to satisfy the requirements of the said public bodies or cooperatives referred to in this act, and that such cancelation may be with respect to all or any part of the electric energy so purchased under said contract to the end that the preferential rights and priorities accorded public bodies and cooperatives under this act shall at all times be preserved. Contracts entered into with any utility engaged in the sale of electric energy to the general public shall contain such terms and conditions, including among other things stipulations concerning resale and resale rates by any such utility, as the administrator may deem necessary, desirable, or appropriate to effectuate the purposes of this act and to insure that resale by such utility to the ultimate consumer shall be at rates which are reasonable and nondiscriminatory. Such contract shall also require such utility to keep on file in the office of the administrator a schedule of all its rates and charges to the public for electric energy and such alterations and changes therein as may be put into effect by such utility.

"(b) The administrator is authorized to enter into contracts with public or private power systems for the mutual exchange of unused excess power upon suitable exchange terms for the purpose of economical operation or of providing emergency or break-down relief.

"SEC. 6. Schedules of rates and charges for electric energy produced at the Bonneville project and sold to purchasers as in this act provided shall be prepared by the administrator and become effective upon confirmation and approval thereof by the Federal Power Commission. Subject to confirmation and approval by the Federal Power Commission, such rate schedules may be modified from time to time by the administrator, and shall be fixed and established with a view to encouraging the widest possible diversified use of electric energy. The said rate schedules may provide for uniform rates or rates uniform throughout prescribed transmission areas in order to extend the benefits of an integrated transmission system and encourage the equitable distribution of the electric energy developed at the Bonneville project.

"SEC. 7. It is the intent of Congress that rate schedules for the sale of electric energy which is or may be generated at the Bonneville project in excess of the amount required for operating the dam, locks, and appurtenant works at said project shall be determined with due regard to and predicated upon the fact that such electric energy is developed from water power created as an incident to the construction of the dam in the Columbia River at the Bonneville project for the purposes set forth in section 1 of this act. Rate schedules shall be drawn having regard to the recovery (upon the basis of the application of such rate schedules to the capacity of the electric facilities of Bonneville project) of the cost of producing and transmitting such electric energy, including the amortization of the capital investment over a reasonable period of years. Rate schedules shall be based upon an allocation of costs made by the Federal Power Commission. In computing the cost of electric energy developed from water power created as an incident to and a byproduct of the construction of the Bonneville project, the Federal Power Commission may allocate to the costs of electric facilities such a share of the cost of facilities having joint value for the production of electric energy and other purposes as the power development may fairly bear as compared with such other purposes.

"SEC. 8. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all purchases and contracts made by the administrator or the Secretary of War for supplies or for services, except for personal services, shall be made after advertising, in such manner and at such times, sufficiently in advance of opening bids, as the administrator or Secretary of War, as the case may be, shall determine to be adequate to insure notice and opportunity for competition. Such advertisement shall not be required, however, when (1) an emergency requires immediate delivery of the supplies or performance of the services; or (2) repair parts, accessories, supplemental equipment, or services are required for supplies or services previously furnished or contracted for; or (3) the aggregate amount involved in any purchase of supplies or procurement of services does not exceed $500; in which case such purchases of supplies or procurement of services may be made in the open market in the manner common among businessmen. In comparing bids and in making awards, the administrator or the Secretary of War, as the case may be, may consider such factors as relative quality and adaptability of supplies or services, the bidder's financial responsibility, skill, experience, record of integrity in dealing, and ability to furnish repairs and maintenance services, the time of delivery or performance offered, and whether the bidder has complied with the specifications.

"SEC. 9. (a) The administrator, subject to the requirements of the Federal Water Power Act, shall keep complete and accurate accounts of operations, including all funds expended and received in connection with transmission and sale of electric energy generated at the Bonneville project.

"(b) The administrator may make such expenditures for offices, vehicles, furnishings, equipment, supplies, and books; for attendance at meetings; and for such other facilities and services as he may find necessary for the proper administration of this Act.

"(c) In December of each year, the administrator shall file with the Congress, through the Secretary of the Interior, a financial statement and a complete report as to the transmission and sale of electric energy generated at the Bonneville project during the preceding governmental fiscal year.

"SEC. 10. The administrator, the Secretary of War, and the Federal Power Commission, respectively, shall appoint such attorneys, engineers, and other experts as may be necessary for carrying out the functions entrusted to them under this Act, without regard to the provisions of the civil-service laws and shall fix the compensation of each of such attorneys, engineers, and other experts at not to exceed $7,500 per annum; and they may, subject to the civil-service laws, appoint such other officers and employees as may be necessary to carry out such functions and fix their salaries in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923 as amended.

"SEC. 11. All receipts from transmission and sale of electric energy generated at the Bonneville project shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of miscellaneous receipts, save and except that the Treasury shall set up and maintain from such receipts a continuing fund of $500,000, to the credit of the administrator and subject to check by him, to defray emergency expenses and to insure continuous operation. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated from time to time, out of moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act, including installation of equipment and machinery for the generation of electric energy and facilities for its transmission and sale.

"SEC. 12. The Administrator may, in the name of the United States, under the supervision of the Attorney General, bring such suits at law or in equity as in his judgment may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this Act; and he shall be represented in the prosecution and defense of all litigation affecting the status or operation of Bonneville project by the United States attorneys for the districts, respectively, in which such litigation may arise, or by such attorney or attorneys as the Attorney General may designate as authorized by law, in conjunction with the regularly employed attorneys of the Administrator.

"SEC. 13. If any provision of this Act or the application of such provision to any person or circumstance shall be held invalid, the remainder of the Act and the application of such provision to persons or circumstances other than those as to which it is held invalid shall not be affected thereby."

J. J. MANSFIELD,
RENÉ L. DEROUEN,
GEORGE N. SEGER,
ALBERT E. CARTER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. MANSFIED. Mr. Speaker, the so-called Bonneville project bill has been under consideration by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors for many months. It involved a great many controversies that seemed to be almost incapable of being reconciled. We finally whipped it into such shape that it passed the House and went to the Senate. The Senate, after their controversies were ironed out over there, finally ratified the bill and passed it substantially as it was passed in the House. In the conference with the Senate conferees we have agreed unanimously to two clarifying amendments, which do not alter or change the sense or purport of the bill in any way.

Unless there are some questions that some Member desires to ask, I shall not detain you any longer.

I move the adoption of the conference report, Mr. Speaker, and on that I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

BONNEVILLE IS ALSO A STATE OF WASHINGTON PROJECT

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, the Bonneville Dam project on the Columbia River in the Pacific Northwest is as much a State of Washington as it is an Oregon project. I have for 5 years, and particularly during the past year, put forth my every effort to make it a two-State project instead of allowing Portland and Oregon to "bottle it up" for their own aggrandizement to serve the proposed plant of the Bohn Aluminum & Brass Co., which Portland interests have sought to have located in their city and thereby monopolize the electric-power output of the Bonneville Dam. My position is confirmed by the statement which appears in the impartial and nonpartisan report on the Bonneville project contained in Power in the State of Washington, A Survey of Power, Irrigation, and Conservation, and Their Relationship to the Public Interest, by Herebert A. Resner; published by W. P. A., State of Washington, on pages 40–42 thereof, reading as follows:

> However, the real difficulty in the economic distribution of Bonneville power is the fact that Oregon, and especially Portland, is suffering under the delusion that the Bonneville plant is for their exclusive advantage, and that Washington is uncommonly brazen in harboring the idea that they, too, should benefit by this development.

However, this selfish attempt is defeated by the bill which has just passed the Senate, and which conforms in every important detail with the House bill, for in it preferential rights to the local communities, farm cooperatives, and public-utility districts are securely provided for the same as in the House bill. We have saved Bonneville for the people. Those citizens who are interested in the history of the Bonneville legislation in Congress this year should read the hearings held before the Committee on Rivers and Harbors of the House of Representatives, on which I hold membership, consisting of over 500 pages of printed matter, as a result of which the law for the administration of Bonneville was formulated.

The Senate bill as amended also locates the Bonneville project at North Bonneville, Wash., as well as Bonneville, Oreg., and restores the language of the House bill which had been stricken from the Senate bill as substituted by the Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] by unanimous consent. I append hereto the correspondence relating to this important proviso.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C., August 9, 1937.

Hon. HOMER T. BONE,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In the proceedings of the Senate, as published Friday, August 6, in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, I note on pages 8390–8392 that under unanimous consent Senator MCNARY substituted the text of the Senate bill on the Bonneville project for the text of the measure passed by the House, and that in the Senate bill the project is designated as being located at Bonneville, Oreg.

I would call your attention to the action which I took in the House, as a result of which the House bill shows the project as also located at North Bonneville, Wash. This important fact—that the dam structure is in the State of Washington as well as in Oregon, and the added fact that the main trunk transmission line will be in the State of Washington, resulted in the House phraseology being approved by the Army Engineers, the Federal Power Policy Committee, and other agencies directly interested in the legislation.

This, of course, is of the utmost importance to the residents of Skamania County and all southwest Washington, and I hope you and Senator SCHWELLENBACH will submit an amendment in the Senate bringing the State of Washington into the Bonneville legislative picture.

With cordial personal regards, I am,
Sincerely yours,

MARTIN F. SMITH.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, March 9, 1937.

Hon. MARTIN F. SMITH,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SMITH: I am in receipt of your letter of March 4, in which you suggest a minor change in the amendment to the bill H. R. 4948, to provide for the sale of power from Bonneville Dam, this amendment being the insertion of the words "North Bonneville, Wash.", after "Bonneville, Oreg.", in section 1.

I can perceive no objection to the correction indicated.

Very truly yours,

E. M. MARKHAM,
Major General, Chief of Engineers.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., March 4, 1937.

Maj. Gen. E. M. MARKHAM,
Chief, United States Army Engineers,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR GENERAL MARKHAM: I am very pleased to acknowledge receipt of your letter of even date enclosing suggested amendments to my bill, H. R. 4948.

I appreciate having this expression from you and am glad to assure you I shall support the amendments vigorously. They are in line with the statements I made before the President's power committee.

I have taken the liberty of making one slight change, which, you will realize, is very important to my southwest Washington district. In section 1 I have inserted the words "North Bonneville, Wash.", after "Bonneville, Oreg." In other words, General Markham, my constituents feel the Washington side of the project should receive equal consideration with the portion on the Oregon side of the Columbia; it is a two-State project. I am sure you will understand and agree with this view.

With cordial personal regards, I am,
Sincerely yours,

MARTIN F. SMITH.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, March 4, 1937.

Hon. MARTIN F. SMITH,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SMITH: I am enclosing herewith, for your consideration, a copy of H. R. 4948, with suggested amendments, which would change the provisions of sections 1 and 2 (a). The original bill provides for the operation and maintenance of the dam and power-house by the Columbia River administrator and for the operation of the locks by the War Department. The purport of the amendment is to provide for the operation and maintenance of the dam and power-house, as well as the locks, by the War Department.

It is the view of this Department that the Bonneville structures, being primarily for navigation, should remain under the jurisdiction of the War Department. The power generated at the dam would be turned over to the Columbia River administrator at a switchboard in or near the power-house for distribution. The amended legislation would avoid any duplication of responsibility and effort and vest the responsibility for the structures in a single agency of the Federal Government. It would not affect any of the remaining provisions in the bill.

The proposed amendments have been discussed with and approved by the President. I know that they will receive your careful consideration.

Very truly yours,

E. M. MARKHAM,
Major General, Chief of Engineers.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., March 4, 1937.

Hon. JOSEPH J. MANSFIELD, M. C.,
Chairman, Committee on Rivers and Harbors,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: In accordance with our telephone conversation this afternoon, I am enclosing herewith the amendments as suggested by Maj. Gen. E. M. Markham, Chief of United States Army Engineers. I am also handing you the letter of transmittal from General Markham.

With cordial regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,

MARTIN F. SMITH.

RELIEF TO WATER USERS ON RECLAMATION PROJECTS

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I call up House Resolution 305.

The Clerk read as follows:

House Resolution 305

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of S. 413, an act to create a commission and to extend further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian irrigation projects. That after general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the same to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. Speaker, this is a rule for the consideration of a bill the title of which discloses its purpose: To create a commission to study what relief is needed by water users on irrigation and reclamation projects. The members of the committee will explain the bill in detail.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, for a number of years the House has been troubled by annual demands for moratoria on reclamation charges. Unquestionably, some have had payments deferred who could easily pay the Government charge. This year there has been some advance, at least, over what was proposed in other years.

The suggestion has been made that the problem be thrashed out by a commission which will be authorized to grant leniency where needed. The Senate bill provides the moratorium would not extend beyond 50 percent. The House, I repeat, would determine by commission who will have their payments deferred. The commission might give 100 percent moratorium to some and none to others. Which is in the best interest of the Treasury I am not in a position to determine. Either plan, however, is some progress.

What I seriously object to is the establishment of a commission of three in order to determine the leniency. It strikes me in the Bureau of Reclamation there must be three men qualified to deal with this problem, qualified to say which reclamation project is able to pay this year and which is in distress. It is not a very difficult matter to determine as the data are easily available. It ought not to cost the Government $50,000, as provided in the bill, or even $30,000, which I understand the committee is willing to accept. The proposal creates another commission which is absolutely unnecessary, because, after all, this commission would be named by the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, and it will not act different from the recommendation of those who supervise the reclamation work. It is simply throwing away $50,000 in salaries which might better be devoted for the relief of some deserving project.

I shall not oppose the rule, because I believe some legislation is necessary, but I think that we ought to consider it carefully, and I do not think we should create another commission. We are piling up too many new commissions with vast armies of employees.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts reserves the balance of his time.

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill to continue the policy of moratoria upon payments by those who live on reclamation projects, but it is a bad bill. It provides a way of determining the amount of the moratorium and the places where the moratorium shall take effect, but instead of providing a commission that might be impartial, that might have an opportunity to pass on the question fairly, that might be expected to treat the Government of the United States fairly, it sets up as qualification for membership on the commission that only those who are occupants of and farmers in these reclamation districts are eligible to be appointed on this commission. That makes a packed jury.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I think the gentleman is in error when he states that the members of this commission can only be occupants of the reclamation district.

Mr. TABER. I said that the qualification set up was such that they must be.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. No.

Mr. TABER. In line 7 of page 4 this language appears:

All of whom shall have an intimate knowledge of irrigation farming.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Yes.

Mr. TABER. No one has that knowledge save those who are actually on the job in these irrigation districts.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. If the gentleman will yield further, the idea is to appoint men who are not in the reclamation district but men familiar with conditions and who have some intimate knowledge of farming.

Mr. TABER. Are there any people who have an intimate knowledge of farming on reclamation districts except those who are actually financially interested in it?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Oh, yes, hundreds; as a matter of fact, thousands.

Mr. TABER. The gentleman means those who have retired?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. No; men who are not living in reclamation districts but who have an intimate knowledge of farming and irrigation districts.

Mr. TABER. How would they get their knowledge?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. There are hundreds of men who live on privately irrigated land possibly adjoining reclamation projects or near reclamation districts.

Mr. TABER. They would be prejudiced jurors just the same as the other group.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. No. They may be prejudiced, it is true, but they would be prejudiced against the reclamation project itself. They are not interested in the reclamation project. They would be farmers who are interested in irrigation but are not interested in reclamation projects.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Would the gentleman be willing to accept an amendment to this effect? The gentleman has stated his object is to get men who know irrigation farming but who are not interested in the project. Would he object to an amendment in line 10 to this effect: After saying who shall be appointed and so on, providing that they shall not have any financial interest in the matter referred to.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I may say that very matter was considered in the committee and was proposed. The Director of the Bureau of Reclamation said that he considered that would be unnecessary, because they would see to it that the people who were appointed had no financial interest at all in the reclamation project.

Mr. TABER. Would it not be a good idea for the Congress to set up requirements that would protect the Government under such circumstances?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. As far as I am concerned, I have no objection, unless some of the other Members of the committee have.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Suppose, then, in line 10, after the word "Interior", we strike out the period, insert a comma and provide "and shall have no financial interest in the matters referred to it."

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. That is satisfactory as far as the committee is concerned.

Mr. FERGUSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. FERGUSON. That subject was discussed in committee. Where those men are available, it would be all right; but this bill does not propose to reduce the capital obligation. The financial interest of the Government cannot be decreased. It is only the amount of annual payment that may be regulated by this Commission.

Mr. TABER. That does not necessarily follow, because if a lienor postpones the payment of the claim, oftentimes the continued accrual and the failure to collect results in a failure ultimately to collect it.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman 2 additional minutes.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I want to call attention to a fact which appears on page 3 of the report in the letter from the Assistant Secretary of the Interior, at the bottom of the page:

> At the end of the fiscal year 1936 there had been expended approximately $245,000,000 upon reclamation projects in which $45,400,000 had been repaid by water users. The revolving feature of the fund has been seriously retarded, and there are projects where water has been available for 29 years and only six annual installments have been paid.

I call attention to the fact that the failure of these water users to meet their payments has become a source of embarrassment to the Government. If we are going to continue with this policy of irrigation, we should at least continue it in a way that the installments required to be paid shall be met. Moratoriums along the lines granted heretofore have not been satisfactory.

I hope when the House comes to consider this bill in Committee of the Whole the bill will be amended so that we will have an end to a great many of these delays in making payment, and that wherever there is ability on the part of these people to pay, and wherever their rights are worth in the market what they owe, payments will be required and the situation described by the Assistant Secretary of the Interior will cease.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON].

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I intended on Tuesday to talk for 5 minutes about the Interior appropriation bill and the fact that the President had signed it reluctantly. I also desired to call attention to some things in it of great importance that he did not touch on in his statement to the press. Some other things have come about in the last few days that make it necessary that I say a little concerning other things.

I failed yesterday in an effort to be funny. I had the delusion for a minute that possibly I could be, but I failed miserably.

Mr. Speaker, I am a little chagrined at my good friend from Chicago, the senior Member of this House, because of the fact that when he had the chance last night to correct his own wrong words that he put in my mouth he did not do it. I did not say the things he said I stated, and he did not correct them when his attention was called to the matter last night. The RECORD shows exactly what I said. They objected to it being changed. I could not delete it even on my own request. The RECORD shows that I challenged JOHN O'CONNOR's courage being equal to HATTON SUMNERS'. Then I said to HATTON SUMNERS, "You are just an American, but JOHN O'CONNOR is an Irishman." I did not say he was only an Irishman. I did not say he was just an Irishman. I said he was an Irishman, for he symbolized courage. He was more than just an American.

Mr. SABATH did not take that out of his statement when he had a chance to correct it last night. The United Press and other newspapers have not corrected it, either. They have it the same way. I am not apologizing for what I said. Of course, I would not have said it if I thought it would have offended anybody, but it is not enough to offend anybody and it is not deserving of an apology.

Mr. MILLS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I cannot yield now. I will not yield in this speech.

Mr. MILLS. I want to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. On other days I shall be glad to yield, but not today.

I am serving my fifth term and am a member of the Appropriations Committee and the Labor Committee. I spend 15 hours a day in my office on the Hill. I work 100 hours a week up here. I think I am entitled to a little time. At the close of business, Tuesday, the majority leader denied me 5 minutes and promised me that perhaps I would be able to get time tomorrow. But tomorrow came and I did not get it. I apologize for the procedure I have followed today. So much for that.

When the President reluctantly signed the Interior Department appropriation bill Monday night, the tenth day, he picked out for comment just one item—vocational education. My background, I may state, is that in the subcommittee considering the Interior Department appropriation bill I moved to make the amount $10,000,000, telling the members we could save $4,000,000 and that we could hold the amount to $10,000,000. However, they did not believe me. I have no influence on the floor or in the committee, I guess. Then in the whole committee I made the motion again, and told the members of the committee we could save $4,000,000 if we would make the amount $10,000,000, and that we could hold it to $10,000,000 on the floor. However, they would not believe me. They brought the bill on the floor and got whipped, the proposal got whipped on the floor in the Senate, and the amount was made $14,000,000. Ten million dollars would have done the job, but they would not listen to me. This is my background.

The difference between what would have been appropriated normally and what was finally appropriated involves not more than from $6,000,000 to $8,000,000. However, there are tremendous sums appropriated in this Interior Department appropriation bill which the President did not mention. I have a strong hunch that the Budget asked the President to veto the bill. Mr. McIntyre would not tell me so. I tried to get him to tell me that yesterday, but he would not do it. I think the Budget wanted the President to veto the bill. I wish the President had vetoed the bill in the interest of economy on account of the things which were put over on us in the Interior bill on the floor of the House. This $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 out of the large amount involved in the bill is all that disturbed the President and made him reluctant to sign the Interior Department appropriation bill.

I want to refer to seven things in this bill. First, the Natchez Trace, which was born as an illegitimate child out of emergency funds, and then authorized a year after it was born. This will cost us $23,000,000.

The Skyline Drive, which will cost $34,000,000 when it is completed, got its first real money last year. The Natchez Trace got its first real money this year.

The Big Thompson, which is going to cost us $43,000,000, was given an appropriation of $900,000, but it has not yet even been authorized by the Congress.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. No; I cannot yield. The bill is pending, and the gentleman knows it. The project has not yet been authorized by Congress. We appropriated $900,000 for the Big Thompson, but the President does not even mention it as one of the things which made him reluctant to sign the bill. I would mention this item if I were reluctant about signing the Interior Department appropriation bill. The Big Thompson project got the votes of the Members seeking appropriations for the Natchez Trace, the Skyline Drive, the Grand Coulee, the Central Valley project, the Gila project, and the Casper-Alcova project. These boys had one grand "pork barrel". These appropriations went through the House in the Interior Department appropriation bill and the Government was pledged to spend ultimately $23,000,000, $34,000,000, $43,000,000, $186,000,000, $80,000,000, $20,000,000, and $170,000,000. These seven things, besides a number of other matters in the Interior bill, did not attract the attention of the President at all. The President concentrated all of his reluctance on the little item of vocational education, whose benefits extend into the rural districts. In my district, which is rural, we have 36 schools which have vocational education. Nine schools were ready to receive it, just like the others, and they should have it just as well as the others. This item the President objected to had been authorized, the entire $14,000,000, but he complained about the appropriation for it. The Big Thompson, which is going to cost us $43,000,000 at least, has not yet been authorized, but the President did not say a word about it. It is the inconsistency of the thing I want to mention.

I may say to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. O'BRIEN], or anybody else, that you cannot hurt me by keeping me off the floor. I am not a wet nurse to any baby project before Congress. I have no projects I must look after. Thank God, I am a free moral agent here. I am here to try to help save money, and I am going to stick with the President of the United States and help him when he is consistent and wants to do that. However, he has been terribly inconsistent on this Interior Department appropriation bill, for one. I am just pointing these things out to you.

Here are the seven big propositions:

Casper-Alcova got $7,000,000 from the President to start it, $5,000,000 more from Emergency Relief, and in 1937 for the first time it got $1,000,000 from the reclamation fund, plus $650,000 for 1938. These figures are from the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. GREEVER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a correction?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I cannot yield.

Mr. GREEVER. The gentleman has made a mistake.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I got these figures from the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. GREEVER. Then the gentleman got them wrong.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. If I am wrong then they are wrong. These are the exact figures from the committee.

The emergency fund started the Gila project with $1,800,000. This project received from the reclamation fund last year, $1,250,000; and this year, $700,000. The findings of feasibility have been made which authorize the continuation of the construction of this project with appropriations from the reclamation fund.

The Grand Coulee Dam had a kind of a subrosa authorization in the River and Harbor Act, but it got its birth through $15,000,000 given to it from emergency funds by the President of the United States. This is the way it was born. Later, $19,800,000 was allotted from emergency relief.

The economic survey of $250,000 last year, $20,750,000 for 1937 and $13,000,000 from the reclamation-fund appropriation for 1938.

The Central Valley of California, from emergency relief, $4,500,000 to start it; and in 1937, $6,900,000 from general fund; and in 1938, this year, from same source, $12,500,000, not specifically authorized by Congress, but eligible for appropriations as work in progress.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman from Kansas 5 additional minutes.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. The Big Thompson is a brand new proposition that never would have been passed in this House except for the "pork barrel" vote of the Natchez Trace and the Skyline Drive and the Grand Coulee and the Gila and the Central Valley. It would never have got to first base, and it is not authoized yet. It was the grandest "pork barrel" we ever had put over in this House.

Mr. CUMMINGS rose.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I cannot yield.

Mr. CUMMINGS. The gentleman looked squarely at me.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I cannot yield.

The Big Thompson got $150,000 from Public Works for survey, and then in the 1938 bill we give it $900,000 from the Reclamation Act, and it is a brand new proposition that is not yet authorized.

This is the way we do business in this Government.

Then the Natchez Trace was allotted from emergency funds $1,475,185, and this year we gave it its first appropriation of $1,500,000, and it was authorized after it was born.

The Blue Ridge Parkway or the Skyline Drive was allocated from emergency funds $6,818,400, and this year we gave it an appropiration of $4,500,000, the first appropriation that it has had, and starting the innovation of building 100-percent highways out of Federal funds. It was started without any authorization, from emergency funds.

These seven items I have picked out of the appropriation bill as matters that did not attract the President's attention at all, but he was responsible for all these allotments, and then he picked out the little, lowly, humble country schoolboy who is going to be benefited by the addition of $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 to the appropriation for vocational education, and that represents all of his reluctance regarding the Interior appropriation bill.

I might talk about our St. Louis proposition, and I am almost persuaded to do so because the gentleman [Mr. COCHRAN] interrupted a little while ago and said that I asked frequently for a minute to address the House and then somebody furnished me a lot of dope about the matter. I never had the matter brought to my attention until this winter, when it came before our subcommittee on the Interior Department bill. Here we have a matter that he fostered, that he was a wet nurse to, creating a commission and promising on the 8th of June, 1935, twelve times that we would never have to spend a dollar for it, and yet we are obligated for $22,000,000 for sure, with the President giving them six and two-thirds millions; and we have strong evidence that in order to meet their 1-to-4 agreement between the mayor of St. Louis and the President of the United States, they, St. Louis, stole a bond election. We have strong intimation that they stole the bond election and we cannot get them to open their ballot boxes to prove or disprove it. It would then fall of its own weight. What stirred me up was that the President should feel reluctant about signing the Interior bill and yet he let hundreds of millions of dollars go by and hopped on to the little item of vocational education for seven or eight million dollars and that was all the reluctance he felt about this big bill. I want to be consistent. I want to go along with him if he is for economy. It is not the kind of economy I am advocating which comes from the big taxpayers or from any other sources. I think it is about time, when we are spending more every day than we are receiving, that the leaders of our strong committees over here should take a different course with respect to "pork barrels" and nursing these various propositions. They are in positions of leadership, but they are handicapped, and I say that JOHN COCHRAN has hurt himself 50 percent in bringing about any reorganization for economy when he has fostered this St. Louis proposition which has no appeal to anybody because nobody ever defends it. Have you heard anybody defend it on this floor?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. No; I cannot yield. The St. Louis Jefferson Memorial will be here next year for its first direct appropriation.

I have made nine different speeches on the proposition, full of facts, but nobody answers me, and I am going to promise you that until this matter is investigated, as long as I stay here, there is going to be a speech about it in the RECORD every week. [Applause.]

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN].

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, made earlier in the day.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERGUSON].

Mr. FERGUSON. Mr. Speaker, I am inclined to agree with the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON] about the devious methods of authorizing irrigation projects. They certainly should come out of a committee, but I certainly heartily disagree with him that because they were not authorized in a proper manner they had no beneficial usage. Certainly irrigation or reclamation of western lands is the salvation of agriculture in this country. As a member of this committee from a State which has no irrigation projects I say to the House that the fact that the Department of the Interior is making an effort here to collect from those districts that can pay certainly is a step in the right direction, and those States that lie in the Great Plains certainly should be interested in the repayment by those projects that can pay. For years the Bureau of Reclamation has refused to recognize any irrigation or reclamation projects in a country that gets over 5 or 6 inches of rain.

When Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, or the Dakotas have asked for irrigation projects, they have been told that they are in a country that gets 20 inches of rain, and that therefore the Bureau cannot consider those reclamation projects. The series of droughts in the Great Plains country extending from Texas to Canada has certainly demonstrated the fact that the whole economy of agriculture and the whole economy of livestock raising can only continue and can only be profitable by recognition of the fact that we must have supplemental feed supplies, and the only way that we can get them is by irrigation projects. I hope this House will consider this bill a step in cleaning up the irrigation department, in making those projects pay that can pay and granting those extensions when they are fair, and I hope that the Bureau of Reclamation that sponsors this bill and this House of Representatives will recognize the fact that irrigation and supplemental feed for livestock is a solution for our economy in that great territory that extends from Texas to Canada, where our grasses have been depleted and where the drought has killed out the very thing that made it possible for us to live. Until those grasses are brought back—and attempts are being made by the Government to study that problem of regrassing—the future of the Great Plains depends on reclamation projects authorized by the Congress and a more understanding treatment of our problems by the Bureau of Reclamation.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. DICKSTEIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table, and the business of the day, I may have the privilege of addressing the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the disposition of business on the Speaker's table and the legislative program today I be permitted to address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by inserting a radio address that I broadcast yesterday afternoon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BATES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, and to include therein a tribute to my predecessor, Mr. A. Piatt Andrew.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RELIEF OF WATER USERS ON RECLAMATION AND IRRIGATION PROJECTS

Mr. HILL of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (S. 413) to create a commission and extend further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian reclamation projects.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill S. 413, with Mr. COSTELLO in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the first reading of the bill will be dispensed with.

There was no objection.

Mr. HILL of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Utah [Mr. ROBINSON].

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I shall not take up very much time. This is a very short bill, and has but one purpose, and in my opinion it is a very decided step in the right direction. For 5 years Congress has passed each year a moratorium bill relieving the payments of the settlers on reclamation projects that have been established. The result has been that all who had payments to make, or nearly all who had payments to make, deferred those payments. The purpose of these bills was not, of course, to deprive the United States Government of the ultimate payment of this money, but just to continue it for another year. This bill does away with that idea entirely, which I think is a very fine step in the right direction. The bill has been reported out unanimously, practically, from the Senate, and I think unanimously from the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of the House.

I might say this was done after very serious consideration and after quite extended hearings, because a great many of the people from the Western States who have reclamation projects in their districts felt they were entitled to the same moratorium this year that they have had each year for the past 5 years. On the other hand, the Department of the Interior, especially Mr. Page, as Director of the Bureau of Reclamation, felt it was wrong to continue this principle. In order to work out that problem it was decided to have a commission of three members appointed. These men would be experienced farmers, practical farmers, if possible, who would go onto the projects, if necessary, and take testimony, study the condition as it existed in the field, and then report back to the Congress their findings and recommendations as to which projects, if any, should be granted the privilege of deferring their payments, and how much should be deferred, and whether or not there should be any deferring of payments at all. In order to accomplish this, the committee and Mr. Page felt at the time it would cost approximately $50,000. However, in talking to him recently he has thought that by using certain help which they already have in the Bureau, without additional expense, this work can be done for $30,000, so that the committee will offer an amendment to the bill providing that the figures "$50,000" be stricken out and the figures "$30,000" inserted. So that this bill simply provides a commission of three persons be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, who shall go on to these various projects where they are requested, where they have refused to make payments or cannot make payments, study the conditions and make findings and report back to the Congress, and the Congress then shall determine whether or not they shall be granted a moratorium.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. When the gentleman said he was going to offer an amendment to reduce this from $50,000 to $30,000 I want to say he is establishing a profound precedent. We have not heard anything like that for several years. I am very glad to hear it.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I think that is the only statement I care to make, Mr. Chairman. If there are any questions which any of the Members desire to ask, I shall try to answer them.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana. Under the provisions of the bill a man with actual experience as an irrigator or a farmer is qualified to serve as one of these commissioners?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. That is correct.

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I yield.

Mr. ROMJUE. What has been the policy with the Department relative to cases of this kind heretofore, where they get in arrears in their payments?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. The Department has not any discretion in the matter except to collect the money. Congress, however, has relieved the settlers from the payment of that money for the past 5 years.

Mr. ROMJUE. How often has that been done? Annually?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Annually for 5 years.

Mr. LEAVY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I yield.

Mr. LEAVY. During the last 5 years there have been moratoria and no forced collections for either construction or maintenance costs on irrigation projects.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. That is correct.

Mr. LEAVY. And the fact is that current charges that are due are paid up 98 percent in construction and better than 99 percent in maintenance. Is that not the fact?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I think those figures are correct, as I understand it.

Mr. LEAVY. So that reclamation and irrigation, as far as repayment goes, will show a finer bookkeeping account than most any governmental undertaking?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. That is correct.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I yield.

Mr. COFFEE of Nebraska. Will this commission also be authorized to investigate the advisability of relieving certain districts of certain classifications of land, the poorer classes of land, and make it possible to relieve the districts of those classifications, and put them into a nonpaying class? Will they devote some attention to the advisability of legislation along that line?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. They will make findings on that proposition and then report their findings back to the Congress, and Congress can act on that question.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. I yield.

Mr. HOPE. With reference to the statement made by the gentleman from Washington to the effect that all current charges now due on reclamation projects are paid up to approximately 98 percent, that means, I understand, that they are paid up to within 5 years.

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. That is correct; they are not due when Congress remits them, according to my understanding.

Mr. HOPE. These charges are 5 years behind at the present time. Is not that correct?

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. That is my understanding.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CASE].

THIS IS A CONSTRUCTIVE PROPOSAL

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Mr. Chairman, I think that the gentleman from Utah has well outlined the purposes of this legislation. As he says, it comes before the House with the unanimous support of the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation. I was pleased also to have the gentleman from Ohio point out that in the proposed committee amendment that will be offered to reduce the appropriation from $50,000 to $30,000 that the committee is proposing a constructive type of legislation.

This bill has been referred to sometimes as a moratorium bill. That is, I think, a carry-over from the practice of the past few years. As a matter of fact, it represents a departure from the moratorium principle to the principles of normal financing.

It is a constructive bill, because it says, in effect, that we are getting back to normal and instead of granting a blanket moratorium that irrigation districts shall be studied and collections resumed where the occupants are in position to pay; or if their situation is such that some consideration should be given, then we should proceed upon that basis.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. HOPE. Under the present law is there any method by which the water user can pay more than the current annual charge? What I have in mind is whether there is a provision whereby in good years he can pay in advance and thus protect himself against default in future bad years.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I think that depends upon the contract of a particular district.

Mr. PIERCE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. PIERCE. That is possible. They never avail themselves of it, however; they buy cars instead; but they can do it now, as I understand.

Mr. HOPE. Does not the gentleman think that would be a very fine thing for them to do?

Mr. PIERCE. Yes; but they do not.

Mr. HOPE. But it is in the law now?

Mr. PIERCE. Yes.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Some projects have deposited money with the Bureau to make the payment for this year; others have the money in their treasury. And some others do not have the ability to pay and will need consideration. The difference between our amendment and the Senate bill is that the Senate bill grants a 50-percent moratorium to all concerned, whereas the House proposal will grant extensions only to those who need them.

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. ROMJUE. Does the gentleman anticipate that this legislation is one step in a move to create a sentiment to cancel some of these obligations?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I may say to the gentleman from Missouri that I am hardly in position to know what the conditions are in all the different districts. This is not a cancelation bill. This bill is different from some relief legislation already passed in this and other sessions. For instance, we reduced the interest rate on farm mortgages from the Federal land bank to 3½ percent. As the gentleman knows, we make an appropriation to the Federal land bank to make up the difference between the 3½ percent and the contract rate. This bill does not call for anything of that sort.

Mr. ROMJUE. I know, but I am just wondering whether in the end Congress will not be beseeched by some of these persons asking that these debts be canceled in the whole or in part.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Personally, I hope not, but certainly it will be a good thing to determine a proper repayment schedule for each district. I might point out that the Department particularly asks for this type of legislation as a collection measure. The Secretary points out in his report that several of the projects now have sufficient money on deposit to pay the construction installments now due; and it is for the purpose of protecting the reclamation fund that the committee is sponsoring this amendment to the Senate bill.

Mr. HOPE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield.

Mr. HOPE. As I understand, under the present law these projects all call for payments spread over a period of 40 years.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. It varies; some have 40, some 20 years.

Mr. HOPE. That was one thing about which I wanted to inquire. What has been the reason for making some of them 20 and some 40? Has consideration been given to the ability of the project to pay out over a certain length of time, or has it been more or less an arbitrary arrangement?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. You might say it has been arbitrary, because reclamation projects were set up on a given-year basis. The reason for the difference is that some were relatively high-cost projects and some developed difficulties. The time has varied to meet the supposed or demonstrated possibilities of projects, but whatever it has been the term of years has been fixed by law or by the terms of the contract with the district.

Mr. HOPE. Is it the purpose of this bill to bring about a possible readjustment of all these contracts, based upon the ability of the project to make payments on either a shorter or longer time basis than the present contracts call for?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The language of the bill indicates that.

Mr. HOPE. The gentleman understands that is one of the purposes of the bill?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Yes. The aim is to get on a sound financing basis. If the gentleman himself were lending money and giving a money service, he would probably adjust collections to conditions and would require payment according to the income of the person. If it were simply a money service, that would be his method.

In irrigation and reclamation we have something more than that. These people in the various irrigation districts have not merely borrowed so much money. They have contracted for a certain water service. They have purchased a certain amount of water. I may illustrate by saying on one project I know of the contract calls for an 18- to 24-inch duty of water in a year. Under drought conditions this particular project got only 6 inches of water last year. Obviously their crops failed and their ability to pay was destroyed through no fault of their own. If the gentleman were simply lending money to them and their ability was so impaired, he would adjust the collections somewhat according to their ability. In this instance they are not getting what they are paying for. That particular project will call for some consideration. On the other hand, those who get the full water duty and receive the proper income will be expected to pay accordingly.

Mr. HOPE. Under the present law, however, those facts cannot be taken into consideration?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. That is right. It is an inflexible situation.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. I was impressed with the gentleman's statement that this bill is a move on the part of reclamation to put all projects on a better financial basis. The gentleman made it clear, did he not, that in granting a moratorium it is not a cancelation, but merely a deferring of payment? The projects are to pay later?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. It is not a cancelation.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. This particular move is a turning away from the blanket moratorium to a more businesslike arrangement?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I think so.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. Is it not to the interest of irrigation generally, since many of the projects are now able to make their payments, to see that those payments are made? Does that not safeguard the Government and the reclamation fund?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. So the House committee felt in recommending this bill instead of the Senate bill. The Senate bill would have granted an automatic moratorium whether they were able to pay or not. It would have given them a 50-percent moratorium. The House committee felt that was not proper legislation at this time.

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona. That would be poor business, in my judgment, for the reclamation cause and a poor policy for the country. I favor showing proper but not unnecessary leniency to this great branch of American industry. I have great faith in the solvency and worth of reclamation throughout this country.

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Yes; I think the gentleman is right.

Mr. GEARHART. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. GEARHART. The suggestion was offered a moment ago that the passage of this legislation might have the effect of inducing other persons who are obligated to the Government to ask for favors to which they were not entitled. As a matter of fact, before any favors or extensions or deferments of payment are given under the terms of this bill, the district affected will have to show it is entitled to the consideration and show it is unable to pay as provided by its contract?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. Yes.

Mr. GEARHART. It would have the opposite effect to the encouragement of requests for similar legislation or similar relief from other directions?

Mr. CASE of South Dakota. The gentleman is right. In the debate on the rule I noticed somebody raised the question about the creation of a commission. They felt this might be handled by the Department. Personally, I think probably the Department could make pretty good recommendations; but the Bureau of Reclamation was hesitant about becoming autocratic in this matter, and for this reason suggested the commission idea rather than have the people concerned say that this is all being settled in Washington without a hearing. The bill provides that the commission—

> Shall proceed to the project and hold hearings, the proceedings of which shall be reduced to writing and filed with its report.

It seems to me that would carry out what the gentleman from California has in mind.

May I say, in conclusion, I think this is really constructive legislation. I hope the Committee of the Whole will recommend it to the House. It will be a step forward in putting reclamation on a better financial basis. [Applause.]

Mr. GEARHART. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. DITTER).

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, this legislation has to do with a very commendable activity on the part of the Federal Government. It is a reclamation bill by which those areas that in times past were not productive could be brought into a state of productivity. I think those who sponsor the bill have a right to be proud of their reclamation projects.

It seems to me, however, that it is significant that this reclamation bill should follow immediately another measure that we considered earlier today. That, too, might well have been classed as a reclamation project. I have in mind the conference report in which provision was made for a channel project to Jefferson Island. That is a reclamation project, too. It is a reclamation project with which I am very, very much in sympathy. Ordinarily I would have opposed the conference report because of the channel project to Jefferson Island, but prompted by a sense of brotherliness and because of my sympathy for the feelings of my brethren on the other side of the aisle, I refrained from doing so. My heart goes out to the distress and present discomfiture of my Democratic brethren.

The present administration has been noteworthy for many things. However, I believe that in history it will be recorded that this administration was primarily materially minded. Things of the spirit have had little consideration at the hands of this administration. While you have been accustomed to hear the words "more abundant life" and other phrases that might have spiritual significance, most people have come to look upon them merely as catch phrases, as the material mindedness of the administration is increasingly evident. Little if any time has been given to spiritual things.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. In just a moment.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. I would like to ask the gentleman a question right there because I think it is pertinent.

Mr. DITTER. I want to be sure that I will not lose my train of thought. I want to keep before you the difference between material and spiritual things.

I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. MURDOCK of Utah. Is it not a fact that nine-tenths of the condemnation that we get from your side of the aisle is by reason of the use of a "brain trust"?

Mr. DITTER. I am trying to pay you a compliment. There is no condemnation intended in this at all. If the gentleman will just bear with me, I think he will find my words are not only commendatory in every way but that I will compliment the party with which the gentleman is identified because of the spiritual conceptions in connection with Jefferson Island. I hope the gentleman will bear with me.

As the material-mindedness of the present administration is impressed upon us, as the complete disregard of spiritual values is so glaringly evident, it is most refreshing and gratifying to note that you have turned at last to Biblical words in the hour of your need as you seek to rechristen your haven at Jefferson Island. The conference report, inspired no doubt by your leaders, calls it "a harbor of refuge."

Jefferson Island has become a national shrine. Jefferson Island is now an institution. Jefferson Island was little known prior to a certain meeting you men had there a short time ago. It was there that the 3-day love feast was held. It was there that refractory Members of this and another body were to be wooed and won.

In view of the importance which Jefferson Island has assumed to all of you, in view of the place of endearment that it has in the hearts of my brethren on the other side of the aisle, in view of its significance in the history of the Democratic Party, it is but natural that you are eager to have the Government provide an easy passage to it. But the beautiful thing is the poetic thought which prompted you to rechristen it as "a harbor of refuge."

I hope no one will charge me with sacrilege when I think of the lines that come to me from the days of my boyhood in Sunday school:

> Other refuge have I none,
> Hangs my helpless soul on Thee.
> Leave, oh, leave me, not alone,
> Still support and comfort me.

That is a beautiful thought. After the effort that was made for the cavorting of some kindred souls at Jefferson Island, and after the large amount of refreshment that was provided, or at least which I understand was provided, in order that kindred souls might warm themselves with other things than atmosphere, it is indeed gratifying to note that your souls were stirred; that impressions of such a deep and lasting character were made as to prompt you to such a beautiful flight of poetic fancy that you want posterity to know what it meant to you by calling it "the harbor of refuge." Truly, one can realize how sorely you need a harbor of refuge for your troubled souls. Souls are being torn by anguish, not only day by day but hour by hour, by the torments with which you are faced, and now you find some place, some spot, where you can pour out your burdened souls and try to find some relief.

I commend you, and my commendation rings with sincerity as I say to you Democrats that I am happy for the spiritual change which has taken place by which they have gone back to the old Sunday-school lines in labeling this place of yours down at Jefferson Island as a harbor of refuge. Note the significance and applicability of those lines, "Leave, oh, leave me not alone." Is there a possible loneliness in your hearts? And yet again those lines, "Still support and comfort me." I am not surprised that you need comfort now and that you are concerned about support. You have certainly had a lot of support in the last few years. I have hopes for the harbor of refuge. I remember the mercy seat, for instance, about which the old evangelists talked. I do hope that to your troubled souls this Jefferson Island will be a mercy seat where you cannot only pour out in contrition the burden that weighs you down, but where, as the result of this unburdening of your souls, there may come to you peace. Oh, how you must crave solace and refuge.

It comes to my mind from the old book that there were cities of refuge in days gone by. The Bible speaks of cities of refuge. Governor PIERCE here, bless his soul, a good Democrat, nods his head in accord with my statement that there were cities of refuge. The cities of refuge were the places to which those who were distressed and persecuted might flee and find relief. Again, bless his soul, the Governor nods approval and adds his word of commendation. I am wondering whether you men want this city of refuge down there for that purpose, whether this city of refuge will be a place where you can get away from persecution, where in your distress you can flee for relief. There your conscience can be put at ease. There those of you who have shown such splendid courage, and God bless you for it, may be safe from this persecution, this recrimination, this reprisal, and from these efforts that have been binding you down, circumscribing not only your ambitions but your very hearts and souls. Surely you men of courage need a harbor of refuge; and I want to help you secure a place of safety.

It is a fine day that dawns today for your party. [Applause.] Your distressed and troubled members are to have a harbor of refuge. A new hope comes to me with respect to the future of your party. Oh, how happy I am to think that you are going to have places of refuge, where those honest souls, those courageous souls, those souls on your side who have a sense of duty, may feel safe from all recrimination and reprisal. God bless Jefferson Island as a harbor of refuge. God bless the man who conceived the idea of "the harbor of refuge." God bless the man in whose heart was the inspiration to provide a channel. Oh, I want to say a word about the channel for a minute.

Mr. PATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield while I am inspired?

Mr. DITTER. The channel down there should be a safe channel.

Mr. PATRICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield while my inspiration continues?

Mr. DITTER. I would like to get away from any of those things which would prevent a safe landing at the harbor of refuge. There should be no shoals there. There should be no rocks there. There should be nothing in that channel which might impede in any way a hasty passage, for, remember, expedition at times might be necessary. Again the lines of an old hymn come to my mind of some poor, struggling seamen seeking a safe harbor, "Let the lower lights be burning." You might want to get to your refuge in a hurry. So let us have the channel broad, let us have it deep, let us have such a channel that there will be no possible chance of anything coming in to interfere with your hasty exit from this grand city of glorious distances to that haven of safety, that harbor of refuge. I think it lacks but one thing. I wish there had been provided in addition to this harbor of refuge a boat on which you might go back and forth. I am on the Committee on Appropriations for the Navy.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. DITTER. I may be out of order, I may say to my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Oklahoma. If the gentleman wants me to close, I shall do so with a benediction now.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. DITTER. I do not yield for a parliamentary inquiry. If the gentleman wants to ask me a question, he may, but I do not yield for a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. PATRICK and Mr. ROMJUE rose.

Mr. DITTER. I yield to the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. PATRICK. If we become worse, or apparently so, or if we are too well organized, there are too many of us, and we are doing too much, and this blessed land is so properly placed, will the gentleman please tell us how we can get the services of Mr. Hamilton so as to properly and quickly disperse us?

Mr. DITTER. May I answer by saying that I know nothing about Mr. Hamilton's part in a harbor of refuge.

Mr. PATRICK. No; I know that.

Mr. DITTER. This has to do with another distinguished name, which I am not going to mention, but it seems to me the inspiration of it came from a source that might have something to do with the mails. [Laughter.] Without mentioning any names, I honor him, and I honor you. There is nothing disparaging in what I say. I stand foursquare by what I said originally—that my words are words of commendation.

I am a member of the Appropriations Committee for the Navy, and I am wondering whether or not I have not a duty put upon me to have the Navy provide the vessel for your passage. It may have to be a submarine because there may have to be stealthy passages made at times in order that expeditious transit might be completed without too much detection. I want that ship well armed, for it might be that at times missiles will be cast at it so that it would have to defend itself and the occupants aboard. So I think a submarine, well armed, would be the best way to assure you the passage. Mark you, the harbor of refuge is your coveted retreat and I want to help you reach it.

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. I yield to the distinguished gentleman.

Mr. ROMJUE. The gentleman has made a wonderful address, which we have all enjoyed.

Mr. DITTER. I appreciate the compliment. I have been encouraged to do so by the nodding of my distinguished friend, Governor PIERCE.

Mr. ROMJUE. That is the very point to which I was going to allude. The gentleman has misjudged the Governor. The gentleman had him mesmerized and the Governor had gone to sleep. [Laughter.]

Mr. DITTER. I would never charge the Governor with nodding or with talking in his sleep. The Governor is one of the most wide-awake men in the House.

Mr. ROMJUE. He was thinking of the harbor you rode into with Mr. Hoover.

Mr. DITTER. No; he was nodding because of his approval of my interest and concern to help provide for those in whom he is interested a harbor of refuge. [Applause.]

Mr. HILL of Washington. Mr. Chairman, Members on both sides of the aisle have fully exhibited the purposes of the bill and have given full and sufficient reasons for its passage, and I ask that the Clerk may read the bill for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby created a commission to be composed of three members, all of whom shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, one of whom shall be a landowner and water user under a United States reclamation project. The commission is authorized and directed to investigate the financial and economic condition of the various United States reclamation projects, with particular reference to the ability of each such project to make payments of water-right charges without undue burden on the water users, district, association, or other reclamation organization liable for such charges. Such investigation shall include an examination and consideration of any statement filed with the commission, or the Department of the Interior, by any such district, association, or other reclamation organization, or the water users thereof, and, where requested by any such district, association, or other reclamation organization, said commission shall proceed to such project and hold hearings, the proceedings of which shall be reduced to writing and filed with its report. Said commission, after having made careful investigation and study of the financial and economic condition of the various United States reclamation projects and their probable present and future ability to meet such water-right charges, shall report to the Congress, as soon as practicable, with its recommendations as to the best, most feasible, and practicable comprehensive permanent plan for such water-right payments, with due consideration for the development and carrying on of the reclamation program of the United States, and having particularly in mind the probable ability of such water users, districts, associations, or other reclamation organizations to meet such water-right charges regularly and faithfully from year to year, during periods of prosperity and good prices for agricultural products as well as during periods of decline in agricultural income and unsatisfactory conditions of agriculture.

SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $50,000, which shall be available for expenditure, as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, for expenses and all necessary disbursements, including salaries, in carrying out the provisions of this act. The commission is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such employees as may be necessary for carrying out its functions under this act without regard to civil-service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

SEC. 3. That all the provisions of the act entitled "An act to further extend relief to water users on the United States reclamation projects and on Indian irrigation projects", approved June 13, 1935, as amended and extended by the provisions of section 3 of the act entitled "An act to create a commission and to extend further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian irrigation projects", approved April 14, 1936, are hereby further extended for the period of 1 year, so far as concerns 50 percent of the construction charges, for the calendar year 1937: Provided, however, That where the construction charge for the calendar year 1937 is payable in two installments the sum hereby extended shall be the amount due as the first of such installments. If payable in one installment the due date for the 50 percent to be paid shall not be changed.

With the following committee amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That there is hereby created a commission to be composed of three members appointed by the Secretary of the Interior, all of whom shall have an intimate knowledge of irrigation farming, but who shall not be employees of the Bureau of Reclamation or the Bureau of Indian Affairs of the Department of the Interior. The commission is authorized and directed to investigate the financial, economic, and other conditions of the various United States and Indian reclamation projects, with particular reference to the ability of each such project to make payments of water-right charges without undue burden on the water users, district, association, or other reclamation organization liable for such charges. Such investigation shall include an examination and consideration of any statement filed with the commission, or the Department of the Interior, by any such district, association, or other reclamation organization, or the water users thereof, and, where deemed advisable by the commission and requested by such district, association, or other reclamation organization, said commission may proceed to such project and hold hearings, the proceedings of which shall be reduced to writing and filed with its report. Said commission, after having made careful investigation and study of the financial, economic, and other conditions of the various United States and Indian reclamation projects and their probable present and future ability to meet such water-right charges, shall report to the Congress as soon as practicable, with its recommendations as to the best, most feasible, and practicable comprehensive permanent plan for such water-right payments, with due consideration for the development and carrying on of the reclamation program of the United States, and having particularly in mind the probable ability of such water users, districts, associations, or other reclamation organizations to meet such water-right charges regularly and fully from year to year during periods of prosperity and good prices for agricultural products as well as during periods of decline in agricultural income and unsatisfactory conditions of agriculture.

"SEC. 2. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $50,000, which shall be available for expenditure, as the Secretary of the Interior may direct, for expenses and all necessary disbursements, including salaries, in carrying out the provisions of this act. The commission is authorized to appoint and fix the compensation of such employees as may be necessary for carrying out its functions under this act without regard to civil-service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended.

"SEC. 3. If upon investigation the commission shall find that a project, because of partial crop failure due to a water shortage or other causes beyond the control of the water users, is unable to make full payment of the construction charges becoming due and payable for the calendar year 1937, without great hardship or undue burden, the commission is hereby authorized to certify that fact to the Secretary, and such certification, if approved by said Secretary, shall operate to grant an extension of time for the payment of such proportion of the construction charges due for the calendar year 1937 as the commission considers just and equitable, the proportion of the charges so extended to be paid at such time as the Secretary may determine.

"SEC. 4. Sections 1 and 2 of the act approved April 14, 1936 (Public, No. 519, 74th Cong.), are hereby repealed."

Mr. ROBINSON of Utah. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment to the committee amendment offered by Mr. ROBINSON of Utah: On page 5, line 20, strike out "$50,000" and insert "$30,000."

The amendment to the committee amendment was agreed to.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. JENKINS of Ohio to the committee amendment: On page 4, line 10, strike out the period after the word "Interior" and insert a comma and the following: "and shall have no financial interest in the matters coming under their jurisdiction."

Mr. HILL of Washington. Mr. Chairman, the committee accepts the amendment to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the committee amendment was agreed to.

The committee amendment as amended was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. COSTELLO, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (S. 413) to create a commission and to extend further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian irrigation projects, pursuant to House Resolution 305, he reported the same back to the House with an amendment agreed to in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Under previous order of the House heretofore made, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. ENGEL] is recognized for 30 minutes.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, history will record the social-security law as either the most colossal success or the most colossal failure of the age. President Roosevelt sees in it the outstanding accomplishment of his administration. The opponents of the law see in it nothing but socialism and radicalism, and predict for it dismal failure. The worker sees in it security for himself and his family, and hopes it will banish poverty which he knows will come with old age. Some believe in it blindly and hope for its Utopian success; others, professing friendship, would secretly give it the "kiss of death."

To me it has meant the beginning of a law which, if perfected, will eliminate much poverty and will bring about greater economic and social justice to the worker and his family.

To eliminate the age-old specter of poverty; to make the aged independent through the payment of annuities; to provide wages during periods of unemployment; to provide for death benefits; to care for the blind and helpless; to protect the health of expectant mothers; to help sick, crippled, dependent, and delinquent children; to provide for vocational rehabilitation; to protect the public health—these and many more worth-while objectives will make this act, if successful, the most humanitarian law of the century.

I have supported social-security legislation for years. In 1921, as a member of the Michigan State Senate, I supported bills providing for old-age pensions, mothers' pensions, employees' compensation, and similar laws. It is because I want this law to succeed; it is because there is growing in my mind a haunting fear that it is being mired slowly but surely in a political bog; it is because I can visualize the bitter disappointment in the hearts of millions at its failure who look upon it as "manna from Heaven"; it is because I fear it will prove the most colossal failure when I want to see it the most colossal success of the age, that I am pointing out what I believe to be the fatal defects in its structure, hoping against hope, that those who have the power and who are responsible for its success or failure will join me in eliminating these defects and make it the outstanding humanitarian law of the age.

I shall propose a plan which I believe will take from the shoulders of the worker, taxpayer, and general public, $26,307,520,000 of the $46,641,100,000 reserve fund and $1,119,386,400 of the $3,000,000,000 required annually to pay benefits and pay these sums out of productive enterprise. I further believe my plan will strengthen instead of impair public credit and will bring about recovery in times of depression and help avoid depression in times of prosperity.

In criticizing the act, let us see first what the old-age annuity section of the Social Security Act will cost, and who will pay that cost under the present law. Who will have contributed the reserve fund of $46,641,100,000, and is that reserve fund necessary or is it as has been said, "fantastic and unnecessary and a menace to free institutions"? Can we have social security without a reserve fund? Who will pay the $3,000,000,000 annually that will be required to meet the proposed benefits in 1980 and thereafter? How will it operate in times of prosperity and in times of depression? Will it meet the test and pay benefits when pay rolls and national income are at a minimum as during the past 7 years? How would it have operated had it been passed in 1874 and in full force and effect in 1929 instead of being passed in 1935 and in full force and effect in 1980? These and many other questions should be answered now.

WHO PAYS FOR SOCIAL SECURITY UNDER THE PRESENT ACT?

The Social Security Act provides for a reserve fund by 1980 of $46,641,100,000. This fund will have been paid in as follows:

(a) Interest at 3 percent on Government bonds held by Social Security Board	$32,884,400,000
(b) 3-percent pay-roll taxes paid by employers	6,878,350,000
(c) 3-percent pay-roll taxes paid by employees	6,878,350,000
Total	46,641,100,000

The employer will add his 3-percent pay-roll tax amounting to $6,878,350,000 to the cost of production and pass it on to the consuming public. The public will also pay in taxes and increased costs the $32,848,400,000 interest charges that will have been paid on the Government bonds and which will go to make up the reserve fund. So the public will have paid directly and indirectly a total of $39,762,750,000 of the $46,641,100,000 reserve fund. The remaining $6,878,350,000 will have been paid by employees in pay-roll taxes which cannot be passed on.

The Social Security Board estimates that by 1980 we will have a population of 155,000,000 people and that 34,775,000 employees will be subject to the pay-roll taxes of the present law. There are approximately 2.5 persons for each adult who comes under the law. So approximately 87,000,000 people, or 56 percent of the total population of 1980, can be classified as beneficiaries under the act and 68,000,000 or 44 percent as nonbeneficiaries.

The nonbeneficiary class will have paid into the fund by 1980 44 percent of $6,878,350,000 or $3,026,474,000 in employers' pay-roll taxes passed on to the public, plus 44 percent of the $32,884,400,000 interest on public bonds levied as taxes, direct or indirect, or $14,469,136,000 in interest, making a total of $17,495,610,000.

The 87,000,000 people classed as beneficiaries will have paid into the reserve fund by 1980, $6,878,350,000 in pay-roll taxes which the employee cannot pass on, plus 56 percent of $6,878,350,000 or $3,851,876,000 employers' pay-roll tax which will be passed on, plus 56 percent of $32,884,400,000 interest on bonds in the reserve fund, which interest will amount to $18,415,264,000 and which will be, of course, paid by the consuming public. The beneficiary class will thus pay a total of $29,145,490,000.

First we tax the worker $6,878,350,000 in pay-roll taxes to make up the reserve fund. Then we lend that reserve fund to the Government which spends it and places its bonds into the fund. Then we tax the workers again to the tune of $18,415,264,000 to pay interest on the money that belongs to him, and to cap the climax we make him pay $3,851,876,000 more which his own employer has passed on to him in increased costs.

Forty percent of the goods produced in America are consumed by the farmer, so the farmer will pay 40 percent of the $39,762,750,000 of the public's share of the reserve fund which will have been passed on to him in taxes, direct and indirect, and in increased costs. In other words, he will contribute $15,905,100,000 toward this reserve fund so the worker may have social security for himself and family, while the farmer and his family do not come under this phase of the act and have no social security.

WHO PAYS THE ANNUAL BENEFITS UNDER THE PRESENT ACT?

On and after 1980 the beneficiaries of the Social Security Act will receive $3,000,000,000 annually in benefits. This amount will be paid into the fund as follows:

(a) The public pays through taxation or increased costs 3-percent interest on $46,641,100,000 United States bonds held by the reserve fund, amounting annually to	$1,399,233,000
(b) The public pays each year in increased costs the employers' share of the pay-roll tax amounting to	$800,383,500
The public pays annually a total of	2,199,616,500
(c) The employee pays in pay-roll taxes which he cannot pass on to the public the balance of	800,383,500
Making a total of	3,000,000,000
Or,
(d) 1. The beneficiary pays $800,383,500 in pay-roll taxes	800,383,500
Plus 56 percent of his share as a consumer of $2,199,616,500 which the public pays, or	1,231,785,240
Beneficiary pays total of	2,032,168,740
2. Nonbeneficiary will pay in increased costs and taxes 44 percent of the public's share of $2,199,616,500, or	967,831,260
Making a total of	3,000,000,000
(e) The farmer as part of public paying 40 percent of increased costs and taxes will pay annually 40 percent of the public share of $2,199,616,500, or $879,846,600 from which he receives no direct benefit.

THE VANDENBERG PROPOSAL

Among the remedies suggested was one proposed when, on the 29th of January 1937, Hon. ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG, the very able and distinguished Senator from Michigan, introduced a resolution proposing to amend the Social Security Act and place it on a pay-as-you-go basis. On March 17, 1937, Senator VANDENBERG, in discussing the law on the floor of the Senate, said:

> We submit such a reserve is unnecessary in a tax-supported system; that its ultimate accumulation of $47,000,000,000 in reserve is a positive menace to free institutions and to sound financing.

Again he said:

> There is no analogy between the need for private insurance companies for full reserves and the need of the Government system for full reserves. The former are at the mercy of fluctuating revenues. The latter is compulsory and is guaranteed a continuous flow of revenue.

The Senator advocated a repeal of the full-reserve plan and a substitution of a direct pay-as-you-go system with only a small contingent reserve. He does not state the amount of the reserve nor the ratio of the reserve to the total risk carried.

First let me correct the distinguished Senator. The Social Security Board does not propose to carry a full reserve but only a reserve of two-thirds of that which private insurance companies would be required to have were they to carry the same risk. The Vandenberg proposal is not an insurance plan. When you eliminate the reserve fund and pay as you go, it ceases to be insurance. The very word "insurance", especially when applied to life or annuity insurance, presupposes that the insured sets aside in a reserve fund part of his earnings during his younger years when his earning capacity is greatest, which money together with accumulations of interest will give protection and security to himself and his family when he reaches an age when his earning capacity is small or gone or at his death. In the case of the Social Security Act the amount paid in for the benefit of the employee is matched by the employer, and of course doubles the amount that can be paid in annuities. This part of the law is, in my judgment, sound.

Let us see where the Vandenberg plan would leave us, first in times of prosperity and second in times of depression. When the present Social Security plan is in full force and effect in 1980, it will pay annually $3,000,000,000 in benefits to its members. It will derive this amount each year from three sources—$800,383,500 from a 3-percent pay-roll tax from the employees, $800,383,500 from a 3-percent pay-roll tax from the employers, and the remainder of $1,399,233,000 from interest paid on bonds purchased with accumulated moneys in the reserve fund. The last sum would, of course, have to be raised by taxation. Just how would the proponents of the so-called pay-as-you-go plan raise this $3,000,000,000 annually?

It will require a combined 6-percent pay-roll tax to raise $1,600,767,000. The proponents certainly could not cut down the pay-roll tax. If they did, how would they replace the lost revenues? How would they raise the $1,399,233,000 annually that will be paid into the fund through interest on reserves when they have no reserve? If they would raise it by pay-roll taxes, the 6-percent combined pay-roll tax would be increased to 12 percent. If they would raise it by taxation "in a tax-supported system", as the statement seems to imply, then the two plans would be very much the same as far as this part of the fund is concerned. In each case the people would pay $1,399,233,000 additional taxes. Under the Vandenberg plan they would have nothing for their money while under the present plan they would be raising that amount to pay interest on $46,641,100,000 reserve fund, and would have the use of that fund in return for the interest paid. Under the pay-as-you-go plan, there would be, of course, no reserve fund.

The proponents of the pay-as-you-go plan, like the mutual life-insurance companies of old, would pay small pay-roll taxes now, while the majority of the members are young and under compensable age. As the years rolled by and more men were added to the annuity list, the pay-roll taxes would become higher, reaching a maximum in 1980 when the $3,000,000,000 in annual benefits will have to be paid. The pay-roll tax would then be 12 percent instead of 6 percent, unless a part of the amount necessary for benefit payments was raised from direct taxation. Let me remind the proponents of the pay-as-you-go policy without adequate reserves, of our experience in the field of mutual fraternal life insurance a few years ago.

These companies were organized on a pay-as-you-go basis without adequate reserves. The death rate was low because only young people, as a rule, joined, hence both the losses and the premiums were low. These companies levied assessments only large enough to meet current losses. Time passed. As members became older the death rate increased, and with it came larger losses and higher premiums. Some States compelled these companies to reorganize and provide for adequate reserves through increased premiums. Other companies saw the handwriting on the wall and voluntarily increased their reserve funds and of course their premiums before it was too late. A few companies went on blindly on a pay-as-you-go basis without adequate reserves. As losses became greater, premiums increased. As premiums increased new policyholders became fewer and old policyholders dropped out until the cost of carrying insurance on a pay-as-you-go basis became prohibitive. Those policyholders who, from an insurance standpoint, were unfortunate enough to live longest found they had paid insurance for those who had passed on, and suddenly learned they were without protection for themselves and their families when the carrying cost became prohibitive. This was an experience in pay-as-you-go insurance without adequate reserves we should not soon forget. The Vandenberg proposal would, I fear, operate in the same way.

Let us consider now what would happen under the pay-as-you-go policy in times of depression. Let us assume that we are in 1980, operating with full benefit payments of $3,000,000,000 annually, and a depression came along.

Let us assume further that as in the recent depression national income and national pay rolls dropped 50 percent. The other 50 percent of the employees who held their jobs and their employers would have to meet the entire $3,000,000,000 in pay-roll taxes, which would require, according to present estimates, a combined pay-roll tax of 24 percent unless supported in part by taxation. In view of the fact that during the past 7 years of depression expenditures of the Government exceeded revenues by $22,247,436,471, it would be hopeless to try to raise $1,399,323,000 annually by taxation. This amount would be required over and above the present pay-roll tax to meet benefits. The result would be that we would, as under the present plan, have to borrow this $1,399,323,000 each year, issuing Government bonds for the same or increase the pay-roll tax to 24 percent. The one definite advantage which the Vandenberg plan would have is that the Government would not be obligated to pay the $46,641,100,000 reserve fund and Government credit would, of course, be stronger.

Again, during the period of depression, the Government expenditures exceeded its revenues by $22,247,436,471, which amount the Government was compelled to borrow. During this same time 342 private life-insurance companies increased their reserves from $9,926,515,486 to $20,404,206,344, their total assets from $11,537,614,609 to $23,216,495,614, and their annual income from $3,017,800,322 to $5,072,095,267. In the face of these facts, who, may I ask, is more "at the mercy of fluctuating revenues", the Government with its "tax-supported system" and "its continuous flow of revenue", or the private insurance companies with their private sources of income? Who has the greater need for a reserve fund? The Government whose expenditures exceeded its income by more than $22,000,000,000, and who was compelled to borrow this amount or these private insurance companies who doubled their income, doubled their assets, and doubled their reserve funds?

IS A $47,000,000,000 RESERVE FUND FANTASTIC?

The Social Security Act provides for the building up of a reserve fund which will reach an estimated maximum amount of $46,641,100,000 in 1980. The able and distinguished Senator from Michigan, in a speech delivered in the Senate on March 17, 1937, said:

> The whole reserve fund ultimately becomes $47,000,000,000—the most fantastic and the most indefensible objective possible.

The Social Security Board, on the other hand, contends that this reserve fund is not fantastic; that the amount is only two-thirds of that required by law of private insurance companies, were they to carry the same risk; and that it is the minimum necessary if we are to have a sound social-security policy to protect the aged of our land. The facts seem to bear them out.

Records of 342 life-insurance companies show that on December 31, 1925, they carried a total insurance of $71,598,749,690 and a total reserve fund of $9,926,515,486. These records further show that on December 31, 1935, these same companies carried a total insurance of $102,730,415,016, an increase of 43.5 percent, and a total reserve fund of $20,404,206,344, an increase of 105.5 percent, during this 10-year period. If they were to maintain this same increase every 10 years, they would have a reserve fund in 1980 of more than $400,000,000,000 and would carry a total insurance of more than $500,000,000,000. This would be not only fantastic but unnecessary in view of the fact that the reserve fund would amount to 80 percent of the total insurance carried. However, let us take more conservative figures and assume that the total insurance and total reserve fund increased 2 percent each year, or 20 percent every 10 years. In 1980 these companies would be carrying $234,324,104,038 insurance and a reserve fund of $46,539,516,516. Since these reserves increased $10,500,000,000 during the 10-year period from December 31, 1925, to December 31, 1935, an increase of less than $27,000,000,000 during the next 45 years could not be considered unreasonable. While the $46,641,100,000 estimated reserve fund to be carried by the Social Security Board in 1980 may sound fantastic to one who has not studied the problem thoroughly, a consideration of the facts forces one to the conclusion that such a reserve fund is not fantastic, nor indefensible, but conservative, practical, and absolutely essential to a sound social-security policy.

HAS SWEDEN ABANDONED HER SOCIAL SECURITY RESERVE FUND IN FAVOR OF A PAY-AS-YOU-GO POLICY?

The statement was made at the hearing before the Senate Committee on Finance on February 26, 1937 (p. 14), that Sweden has abolished the reserve fund of her social-security system in favor of a pay-as-you-go system. The facts do not bear out that statement. In comparing the reserve fund of the Swedish social-security system with that of the United States, one must take into consideration the population of the two countries, the amount of annuities paid per person per month, and the total maximum reserve carried by each fund.

Under the Swedish plan the social-security fund will reach a maximum of 1,000,000,000 kronor by 1952. The normal exchange of the krona is 27 cents. The present rate of exchange is slightly lower. One billion kronor at the normal rate of exchange would be $270,000,000 in American money. While this may seem like a nominal reserve fund, particularly to those who have been in the habit of thinking in terms of billions, when we analyze the facts and take into consideration the difference in the population and the difference in the amount of annuities paid, we are forced to the conclusion that Sweden has not adopted a "pay as you go" basis, but actually has a substantial reserve fund. When we take into consideration the further fact that the Swedish system combines title 1 of our Social Security Act, which we call an old-age assistance plan, and in which no pay-roll taxes are levied, with title 2 or the Federal old-age benefit plan, which does levy a pay-roll tax, then we are forced to the conclusion that their reserve fund is as large or larger than ours.

The present population of Sweden is approximately 6,000,000, and it is estimated that 4,000,000, or approximately 66⅔ percent of the people, benefit under their social-security act. The last published figures issued by the Bureau of the Census on October 28, 1936, give the estimated population of the United States as 128,429,000 people. It is estimated that 56 percent, or approximately 72,000,000 people, will benefit by the United States Social Security Act. This is 18 times as many beneficiaries as come under the Swedish act. Thus if Sweden were compelled to pay 18 times as many people as they are now paying under their act, they would require a reserve fund of 18,000,000,000 kronor instead of 1,000,000,000 kronor.

Again, the monthly benefits paid under the Swedish act are very small, ranging as low as $1.62 to $3.76 per month per person, if such person has $10.36 or more per month of other income. If such person has no such other monthly income, the pension payable in Sweden ranges from $7.35 to $9.50 per month per person. It has been estimated that Sweden pays on an average of $7.50 per month per person, which, I believe, is a fair estimate. When the Social Security Act is in full force and effect, the United States will pay an average of $45 a month per person, or six times as much as Sweden. If Sweden paid an equal amount, or six times as much per person as she now pays, she would require six times 18,000,000,000 kronor, or a total of 108,000,000,000 kronor, in her reserve fund. Translated into terms of dollars and cents, at the normal rate of exchange, she would require a reserve fund of $29,160,000,000 by 1952, were she to pay as many beneficiaries and as much per month as the United States pays. This is far from a nominal reserve fund.

When you take into consideration the further fact that the Swedish plan covers both what we call title I and title II of our act, it makes our reserve fund of $46,641,100,000 look conservative.

WHAT WOULD HAVE HAPPENED HAD THE SOCIAL SECURITY ACT BEEN IN FULL FORCE AND EFFECT IN 1929?

"The proof of the pudding lies in the eating", is an old saying. Let us assume, for the sake of argument, that the present Social Security Act had been passed in 1874, instead of 1935, and that it was in full force and effect, with a full reserve fund, in 1929 when the depression came. What would have happened? The Social Security Board, according to the estimates, would have been obligated to pay the beneficiary class $3,000,000,000 annually. The Board would have expected to derive that amount as follows: One billion three hundred ninety-nine million two hundred thirty-three thousand dollars from the Government through taxation, being 3 percent interest on the reserve funds invested in Government bonds. The remaining $1,600,767,000 would have to be obtained from pay-roll taxes—one-half from the employer and one-half from the employee.

Our national income and pay rolls were reduced 50 percent. Assuming that the Government had been able to pay its share or the interest charge on the bonds, which it was not, the Social Security Board would have to place on the market each year $800,000,000 in Government bonds held by the fund, par value, to meet the deficiency in the pay-roll tax. The total receipts of the Government during the 7 fiscal years beginning June 30, 1930, and ending June 30, 1937, were $27,316,017,408, including more than $252,000,000 in pay-roll taxes under the Social Security Act. The Government disbursed during that period $49,563,453,879, and had to borrow or obtain from sources other than taxation during the 7-year period $22,247,436,471 to cover these deficits. Had the Social Security Board been operating during that time the Government would have had to borrow each year during that 7-year period $1,399,233,000, or a total of $9,794,691,000, to meet the interest charge. In other words, the Government would have gone into the depression with a public debt of $46,641,100,000 and would have had to borrow in addition $32,042,127,471 to meet this interest charge and these deficits, which would have made a total public debt of $78,683,227,471. We would have spent the $46,641,100,000 reserve fund in times of prosperity and would have been in bankruptcy and unable to raise money for relief and excess operating expenses in times of depression. If we had been able to obtain this money at 3 percent, which is doubtful, the carrying charge of this debt alone would amount to $2,360,496,624 annually. The fact is that any financing such as this would have been out of the question. The interest on Government bonds held by the Social Security Board would have defaulted and there would have been no social security. If an attempt had been made to make current bond issues more attractive by raising the interest rate, we would have depreciated the value of the 3-percent bonds held by the Social Security Board and would have had to take a loss and market more of these bonds to meet the annual deficit of $800,000,000 in pay-roll taxes.

I am not attempting to kill the Social Security Act. I am merely trying to keep it from committing suicide. It is because I believe in social security that I am pointing out these defects. I believe the friends of social security, of whom I claim to be one, ought to save it not only from destruction by its enemies but from self-destruction. Are we not forced to admit that under the present social-security system social security cannot succeed? That we cannot hope to raise $1,399,233,000 annually in taxes in addition to the regular revenues required for the Government, particularly in times of depression, ought to be self-evident. Ought not we frankly to admit that we could not have borrowed this interest money plus relief money plus deficiency in revenues during the period of the past depression had we had a national debt of $47,000,000,000 to begin with without paying exorbitant rates of interest? Should we not frankly admit that to sell bonds at an increased rate of interest would have wrought havoc with the value of the 3-percent bonds held by the Social Security Board? Why stick our heads into the sand like an ostrich while social security in America is going to certain ultimate destruction? Why not try to work out some solution of this great problem?

REMEDY

What, then, is the solution of this perplexing problem? It has been my purpose to criticize in a constructive, friendly way. One should not attempt to tear down a structure if it has some value, despite some defects, unless one is prepared to build a better one. "What would you do if you had the power?" is a fair question.

First. I would incorporate the Social Security Board, and take it, as nearly as possible, out of politics. The Social Security Board has a most difficult task, so difficult, in fact, that it cannot succeed if it is weighted down with political barnacles. I would have a staggered commission with long terms of office and provide that no President could appoint more than two members, which would be less than a majority in any one term.

Second. I would make a trust fund of all moneys paid in and provide by law and, if possible, by constitutional provision that the moneys are to be used exclusively by the Board for the benefit of the workers who paid into the fund.

Third. I would invest the reserve fund in productive instead of nonproductive enterprise. My criticism is not directed at the amount of the reserve fund, but to the method of its investment. I would divide bonds and investments into two classes. Into the first class I would place bonds issued by the Government, whether national, State, or municipal, as direct obligations where the money borrowed is used in nonproductive enterprise, such as highways, streets, parks, buildings, and so forth. While money spent in this way provides temporary employment and may for a time speed up production, in the final analysis the interest, principal, and cost of maintenance will have to be raised by taxation, as the investment in itself in nonproductive. Money spent in nonproductive enterprise is a handicap eventually to recovery in times of depression and tends to bring about a depression in times of prosperity.

Into the second class I would place bonds issued, whether private or public, for the purpose of investing the money in what I call productive enterprise. In this class of bonds the interest and ultimately the principal is paid out of production or out of newly created wealth.

ILLUSTRATIONS

First. A public utility, whether owned privately or publicly, issues its bonds. The money is spent building a power dam. The dam produces electricity. The electricity is sold to the consumer. With the money realized from its sale the company pays the interest and ultimately the principal of the bond issue.

Second. A farmer borrows money from the Federal land bank or from private sources with which to purchase a farm. He grows crops, thereby producing new wealth. He sells the crops and with the money realized from the production of this new wealth he pays the interest and ultimately the principal of the mortgage.

Third. A home owner borrows money from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Federal Housing Administration, or from private sources with which to build, buy, or finance a home. He works in a factory. His wages are paid out of the wealth he has produced. With those wages he pays the interest and ultimately the principal of the loan.

The above are a few illustrations of what I mean by productive enterprise. The interest and ultimately the principal of this class of investments are paid out of production and not by taxation. Instead of being a handicap to recovery in times of depression they help to bring about recovery. Instead of retarding production or being a hindrance to business in times of prosperity they accelerate permanent production and help maintain prosperity. What I believe will prove ultimately to be the fatal defect in the present social-security system lies in the fact that the entire amount of the reserve fund will be invested in nonproductive enterprises, the entire annual interest charge and principal of which must be ultimately paid through taxation. Think of the burden of paying annually by taxation 3-percent interest on $46,641,100,000 or $1,399,233,000. We might pay it in times of prosperity but history of the past 10 years has proven conclusively that we could not have paid that amount in addition to the regular expenses of Government in times of depression.

Fourth. (a) I would provide by law for diversified investments limiting the amount of the reserve fund that could be invested in direct Federal bonds classified as nonproductive investment to 10 percent, and (b) I would limit investment in State, county, and municipal bonds—nonproductive—to 10 percent.

(c) I would provide that at least 80 percent of the reserve funds would have to be invested in loans to productive enterprise specifying by law the percent (not in any event to exceed 10 percent in any one investment) to be invested in each class. A provision similar to the following is suggested:

Of the total reserve funds held by the Board not to exceed the percentages named hereinafter may be invested in the class of bonds named.
(1) Ten percent in direct Federal obligations.
(2) Ten percent in direct State, county, or municipal obligations.
(3) Ten percent in electric light, power, and reclamation projects—public or private.
(4) Ten percent in Federal land-bank loans.
(5) Ten percent in H. O. L. C.
(6) Ten percent in Federal housing projects.
(7) Ten percent in loans made by the R. F. C.
(8) Thirty percent in miscellaneous loans.
(9) All bond issues purchased or loans made to be approved by the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission.

In other words, I would invest the social-security funds exactly as any private insurance company, private trust company, or bank would invest a private trust fund, making safety of investment the first consideration.

It is not only interesting but helpful in the solution of this problem to note that 242 American life insurance companies on December 31, 1935, showed the following investments:

1. U. S. Government, Canadian, and foreign bonds	$3,005,760,677
2. Bonds of States, Territories, and possessions	496,206,923
3. Bonds issued by municipalities and county governments, including subdivisions of States and Territories	1,181,610,333
4. Railroad bonds, including equipment trust certificates	2,608,995,457
5. Bonds issued by public utilities	2,103,573,913
6. Industrial and miscellaneous bonds	570,786,562
7. Invested in stocks	514,380,414
8. Invested in farm and other mortgages	4,298,930,601
Total investments	14,780,244,880

With the exception of items 1, 2, and 3, the principal and interest of these bonds are being paid out of production.

Let us see how my plan would work out. The present act provides for a reserve fund, as stated heretofore, of $46,641,100,000 by 1980. Under my plan, this fund will have been paid in as follows:

Paid by public in taxes and increased costs

(A):
1. 3-percent interest on 10 percent of reserve fund invested in United States bonds annually to 1980	$3,288,440,000
2. 3-percent interest on 10 percent of reserve fund invested in State and municipal bonds annually to 1980	3,288,440,000
3. 3-percent pay-roll tax passed on to public by employer in increased costs	6,878,350,000
Total paid by public	13,455,230,000
(B) 3-percent pay-roll tax paid by employee and beneficiaries which cannot be passed on	6,878,350,000
(C) Paid into the fund in interest on obligations invested in business and paid out of production 80 percent of the total interest of $32,884,400,000 paid into fund	26,307,520,000
Total reserve fund	46,641,100,000
Or,
(D) Under my plan the beneficiary class pays a total amount of reserve fund, including his pro-rata share of increased costs and taxation, as follows:
1. He pays 3-percent pay-roll tax which he cannot pass on	6,878,350,000
(E) He pays, as a consumer, in increased costs and direct and indirect taxes 56 percent of the public share of $13,455,230,000, or	7,534,928,800
Total share of reserve fund contributed by beneficiaries	14,413,278,800
(F) General public, not beneficaries, pay 44 percent of $13,455,230,000, as public's share, or	5,920,301,200
(G) Investing public pays out of productive enterprise 80 percent of $32,884,400,000 interest that goes to make up reserve fund, or	26,307,520,000
Making the total reserve fund	46,641,100,000

The Social Security Act, it is estimated, will pay annually in 1980, $3,000,000,000 in benefits. Under the present plan this amount is paid as follows:

Consuming public will pay:
(1) (a) 3-percent interest on $46,641,100,000 reserve fund	$1,399,233,000
(b) Paid in pay-roll taxes by employer (passed on to consumer)	800,383,500
Total paid by consumer	2,199,616,500
(c) Paid in pay-roll taxes by employer (not passed on)	800,383,500
Making total of	3,000,000,000
(2) (a) The beneficiary pays $800,383,500 in pay-roll taxes	800,383,500
(b) Plus 56 percent of his share as a consumer of $2,199,616,500 which the public pays, or	1,231,785,240
Beneficiary pays total of	2,032,168,740
(c) Nonbeneficiary will pay in increased costs and taxes 44 percent of the public's share of $2,199,616,500, or	967,831,260
Making total of	3,000,000,000
(3) (a) Under proposed plan 20 percent of reserve fund will be invested in National, State, and municipal bonds (nonproductive enterprise), and public will pay 20 percent of $1,399,233,000 interest	279,846,600
(b) Public will pay employers' pay-roll tax passed on to consumer	800,383,500
Total paid by consuming public	1,080,230,100
(c) Employees will pay their pay-roll tax not passed on	800,383,500
(d) Interest 3 percent on 80 percent of $46,641,100,000 reserve fund will be paid by productive enterprise	1,119,386,400
Total	3,000,000,000

Or.
(a) Beneficiary class pay, pay-roll tax of $800,383,500, plus 56 percent consumers' share of $1,080,230,100, or total of	$1,405,312,356
(b) Nonbeneficiary class pay 44 percent of $1,080,230,100, or	475,301,244
(c) Productive enterprise will pay 3 percent interest on 80 percent of reserve fund, or	1,119,386,400
Making a total of	3,000,000,000

SUMMARY

(1) Under the present plan, $39,762,750,000 of the $46,641,100,000 of the reserve fund on hand in 1980 will have been paid by the public in interest, taxes, and increased costs. Under my plan $13,455,230,000 of this reserve fund will have been paid by the public in interest, taxes, and increased costs, and $26,307,520,000 will have been paid by productive enterprise out of production.

(2) Under the present plan the beneficiary class will pay $29,145,490,000 of the reserve fund, including $6,878,350,000 pay-roll tax. Under my plan the beneficiary class will pay $14,413,278,800 of the reserve fund, including this pay-roll tax.

(3) Under the present plan the nonbeneficiary class will pay $17,495,610,000 of the reserve fund in 1980. Under my plan they will pay $5,920,301,200.

(4) Under the present plan the farmer, as a part of the public, will have paid $15,905,100,000 of the reserve fund. Under my plan he will have paid $5,382,092,000.

(5) Under the present plan the public pays in taxes and interest and in increased costs $2,199,616,500 of the $3,000,000,000 annual benefits paid workers on and after 1980. Under my plan the public will pay $1,080,230,100.

(6) Under the present plan the beneficiary class will pay $2,032,168,740 (including $800,383,500 pay-roll taxes) of the annual benefits paid in 1980. Under my plan they will pay $1,405,312,356, including the pay-roll tax.

(7) Under the present plan, the nonbeneficiary class will pay $967,831,260 of the annual benefits of 1980. Under my plan, they will pay $475,301,244 of the annual benefits. Productive enterprise will pay out of production $1,119,386,400.

(8) Under the present plan, the farmer will pay annually as part of the consuming public $879,846,600. Under my plan he will pay $432,092,040.

(9) In case of depression under the present plan, the Federal Government would owe the entire $46,641,100,000 of the reserve fund as part of the public debt. Under my plan, they would owe the reserve fund $4,664,100,000.

(10) Under the present plan, the Federal Government would be obligated to pay annually out of taxation as interest on the reserve fund $1,399,233,000. Under my plan they would have to pay $139,923,300.

(11) Under my plan the average interest rate paid on reserve fund would undoubtedly be more than 3 percent as productive enterprise pays 4, 5, and sometimes 6 percent. Assuming that the fund would average 4 percent, the reserve fund could be reduced from $46,641,100,000 to approximately $35,000,000,000 as 4 percent on the latter amount would pay $1,400,000,000 into the fund annually or a sum equal to 3 percent on the present proposed reserve fund of $46,641,100,000.

(12) Under the present plan, in case of depression, the Government would have to borrow the above amount payable to the fund as interest and the pay-roll tax rate would have to be doubled to meet decreased pay rolls. Under my plan a sale of 2½ percent of the reserve fund bonds annually would replace a loss of 50 percent pay-roll taxes and of 25 percent interest charges.

Let us assume that we had a depression and that 25 percent of the interest on the bonds defaulted, amounting to $349,808,000, and that the pay-roll taxes were reduced by 50 percent, losing $800,383,500 more in revenue annually. In that case we would have to sell each year $1,150,191,500 or 2.5 percent of the bonds held by the reserve fund. If these bonds were guaranteed by the Government, they could be sold at par, inasmuch as the Government would not be carrying the entire reserve fund of nearly $47,000,000,000 as a public debt. Much of the loss of revenue through nonpayment of interest would be recovered, and the remainder of the money acquired through the sale of bonds in the reserve fund would again be replaced by normal pay-roll taxes in times of prosperity.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, permit me to say that I have tried to analyze every phase of this tremendous problem, with the earnest hope that I have contributed something toward its ultimate solution. I make no claim that my plan is perfect. I hope that others who have studied this subject thoroughly will find in it food for thought. As I have not hesitated to criticize the present plan or other plans, so I hope that others will not hesitate to criticize my plan. Only through constructive criticism can we hope to evolve a plan which will ultimately be successful. [Applause.]

LEAVE TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. BROOKS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on Monday next, after the conclusion of business on the Speaker's desk and the legislative program for the day, I be permitted to address the House for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COSTELLO). Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD at the point following the adoption of the conference report on the Bonneville project, and to include letters and correspondence with General Markham, Chief of Engineers of the Army, and other correspondence.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COFFEE of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SWEENEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein an address by Dr. Walker, president of Wilberforce University, on the subject of President Roosevelt, Minimum Wage, and the Negro.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. The understanding has been that no extraneous matter is to be placed in the RECORD; nothing but the remarks of Members.

Mr. SWEENEY. These are my own remarks, and it will take less than two pages. It is very enlightening.

Mr. KNUTSON. I am sure it must be.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SWEENEY]?

There was no objection

Mr. RANDOLPH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. O'NEAL of Kentucky, indefinitely, on account of official business.

SENATE BILL REFERRED

A bill of the Senate of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 1567. An act authorizing the conservation, production, exploitation, and sale of helium gas, a mineral resource pertaining to the national defense and to the development of commercial aeronautics, authorizing the acquisition, by purchase or otherwise, by the United States of properties for the production of helium gas, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

SENATE ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The SPEAKER anounced his signature to enrolled bills of the Senate of the following titles:

S. 2520. An act declaring Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, La., a nonnavigable stream; and

S. 2639. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to lease the Fort Schuyler Military Reservation, N. Y.

BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee did on this day present to the President, for his approval, a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 2260. An act to provide for intervention by the United States direct appeals to the Supreme Court of the United States, and regulation of the issuance of injunctions in certain cases involving the constitutionality of acts of Congress, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 42 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow Friday, August 13, 1937, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

797. Under clause 2 of rule XXIV a letter from the Attorney General of the United States, transmitting the draft of a bill to permit appeals by the United States to the circuit courts of appeals in certain criminal cases, was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. TEIGAN: Committee on the Public Lands. S. 1075. An act to establish the Pipestone National Monument in the State of Minnesota; without amendment (Rept. No. 1509). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 8125. A bill to amend section 77 of the Judicial Code, as amended, to create a Brunswick division in the southern district of Georgia, with terms of court to be held at Brunswick; with amendment (Rept. No. 1510). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DIMOND: Committee on Indian Affairs. H. R. 6042. A bill making further provision with respect to the funds of the Metlakahtla Indians of Alaska; with amendment (Rept. No. 1511). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. PALMISANO: Committee on the District of Columbia. S. 1226. An act to amend the act of May 3, 1935, relating to the promotion of safety on the highways of the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 1515). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. McREYNOLDS: Committee on Foreign Affairs. Senate Joint Resolution 191. Joint resolution to protect foreign diplomatic and consular officers and the buildings and premises occupied by them in the District of Columbia; without amendment (Rept. No. 1516). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. MAY: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 1282. An act to amend Articles of War 50½ and 70; without amendment (Rept. No. 1517). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. MAY: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 1283. An act to increase the extra pay to enlisted men for reporting; with amendment (Rept. No. 1518). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. LESINSKI: Committee on Invalid Pensions. H. R. 6904. A bill to grant restoration of pension to Nora J. Buchanan; with amendment (Rept. No. 1512). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. SOMERS of New York: Committee on Invalid Pensions. H. R. 3580. A bill granting an increase of pension to Georgiana Furey; without amendment (Rept. No. 1513). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

Mr. LESINSKI: Committee on Invalid Pensions. H. R. 6384. A bill to grant restoration of pension to Viola L. Buchanan; with amendment (Rept. No. 1514). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. WEST: A bill (H. R. 8224) to amend paragraph 1606 of the Tariff Act of 1930; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. VOORHIS: A bill (H. R. 8225) to amend title VI of the Social Security Act to provide for the prevention of the spread of disease in the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BARRY: A bill (H. R. 8226) to reduce the rate of interest on obligations of home owners to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to 3½ percent, and to allow the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to extend the period of amortization of home loans from 15 to 20 years; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. BROOKS: Resolution (H. Res. 307) directing the Chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to transmit to the House the total number of mortgages and liens secured by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in the State of Louisiana, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CITRON: A bill (H. R. 8227) for the relief of the East Coast Ship & Yacht Corporation, of Noank, Conn.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. DOCKWEILER: A bill (H. R. 8228) granting a pension to Frank N. Curtiss; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. REECE of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 8229) granting a pension to Leon J. Collins; to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

3230. By Mr. CURLEY: Petition of Local 802, American Federation of Musicians, Associated Musicians of Greater New York, New York City, urging enactment of the Allen-Schwellenbach bill; to the Committee on Appropriations.

3231. Also, petition of the Interstate Airways Committee, urging enactment of the McCarran-Lea bill for air-transport regulation; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3232. By Mr. KINZER: Petition of the citizens of Lancaster County, Pa., urging Congress to enact the old-age pension bill as embodied in House bill 2257; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3233. By Mr. MASSINGALE: Petition of the Greer County, Okla., cotton growers; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3234. By Mr. CLASON: Petition of the Board of Selectmen of the town of Wilbraham, Mass., requesting Congress to give immediate consent to the Connecticut River interstate flood-control compact as approved by the Legislatures of Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Massachusetts; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3235. By Mr. COFFEE of Washington: Petition of the Seattle Local, No. 28, National Federation of Post Office Clerks, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, urging that whereas the adult-education program of the Works Progress Administration and the Workers' Education Department thereof has been such an important and integral part of the educational function of the trade-union movement in the State of Washington for the last 2 years and that in order to meet the great demand for this type of education the program should be enlarged with assurance of tenure for the teachers employed; to the Committee on Appropriations.

3236. By Mr. SANDERS: Resolution of E. A. Madera and others of Plainview, Tex., recommending that a loan be placed on farm products guaranteeing parity price to producers, etc.; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3237. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the Northeastern Poultry Producers' Council, Inc., Washington, D. C., concerning certain amendments to the Black-Connery bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3238. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Northeastern Poultry Producers' Council, Washington, D. C., concerning certain amendments to the Black-Connery bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3239. Also, telegram of the International Association of Firefighters, Vincent J. Kane, president, Local 94, New York City, concerning the wage and hour bill and the housing bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3240. By Mr. KEOGH: Telegram of Vincent J. Kane, president, Local 94, International Association of Firefighters, New York, concerning the wage and hour bill and the housing bill; to the Committee on Labor.

SENATE

FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1937

(Legislative day of Monday, Aug. 9, 1937)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Thursday, August 12, 1937, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 413) to create a commission and to extend further relief to water users on United States reclamation projects and on Indian irrigation projects, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, the able chairman of the Committee on Finance is presenting a bill that requires the presence of a quorum. I suggest the absence of one, and ask for a roll call.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Byrd	Glass	Lodge
Andrews	Byrnes	Green	Logan
Ashurst	Capper	Guffey	Lonergan
Austin	Caraway	Hale	Lundeen
Barkley	Chavez	Harrison	McAdoo
Berry	Clark	Hatch	McCarran
Bilbo	Connally	Herring	McGill
Black	Copeland	Hitchcock	McKellar
Bone	Davis	Holt	Maloney
Borah	Dieterich	Hughes	Minton
Bridges	Donahey	Johnson, Calif.	Moore
Brown, Mich.	Ellender	Johnson, Colo.	Murray
Brown, N. H.	Frazier	King	Neely
Bulkley	George	La Follette	Norris
Bulow	Gerry	Lee	Nye
Burke	Gillette	Lewis	O'Mahoney
Overton	Schwartz	Steiwer	Van Nuys
Pepper	Schwellenbach	Thomas, Okla.	Wagner
Pittman	Sheppard	Thomas, Utah	Walsh
Pope	Shipstead	Truman	White
Radcliffe	Smathers	Tydings
Reynolds	Smith	Vandenberg

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on official duty as members of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HERRING] and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I announce that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] is detained from the Senate because of illness.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that my colleague, the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON], having been appointed a member of the committee to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France is absent on that official duty.

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] is necessarily absent.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-six Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

CONSERVATION AND UTILIZATION OF AQUATIC LIFE—APPOINTMENT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair appoints the Senator from Washington [Mr. SCHWELLENBACH], the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY], the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. LEE], the Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE], as the members of the special committee to investigate matters relating to the conservation and utilization of aquatic life, authorized by Senate Resolution No. 117, agreed to August 12, 1937.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR (S. DOC. NO. 93)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for printing and binding, Office of the Secretary of the Interior, fiscal year 1938, amounting to $50,000, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE, DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE (S. DOC. NO. 94)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the General Committee of Accident Prevention Conference, Department of Commerce, fiscal year 1938, amounting to $35,000, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

CLAIM OF H. W. ADELBERGER, JR.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting his report and recommendation concerning the claim of H. W. Adelberger, Jr., against the United States, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Claims.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. SMITH, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 205) providing for benefit payments to cotton producers with respect to cotton produced in 1937, reported it with amendments.

Mr. CAPPER, from the Committee on Claims, to which was referred the bill (S. 2022) for the relief of Lt. Lorimer E. Goodwin, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 1184) thereon.

Mr. REYNOLDS, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2765) to grant recognition to distinguished military service, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1185) thereon.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2316) to authorize the award of a decoration under certain conditions to Lewis Hazard for distinguished conduct, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1187) thereon.

Mr. ADAMS, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which was referred the bill (S. 2918) to authorize the striking of an appropriate medal in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of Chicago, Ill., as a city, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1186) thereon.

Mr. HUGHES, from the Committee on Banking and Currency, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7909) to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act, to amend the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, to amend the Farm Credit Act of 1933, to amend the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, to amend the Agricultural Marketing Act, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1188) thereon.

Mr. BURKE, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which were referred the following bills, reported them each without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 1138. A bill to amend the statutes providing punishment for transmitting threatening communications (Rept. No. 1190); and

S. 1691. A bill to provide that residence requirements for judges shall not be held to apply to judges who have retired or resigned (Rept. No. 1191).

Mr. RADCLIFFE, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 2900) to establish a fund for the insurance of mortgages securing loans for the construction or reconditioning of domestic floating property used for commercial purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1192) thereon.

Mr. ADAMS, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (S. 1327) for the relief of certain purchasers of lots in Harding town site, Florida, and for the relief of the heirs of Lewis G. Norton, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1193) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

S. 2773. A bill to authorize the issuance of an unrestricted patent to Judson M. Grimmet (Rept. No. 1194);

H. R. 2014. A bill to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the establishment of the Everglades National Park in the State of Florida, and for other purposes", approved May 30, 1934 (Rept. No. 1195); and

H. R. 7022. A bill to provide for the establishment of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore in the State of North Carolina, and for other purposes (Rept. No. 1196).

Mr. O'MAHONEY, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 5594) to make available for national-park purposes certain lands within the area of the proposed Mammoth Cave National Park, Ky., reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1197) thereon.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2888) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to lease or sell certain lands of the Agua Caliente or Palm Springs Reservation, Calif., for public airport use, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1198) thereon.

PROGRAM FOR RELIEF AND BENEFIT OF AGRICULTURE

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry I report an original joint resolution that deals with the cotton situation, and I may take occasion to announce that upon the passage of the joint resolution the President has agreed to see to it that the farmers get 12 cents a pound for their cotton provided they comply with the farm program of 1938.

Mr. PEPPER. Let me ask the Senator from Mississippi, if I may, does that contemplate any ability on the part of our cotton farmers to sell the cotton which they sell abroad at a lower price than the amount they are going to receive by way of loans?

Mr. BILBO. I am sure that 10-cent loan has not as yet been agreed upon, but I am sure that cotton will be free to go in the markets of the world. One fact is certain, the farmer or producer will get 12 cents for this year's crop if he complies with the program to be put into effect.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will be received and placed on the calendar.

Mr. BILBO, from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, reported a joint resolution (S. J. Res. 207) expressing the views of the Congress as to a program for the relief and benefit of agriculture, which was read twice by its title and ordered to be placed on the calendar.

CRIME AND CRIMINAL PRACTICES (S. REPT. NO. 1189)

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, it may be forgotten that in the Seventy-third Congress a committee on crime and criminal practices was appointed or authorized by the Senate. The original committee consisted of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG], the late Senator from Iowa, Mr. Murphy, and the Senator from New York who is now speaking.

From time to time from the Committee on Commerce we have submitted reports to the Senate and I wish now in the name of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] and myself to present the final report of the committee and to ask that it be printed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the report will be received and printed as a Senate report.

BILLS INTRODUCED

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. HARRISON:

A bill (S. 2960) for the relief of A. W. Evans; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHIPSTEAD:

A bill (S. 2961) authorizing the free distribution of Government publications to certain schools and free libraries as a Federal aid to education; to the Committee on Education and Labor.

By Mr. LA FOLLETTE:

A bill (S. 2962) for the relief of Robert Landeau, a minor; to the Committee on Claims.

(Mr. WALSH introduced Senate bill 2963, which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs, and appears under a separate heading.)

By Mr. MOORE:

A bill (S. 2964) to amend the act entitled "An act to amend the act entitled 'An act for the relief of certain purchasers of lands in the Borough of Brooklawn, State of New Jersey', approved May 6, 1936"; to the Committee on Claims.

GIFT OF NAVAL MUSEUM

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I ask consent to introduce a bill for reference to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the bill will be received and referred, as requested by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The bill (S. 2963) authorizing the Superintendent of the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., to accept gifts and bequests of money for the purpose of erecting a building on land now owned by the United States Government at the Naval Academy, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, the bill authorizes the Superintendent of the United States Naval Academy to accept gifts of money for use in constructing a building to be used as a United States Naval Academy museum on land now owned by the United States at the United States Naval Academy. It authorizes the Secretary of the Navy to maintain such building as a United States Navel Academy museum and for the administrative offices of the United States Naval Institute and the Navy Athletic Association. It also authorizes the Secretary of the Navy to accept, receive, hold, and administer gifts and bequests of personal property for the benefit of the museum.

The building will be constructed because of two monetary gifts that are most praiseworthy, without cost to the United States. The design of the building will be in keeping with the general architecture of the Naval Academy and will be so constructed that it may be expanded as future funds may warrant and as the need for more space develops.

The United States Naval Institute was founded in 1873 and its membership consists largely of officers of the Navy, both active and retired, with many associate members who pay annual dues. The objective of the Naval Institute is the advancement of professional, literary, and scientific knowledge of the Navy. The annual dues received has resulted in a surplus out of which the institute is willing to donate $50,000 toward the building of a museum.

The Navy Athletic Association is composed for the most part of officers of the Navy and Marine Corps, former officers of the Navy and Marine Corps, and graduates of the Naval Academy, all of whom pay annual dues to the association. The association conducts, manages, and finances all major athletic activities without cost to the Government at the Naval Academy under the supervision of the Superintendent. The athletic association has accumulated a surplus of funds out of which it is willing to donate $150,000 for the purpose of building a naval museum at the Naval Academy.

There is now in existence at the Naval Academy a local museum, containing many articles, publications, and other property. The academy has recently received a very valuable collection of naval medals dating back to the seventeenth century. It is believed that many similar items would be donated or bequeathed to the Naval Academy if there existed an adequate fireproof museum where such articles would be safe from destruction.

It is believed that the establishment of a Naval Academy museum will be of considerable value in inspiring midshipmen with the traditions of the service through visual evidence of and constant association with the relics of the past which are so closely interwoven with the history and development of our Navy.

For these gifts, I feel certain, the American people are most grateful, and the new naval museum will, when erected, be a monument to the generous and patriotic officers of the Navy who constitute the membership of the United States Naval Institute and the Naval Athletic Association.

AGRICULTURAL CONDITIONS—ADDRESS BY SENATOR PEPPER

[Mr. McKELLAR asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address delivered by Senator PEPPER on Aug. 12, 1937, on the subject of Agricultural Conditions in the United States, which appears in the Appendix.]

NOMINATION OF SENATOR BLACK TO THE SUPREME COURT

[Mr. GUFFEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an editorial from today's Philadelphia Record on the nomination of Senator BLACK to be Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, which appears in the Appendix.]

CHANGE OF ATTITUDE OF SUPREME COURT

[Mr. GUFFEY asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article entitled "The Court Sees a New Light", published in the New Republic of the issue of Aug. 4, 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

SUGAR PRODUCTION AND CONTROL

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7667) to regulate commerce among the several States, with the Territories and possessions of the United States, and with foreign countries; to protect the welfare of consumers of sugars and of those engaged in the domestic sugar-producing industry; to promote the export trade of the United States; to raise revenue; and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER].

The amendment of Mr. PEPPER is as follows:

On page 7, to strike out lines 14 to 20, inclusive, and on page 8, to strike out lines 1 and 2 and the table which follows, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"(a) For domestic sugar-producing areas:

Quotas (short tons)

	1937–38	1939	1940
Domestic beet sugar	1,550,000	1,550,000	1,550,000
Louisiana	357,000	357,000	357,000
Florida	90,000	150,000	175,000
Hawaii	938,000	938,000	938,000
Puerto Rico	798,000	798,000	798,000
Virgin Islands	9,000	9,000	9,000
(b) For the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands	1,002,782	970,000	970,000
(c) For foreign countries
Cuba	1,911,476	1,884,258	1,859,258
Foreign countries other than Cuba	26,412	26,412	26,412

"(d) In the event that the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers is less than 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall first establish the quotas for the areas and in the respective amounts set forth in subsections (a) and (b) and after deducting the total thereof from the determined consumption requirements shall prorate the difference on the basis of the quota established for Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba, in subsection (c); if the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers exceeds 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall deduct the total of the quotas set forth in the subsections (a) to (c), inclusive, from the determining consumption requirements and shall prorate the balance among the domestic sugar-producing areas set forth in (a) and Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba, on the basis of the quotas set forth in subsections (a) and (c)."

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, as pertinent to the discussion which I was attempting yesterday afternoon with respect to the amendment which I have proposed to the pending sugar bill, I should like to read a portion of an editorial appearing in today's New York Times.

Whatever—

Says the editor—

the inherent merits of their argument, the refiners have the advantage over the administration spokesmen at least on the point of consistency. You cannot, as some of those spokesmen seem to imagine, provide for a system of free trade within a tight system of control. You cannot logically approve a system of quotas for producers and denounce the same principle of quotas for refiners. You cannot argue that refining quotas "deny the right of any area to avail itself of its natural geographical advantages" when that is precisely what you are doing in the case of production quotas.

Under a free competitive system the questions that arise are primarily economic, not "ethical." Efficient and low-cost producers expand; high-cost producers are driven under; prices to consumers are kept to their lowest point. Under Government control and a quota system, the question ceases to be one of efficiency and becomes one of "equity." The market is to be divided "fairly" among existing producers. Usually the plan is to freeze the existing percentages of production for each group and individual, and to keep new producers out. Such a plan may secure general agreement at the beginning, especially when conditions are bad, but it becomes increasingly "unfair" to the low-cost producers, not to speak of persons who are not permitted to go into the industry, or of consumers. Should new quotas then be based on how much different producers would have expanded or contracted relatively to each other if there had been no control? But there is no way of discovering these hypothetical amounts. Moreover, the whole purpose of control and quotas is precisely to protect the high-cost producers from the chaos brought about by low-cost production. "Justice" to individual producers under a quota system is ultimately impossible to determine.

The sugar squabble, apart from the interests directly involved, is chiefly significant because it is now our outstanding example of strict Government control, and because it illustrates what happens under a controlled economy. Such an economy poses problems that cannot be solved on any set of sound principles. It becomes necessarily a question of compromises—in other words, of perpetual haggling. Under a free economy it is the business of sugar as of all other producers to produce the largest crop profitable to them at the lowest cost; to meet competition; to woo the consumer. Under a controlled quota system their chief business is to get as large a quota as possible; they must woo, not the consumer, but the lawmaker. The real remedy—

This I desire to emphasize—

The real remedy is to remove the cause of the lobbying. The real need is not to find an exactly "just" apportionment of quotas, which is impossible, but to work toward an orderly termination of the quota system itself.

Mr. President, in the first place, I desire that I may have unanimous consent, if that be necessary, to withdraw the amendment which I proposed yesterday and to substitute another amendment in its place. The only difference between the amendment proposed yesterday and the one which I now propose is this: In the bill, on page 9, appears this language:

If the Secretary finds that the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands will be unable to market the quota for such area for the calendar year then current, he shall revise the quota for foreign countries other than Cuba by prorating an amount of sugar equal to the deficit so determined to such foreign countries, on the basis of the prorations of the quota then in effect for such countries.

I wonder if all Senators present recall that yesterday the chairman of the Finance Committee, in answer to my interrogatory, made a statement to the Senate that the reason for that provision in the bill is that the Secretary of State is reserving, for trading purposes with foreign countries other than Cuba, 59,782 short tons of sugar, raw value. The fact is that all the sugar the Philippines send into this country in excess of 970,000 tons raw value must pay a duty of $1.875 per hundred pounds due to the fact that under the Tydings-McDuffie Act only 970,000 tons may be sent into this country by the Philippines without paying the duty of $1.875.

The necessary corollary of that restriction is that it is economically unfeasible for the Philippines to send into this country more than 970,000 tons, which may come in duty-free under the Tydings-McDuffie Act. The Department of State and the sponsors, to a degree, of this measure understand that.

They do not expect the Philippines to get the difference between the 970,000 tons and the 1,029,000 tons, which they are allowed under the pending bill. In the bill itself provision is made for taking that tonnage away from the Philippines. But what are they going to do with it? They are not going to give it to Louisiana. They are not going to give it to Florida. They do not tell us to whom they are going to give it except they say, "We are taking this away from the continental producers of America and putting it as a bargaining power in the hands of the Secretary of State for any purpose for which he may wish to use it."

Talk about the delegation of power to the Executive. Talk about Congress abdicating from its constitutional authority and duty. What about that provision of the bill? If we were told the country with which the bargaining is to be done, what country is to get it, we would have at least some knowledge of the principles to be employed in its allocation.

I invite the attention of the Senate to some data which I have showing where some of that 59,782 tons is likely to go, which is to be used for bargaining purposes by the Secretary of State.

In the Jones-Costigan Act a quota was fixed for foreign countries. Those foreign countries knew, as every other producer of sugar knew, that they were limited to the quotas authorized by the Jones-Costigan Act. In Florida, under the provisions of those restrictions, we plowed up over 5,000 acres of sugarcane because we recognized the force of the law; but did these foreign countries do any such thing? Quite the contrary. I have the Lamborn sugar market report, issued by Lamborn & Co., of New York, dated August 3, 1937, advising us that these foreign countries paid no attention to their quotas under the Jones-Costigan Act, but they actually sent to the customhouses of this country, where it now reposes, 34,591 tons of raw sugar, which is knocking at the door of the market of the United States and which they want to get into this country. Here is what the announcement says:

The following table shows the total amount of sugar from the full-duty countries stored in Customs' custody as of July 1, 1937, for which applications for certification have been made to the Sugar Section. Such sugars cannot be released from Customs' custody in 1937 unless the full-duty quotas are increased as the result of increased consumption or reallotment of deficits.

Then the report goes on to name the foreign countries which have sent their excess of quota to this country in the hope that our domestic law would be modified for their benefit: Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Dominican Republic, Dutch East Indies, Guatemala, Netherlands, Peru, and United Kingdom.

I suppose it is now the desire of the Secretary of State to take 34,000 tons of that excess from the Philippines, which he knows and which it is stated in the bill the Philippines are not going to use, and allow it to those foreign countries which, in practical disregard of our domestic law, have sent sugar here in excess of their quotas.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Among the nations named, is Haiti included?

Mr. PEPPER. No; Haiti is not mentioned.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. Has Haiti a quota?

Mr. PEPPER. I am sorry I cannot answer the Senator's question on that point. I think, however, Haiti does not have a quota.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. May I interrupt the Senator to make a short statement?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. SHIPSTEAD. It seems to me if the reciprocal-treaty arrangement under which we are laboring now is to be carried into real practical effect, a trade could be made with Haiti. Haiti buys five times more in this country than she sells here. She sells noncompetitive goods. She has been unable to get any kind of treaty for a quota; at least that was my information a year ago.

The argument for the reciprocal-trade treaty was that we were going to trade farm products out of this country to noncompetitive countries. When I say "noncompetitive", of course, I except sugar. Haiti has asked to be allowed to bring in 30,000 tons. It seems to me it is a very reasonable request and it could well be done at the expense of the Cuban quota, because the Cuban quota comes here largely for the benefit of American financial interests.

Haiti is a poor country, a friendly country, a country for which we have done a great deal and which we have left economically in a position where it is very difficult for them to sustain themselves. I want the RECORD to show that, if any foreign country is going to be given an open door to bring in sugar. In my opinion here is a country which buys five times more in the United States than she can sell here and should be cooperated with.

As a matter of fact Haiti has difficulty getting foreign exchange. Her greatest market is France. Diplomatic negotiations have been conducted, and France has protested against Haiti buying her goods here instead of in France when her market is in France. If a little friendly country like that could be aided, I would be in favor of doing it and taking it out of Cuba's quota. The State Department ought to do it.

There has been a stench over the Cuban sugar situation for many years. Everyone knows it is all the result of the influence of two big banking institutions in New York applied through the State Department.

Mr. PEPPER. I am glad to have the expression from the Senator, because I am in hearty accord with the ideas which he expresses. I think it is a matter of common knowledge that the sugar interests of Cuba are primarily answerable to capital of the United States. It is perfectly all right for capital of the United States to find an available use for itself anywhere it may be found; but I do not think it is the highest kind of patriotism for American capital to go to a foreign country for the purpose of exploiting foreign labor so as to send the products of that country into its own country which gives it protection both for accumulation and enjoyment and thus beat down the standard of living or of life in its own country, and deprive its own people of the right to produce an essential food commodity.

So, Mr. President, all of us are aware of the fact that when we are giving Cuba the generous quotas that we are giving her, we are giving them in furtherance of some of the monopolies which already have had their fingers upon the throats of the consumers of America for a long time; and this is but another instance of the degree of their rapacity.

Mr. President, I wonder if there is a Senator on this floor who can conceive of the British Empire having a policy such as that of this bill and this country with respect to sugar production.

I am told that the United Kingdom in the British Isles proper produces something like 500,000 or 600,000 tons of sugar a year; that the consumption requirements of the British Empire are in the neighborhood of 1,500,000 tons a year; and that about one-half of the production outside of the British Isles proper comes from the British colonies, and about another half from foreign countries not associated with the British Empire. Is there a Senator on this floor who can imagine its being a British policy to provide that the United Kingdom or a British colony shall not produce enough of a commodity for which Nature has designed it to meet the consumption requirements of that entity itself? Imagine England telling English citizens, who have the heritage of Anglo-Saxon traditions behind them, and the memory of the wars they have fought for personal liberty, and the vivid recollections of a charter of liberties wrung even from a despotic monarch—I say, imagine the United Kingdom telling British citizens that they shall not produce, on soil hallowed with the blood of their forefathers, a commodity for which Nature has designed that soil and those people! On the contrary, the British have subsidized the beet-sugar industry in the United Kingdom itself, and they have aided in the stimulation of sugar production in the colonies of the Empire. Why, Mr. President? Because the far-sighted policy of the British remembers that there was a time after the war when the price of sugar went to 30 cents a pound, and that there may be a time when they will have to be, in time of war, self-sustaining for their food on their own soil. So far-reaching British policy tries to make the British Empire as completely self-sustaining as possible, at least, in essential commodities necessary for national preservation and defense. Consequently at a rather high price the British are subsidizing the beet industry in the British Isles and the cane industry in her colonies.

But what about the policy of our country? Apparently we do not think it is worth while to have a food supply as essential as sugar available to the American people in time of national stress or emergency right here upon continental United States, and not subject to the hazards of war beyond our shores. Our Government says, "We are going to pay a subsidy to the beet-producing section of this country." But to the States of Louisiana and Florida, and particularly Florida, which has thousands and hundreds of thousands of acres of land reclaimed from floods by the Federal Government itself, at large expense, perfectly adapted by nature for sugar production and particularly adapted to the maintenance of a local supply, our Government says: "We are not even interested in that matter of national welfare, and we do not care to stimulate the ability to grow sugar of a section of our country which can grow it within one-sixth of a cent a pound as cheaply as the lowest production units of Cuba, which grow their sugarcane with peon labor." What about that, Mr. President, for far-sightedness in national policy?

Mr. President, I was familiar with the British sugar policy and I did not find any analogue to American sugar policy in the policy of the British Empire. Then I became curious to know whether there was any commodity with respect to which any part of the British Empire was denied the right to produce it at least to the extent of home requirements for consumption; and I called up particularly our Department of State and our Department of Commerce, and got in touch there with the experts who are cognizant of the details of British policy and affairs. They told me there was not a single instance within their knowledge in which such a principle as this was a part of the policy of the British Empire. Why? Do you think perhaps it is an accident of nature that they never had such a situation?

Take the case of rubber, for instance, Mr. President. The British Empire finds rubber to be an essential commodity which that country desires to preserve. Consequently the British have made some agreements for the restriction of production, so that they might lift the world price of rubber; but there is not an instance where they have restricted production beyond the ability of their country to consume what they thus produce. So I say that this principle is wrong. It is contrary to the nature of things. It is contrary to the traditions of this country. It is contrary to the principles of a sound national economy. It leads to bad results. It means that the present Congress is the victim of perhaps some of the most vicious lobbying which has ever victimized Congress, so declared by no less an authority than the President of the United States himself. It means that we come here and haggle with one another, each one trying to find some bargaining power with respect to which he may gain for his State what he thinks it deserves; and by this bill all of us are committed to an economy of scarcity rather than an economy of plenty, which, with its necessary consequences, would make available the produce of our soil in the long run to a larger number of persons.

Mr. President, I have here some statistics which I think will be of interest to the Senate.

First, I have a chart showing the relation of the consumption of sugar to the price of sugar. I find, as indicated by the chart, that in Italy the price of sugar is approximately 18 cents per pound, and that the consumption of sugar in Italy is less than 20 pounds per year per person. I find that in Germany the price of sugar is about 11 cents per pound, and that the consumption of sugar in Germany is about 53 pounds per person per year. In Czechoslovakia the price of sugar is about 10 cents per pound, and each person per year consumes about 60 pounds of sugar.

In France the price of sugar is about 8 cents per pound, and the amount of sugar consumed yearly per person is about 55 pounds. In Norway the price of sugar is about 6½ cents per pound, and about 70 pounds per person per year are consumed. In Canada the price of sugar is a little over 6 cents per pound, and almost 100 pounds per year are consumed by each individual. In the United States the price is about 5½ cents per pound, and the number of pounds consumed per person per year is a bit over 100. In the United Kingdom the price is about 4¼ cents per pound, and each person per year consumes about 106 pounds. In Switzerland the price is less than 4 cents per pound, and the amount consumed per person per year is about 96 pounds.

I also have a chart showing indices of production of foodstuffs, which, taking the period of production from 1925 to 1929 as 100, shows that the world production of foodstuffs is almost on a horizontal plane. The North American production of foodstuffs was slightly above the normal horizontal plane in 1934, and dropped sharply between 1934 and 1935. The production of foodstuffs in the United States dropped to about 80 for 1929, was a little over 80 for 1930, about 90 for 1931, about 92 for 1932, and then dropped sharply to about 61 or 62 for 1933 and 1934, and then there was a slight increase for 1935. That indicates that the United States is becoming more and more dependent for its own food upon other countries of the world. Is that a wise national policy in a land with such a plentitude of fertility as ours?

Mr. President, I also call attention to the fact that the same principle pertains with respect to cotton production, for, taking the period 1931–32 as 100, or normal, cotton production of all other countries than the United States goes upward to about 110 for 1932–33, to about 130 for 1933–34, and to about 140 for 1934–35.

For the United States, however, what is the trend? Beginning at 100 in 1931–32, the curve falls sharply to 76 in 1932–33, remains at the same figure for 1933–34, and then drops to about 60 for the year 1934–35.

What does that indicate? It indicates that we have not only by our national policy of restriction of production tended to make ourselves more dependent upon foreign countries for what we eat, but that we have done the same thing with respect to what we wear. So, by a policy of restriction of production we have committed this country to a dependence for both food and clothes upon what may some day come to be the charity of foreign producers. What kind of wisdom and far-sightedness is that in national policy?

Mr. President, let me drop the suggestion, and humbly submit it, that if we are to protect the home producer with a subsidy, is it a logical and practical necessity that we lose at the same time our American market? I would rather that the subsidy be paid to the American producer for what can be consumed within the confines of this country, and then, by virtue of the amount of those payments for home production and home consumption, make it possible for the American producer to compete in any world market. In that way we would not cut ourselves away from the avenues of foreign trade, at least with respect to essential commodities.

With respect to sugar production, taking the period 1929–30 as normal, or 100, I find that the curve for the British Empire proceeds upward from 100 to about 110 in 1929–30. It reaches almost 125 in the year 1930–31. It passes 125 in the year 1931–32. It reaches almost 150 in the year 1932–33, passes 150 in the year 1933–34, is about 160 for 1934–35, and reaches 175 in 1935–36. I quote these figures from a chart showing the incline of the production of sugar within the confines of the British Empire from 1930 to 1936.

What about the United States? Starting with 100, there is a gradual increase in domestic production in continental United States almost parallel with the British increase until the year 1933–34 is reached, when the Jones-Costigan Act, fixing the policy of sugar control and the policy of restriction by the Federal Government in the production of essential food commodities, went into effect. From 1933–34 our local production declined from about 160 to about 115. It has increased to slightly in excess of 125 up to the end of the year 1936.

Mr. President, again, not only with respect to general foodstuffs, to which I adverted in connection with the previous chart, but with respect to the essential food element of sugar itself, we have restricted our production until we have become the more dependent upon what may become, as I have said, the charity of foreign powers.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. The Senator was not a Member of the Senate in 1934, when this process started, and perhaps he is not familiar with the fact that his indictment might be even more direct and specific, because when the sugar-restriction program was first presented to the Senate Finance Committee and to the House Committee on Agriculture it was presented with the specific statement by Dr. Weaver, representing the Department of Agriculture, that their purpose—and I use his language—was to give the sugar industry a shot in the arm and then slide it out of business entirely.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, astonishing remarks have been made to me by high officials of Government which indicated that they did not particularly care whether we produced sugar within the confines of this country or not, because to them it was not a matter of serious national policy whether we got it from Cuba or from some other foreign country or grew it upon the home soil.

I am certainly not qualified to be a military or naval strategist. I suppose that if we ever reach a time in our national defense when we become incapable of defending our shores, probably we will lose our political and national liberty anyway; but at least it seems to me that it is better for a country to be self-supporting and self-sustaining in food and clothes and war materials than to depend upon any foreign market for any one of those things. That looks to me like an elemental principle of national wisdom and national policy.

Mr. VANDENBERG. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. VANDENBERG. I not only agree with the Senator, but I think he may add—and I think it is a justified assertion—that if the American domestic sugar producer were permitted to enjoy the domestic consumption he would not need a penny of subsidy or benefit payments or anything else of that kind.

Mr. PEPPER. I am glad the Senator from Michigan mentioned that point. I had intended to indicate the same point of view, that if we were permitted to produce in this country the amount of sugar we are capable of producing, the consumers of sugar in the United States and the general taxpayers of the United States would not have to pay the high subsidies for which provision is made in the pending bill.

Let us suppose that another war should come along and that domestic conditions in Cuba, from which place we get such a large volume of our national supply, might perhaps interfere with the production of sugar. Let us suppose that a great emergency should face this country. Then imagine what hurried preparation there would be, imagine what hasty efforts there would be, emanating from the war control boards of this country, to make us self-sustaining in the matter of sugar production and in the production of other food supplies. Then we would do just what we did in the last war, for which we were not prepared. It would unnecessarily cost us a lot of money, if not perhaps a number of lives.

I thought we had learned our lesson of unpreparedness from the last war. We have indicated to the world fairly, I believe, that we are not a militant, jingoistic people. We do not want any other people's assets or advantages, whatever they may be. We want to be a friend of every nation under the sun, and actually to be what our President has so well stated we should be, a good neighbor to the world. But does that mean that we are going to sit supinely here upon our shores and put our defense at the mercy or the charity of the world because we want to be good neighbors? The records of this Congress vividly attest the contrary policy, because the collossal sums we are spending upon our military and naval machines indicate that we are determined that we shall be able to defend ourselves if anybody shall transgress upon what we believe to be our just immunities.

How can we spend millions and billions upon that wise and sensible policy, and yet ignore such an essential phase of our national welfare as whether our sugar production is adequate to our requirements?

Mr. President, unless I am misinformed, the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House has sent or is about to send a delegate somewhere to confer with foreign powers in the effort to make our Nation self-sustaining in respect to certain metals, which we do not have, and which are essential to our national defense. That shows that we are trying to make ourselves self-sustaining; that we deem it wise to do that. Why overlook trying to make ourselves self-sustaining in such an essential element of food as sugar? That is the question we should answer in passing on this proposed legislation.

What will this legislation cost the American consumer? I should like to present a few additional figures. It is estimated that the total cost of the quota system which is now in effect in this country, or would be in effect if this bill is passed, is about $271,000,000 per year. I ask the question, Mr. President, Who gets that money? In the first place, may I ask, Who pays that money? The consumer, of course. This cost to the consumer may be divided into tax and excess cost over world price. This bill provides for benefit payments. Those benefit payments go to sugar producers. This bill also provides for a processing tax to be paid by sugar manufacturers or processors. But that money which is paid in the form of a tax comes from two sources. The first source is the sugar consumers in the United States, because the tax is necessarily included in the price that the consumer has to pay. But the processing tax on the domestically produced sugar is not quite as large as the benefit payments. Therefore, Mr. President, the excess has to be paid out of the Federal Treasury, because the tax on foreign sugar is in lieu of duty—the duty on sugar having been reduced when the tax was imposed on sugar in 1934. But the greater portion of the cost is due to the higher price the consumer has to pay for sugar—a cost which I will explain in detail.

Mr. President, I said that the annual sugar bill, the annual subsidy that the people of the United States are paying the sugar producers, is approximately $271,000,000.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. I do not think the Senator wants to fall into error.

Mr. PEPPER. I certainly do not.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. I understand the amount of tax that will be raised by the processing tax of 53 cents per hundred pounds, plus the amount of the import tax, will exceed by $15,000,000 the amount necessary to make benefit payments to all producers of sugar cane and sugar beets in the United States. I understood the Senator to say that there would be a deficit, which would have to be paid out of the Treasury. I understand that the experience under the Jones-Costigan law, as well as the estimates of the Sugar Section as to how this law will work out, indicate that it will result in a profit of approximately $15,000,000 to the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. PEPPER. I will answer the Senator from Michigan by saying that I have no contrary opinion, but I call attention to the fact that the reduction in duty results in an annual loss of over $20,000,000, so that this theoretical gain of $15,000,000 is not very real. The important fact is that the people who consume sugar in the United States are going to have to pay every year about $271,000,000, the amount required for sugar subsidies in the United States, that is, tariff and quota. I do not know how many people do not consume sugar in one form or another. There may be a taxpayer who does not. There would be a very small number, I dare say. So it is safe to say that the whole people, not only sugar-consuming taxpayers, but the whole people, big, little, old and young, are having to bear upon their backs the cost of this subsidy.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I am very much interested in the statement the Senator makes, that the cost to the people is $271,000,000. Does the Senator include in that statement the bounty that is proposed to be paid now, and also the tariff on the raw sugar or upon the sugar?

Mr. PEPPER. That is calculated on the basis of about what the tariff and the quota system cost us, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. COPELAND. May I ask the Senator, in the breakdown of his figures how much does he estimate the cost to be to the people at one-half cent a pound, to be paid as a bounty to the beet-sugar producers?

Mr. PEPPER. The result is arrived at by multiplying the estimated United States consumption requirement of 6,682,670 tons by one-half cent per pound. The total is $66,826,700.

Mr. COPELAND. Will the Senator give me those figures again?

Mr. PEPPER. The number of tons of sugar, raw value, which it is estimated that the United States will consume in the ensuing calendar year is 6,682,670. That figure represents short tons of 96° sugar, may I say to the Senator. Now then, reduce that to pounds, and multiply the resultant figure by one-half cent, and Senators will see the staggering amount of the total, which amounts to $66,826,700.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, I have the figure in mind. The processing tax at one-half cent a pound will amount to approximately $67,000,000.

Mr. COPELAND. And that is before it is pyramided, is it not? That is to say, so far as the people are concerned, that tax to the average consumer will be more than one-half cent a pound, of course?

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. I do not think it works out that way.

Mr. COPELAND. But the Senator confesses to sixty-some million—how many million dollars?

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Sixty-seven million dollars.

Mr. COPELAND. Sixty-seven million dollars, which is a gift to the beet-sugar industry.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Oh, no; that money goes to the beet-sugar farmers and the cane farmers.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. Is there any civilized country where the retail price of sugar is less than it is in the United States?

Mr. PEPPER. This chart, to which I have previously referred, shows sugar prices in Switzerland to be about 3⅞ cents per pound and in the United Kingdom to be about 4¼ cents per pound, as compared with the American price of about 5½ cents per pound on the average from 1930 to 1936, inclusive. The Senator can perhaps best answer that question, however, because he is a sugar authority and he knows what he means by "civilized country."

Mr. OVERTON. I appreciate the compliment paid me by the Senator from Florida, but I will have to state that I am not exactly an authority. However, I have heard that statement frequently made. I know that the Senator from Florida has given as much thought and study to this subject as I have. I have never seen the statement contradicted. I have seen tabulations made of retail prices which indicate that in every civilized country, or practically every civilized country on the face of the globe, the retail price of sugar is higher than it is in the United States of America.

Mr. PEPPER. I will ask the Senator what the world price of sugar is.

Mr. OVERTON. The retail price is not the world price of sugar. When sugar enters into a country it either has to pay a tariff or an excise tax is placed upon the sugar, or some other form of taxation. Either by tariff or by excise tax, or otherwise, the retail price is increased over and above the world price, so that there is not, as I understand, a civilized country on the face of the globe where the price is as low as it is in the United States of America.

Mr. PEPPER. Does the Senator think that if we had no quota system in the United States the price of sugar to the consumer in the United States would be lower or higher than it is?

Mr. OVERTON. I think it would be lower.

Mr. PEPPER. Of course, it would. So the difference is what the quota system and the tariff are costing the people of the United States.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. ELLENDER. If the Senator from Florida will permit me, I have a table here showing the price of sugar in various countries, from which I will give the figures. This table appears on page 8 of a report of the Department of Commerce of date April 1, 1937, and shows the retail price, taxes, and ratio of taxes to retail price, of refined sugar in certain countries, as of May 1, 1936:

Retail price per pound (in United States cents per pound)

Country:
Principally self-supplying:
Argentina	5.15
Brazil	2.84
Mexico	3.53
Union of South Africa	6.61
Australia	6.56
Japan	4.99
Egypt	5.09
Czechoslovakia*	11.23
Poland	8.45
Italy*	21.80
Netherlands*	14.24
Germany	13.66
France*	9.54
Importing:
Uruguay	3.49
Chile	3.69
India	5.67
China	(1)
Switzerland*	5.62
Norway	7.19
Irish Free State	7.72
United States	5.50
United Kingdom	4.63

*These countries have devalued their currencies since May 1, 1936. Converted prices at existing present rates of exchange would be more comparable with prices in other countries than those shown for the "starred" countries in this table.

[1] Not available.

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator from Louisiana tell the Senate whether or not those figures include the taxes that the governments of those several countries levy against that sugar?

Mr. ELLENDER. They do.

Mr. PEPPER. Of course. How much were those taxes?

Mr. ELLENDER. The import duties and excise taxes per pound and the ratio of taxes to retail price are as follows:

TABLE V.—Retail price, taxes, and ratio of taxes to retail price of refined sugar in certain countries as of May 1, 1936

Country	In United States cents per pound
	Retail price per pound	Import duties and excise taxes	Ratio of taxes to retail price
Principally self-supplying:	Cents	Cents	Percent
Argentina	5.15	.70	14
Brazil	2.84	.14	5
Mexico	3.53	.53	15
Union of South Africa	6.61	.24	4
Australia	6.56	.33	5
Japan	4.99	1.67	34
Egypt	5.09	1.13	22
Czechoslovakia*	11.23	3.72	33
Poland	8.45	3.38	40
Italy*	21.80	13.54	62
Netherlands*	14.24	10.38	73
Germany	13.66	4.26	31
France*	9.54	3.09	32
Importing:
Uruguay	3.49	1.81	52
Chile	3.69	.99	27
India	5.67	3.21	57
China	(1)	3.35	----
Switzerland*	5.62	3.25	58
Norway	7.19	4.26	59
Irish Free State	7.72	5.66	73
United States	5.50	.95	17
United Kingdom [2]	4.63	----	----

* These countries have devalued their currencies since May 1, 1936. Converted prices at existing present rates of exchange would be more comparable with prices in other countries than those shown for the "starred" countries in this table.

[1] Not available.

[2] See note 4, table I. Import tariff rates are given in table VI.

It will be noted that Great Britain has no import duties and excise taxes, but the Government pays a direct bounty to the sugar growers, which is appropriated from the general fund. This general fund of Great Britain represents taxes that are collected from its people, and hence the people as a whole really and truly pay this bounty by way of taxes.

Mr. PEPPER. So that makes all the difference, of course.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I did not catch whether the Senator from Louisiana gave the price in the United States.

Mr. ELLENDER. Yes; I did. The price is $5.50 per 100 pounds of refined sugar.

Mr. PEPPER. And what is the tax in the United States?

Mr. ELLENDER. The import duties are 95 cents per 100 pounds, which represents a ratio of taxes to retail price of 17 percent.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, if the world price of sugar is one thing, and if the price of sugar in the United States is higher than that, and if it is the quota system that makes the difference, then the quota system and the incident of it, the subsidy system, and the tariff are imposing a cost burden upon the consumers of sugar in the United States. As I said in the beginning, that amounts to $271,801,331.

Who gets that money? I will suggest simply the conclusion, Mr. President. I can itemize if anyone wants the items. Over $53,827,844 of that gift goes to Cuba. That is what the consumers of sugar in the United States are paying to Cuba when we get down to the last analysis. To the Philippines goes $44,653,807. To other foreign countries $226,185. Therefore, to all foreign countries the gift is $98,707,836. To the Virgin Islands $251,252; to Puerto Rico $38,249,368, to Hawaii $44,927,510. To the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, and Hawaii together $83,428,130. So that the gifts to foreign countries total $98,707,836, to our possessions $83,428,130, a total of $182,135,966, leaving to be accounted for $89,665,365. The Senator from Michigan, perhaps, indicated in the neighborhood of $70,000,000 going as a subsidy to producers. So, by admission at least, there is being paid to the sugar producers in the United States $70,000,000 by sugar consumers as a subsidy. This corroborates the thought expressed by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG] and me that if we did not have the quota system we would not have to have even that subsidy.

Mr. VANDENBERG. If the Senator will excuse me, he must add to that if we did not have the quota system and if we were entitled to sell 100 percent of American consumption.

Mr. PEPPER. That is what I intended to include if the Senator will allow the correction.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. That, of course, implies the existence of a tariff wall?

Mr. VANDENBERG. That is correct.

Mr. PEPPER. That is right. It is not a new principle in American economy, Mr. President, for us to assume that a tariff wall for the protection of American industries, and that should just as much include the farmers as the manufacturers. It is none the less a price which the consumer pays for sugar in excess of the world price.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. I am very much interested in the Senator's observations, and I was just wondering if we were to provide a tariff wall in the case of sugar how that might affect the cotton situation.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator can perhaps best form his own opinion about that. As I suggested a moment ago, my individual theory is—and I deserve no credit for the origination of the idea—that the best way to deal with our cotton problem is to give the farmer something analogous to what the industries have enjoyed in the past in the way of tariff protection or, rather, in the way of a subsidy, which would be an analogue to tariff protection, and thus give the farmer the ability to sell his surplus cheaply enough to compete in the foreign markets.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President——

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. LEWIS. May I say to the able Senator from Florida that I think the Senator from Maryland meant to indicate a question on which I am sure we will all be interested in hearing the view of the Senator from Florida, that if we barred or barricaded by tariff sugar from certain countries what would be their retaliation then upon our country? I myself should like to hear the able Senator's viewpoint if he has contemplated that situation.

Mr. PEPPER. Of course, there are many factors that enter into the adjustment of our trade balances. We all know that it is a very difficult problem. There may be adjustments of tariffs between countries in such a way as to guarantee the free flow of goods from them in certain instances. But I think, Mr. President, that as much as possible that interchange of goods and commodities should be with respect to commodities as to which there is no home competition. In other words, I do not want to encourage Egypt to bring more cotton into the United States. We already produce too much cotton. I want to encourage Egypt to send some other commodity here and take our cotton. But sugar, Mr. President, should not be made the vehicle upon the back of which all these other commodities shall have to ride, because we do produce sugar. In the case of sugar, I will go further than I would go in the case of cotton, however. I would say: "Let us trade the American sugar market to the extent of the amount which we cannot produce." In the case of cotton, since we have a surplus, I would not do so. But I would not trade away so much of the American sugar market as we can supply.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. The reason I brought up the illustration of cotton was that some time ago I put in the RECORD figures showing the development of the cotton industry in other countries than the United States, and those figures seemed to indicate that the production of cotton in the United States was steadily declining, whereas the production of cotton in other places was steadily increasing. The net result of such a policy carried out in time would be that our foreign market for cotton would be filled not by the United States but by foreign countries.

Mr. PEPPER. Exactly, Mr. President, as I indicated. Was the Senator in the Chamber when I referred to the chart I had on that subject?

Mr. TYDINGS. No.

Mr. PEPPER. The chart, taking the figure 100 as normal for the years 1931 and 1932, shows that cotton production in all other countries except the United States in 1934 had gone up to about 140, whereas in the United States it had declined from 100, as normal in 1931 and 1932, to about 60 in 1934 and 1935.

Mr. TYDINGS. Of course it may be wise to have a policy of self-containment; there is much to be said for it; but if we adopt such a policy we must make up our minds that our foreign markets for cotton are going to disappear correspondingly as self-containment is developed in America. We cannot hold to both horns of the dilemma; we have got to take one or the other. The point I am making is that the self-containment policy makes it more difficult for us to sell cotton to our foreign customers and easier for our competitors to sell it. It may be that the advantages will offset the disadvantages in the net result.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. I should like to ask the Senator from Florida what sugar-producing areas produce a surplus of sugar to import in the United States that are at the same time large consumers of American cotton? Are there any?

Mr. PEPPER. There are none, to my knowledge.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. Of course, the Senator from Louisiana and the Senator from Florida know that the effect of tariffs is not always direct as between two countries. There is a three-way trade and a four-way trade, and, naturally, it is not essential that a sugar country should import cotton from us. The very fact that it has money to import cotton, whether it comes from Egypt or from India or Japan, indirectly makes a market for American cotton. So that with a three-way transaction it is equivalent to our taking the sugar and selling them cotton, insofar as their consumption of cotton is concerned.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. OVERTON. I thank the Senator. Would not the Senator from Florida find some difficulty in applying the three-way and a four-way plan as suggested by the Senator from Maryland in reference to this question of the tariff on sugar and the quota on sugar?

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida allow me to answer that question?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. The Senator from Maryland would not have any difficulty, for it stands to reason that the richer the Cuban people are the more money they will spend for the world's goods, as they are not an industrial country per se. One of the things for which they spend money is clothing; and, of course, cotton clothing is used in Cuba. The better off the Cuban people are the more cotton goods they are going to buy, and the more cotton goods they buy the better off is the cotton grower in the United States of America.

Mr. PEPPER. I think there is no difference of opinion among us, but may I propound this question? Let us assume that it might be possible to find some countries that do not produce cotton but desire to purchase cotton, for instance, from us; and that if we purchased all our sugar from those countries they would be able to purchase all of our cotton. Let me postulate that situation. That sounds fine from the viewpoint of the national economy.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Senator from Florida allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. LEWIS. I am seeking information on the sugar question because we who live in the great Middle West have the beet sugar question around us. The questions suggested by the eminent Senator from Florida and the eminent Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] involve an idea which is rather novel. The able Senator from Louisiana asked the question if the Senator from Florida knew of any country that produces sugar that likewise may have demands for cotton.

I am disturbed, looking to my country's welfare, how far we may be affected, so far as our cotton is concerned, inasmuch as the cotton production of countries such as Brazil, China, and Australia has been growing very rapidly, if we drive out by any process of government the sugar of sugar-producing countries, under what they may call the equality of opportunity, and cause them to sell cotton in lands which heretofore have been buying American cotton.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator is now talking only about cotton and not about sugar?

Mr. LEWIS. I am talking about retaliation on us by countries which produce sugar, and how far it would drive them to buy their cotton from lands of which I speak, that are so rapidly increasingly their cotton production, instead of American cotton which heretofore has been consumed by them.

Mr. PEPPER. Of course, Mr. President, there are constantly two tendencies going on. One of them is getting out of the world market and dealing exclusively with the local market, which gets us into a certain habit of dealing which is not consistent with the general world situation. The other one is that as we get out of the world market, others take that market away from us, and we canont always come back when we want to.

In other words, if we were to make our cotton policy a domestic one only and then should desire to change the policy, we would find ourselves out of touch with the world cotton market. We might not find a world cotton market again available for us because other countries might have so increased their production that they might have taken the market away from us.

There are two things our national economy has to take into consideration in this question of restriction in respect to a commodity, and I am speaking now only about a commodity which we produce to excess in this country. That is the distinction, as I shall point out, between cotton and sugar.

My individual theory is that in order to preserve a place in the world cotton market we should so subsidize the American cotton producer as to make it possible for him to sell his excess or surplus at a cheap price in the foreign market.

Mr. TYDINGS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. TYDINGS. One of the most unusual bits of information that has come from the importation of goods into America is this. Every year we have imported the most goods into America, the big importation years have been years of our greatest prosperity. The reason for that, of course, is simply because foreigners use the money they get from selling us their goods to buy the goods which we sell to them, because the same years when we buy the most from foreigners, they buy the most from us.

Mr. PEPPER. I do not want to be misunderstood. I am heartily in favor of the suggestion of the Senator from Maryland that we should do everything we can to make possible a free interchange of goods between this country and foreign countries. Everybody wants to do that. I am perfectly willing that any practical method of doing that shall be employed. But here is my objection even to helping the cotton group of the United States. No government has a right to destroy the sugar crop in order to do that. That is the fallacy of the present situation. It is all right to encourage the export of cotton and to do everything that will help the cotton producer, but instead of the foreign country furnishing the cotton producers their subsidy I do not want to go out into the Middle West and into the South and get it out of the sugar producers. That is the extreme. I am asking for a sugar and cotton exchange that will make the purchase of our surplus possible.

Let us see exactly what is being done with respect to sugar. We are being told in Florida, and I am speaking particularly about Florida, that we may not grow all the sugar we can produce. Why? Because it is desired that Cuba shall be able to export to the United States more sugar, so that Cuba, by the sale of its sugar to the United States, will have more money with which to buy the manufactured products of the United States. Does anyone deny that?

If that is the principle employed, then we are selling the sugar producers to the manufacturers or the industrialists, just as too long in this country our agricultural interests have paid the tariff, which has gone to fatten the industrial sections of the country.

It is all right to interchange goods with Cuba. I do not know enough of all our commodities to say offhand what should be properly the subject of exchange. Let us find something we export and sell it to Cuba for something they export, in addition to a fair portion of our market for sugar above that which we can produce, so there will be a normal and natural interchange of goods between the countries, each one selling its excess. To that extent all kinds of interchange and exchange could be encouraged. But I say it is wrong from a practical point of view, it is wrong from a legal point of view, it is wrong from the viewpoint of national policy, to sell the sugar producers of the country to the automobile manufacturers. That is discrimination of an unjust and unfair character, yet that is exactly the inevitable consequence of this proposed legislation.

See what a pitiful spectacle we are presented here. I come with an amendment and say to the Senate that the Philippine Islands can send into the United States 970,000 tons of sugar a year without paying a prohibitive duty and that for the Philippines to export any more sugar than that would not be profitable to them.

I tell the Senate that the bill points out, that the Department of State itself tells us, that the Philippines will not send us more than 970,000 tons a year; and therefore there will be an excess in this tentative quota of the Philippines of 59,782 short tons. I tell the Senate we do not have enough sugar production in Florida; that we have the soil and the climate particularly adapted to it; that we have shown ourselves to be economical producers of sugar; that we are not permitted to produce more than one-half of what we consume in Florida alone. I beg you, therefore, let us have permission to produce at least what we consume in Florida.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. PEPPER. Certainly.

Mr. ELLENDER. Will the Senator from Florida point out any provision or provisions of the bill that prevents the State of Florida from producing all the sugar it desires so long as that sugar is not transported in interstate commerce?

Mr. PEPPER. I will make this proposition right here and now. If the chairman of the Finance Committee [Mr. HARRISON], if the Senator from Colorado [Mr. ADAMS], and if the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN] will, here on the floor of the Senate, tell me that that can be done, that we may grow sugar in Florida up to the point of meeting our own needs, I shall sit down and say this is the best day Florida ever had. Are those Senators willing to accept such a proposition?

The exact contrary is set forth in the bill, unfortunately. It provides, on page 21, as follows:

> That there shall not have been marketed (or processed) an amount (in terms of planted acreage, weight, or recoverable sugar content) of sugar beets or sugar cane grown on the farm and used for the production of sugar or liquid sugar to be marketed in, or so as to compete with or otherwise directly affect interstate or foreign commerce--

And so forth.

Mr. ELLENDER. Is that the clause the Senator refers to in answer to my question?

Mr. PEPPER. That is one of the essential clauses. It may be the Senator refers to the fact that that section relates to benefit payments.

Mr. ELLENDER. That is one of the sections. The only penalty Florida growers will suffer is that they will not get benefit payments. They can produce all they desire for their own use, so long as the sugar is not shipped into another State.

Mr. PEPPER. I have the opinion of experts that similar clauses on pages 4 and 16 of the bill effectively prohibit Florida consuming the sugar she may produce within the State, in excess of her quota. As to benefit payments, I do not suppose the people in my State would care to pay benefits to everybody else in the United States and at the same time not have the same benefit payments go to Florida farmers, although Florida's producers in the hearings before the House Committee on Agriculture urged that no tax be imposed and no benefit payments be made.

Mr. ELLENDER. That may be true, but since, according to the statement of the Senator, Florida can produce sugar almost as cheaply as Cuba, why worry about the one-half cent processing tax?

Mr. PEPPER. We would not worry about the processing tax if that were all. But, as I said, we are prohibited by the bill from producing more than our quota, even though we consume it all within the State.

As I said, the tonnage that is being taken away from the Philippines is to be used for trading purposes by the Department of State for some foreign country's advantage. I do not know whether I am correct or not, but I have heard that some of the South American countries owe this country some money, and that if we will give them some sugar they will pay us back that money they owe us. Do Senators realize the principle involved in that proposal? A department of the Government of the United States is saying to Florida, "You cannot produce your just share of sugar, because we have to take the sugar you could and should grow and give it to some foreign country, for instance, Peru, so they may take the money they make from growing the sugar thus given them and pay some creditors of theirs in the United States." In reality who is paying those creditors? It is just exactly as if a United States marshal were to be sent down to Florida to levy on us to pay them. Florida is paying those debts.

There, again, Senators may see what is being done. We are making one section of the United States, not a foreign country, pay the debts due the creditors of the foreign country in the United States.

Mr. President, when farmers are prosperous, laborers in industry are prosperous. With respect to the correlation which all of us know to exist between farm income and factory pay rolls, I should like to refer to a chart showing that there is almost an identical parallel between the factory pay rolls and the farm income in the United States.

In other words, as the President said to us not long ago, "You cannot have prosperity for the industrial workers of this country, and good pay rolls, unless you have prosperity for the agricultural workers, and good farm prices." The two are irrevocably and inextricably linked together. What we are doing is this: We may think we are helping the manufacturer by taking the farm assets and giving them, through a third party, back to the manufacturing interests of the country; but we are not, because in impoverishing the agricultural interests we shall inevitably pauperize the industrial interests of the country. I will say that this administration, in its professions and in the honest desires which it entertains, in my opinion, hopes to achieve the parity which will make both of them prosperous; but I doubt very seriously if this legislation is a part of such a wise program.

So, Mr. President, I ask for a vote on my amendment. First, I ask leave to withdraw the amendment offered yesterday, and to substitute another amendment for the one I then offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. THOMAS of Utah in the chair). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. PEPPER. Now, I should like to make an explanation. The amendment which I now have on the desk, I wish to have the Senate understand, does nothing but take away from the Philippines 59,782 tons which the chairman of the Finance Committee yesterday told the Senate the Secretary of State wanted, by the language set out on page 9, for trading purposes with foreign countries. So, I am not disturbing the beet area. I am not disturbing Louisiana. I am not disturbing Cuba or any other country but the Philippines, and I am not violating any law in the case of the Philippines; and I am not seeking to take any sugar except that which the Secretary of State wants for the general purpose of bargaining with anybody with whom he may care to trade.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Florida yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. PEPPER. I do.

Mr. ELLENDER. I was not in the Chamber when the Senator began to address the Senate. Am I to understand that the sugarcane growers of Florida can produce sugar for about what it costs the Cuban sugarcane growers to produce it?

Mr. PEPPER. Approximately so.

Mr. ELLENDER. To what extent would the Senator from Florida propose tariff reductions to meet the objection urged by the Senator from New York with reference to the high price of sugar to the consumer?

Mr. PEPPER. I think the general principle which is supposed to manifest itself in any tariff is to equalize the differences in the cost of production. In Cuba, peon labor is generally employed. In contrast, for instance, we in Florida pay a minimum of $2.70 a day for labor, and in the neighborhood of $10 or $11 to some of the expert laborers in harvesting sugarcane.

Mr. ELLENDER. The Senator from Florida, of course, knows that up to a few years ago the duty on Cuban sugar was $1.87½ cents per hundred pounds.

Mr. PEPPER. I think $2 is correct.

Mr. ELLENDER. It was reduced to $1.60 and now to 90 cents.

Mr. PEPPER. That is correct. It is now 90 cents.

Mr. ELLENDER. And the Senator knows that the one-half cent processing tax, which is provided for in the pending bill, plus the existing tariff, would make the tax as a whole less than the tariff on Cuban sugar last year before the trade agreement was entered into.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, we are so fortunately situated in Florida, both in climate and in the adaptability of the soil for sugar production, that we can exist with a much lower tariff than Louisiana, for instance, could, or than the beet area could; but I think the only fair principle would be a tariff on Cuban sugar which would afford fair protection even to the higher-cost producers, or at least the average in cost of production in the United States. We are not insisting on a tariff so low that it would serve as a detriment to Louisiana.

Mr. ELLENDER. I am under the impression that the Senator from Florida is willing to sacrifice the whole sugar industry in order to afford Florida a larger quota.

Mr. PEPPER. Oh, no, indeed.

Mr. ELLENDER. I so interpreted the Senator's views as expressed by him yesterday and today.

Mr. PEPPER. No; I said yesterday that we can do away with benefit payments and still live, perhaps, better than any of the other producers in the country, because ours is the lowest American unit in cost of production. Consequently, we can exist under a lower tariff than any other sugar producers in the United States; but if the Senator asks me about the principle upon which such a tariff should be made, I say it should be a principle which would protect the people of the Senator's State, who are American citizens, entitled to grow cane in this country as well as the beet people of the West are entitled to grow sugar beets in this country. I am not urging lack of protection for Louisiana growers, who need it. I am urging the right of Florida to produce sugar.

Mr. ELLENDER. May I ask the Senator from Florida what his attitude will be toward this bill should his amendments fail?

Mr. PEPPER. I can easily reduce the matter to a positive statement. Perhaps I should not do that before the other amendments are offered; but I will say to the Senator that, if all the amendments I shall offer shall be defeated, Florida will be better off without any sugar bill than with the bill which is now proposed; and I shall at all times try to vote consistently with the best interests of my State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The modified amendment offered by the Senator from Florida will be stated.

The LEGISLATIVE CLERK. In lieu of the amendment withdrawn by Mr. PEPPER, it is proposed, on page 2, to strike out lines 14 and 20, and on page 8, to strike out lines 1 to 2, inclusive, and the table which follows, and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

(a) For domestic sugar-producing areas:

Area	Quotas (short tons)
Domestic beet sugar	1,550,000
Louisiana	357,000
Florida	122,782
Hawaii	938,000
Puerto Rico	798,000
Virgin Islands	9,000
(b) For the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands	970,000
(c) For foreign countries:
Cuba	1,911,476
Foreign countries other than Cuba	26,412

(d) In the event that the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers is less than 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall first establish the quotas for the areas, and in the respective amounts set forth in subsections (a) and (b), and after deducting the total thereof from the determined consumption requirements shall prorate the difference on the basis of the quotas established for Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba in subsection (c); if the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers exceeds 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall deduct the total of the quotas set forth in subsections (a) to (c), inclusive, from the determined consumption requirements and shall prorate the balance among the domestic sugar-producing areas set forth in (a) and Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba on the basis of the quotas set forth in subsections (a) and (c).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the modified amendment offered by the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER].

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, the amendment just read from the desk represents possibly the fifth or sixth or seventh or eighth or ninth effort on the part of Florida to obtain a quota over and above the quota assigned to it by the provisions of this bill.

When the bill now under consideration was pending before the House committee a strenuous effort was made by the Representatives of Florida to obtain an increase in her quota. After full consideration the House established the quota for the cane area as now fixed in this bill. After the House had passed the bill, and it came before the Finance Committee of the Senate, the same effort was made on the part of the Representatives of Florida to obtain an increase in the quota assigned to that State.

A whole day was set aside by the Finance Committee for the presentation by Florida of its cause; and, after thorough consideration, the Finance Committee, by an overwhelming vote, rejected the proposal submitted by the representatives of Florida.

Before the committee there appeared both of the able and eloquent Senators from Florida. They were also aided by an expert. They had a full opportunity to present this question before the committee and they availed themselves of that opportunity.

Yesterday the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] offered an amendment under and by virtue of which he would take from the quota assigned to the Philippine Islands 59,000 tons, and deduct from the quota assigned to Cuba 51,000 tons, and assign that additional quantity of sugar exclusively for the benefit of Florida. Today the Senator from Florida appears to be somewhat more modest in his request. He now offers an amendment by which he will take 59,000 tons from the quota assigned to the Philippine Islands and will have that quota allocated solely to the State of Florida.

Mr. President, I sympathize with much of what the Senator from Florida has had to say generally upon the subject of sugar legislation. I certainly sympathize with him in his desire to obtain an increased quota for the State of Florida. I can very readily appreciate his desire in that connection, because I should like very much indeed to obtain an increase of quota for the State of Louisiana, and I think I can successfully establish that, if between Florida and Louisiana there is to be an increase in quota, Louisiana is more entitled to the increase than is Florida.

The amendment offered by the Senator from Florida is contrary to the policy that was begun under the original Jones-Costigan Act establishing quotas. It is contrary to the policy of the pending bill. It undertakes to establish a quota for one particular State of the Union.

There is no provision in the pending bill, there is none in the existing Jones-Costigan law, that assigns a quota to any particular State in the Union. If a quota is to be established exclusively for the benefit of Florida, why should there not be a quota established also for Louisiana; and why should there not be a separate quota for Michigan, and a separate quota for Colorado, a separate quota for Utah, a separate quota for California, and for all the beet-producing States?

The philosophy of the bill, and perhaps the feature of it, when it comes to a consideration of quotas, which recommends itself more strongly than any other feature, is that the distribution and production is not to be by States, but by farm units. The allotments to be made under the provisions of the bill, if it shall be enacted, and the allotments made under the existing Jones-Costigan Act are allotments made to farmers and to farm units, and not allotments to States.

Why should the State of Florida undertake to assume a position which gives it a separate classification in the sugar legislation? What right has any particular State to say, "We wish assigned to us a certain quota"? The allotments are to be assigned to the farmers; they are to be assigned to the farms; they are to inure to the benefit of the producers.

Mr. President, there is another objection to the amendment suggested and offered by the Senator from Florida. He takes 59,000 tons from the Philippine quota, but he does not undertake to subdivide that 59,000 tons amongst the other producing areas of our mainland. He does not undertake to give a portion of it to the beet area or to give a portion of it to Louisiana. He undertakes to have the entire 59,000 tons assigned as additional quota to the State of Florida.

As I said a while ago, while I sympathize with the Senator from Florida in the desire of the industry of his State to produce more sugar, I do not sympathize with the position he assumes when he attempts to take from another producing area a certain quantity of sugar, and then undertakes to make a monopoly of that excess in favor of one State, the State he happens to represent.

Why is Florida entitled to such special favor and to such special consideration? I know Florida is a wonderful State, I know she has rich soil, I know that she has an industrious people; but I also know that we have in Louisiana a wonderful State, just as wonderful as Florida; we have a people who are just as ambitious and just as industrious as are the people of the State of Florida and we have an industry in Louisiana which desires, just as much as the Florida industry desires, to expand.

Why should there be this special favor granted by the Congress of the United States to the State of Florida? Is it because she has been a leader in sugar production? She is a mere infant in the production of sugar. Louisiana began the production of sugar in commercial quantities shortly after the Revolutionary War, and through all sorts of calamities which visited that industry, through the ravages of floods, through disasters caused by early freezes, through droughts, through plant disease that almost destroyed that industry, the people of Louisiana have carried the banner of sugar for well over a hundred years.

There are people in Louisiana producing sugar today, farmers and planters, whose fathers and whose grandfathers and great grandfathers before them made a living out of the production of sugar. Why, then, should Florida, which only recently began its career of sugar production, undertake to enjoy an advantage which Louisiana does not possess?

It is said by the very eloquent Senator from Florida that Florida has a capacity to expand her industry, that she has the soil on which additional sugar can be grown, and that she ought to be given opportunity to expand. That is true with reference to Louisiana. Louisiana has produced in times past over 400,000 tons of sugar. She has planted sugarcane on as much as 311,000 acres. But under the effect of the pending bill and under the administration of the existing Jones-Costigan Act, Louisiana is unable not merely to expand her industry but she is unable to bring her industry to the peak where it was established in the years gone by.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. LEWIS. Will the Senator from Louisiana explain to me a matter upon which I confess to be inexperienced? First, I will have him know that my great State of Illinois has assumed beet production, and I have reason to believe for the purpose, perchance, of providing sugar. But the able Senator has stated that the Jones-Costigan Act had for its purpose addressing itself to what the Senator calls "farm units." Will the Senator please explain that to me? I confess I do not understand it, and therefore do not understand the act, if it means that.

Mr. OVERTON. The Jones-Costigan Act divided the mainland into two areas, the beet-sugar area and the cane-sugar area. It assigned a certain quota, to wit, 1,550,000 tons, to the beet area, and it assigned another quota to the cane area, namely, 260,000 tons. This bill pursues the same policy. It assigns a quota to the entire beet area of 1,550,000 tons, approximately, and a quota to the cane area. When the Secretary of Agriculture administers the bill he assigns allotments of production to the beet growers in the West, and to the cane growers in Louisiana and in Florida that will, taken collectively, aggregate their respective quotas. Does that explain it?

Mr. LEWIS. I thank the Senator from Louisiana. He has made very clear to me provisions of the bill concerning which I was in a great degree of obscurity.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. POPE. When does the quota provision of the Jones-Costigan Act expire?

Mr. OVERTON. The present Jones-Costigan Act expires on December 31, of this year.

Mr. President, I was making the observation that Louisiana has just as much capacity to expand as Florida has. She has not yet reached under the Jones-Costigan Act, and will not under this bill reach her production in the past. But over and above that, if we had a stabilized sugar industry Louisiana could bring thousands of other acres into cane production, and could increase her production far beyond her present yield. I understand from the Louisiana industrial experts that this year Louisiana has planted in the ground sufficient cane to produce somewhere between 400,000 and 450,000 tons. Yet under this bill she will not get a quota that will be commensurate with that production.

But on the other hand the Senator from Florida—a State which has produced as its maximum 51,000 tons—now offers an amendment that will increase the quota of Florida to the comparatively astounding figure of 122,782 tons. If Florida is to get such an increase, which is three times the quota assigned to her under the Jones-Costigan Act, certainly the State of Louisiana would be entitled under the provisions of this bill to a quota of some 600,000 or 700,000 tons.

The Senator from Florida very graciously said to me yesterday, "I am offering this amendment for Florida. You can offer amendments for the State of Louisiana and increase her quota." Where am I going to get the sugar, Mr. President? The Senator has taken all the sugar from the Philippine Islands over and above the duty-free quota that is provided for those islands under the Philippine Independence Act, and undertakes to assign that additional quantity exclusively to Florida. Am I to take the quota from the beet area? Certainly the Senators and the Representatives of the beet-sugar areas would object if I desired to do so.

Am I to take it from Hawaii and Puerto Rico? Already there has been made a most strenuous criticism of this bill that it discriminates against our territory and our insular possessions.

Are we to take it from Cuba? I should be very glad to get it from Cuba. I will be glad to get it from any other area from which I can get it. However, I am not going to take the position, Mr. President, of asking for an increase of quota for Louisiana when in doing so I will upset all the quotas that have been carefully arranged and prepared by the House Agricultural Committee, and passed by the House, and which have been consented to by the Senate Finance Committee.

It is well enough to say to the Senators from Louisiana, "Reach out in the air and get sugar for yourselves." The answer is, "We cannot find it."

Mr. President, I said that Louisiana has historically a better claim than Florida. I have shown that productively, according to present yields, she has a better claim than Florida for an increase in quota. But she has another claim to which I wish to address the attention of Senators. I want to institute the comparison between the methods of production in the State of Florida and production in the State of Louisiana. In the State of Louisiana we have over 9,500 farm units to which allotments of sugar are made, representing over 12,000 farmers engaged in this industry. When we turn from the 12,000 farmers and producers in the State of Louisiana and examine Florida, what do we find? We find that the production of cane in Florida is practically controlled by one man. I understand—and if I am wrong in this the Senator from Florida can correct me—that so far as the farm units are concerned there are only five farm units in all Florida to which an allocation is made for sugar production. Louisiana, with over 9,500 farm units, and the State of Florida with only 5 units? And Louisiana with over 12,000 farmers engaged in this industry and Florida's industry controlled by one man.

Mr. President, if we are going to make any change in the quotas provided by this bill, is it fair or is it just that we shall make a change in the quotas that will inure not to the benefit of the 12,000 farmers in the Louisiana area and the thousands upon thousands of farmers in the beet area, but solely and entirely to the benefit of a single ownership and a singly controlled industry?

There are today operating in the State of Louisiana 67 sugar factories. There are today in Louisiana 11 sugar factories that are idle because they have not the production to supply the factories. But in the State of Florida there are only two sugar factories. One is the United States Sugar Corporation, and the other is—can the Senator from Florida give me the name?—Fellsmere Sugar Co.?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes.

Mr. OVERTON. If we are going to make any alterations in the quotas of this bill are we going to give the increase where it is going to inure to only two sugar factories controlled and dominated by one individual, or are we going to give it where it will inure to the benefit of some 67 factories?

Mr. President, so much for the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida. I regret that this controversy should have arisen between Florida and Louisiana. The Senator from Florida has very graciously and very correctly observed that we are buddies in this sugar program. Louisiana and Florida are buddies. I hope we will remain buddies. But it is not in consonance with that theory that an amendment should be offered that will increase only the quota from Florida and will have no effect whatsoever toward increasing the quota from Louisiana or any other domestic area. Louisiana and Florida were joined in wedlock. It has been a happy union insofar as Louisiana is concerned. It is Florida that is now asking for the divorce and a huge alimony decree.

Mr. President, I wish to say, speaking generally of sugar legislation, that I agree with the Senator from Florida in the contention he makes, as I understand his contention, that there ought not to be any restriction on continental production. The reasons, briefly, for my taking that position are that we are dealing here with domestic consumption; we are dealing with the continental market. It is the consumption requirements of the United States proper, it is the market of our mainland that is to be parceled out by this bill. One would think that a wise policy would be, when we divide the continental market, that we ought to give a preference to the continental producer for that market.

Much has been said of late about discriminations in this bill against Hawaii and Puerto Rico. But Hawaii and Puerto Rico are both permitted to produce all the sugar that that Territory and that island can consume. Both of them may produce all the sugar to meet their own local consumption requirements; but the mainland, under the Jones-Costigan Act and under this bill, is unable to produce sufficient sugar, not only to meet continental consumption requirements but it is restricted in its production. Here, with the continental market that we are dividing up, we undertake to impose a restriction upon the American farmer when he is undertaking to produce for the American market. I use the words "American farmer" and "American market" as applying to the continental market and to the continental producer.

Furthermore, Mr. President, we do not produce an excess of sugar in the United States. We are producing something under 30 percent of the consumption requirements of continental United States; and when we are producing less than 30 percent of our continental consumption requirements, when we are underproducing instead of overproducing sugar, when sugar is an import crop instead of an export crop, I entertain the view that there should not be any limitation upon continental production.

Mr. President, at the last session of Congress I introduced a bill with that thought and with that philosophy imbedded in it. I found that there was no chance whatever to have such a bill enacted into law. At the present session, I introduced a bill to provide for one continental quota, and that to be an adequate quota. If our legislation should provide, I wish to say to the Senator from Florida, for a continental quota, we would not have perhaps the apparent disagreement that now exists between Louisiana and Florida. If there were one continental quota which was adequate, then the beet area would be satisfied and the cane area would be satisfied. At the present session of the Congress I introduced a bill providing for a continental quota. I found that I could not have that bill enacted into law.

Then, Mr. President, I contended for an additional quota for the cane area. We wanted a quota of 520,000 tons for the sugarcane area. I did not undertake to dissociate Louisiana from Florida, but I undertook to provide what I thought was a fair and just quota for the cane area. The best result that could be obtained is the pending bill, assigning a quota of 420,000 tons to the cane area on the mainland in lieu of the 260,000 tons under the existing law, an increase of 160,000 tons.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield.

Mr. PEPPER. I did not understand whether or not it was the pending bill the Senator was talking about when he said he tried to get a fair quota for the cane area.

Mr. OVERTON. At the present session of Congress I tried to get it, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator means by conference?

Mr. OVERTON. Yes; by conference with other Senators. The Louisiana delegation in the House of Representatives also made such an effort.

Now, Mr. President, I am going to take this bill as it is, notwithstanding the personal views that I entertain with reference to what should be a sugar program in the United States, and notwithstanding my desire to see a further increase in the quota for the cane area, including both Florida and Louisiana. I am going to accept the bill as it is, because I think that it is going to be beneficial to the sugar industry. I have made my fight. I did not get all I wanted. I am willing to take my medicine; to use a slang expression, I am willing "to go along." We must have sugar legislation in order to preserve the industry in the continental United States, and I have no patience with those who entertain the view that the sugarcane industry and the beet-sugar industry ought to be eliminated and destroyed in continental United States.

In the years to come we may have a modification of the present theory, a modification that will be more in consonance with the views entertained by a number of other Senators and by myself. It may be that we shall have legislation that will inure more and more to the benefit of Florida and Louisiana and to the beet area. I hope so. But I know now that the bill that is presented to us is necessary for enactment in order to preserve the sugar industry of the continental United States, and I believe that the Agricultural Committee of the House of Representatives and the Finance Committee of the Senate have presented to us as good a bill as they could frame, considering all the divergent views and the conflicting interests. I hope, Mr. President, it will be enacted without further amendment.

Mr. ELLENDER. Will the senior Senator from Louisiana yield to me for a few minutes?

Mr. OVERTON. I yield the floor.

Mr. ELLENDER. I will ask the indulgence of the Senate to make a few remarks. The senior Senator from Louisiana has so well covered the ground that I hesitate to further detain the Senate.

Mr. President, I cannot help but feel that the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] is almost willing to wreck the entire domestic sugar industry of this country in order to provide a larger quota for Florida. He takes the position that Florida can produce sugar much cheaper than Louisiana; in fact, almost as cheaply as Cuba; that, insofar as his State is concerned, he is not desirous of procuring benefit payments for his growers. The Senator well knows that neither the Louisiana growers nor the beet growers could exist unless a quota system is enforced, coupled with reasonable benefit payments, in lieu of higher tariffs. It is my earnest conviction that the quota system is the best method of dealing with our sugar problem. I may state that I am not entirely satisfied with the quota received by Louisiana growers. Our growers could produce much more sugar; but I am willing to accept this bill as it is written, in the hope that as conditions improve my people will be afforded larger quotas. As was pointed out by the senior Senator from Louisiana, Florida had but five farm units under the Triple A program. Louisiana had 9,540 farm units and more than 12,000 producers. The beet area had in excess of 70,000 producers. Now, I ask the question, Would it be good public policy to endanger the profitable operation of over 80,000 farm units in order to permit Florida to expand her sugar industry?

Mr. President, it has been repeatedly stated on the floor that Florida would get 15 percent, or 63,000 tons, of the continental cane quota. This is not a correct interpretation of the provisions of the bill before the Senate. It is true that under the Jones-Costigan Act the 39,800 quota which was assigned to Florida producers or farm units, did amount to 15 percent of the quota of 260,000. But this division was based upon the current production of sugar in the proportion that it was furnished in 1933 by the States of Louisiana and Florida. It is well known that since the first quota allotments in the continental cane area were made in 1934, the production of sugar in Louisiana reached the total of 386,000 tons in 1936 and reached a total of 51,000 in Florida in 1936. The Louisiana production was not the highest that Louisiana has ever produced, but in the case of Florida, 51,000 is the most sugar that was ever produced in 1 year by producers in Florida.

The provisions of the bill before the Senate give authority to the Secretary of Agriculture to give allotments to farmers on the basis of "past production or ability to produce." If we may judge from the formula applied by the Secretary of Agriculture under the Jones-Costigan Act in 1934 and 1935, then past production will be the standard used. And if the standard of past production is used, then obviously Florida will not receive 63,000, but not more than 51,000, which is Florida's highest production.

The agricultural statistics for 1937 just recently issued by the Department of Agriculture give the following figures:

Raw sugar (short tons)

[Extract from agricultural statistics 1937, published by Department of Agriculture]

Florida:
1928	1,000
1929	14,000
1930	27,000
1931	24,000
1932	37,000
1933	41,000
1934	28,000
1935	42,000
1936 [1]	[2] 54,000

[1] Preliminary estimate.

[2] Since the above was published the Crop Reporting Board issued final figures showing a production of 61,000 tons in 1937.

Louisiana is not asking for expansion at this time but merely to be restored and to be fully protected in its right to participate in the recovery which our President has made the chief objective of his administration. Recovery in the Louisiana sugar industry means that we must be allowed to grow sugarcane for sugar on at least the 310,000 acres which the records of the Department of Agriculture show have been used in the cultivation and production of sugarcane. Recovery for the Louisiana sugar industry means that our growers must be permitted to produce at least the 5,880,000 tons of sugarcane which have been grown in Louisiana for the production of sugar during one crop year. Recovery for the Louisiana sugar industry means that our growers and producers must be maintained in their current production as shown by the 1936 sugar production figures of 386,000 tons and by the estimates of the growing crop which will begin to be harvested in about 60 days and which gives every indication of producing between 400,000 and 450,000 tons of sugar. Recovery for the Louisiana sugar industry means that the 70 sugar mills now being prepared for the harvest shall be permitted to operate and that the 11 or 12 idle mills shall be permitted to be repaired and restored to production, with consequent benefits to farmer, labor, and industry. Thus it will be seen that Louisiana is still short of complete recovery and has a long way to go before there can be any consideration of expansion.

The industry in Louisiana goes back to sugar production in 1795 and the records show that at one time Louisiana furnished more than one-half of the sugar consumed in the United States. During 13 recent years Louisiana's production has exceeded 300,000 tons as shown by the statistics of the Department of Agriculture, as follows:

Short tons "as made"

1901–2	360,277
1902–3	368,734
1904–5	398,195
1905–6	377,162
1907–8	380,800
1908–9	397,600
1909–10	364,000
1910–11	342,720
1911–12	352,874
1916–17	303,900
1921–22	324,431
1935–36	333,000
1936–37	386,000

Contrarily, Florida's production, as reported in the table quoting statistics of the Department of Agriculture, shows that they have never produced more than 51,000 tons of sugar. The table to which I refer was incorporated in my remarks a few moments ago.

Under the agricultural-adjustment program there were 9,540 farm units in which 12,000 farmers were engaged as producers and received benefit payments from the Government. This year some 1,500 additional farmers have been financed by the Resettlement Administration, which is a branch of the Department of Agriculture, to plant 15,541 acres in sugarcane. The planting of the crop for the 1938 harvest will begin next month and we are reliably advised that the Resettlement Administration is planning to finance the planting of 30,000 acres in Louisiana next month for the harvest in 1938. In addition to this, hundreds of small growers are making preparations for the production of sugarcane in Louisiana in view of the provisions of this bill, which directs the Secretary of Agriculture to give special consideration to small growers. It is entirely within the facts to state that at least 15,000 growers will be affected directly by the benefits or restrictions under this bill. We have no quarrel with Florida, but since the Senator from Florida has proposed an amendment by which the Louisiana quota would be frozen at 357,000 tons for the next 3 years and the beet States would be frozen at 1,550,000 tons for the next 3 years, while Florida is to be given a progressive increase of 90,000 for this year, 150,000 tons for next year, and 175,000 tons for the third crop season, we are forced to invite attention to the fact that Florida had only 7 or 8 growers under the agricultural-adjustment program, and that practically all of the production of Florida in the past was represented by the production of two large corporations, or, more correctly, one extremely large corporation.

There has been a lot of talk about the cost to the American consumer. It is unfortunate that this deception is being insisted upon by so many people who ought to know better. It is entirely erroneous for anyone to say that the cost of sugar in the United States is excessive, for the simple reason that the figures of the Department of Commerce show that the retail price of sugar in the United States is lower than any European country except Great Britain. In the case of Great Britain, its beet growers are subsidized directly by bounty, and there is no tax on sugar which is passed on to the consumer. But any student of government certainly knows that when a bounty is paid out of the general funds, the taxpayers of the country pay the bill whether they do so as taxpayers or as consumers of sugar. I respectfully refer the Senate to a table showing retail prices of sugar in other countries, from which I quoted a while ago in answer to a query from the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER].

The report of the Finance Committee should be studied by those who are not informed regarding this proposition to show that in the recent years of recovery when the prices of all foodstuffs have risen progressively, the price of sugar has not followed the general trend. In fact, the index of the price of sugar, as published by the Department of Labor, is considerably less than the index of the price of other foods. The table in the report of the Senate Finance Committee demonstrates this. Besides, and perhaps more important to the consumer, is the experience which we had in 1919 and 1920, when the production of continental sugar was very small and the United States became entirely at the mercy of foreign producers of sugar, as a result of the readjustments which followed immediately upon the World War abnormality. At this time every housewife of sufficient age will certainly remember that the price of sugar was 25 cents per pound. Today that same housewife can go to any corner grocery and buy her 5 pounds of sugar for 25 cents. In fact, I have noticed from day to day in the Washington daily papers that the chain-store advertisements offer 10 pounds of sugar for 49 cents, and in some instances for 47 cents. It would be foolhardy to attempt to reduce the price of sugar, which is already below the food value of sugar, by the restriction or elimination of the continental sugar industry, when our experience has been that foreigners always increase the price of sugar when they control the home market.

Just one more point and I am through. The Senator from Florida makes much of the low cost of production in his State. I admit that there is some difference in the cost of production in his State as compared to my own State. He gave the figure of $2.50 per hundred pounds of sugar as being the cost of producing sugar in Florida, and $4.80 as being the cost in Louisiana. The Florida costs which he uses are those of one large corporation engaged in mass production, and are taken from 1936 operations, whereas the $4.80 figure quoted by him as being the Louisiana cost was taken, I assume, from the Tariff Commission's report, which is based on costs in 1928, 1929, and 1930. I do not have the report at hand to verify these figures but I feel confident that the Senator from Florida has correctly quoted from said report. We were then in trouble because of mosaic disease, which caused small tonnage per acre and low sugar contents. Also, the costs of labor and material at that time were high because the depression was just beginning.

Mr. President, I have much more I could say, but I feel it unnecessary to further burden the Senate, and I respectfully ask that the amendments of the Senator from Florida be voted down, and that the bill do pass as reported by the Senate Finance Committee.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I should like to say a word or two, if I may. What the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] has stated is perhaps the best proof of which I am aware of the wisdom of the position that I took in offering an amendment to separate Louisiana and Florida in their quota.

You have not heard me, Mr. President, in anything I have said, utter one word in disparagement of Louisiana or of the beet area. I have not come here and said Louisiana is getting 357,000 tons, and that is too much; I have not come here and said that the beet area is getting 1,550,000 tons, and that is too much. I have come here and merely said that Florida was not getting its fair quota, and I have asked the Senate to give Florida a little additional quota. I am surprised at my friend from Louisiana that he would rather the off-shore area should have it than that Florida should have it. I am sure the Senator does not really intend to take that position, particularly when we have not in any way whatsoever attempted to disparage the quota which Louisiana is getting.

I may say that the figures show that the cost of producing sugar in Florida is 2½ cents, whereas in Louisiana it is 4.8 cents.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Connally	King	Pittman
Andrews	Copeland	La Follette	Pope
Ashurst	Davis	Lee	Radcliffe
Austin	Dieterich	Lewis	Reynolds
Barkley	Donahey	Lodge	Schwartz
Berry	Ellender	Logan	Schwellenbach
Bilbo	Frazier	Lonergan	Sheppard
Black	George	Lundeen	Shipstead
Bone	Gerry	McAdoo	Smathers
Borah	Gillette	McCarran	Smith
Bridges	Glass	McGill	Steiwer
Brown, Mich.	Green	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Brown, N. H.	Guffey	Maloney	Thomas, Utah
Bulkley	Hale	Minton	Truman
Bulow	Harrison	Moore	Tydings
Burke	Hatch	Murray	Vandenberg
Byrd	Herring	Neely	Van Nuys
Byrnes	Hitchcock	Norris	Wagner
Capper	Holt	Nye	Walsh
Caraway	Hughes	O'Mahoney	White
Chavez	Johnson, Calif.	Overton
Clark	Johnson, Colo.	Pepper

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-six Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, several Senators have entered the Chamber since I explained the amendment. If I may, I desire briefly to explain it again, so they may understand its purpose.

The bill, on page 9, contains this provision:

> If the Secretary finds that any domestic area or Cuba will be unable to market the quota for such area for the calendar year then current, he shall revise the quotas for the domestic areas and Cuba by prorating an amount of sugar equal to the deficit so determined to the other such areas on the basis of the quotas then in effect. Any portion of such sugar which the Secretary determines cannot be supplied by domestic areas and Cuba shall be prorated to foreign countries other than Cuba on the basis of the prorations of the quota then in effect for such foreign countries.

Yesterday afternoon the Senator from Florida asked the chairman of the Finance Committee [Mr. HARRISON], who is now in the Chamber, if the purport of that provision was not to make it possible for the Secretary of State to have 59,782 tons to use for trading purposes with foreign nations other than Cuba. The chairman of the Finance Committee said, "Yes." Therefore I proposed the amendment.

The purport of the amendment now before the Senate is that Florida shall not be discriminated against. Under the terms of the bill Florida is getting only 15 percent of the cane allocation, or 15 percent of 420,000 tons, namely, 63,000 tons; Louisiana is getting 357,000 tons, and the beet areas are getting 1,550,000 tons. I pointed out the needs of Florida. I think in fairness I should say to the Senate that I do not propose to take the 59,782 tons from the beet area or from Louisiana but only from that tonnage which the Secretary of State proposes to use to trade with somebody for something, some foreign country other than Cuba, not one of our Territories, not one of our States, not even one of our near neighbors, like Cuba. The Senate is asked to vote on the question whether it is fairer for Florida to have a decent quota, namely, 122,782 tons, while Louisiana has 357,000 tons and the beet areas have 1,550,000 tons, or whether Florida should be kept at 63,000 tons, leaving Louisiana and the beet area where they are, because they would not be affected by my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER].

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, may we have the amendment read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read for the information of the Senate.

The amendment was read, as follows:

On page 2, it is proposed to strike out lines 14 and 20; and page 8, to strike out lines 1 to 2, inclusive, and the table which follows, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

(a) For domestic sugar-producing areas:

Area	Quotas (short tons)
Domestic beet sugar	1,550,000
Louisiana	357,000
Florida	92,782
Hawaii	938,000
Puerto Rico	798,000
Virgin Islands	9,000
(b) For the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands	1,000,000
(c) For foreign countries:
Cuba	1,911,476
Foreign countries other than Cuba	26,412

"(d) In the event that the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers is less than 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall first establish the quotas for the areas and in the respective amounts set forth in subsections (a) and (b) and after deducting the total thereof from the determined consumption requirements shall prorate the difference on the basis of the quotas established for Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba in subsection (c); if the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers exceeds 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall deduct the total of the quotas set forth in subsections (a) to (c), inclusive, from the determined consumption requirements and shall prorate the balance among the domestic sugar-producing areas set forth in (a) and Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba, on the basis of the quotas set forth in subsections (a) and (c)."

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] appeared before the Finance Committee and made a very forceful argument in behalf of his amendment. The committee gave careful consideration to it, but felt that if the principle should be adopted it would disorganize the whole quota situation. The administration has insisted very strenuously, through the State Department, on utilizing the 59,000 tons. If the committee had felt that we should have utilized that tonnage otherwise, I am sure we would have distributed it among Florida, Louisiana, and the sugar-beet areas, so that each of them might have had a portion of it. I hope the amendment will be rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BRIDGES obtained the floor.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield for a question to any Senator.

Mr. PEPPER. It is quite all right with me, but I was about to say that I have three or four more amendments which it would not take long to dispose of, and which I hoped I might be able to conclude, and then I should be through.

Mr. BRIDGES. I do not yield for the purpose of offering amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire declines to yield.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield for half a minute.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, I had intended to offer an amendment, on page 16 of the bill, following line 5, to limit to 1 year the time within which the refined quotas would be in effect. I think every Member of the Senate understands that really the only controversial question left in this bill is that regarding refined quotas as between the continental refiners and the offshore refiners.

In the House bill, as appears in section 207, quotas were fixed for refined sugar from offshore refiners. The Senate committee has amended the bill by fixing certain quotas for refined sugar that may be imported from the Philippines and from Cuba, and also, under a slightly different formula, has fixed the amount of refined sugar that may be imported from Hawaii and Puerto Rico. It seems to me that the issue is, of course, with reference to subsection (b) of section 207, which appears on page 16.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, is the Senator offering an amendment or taking the floor?

Mr. POPE. Just one more minute, and then I shall refer to the amendment.

Mr. BRIDGES. Having refused to release the floor to the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER] for the purpose of considering amendments, I cannot consistently release the floor to the Senator from Idaho except for remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire refuses to yield further.

Mr. POPE. May I read the amendment and then ask a question of the chairman of the committee?

Mr. BRIDGES. Very well.

Mr. POPE. The amendment is as follows:

Following line 5, at the end of section 207, I had intended to offer this amendment:

The quotas in the foregoing subsection (b) shall expire or be discontinued at the expiration of 1 year after the date of the enactment of this act.

It seemed to me the proposed amendment would afford a compromise, or, at any rate, ought to be considered by the conference committee as a compromise in the final solution of this problem. Therefore, I had intended to offer the amendment; but I am assured by the Parliamentarian and by others that the conference committee can consider this amendment when the bill goes to conference.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan and Mr. SMITH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield first to the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, am I to understand that the Senator is asking whether or not his amendment could be considered in conference?

Mr. POPE. Yes. The question which has been in my mind is whether or not this amendment could be appropriately considered by the conference committee unless it were offered and passed upon by the Senate.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. After conference with the Parliamentarian, I understand that it could be; and I therefore believe it would be best to proceed with the bill as it is, without the amendment being considered.

Mr. POPE. Now, I desire to ask the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON], the sponsor of the bill, what is his understanding on the subject?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, if the Senator from New Hampshire will permit me, I may say that the Senator from Michigan and myself and several others have conferred with reference to this amendment, and also with the Parliamentarian; and we are of the opinion that, if the measure goes through as it is now written, since section 207 of the House text was stricken out and entirely new wording as to certain paragraphs of that section was inserted, this matter would be in conference, and that the conferees, if they should deem it wise, could put a limitation on the refined importation.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Hampshire yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. That may depend on whether, in the House language and the Senate language, there is any difference as to the life of the act. If the House language fixes a 3-year limitation and the Senate language fixes a 3-year limitation there can be no compromise on 1 year, because there is no difference between the two Houses. If the House language leaves the term indefinite and the Senate language fixes a term of 3 years, there may be room for a compromise there; but there will have to be a difference between the two Houses as to the length of time during which the act shall be in effect in order to have 1 year or any other period designated in conference.

Mr. HARRISON. I will say to the Senator that the life of the act is approximately 3 years.

Mr. BARKLEY. That limitation applies, then, to all parts of the act.

Mr. HARRISON. That limitation would apply to all parts of the act; but section 207 of the House text was stricken out entirely, and a different percentage basis was applied by the Senate in its amendment. We are advised by the Parliamentarian, and it would seem to be logical, that, so far as this particular paragraph is concerned, since there is no other part of the bill than this which is applicable to the refined quota, it is his opinion that we could fix the term at 1 year or 2 years, or whatever the case may be.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not wish to discuss the wisdom of that policy; but I am frank to say that if the language stricken out contains no limitation as to time, and the language inserted contains no limitation as to time, the mere fact that the quotas are changed would not permit the conferees to agree upon any amendment as to time; and, in my judgment, the bill would be subject to a point of order if the conferees should go outside the language of the section as passed in the House and the Senate respectively.

Mr. HARRISON. It was my first impression that that was true, and I may say that I had a conference with the chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the House, who has given great study to this question, and he agreed with our Parliamentarian and with us that what I have stated could be done.

Mr. BARKLEY. I want the differences between the two Houses to be broad enough so that we may reach a proper understanding of the matter; but I do not want a situation to arise in which the conference report will come back here in such form that some Senator may make a point of order against it.

Mr. HARRISON. It is the opinion that the matter may be considered in conference.

Mr. POPE. I desire to thank the Senator from New Hampshire; and with the assurances that have been given, I shall not at this time offer my amendment.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages in writing from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Chaffee, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7127) authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to be held May 14 to May 21, 1938.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 2281) to regulate proceedings in adoption in the District of Columbia, disagreed to by the Senate; agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. PALMISANO, Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland, and Mr. DIRKSEN were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

The message further announced that the House disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 437) relative to determination and payment of certain claims against the Government of Mexico, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. MCREYNOLDS, Mr. BLOOM, and Mr. MARTIN of Massachusetts were appointed managers on the part of the House at the conference.

INTERFERENCE WITH THE MAILS

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, some time ago I submitted in this body a resolution having for its purpose an investigation of alleged interferences with the United States mails. The resolution was known as Senate Resolution 140. It was submitted on June 7 of this year. Subsequently an amendment was offered by the junior Senator from Pennsylvania

[Mr. GUFFEY] which sought to broaden the scope of the resolution.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. The fact that there had been actual interference with the mails or interference with a governmental department of the United States, either against the department's wishes or with the knowledge and acquiescence of some officials of the department, did not come to my attention until the 5th day of June. On that day I read in the metropolitan journals of the country that the mails were alleged to have been held up, and that the transmission of the United States mails had been interfered with, and in addition that the Post Office Department was alleged to be a party to an agreement to hold up certain mails in the strike-bound area.

All this pointed to an uncalled-for influence upon the proper functioning of a department of our Government. That persons may interfere with the United States mails and go unpunished and that postal officials may be a party to an agreement with outside persons without having to face investigation is unthinkable. This is a challenge to the Postal Service, and it should not go unanswered. A tradition has been dynamited—a tradition which has been built up that the mails must go through. The sanctity of the Post Office Department has been securely entrenched in the hearts of the American people from the organization of the Post Office Department under Benjamin Franklin, through the harrowing days of the pony express, and on through the struggle and strife of the great Pullman strike, during which the sanctity of the mail was upheld by the then Democratic President, Grover Cleveland. In our own era the tradition of the Post Office Department was upheld at the cost of many young lives. When Postmaster General Farley upheld the tradition that "the mails must go through", he sent young Army flyers over snow-capped mountains in planes ill-equipped to carry through. The fact that these young men faced death did not stop the Postmaster General at that time from declaring that the mails must go through.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield for a question.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator has referred several times to the Post Office officials. The Senator is fully familiar with the fact as to the individual in the Post Office Department who was in charge of the particular transaction to which he refers, is he not? In the hearings the name of the civil-service employee of the Post Office Department here was brought out, a man who has been with the Department for many years.

Mr. BRIDGES. Relative to interference with the mails?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The incident to which the Senator is referring.

Mr. BRIDGES. I assume it was Postmaster General Farley.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator has referred to the metropolitan dailies as the source of his information. Is it not a fact that even in those metropolitan newspapers it was pointed out that the incident arose as a result of a decision by a man in the Post Office Department who had been there for some 23 or more years, who was not an appointee of the present Postmaster General? Is the Senator from New Hampshire familiar with that fact?

Mr. BRIDGES. I will say to the distinguished Senator from Washington that there is a Postmaster General over there who was and is head of his Department.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I am asking the Senator whether or not he is not familiar with the fact that the agreement was made with an employee of the Post Office Department, a civil-service employee, who was not an appointee of the Postmaster General, and that the Postmaster General had nothing to do with it.

Mr. BRIDGES. I am familiar with the fact that Mr. Donaldson, who is the gentleman to whom I believe the Senator refers, had something to do with it. I do not know whether he had all to do with it or partially to do with it, but he was responsible to Mr. Farley, the Postmaster General.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator has been very free in his discussion of this subject, and I took it, from the fact that he has been so free, and given out newspaper interviews so many times about it, that he knew about Mr. Donaldson, and I am asking the Senator whether he does not think it would be fair of him, since he is discussing this question, to discuss it in terms of Mr. Donaldson, and not in terms of the Postmaster General.

Let me ask the Senator, is he interested in this matter from the point of view of assistance to the Post Office Department, to increasing its efficiency, or is it simply a political matter sent out by the national Republican headquarters?

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I am referring to an investigation as a result of a resolution which I introduced, and which was quashed by the committee.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I am glad to yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator says his resolution was quashed by the committee. In that I think he makes a pretty fair statement of the situation. As I recollect, there were 18 Democrats and 4 or 5 Republicans present in the committee when it was voted on, and every Democrat and every Republican voted against the Senator's resolution except the Senator himself.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, in answer to the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR], let me say that on the day when the resolution was voted on, when the final vote was taken, I believe I was the only Republican present at the time the vote was taken.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator is mistaken about the number of Republicans who were present. There were several Republicans there, and I was not surprised, in view of the evidence, that the Senator's Republican friends could not possibly vote for the Senator's resolution.

Mr. BRIDGES Let me explain to the Senator from Tennessee that the only two Republicans on the subcommittee besides myself were the Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON], who at that time was home in Vermont, and the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER], who was not present at the time the vote was taken.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator will admit, at all events, that his was the only vote he could get in favor of his own resolution?

Mr. BRIDGES. Yes; and I am proud of my vote.

Mr. McKELLAR. That is all right; I am glad the Senator is proud of it.

Mr. BRIDGES. The fact that these young men faced their death did not deter the Postmaster General at that time from carrying out the tradition that the mails must go through.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again at that point?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator has referred several times to the time when the Army planes carried the mails, when the aviation contracts were canceled because of fraud and dishonesty in the matter of the contracts, and when these poor young men were forced to carry the mail, being in the Army. Does the Senator know that there were just as many, and even more, young men killed in airplane accidents when they were not serving in carrying the mails as when they were carrying the mails? If he does not know that, he ought to look up the record, because he will find that to be the fact.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, on June 11 my resolution with its amendment was taken up by the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. At this initial hearing were present as witnesses First Assistant Postmaster General William W. Howes, Deputy First Assistant Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson, and Solicitor for the Post Office Department Karl A. Crowley.

Mr. Howes, in his statement to the committee, outlined the position of the Post Office Department. He stated that to the best of his knowledge there had been little interference with proper mail deliveries and that such interference as he was aware of was being investigated by the Department inspectors. That he was aware of no agreements between members of his Department and outside parties. That it was true that the Post Office Department had issued orders to their offices in the strike areas to make only such deliveries to the plants as were "regular" or "normal." That this was done in the interest of safety to the carriers. That the Post Office Department was not engaged in what might be termed "police activities to enforce transmission of the mails."

Upon the completion of Mr. Howes' statement I introduced before the committee a telegram from officials of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, from which I quote:

Relative to the postal question at Niles, Ohio, Mr. Galloway and Mr. Walter J. Payne did not handle or inspect any packages at the Niles post office. We simply had an understanding with the postmaster, assistant postmaster, and the postal inspector of Youngstown, Ohio, as to what kind of packages would pass through the picket lines and what kind would not pass. It was agreed that all regular mail would go through, but packages containing clothes and foodstuffs would not, as they were irregular. The action taken during the situation was to maintain peace and order, and that we have accomplished.

C. B. GALLOWAY, President,
WALTER J. PAYNE, Secretary,
Representatives.

Here, in my estimation, is an admission by parties to this alleged agreement between postal officials and strike officials that there indeed was an agreement or understanding. Before adjournment of the first day's meeting it was moved that the hearing be continued and that witnesses be called to substantiate or refute charges made.

On June 17, at the second meeting of the committee, the entire session was taken up hearing the testimony and examining Mr. Philip C. Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and vice president of the United Mine Workers of America. When he first heard that there was to be a hearing on alleged interference with United States mail, Mr. Murray wired me and demanded that he be allowed to be heard. I was glad to have him appear. His testimony was in particular relation with Senator GUFFEY'S amendment to my resolution. His charges against the steel company's activities in attempting to break the strike and his story of the Memorial Day strife in Chicago were indeed enlightening. However, his testimony concerning post-office interference was not of much consequence.

On June 18 the major portion of the hearing was again taken up by Mr. Murray, and the remainder by the testimony of Mr. Lewis L. Guarnieri, of Warren, Ohio, an attorney for the Republic Steel Corporation. In his testimony Mr. Guarnieri repeated under oath statements he had made to the press to the effect that packages mailed in various post offices in the strike areas were refused, and that in one instance an assistant postmaster had said to him that it was impossible to make mail deliveries because strike officials would not permit it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator recalls also that Mr. Guarnieri testified that one of the parcels or packages which the Republic Steel Corporation asked to have mailed to its employees within the plant was a truck load of bread, which had been shipped from Cleveland, and, incidentally, shipped right by the plant; bread that was intended to be taken to the post office. Instead of delivering it to the plant, as they could have done, they wanted the Post Office to take a truck load of bread into their own plant. The Senator recalls that was one of the parcels, does he not?

Mr. BRIDGES. I desire to quote now from the testimony of Mr. Guarnieri, who testified:

As I was saying, I entered the Niles post office with four packages addressed to Mr. Sam Brown, superintendent of the Niles plant. As I stepped into the post office, the gentleman in charge of the parcel-post window greeted me by name. I asked him if Mr. Marceau, postmaster at Niles, was in. The gentleman at the window said that Mr. Marceau was out with one of the mail carriers but that Mr. Flaherty—Bert Flaherty—the assistant postmaster at Niles, was in the postmaster's office. I walked into the postmaster's office, and I greeted Mr. Flaherty, whom I had known for a considerable length of time. I asked Mr. Flaherty if he would come out into the lobby, that I had four packages that I wanted him to examine. Mr. Flaherty came into the lobby in the presence of three gentlemen who were with me, and I said to Mr. Flaherty that "I have four packages containing nonperishable food that I desire to send through the United States mails"; that the packages were addressed to the superintendent of the Niles plant of the Republic Steel Corporation; that I would like to have the packages sent registered mail; that I would like to have a return receipt; that if he would tell me what the amount of the postage would be, I would be glad to pay it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield at that point?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator will recall that Mr. Guarnieri, who was the attorney for the Republic Steel Corporation, also testified that he took these four packages to the post office and took three witnesses with him, as I recall the number—it may have been two; either two or three—that he expressed the opinion at that time that he knew the Post Office Department would refuse it, and that his purpose in offering it at the time was to enable him to bring a mandamus suit against the Post Office Department, and afterward he did sue out such a writ against the Department. In other words, what the Senator is talking about is the testimony of Guarnieri, who said that he went there on that occasion for the purpose of arranging to bring a lawsuit against the Postmaster General, and that suit was brought, and, as I understand, abandoned, so that evidently Mr. Guarnieri had no more faith in it than the committee had in the Senator's resolution.

Mr. BRIDGES. I read further from the testimony of Mr. Guarnieri:

Mr. Flaherty said that he was very sorry that he could not accept those packages. He then said to me that only yesterday a gentleman came to the office with a package containing a bottle of medicine for delivery to someone in the Niles plant of the Republic Corporation. Mr. Flaherty said: "The gentleman who brought the package in gave us permission to have it opened." The package was opened. It was found to contain a bottle of medicine. Mr. Flaherty said that there was a postal inspector at the office at the time; that the postal inspector sent for Ben Galloway, a member of the C. I. O. in Niles, a member of the lodge there, and one of the officials, and also Walter Payne, who was an organizer for the union, and Mr. Payne and Mr. Galloway inspected the package. When they found that it contained medicine they readily consented to its delivery into the Niles plant, and Mr. Flaherty said, "That package was delivered."

A further part of Mr. Guarnieri's testimony is particularly appropriate, since the recent bombing which took place last week according to the newspapers. I quote now from the record:

Mr. GUARNIERI. I suppose at times there would be 100, 200 assembled at the corner. These men, for the most part, are armed with ball bats, pieces of clubs, lengths of pipe, rubber hose with pieces of pipe in the end of the hose. As you proceed down the street one or more of the pickets take hold of your arm and ask you where you are going. If you do not have a C. I. O. pass and you are not identified with the union, or you are not a police officer, a city official, or a county official, you are not permitted to go down the street.

Senator BAILEY. Have you seen the C. I. O. pass?

Mr. GUARNIERI. I saw one that a doctor had, Senator.

Senator BAILEY. Signed by whom?

Mr. GUARNIERI. It was signed by Gus Hall or Halberg, a man who lives, I believe, in Youngstown, Ohio, who is not a resident of Warren.

Senator BAILEY. Under what title did he sign? Did he sign as treasurer or secretary or chief or what?

Mr. GUARNIERI. As I recall it—I saw the pass—it was signed "C. I. O., by Gus Hall." That, however, was revoked 4 days afterward, and the doctor was not permitted to have a pass.

Senator BAILEY. Do you think if we could get one of those passes for the Post Office Department they could move the mail?

I ask Senators particularly to note that this testimony of Mr. Guarnieri would seem to be substantiated by the telegram I quoted above from Messrs. Payne and Galloway. In his visits to the various post offices Mr. Guarnieri was accompanied by three witnesses, who followed him in appearing before the committee and substantiated his statements concerning his attempt to make legal use of the United States mail. I ask Senators also to note the name of Gus Hall, who it was, according to Mr. Guarnieri, that signed the C. I. O. passes permitting people to move up and down the public streets.

I hold here for Senators' inspection a copy of the Washington Post under date of Wednesday, June 30, which shows a picture of Gus Hall, and underneath the legend reads "Sought in bombing."

He is the man who was sought in connection with a bombing in the strike area, and who prior to that time was signing the C. I. O. passes permitting the people to move up and down the public streets.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. Did they get him?

Mr. BRIDGES. I do not know about that.

Mr. MINTON. Are they still after him?

Mr. BRIDGES. I suppose so.

Mr. MINTON. Does the Senator know whether or not the charges against him have been substantiated in any way?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; I do not.

Mr. MINTON. Yet the Senator from New Hampshire reads the statement into the RECORD indicating that the man is guilty of some offense.

Mr. BRIDGES. I think there were pretty good grounds for suspecting him, because a warrant was sworn out for his arrest.

Mr. MINTON. The Senator wishes that suspicion cast upon this man and to appear in the RECORD, without knowing whether or not he is guilty?

Mr. BRIDGES. Where there is a good deal of smoke I think there is some fire.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator spoke of what occurred when his resolution was voted on. I wish to call his attention to the minutes of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads in respect to that matter:

> The committee then took up the resolution of Senator BRIDGES (S. Res. 140). Senator BAILEY stated to the committee that it had investigated whether or not a committee of five should be appointed to investigate further the alleged charges against the Post Office Department relative to delivery or nondelivery of the mails in the strike areas, and upon motion of Senator BAILEY—

The same Senator from whom the Senator from New Hampshire has just quoted, by the way—> duly seconded, it was agreed that the resolution be reported back to the Senate with the recommendation that such a committee be not appointed. The chairman was instructed to draft the full report.

The vote on the Senator's resolution was as follows: In favor of the Senator's resolution was Senator BRIDGES. Opposed to the Senator's resolution were Senators McKELLAR, HAYDEN, BAILEY, BULOW, O'MAHONEY, MURRAY, CHAVEZ, HOLT, ELLENDER, GREEN, LUNDEEN, SMATHERS, and LA FOLLETTE.

That is 13 to 1. There was one Republican and one Farmer-Laborite there. The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. FRAZIER] was absent.

Mr. BRIDGES. I am glad that the Senator verifies my recollection that there were very few Republican Senators present.

Mr. McKELLAR. There are very few Republican Senators in this body. I think there are only something like 14 regular Republicans in the body.

Mr. BRIDGES. There are 16 Republicans, and there will be more.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. The ratio of 13 to 1 is not widely out of proportion, is it, to the membership on the floor?

Mr. BRIDGES. I think that is perhaps a little out of proportion, but we expect to even up the membership.

Mr. McKELLAR. Aside from the Senator who introduced the resolution, there was no difference at all among the members of the committee, regardless of politics, as to whether or not the Senator's resolution should be reported.

Mr. BRIDGES. Following Mr. Guarnieri on the stand was one James E. Musgrove, a nonstriking worker in the Republic plant at Warren, Ohio. His testimony was mainly confined to beatings, clubbings, and threats of hanging to which he was subjected by pickets and strikers, and was devoid of enlightenment on the mail situation.

Following the testimony of Mr. Musgrove, two women—a Mrs. McDonald and a Mrs. Best, wives of workers in the steel-company plant—testified as to their inability to make use of the United States mail for the purpose of mailing packages of magazines and toothpaste to their husbands. In the case of Mrs. Best this refusal on the part of the Post Office Department caused her husband great trouble, inasmuch as without the powder for holding his false teeth in place he was unable properly to eat. Working in the plant at hard labor he could consume only liquids.

Following Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Best was heard the testimony of Mr. D. W. Jordan, an employee of the Republic Steel Corporation, Cleveland, Ohio, concerning certain packages which had been delivered to the strike-bound plant. Mr. Jordan testified to the effect that the picket captain permitted one package to go through, but ordered Jordan not to deliver the other package which contained a piece of clothing. The message on the package which was returned was: "C. I. O. would not permit delivery. 6-12-1937, at 1:30 p. m." The package which was allowed to go through contained film for a graflex camera.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield again?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator speaks of interference by the C. I. O. strikers. The Senator will recall that the evidence was complete that everyone who interfered with the mails or attempted to interfere with the mails at that place and at other places in that area were arrested; that the Department had the cases investigated and arrested those men, and their cases are now before the court. The Senator recalls that, does he not?

Mr. BRIDGES. No. I understand that nine men are now under indictment by the Federal grand jury, but that by no means is all.

Mr. McKELLAR. That was all in connection with whom there was any testimony. There was not a man who directly or indirectly attempted to interfere with the mails who was not arrested and who does not have to stand trial for it.

Mr. BRIDGES. Postal officials and mail carriers next testified to their inability to deliver United States mail to the plants. I am now talking about postmasters and postal employees, Federal officials, in the testimony from which I now quote. John Wyndham, carrier for the Warren post office, stated that his truck was stopped at the gates by pickets, and he was forced to return to the post office. The second time he attempted to make a delivery to the plant he was again accosted by pickets, and I quote from his own testimony as to what occurred. The questions by Senator McKELLAR, chairman of the committee, were:

> Was there any violence done to you or threatened you?
> Mr. WYNDHAM. No, sir.
> The CHAIRMAN. Why did you return, then?
> Mr. WYNDHAM. Because they told me what they would do if I moved any further.
> The CHAIRMAN. Who told you?
> Mr. WYNDHAM. The strikers.
> Senator BAILEY. What did they tell you?
> Mr. WYNDHAM. Am I permitted to use the language they used?
> The CHAIRMAN. Yes; go ahead.
> Mr. WYNDHAM. They told me that they would beat my damned head off if I went any further.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the Senator ought to be fair and state that the very man who used that language has since been arrested and is now being prosecuted both by the Post Office Department and the Department of Justice. There are offenses committed against the mails just as there are offenses committed against other departments. What more can a department do when there is interference with it and an act of violence committed against it than to have the man arrested and sent to jail?

Mr. BRIDGES. Following the testimony of Postman Wyndham was that of Ezra Chadwick, an employee of the United States Government post office in the capacity of substitute carrier of special-delivery messages.

Mr. McKELLAR. I did not get his name.

Mr. BRIDGES. The name is Ezra Chadwick.

I quote from part of Mr. Chadwick's testimony:

Mr. CHADWICK. I had some letters and three packages, newspapers, that Mr. Dixon said should go through; they were classified as mail.

The CHAIRMAN. Who is Mr. Dixon?

Mr. CHADWICK. Our postmaster. I took them down there and got past the first picket line and in front of the mill where an officer of the law was sitting, and I told him Mr. Dixon said that these packages were to go in. While I was talking with him one of the pickets reached through the window and picked up the package. You couldn't see the ends of it.

Senator BRIDGES. Reached into your truck?

Mr. CHADWICK. Into my car.

Senator BRIDGES. A C. I. O. picket reached into your car and picked up this package of United States mail?

Mr. CHADWICK. Yes; and he put it back down and he said that was clothing and couldn't go through, but the other two packages were open on the ends and you could see they were newspapers and he said they were all right * * *. After he did that, and told me those two could go through, I got out of my car. He wouldn't let me drive the car up to the mill yard, and I walked back with the other two and took the package up to Mr. Dixon as he requested me to do.

Both Mr. Chadwick and Mr. Wyndham testified that the persons who stopped their trucks were armed with baseball bats, clubs, and other weapons.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield there?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. McKELLAR. The chairman asked Mr. Chadwick this question:

Did any others touch your bag?

And he replied, "No."

The Senator knows that the man who did touch the bag was afterward arrested and is now being prosecuted. What else would the Senator have done under such circumstances?

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. Harry J. Dixon, United States postmaster at Warren, Ohio, testified that the morning the strike started a committee of C. I. O. men came to his office and protested certain mail deliveries to the plant. He said that these men told him if he did not prevent this mail from going through they were fearful that they could no longer hold the pickets from interference with the mail. Mr. Dixon also stated that after these threats, when packages were offered by wives of nonstrikers and wholesale houses and grocery companies he presumed that he was to judge whether the packages were to be considered regular mail or not.

Mr. Harry Marceau, United States postmaster at Niles, Ohio, testified that he went on a truck to the steel plant in an attempt to deliver mail; that he was prevented from carrying out his duty by a steel cable which was stretched across the gates of the plant and by cars parked solidly across the driveway, in addition to three of four hundred men carrying baseball bats and ordinary clubs. After this incident Mr. Marceau stated that he withheld two packages from delivery; that he recognized such packages as food by the labels on the outside, such as Armour, Swift, or the labels of the different markets in Niles.

Mr. M. B. Flaherty, assistant postmaster at Niles, gave testimony that contradicted that of Mr. Lewis L. Guarnieri. He stated that he had made no agreement with Mr. Payne or Mr. Galloway or other strike pickets, but that he had outlined to them the policy of the Post Office Department in delivering mail to the plants. In part, Mr. Flaherty's testimony is as follows:

Mr. FLAHERTY. I will recite the incident about the package of medicine as it occurred. Mr. Trimber, an inmate of the plant, called me on the phone and told me he was expecting a parcel containing medicine which he was badly in need of; that he was sick. He said, "You may open the parcel and satisfy yourself it contains nothing but medicine; and if you can get that medicine here, I will greatly appreciate it." I told him I would make an effort; make every effort to get the medicine to him. I went out in our workroom and found the parcel, and I opened it, and it contained a single bottle of medicine, and just about that time Inspector Sands came in, and he told me at that time he would like to meet Mr. Payne and Mr. Galloway; he wanted to talk with them. I called attention to this bottle of medicine and said, "I am going up to the plant to take this medicine", and he said, "You leave that here on the table." I brought Payne and Galloway in, and it was at that time Inspector Sands told them what the policy of the Department was.

Senator BRIDGES. What did they say?

Mr. FLAHERTY. That was all right. It was agreeable to them.

Senator BRIDGES. Did they say at that time the medicine could go through?

Mr. FLAHERTY. The medicine had not been mentioned yet, but Inspector Sands called their attention to the bottle of medicine and told them that while that was an unusual parcel and would be construed as unusual, that owing to the circumstances and the humane element of the thing, that he insisted this parcel be delivered, and that was all right with them.

Mr. Flaherty when further questioned considered that his statement which I have read above was not an admission that there was any agreement or understanding between himself and union pickets. This despite the fact that the union officials in their telegram to me admitted there was an agreement, and this despite the fact that Mr. Lewis Guarnieri swore under oath before this committee that Mr. Flaherty had an agreement with union officials, and this despite the fact that Guarnieri's statement was substantiated by three witnesses.

Mr. Carl Armstrong——

Mr. McKELLAR. Before the Senator leaves Mr. Flaherty I want to call to his attention what Mr. Flaherty said about the matter.

The CHAIRMAN. That telegram—

Which the Senator has already quoted—

The CHAIRMAN. That telegram says: "We simply had an understanding with the postmaster, assistant postmaster, and the postal inspector of Youngstown, Ohio, as to what kind of packages would pass through the picket line and what kind would not pass. It was agreed that all regular mail would go through, but packages containing clothes and foodstuffs would not, as they were irregular."

The chairman asked him these questions:

Did you make any agreement to that effect?

Mr. FLAHERTY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. No agreement with those gentlemen?

Mr. FLAHERTY. No, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. Do you know these gentlemen?

Mr. FLAHERTY. Yes, sir.

The CHAIRMAN. How long have you known them?

Mr. FLAHERTY. Just since the strike.

The CHAIRMAN. Did they call on you or where did you see them?

Mr. FLAHERTY. I was requested to call on them at the post office.

The CHAIRMAN. Requested by whom?

Mr. FLAHERTY. Inspector Sands.

The CHAIRMAN. What did you do?

Mr. FLAHERTY. I went to the office of the plant and inquired for Mr. Galloway and Mr. Payne and met them and told them Mr. Sands would like to see them at the post office.

The CHAIRMAN. And they came?

Mr. FLAHERTY. They came.

The CHAIRMAN. What took place?

Mr. FLAHERTY. Mr. Sands outlined to them as nearly as I could get his meaning the policy of the Department.

The CHAIRMAN. What was that policy?

Mr. FLAHERTY. As to delivery of mail, and he said that the Department insisted that all ordinary mail, which included letter mail and parcel mail, must be delivered.

The CHAIRMAN. Was that policy made public and did everybody in Niles know it or have the opportunity to know it?

Mr. FLAHERTY. Well, I think so.

The CHAIRMAN. You stated to them just what you stated to everybody else?

Mr. FLAHERTY. Yes.

That was the testimony of Mr. Flaherty and was the testimony of all the other postmasters and officials from whom the Senator is quoting. Why not let the facts go out before the Senate and before the public just as they came out before the committee when the Senator's resolution was unanimously turned down, except for his own vote?

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. Carl Armstrong, acting postmaster at Youngstown, Ohio, said that despite the fact that his men could not deliver all types of mail to the plant he had in fact favored the company a little. The following is from his testimony:

The CHAIRMAN. Have you ever tried to favor either side?

Mr. ARMSTRONG. As a matter of fact, we have favored the company a little. We have bootlegged certain articles of parcel post through.

Mr. President, when this country reaches such a state that an official of the United States Government, the postmaster at Youngstown, Ohio, testifies under oath that in order to perform its normal functions it becomes necessary for the Government to "bootleg" the mail through picket lines we have reached a pretty low ebb and it is time that every citizen of the United States was aware of that fact, and a thorough investigation made of the cause of such a disgraceful situation.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. McKELLAR. I think we ought to be fair with these witnesses. This is what Mr. Armstrong testified, and it related to a truckload of bread:

> The CHAIRMAN. That is the first truckload of bread to be shipped by parcel post I have ever heard of myself. What did they do?
> Mr. ARMSTRONG. Well, I do not know that they did anything except try to get it in, except it was returned.
> The CHAIRMAN. Went back to Cleveland?
> Mr. ARMSTRONG. Yes, sir.
> The CHAIRMAN. How far is Youngstown from Cleveland?
> Mr. ARMSTRONG. About 65 miles.
> The CHAIRMAN. Then what occurred?
> Mr. ARMSTRONG. Of course, we had general instructions from the Department when we refused any unusual mail of that type.

Application had been made to a postmaster to send a truckload of bread by parcel post from the post office to the Republic Steel Co. plant in that town when the truck had to go right by the door of the plant. The matter was taken up by the Post Office Department here, and, under the law governing the Post Office Department, the Postmaster General instructed the postmaster not to receive that unusual kind of mail. What should Mr. Armstrong have done? What does the Senator claim that he did that he ought not to have done or what did he not do that he ought to have done? Should he have disobeyed his superiors? Should he have carried a truckload of bread down there himself or should he have sent it by someone else? Should he have taken part in the struggle between the Republic Steel Co. and its employees? Does the Senator want the Government of the United States to take part in every strike that happens to occur?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; but I do not believe it should sit by with folded arms when there is a virtual civil war in some sections of the country.

Mr. McKELLAR. There was not any civil war there. There was a controversy between the Republic Steel Co. and its employees, and there was a strike. Of course, we all know that the Senator took the side of the Republic Steel Co. and wanted the Government to do so; and he is angry because the Government did not do it, and he is angry also because the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads of the Senate turned down his resolution, which would have virtually meant that the Government should take part. I say that the Government ought not to have taken part between the strikers and the Republic Steel Co. under the circumstances.

The Senator heard the evidence, and, after having heard it, I do not see how he, or anyone else who either heard the evidence or has read it—and it is here in printed form—can take the position that the Government through its Post Office Department ought to have interfered in that strike. It ought not to have done it, and the Government did exactly right in not taking part in the strike.

Mr. BRIDGES. Let me tell the distinguished Senator from Tennessee something. We had a deplorable condition in the country; law and order flouted, and the Government of the United States unable to perform its normal functions as a result of mob rule.

Let me tell the Senator from Tennessee something else. The day may not be far distant in this country when we shall either have law and order or we shall have an utter absence of law and nothing but disorder. It may become an important issue in this country. When that day comes I hope the Senator will be found on the right side.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. As a colored man down in my State used to say, "I wonder has the Senator been up and interviewed the great Supreme Being of the universe, so that he is able to prophesy what is going to happen?" The Senator has a right to prophesy all he wishes, and I do not care anything about that, but the Senator ought not to make these charges because he is piqued, because he is disappointed at his own committee turning him down by a vote of 13 to 1 on a resolution which had nothing in it to start with except politics. The Senator introduced it as a political resolution, and the reason I say that is that he not only went to the newspapers with every feature of his resolution, with every step that he took concerning his resolution, but since that time he has constantly gone to the newspapers trying to make something of a political nature out of his contest which was lost before the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads by a vote of 13 to 1.

Mr. BRIDGES. There is a difference of opinion about that.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; a difference of 13 to 1.

Mr. BRIDGES. I am still proud of my vote. I was right, and time will justify me.

Mr. Fred W. Justus, postmaster at Massillon, Ohio, testified that there were two strike-bound steel plants within the area served by his post office, and that for a period of 10 or 12 days after the strike had occurred his office had made an attempt to deliver mail, with the assistance of the local police department. Finally the pickets stopped these mail deliveries, the local police withdrew their assistance, and the pickets were enabled to block all deliveries of mail to plants in the area. Postmaster Justus also said that the carriers carried lists of the mail matter contained in their trucks so that when stopped by the pickets they could refer to these lists and assure the pickets that nothing was contained in the mail pouches which was banned from the mails by pickets.

We have here the sworn testimony of the postmaster at Massillon, Ohio, that he was obliged to make up lists and obliged to carry them in the mail trucks so that the C. I. O. pickets might know what the mail trucks were carrying so they could determine what packages they would let go through. That was a deplorable condition.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to let me show what the witness actually said?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The witness whom the Senator has just been attempting to quote said on page 201 of the RECORD:

> Mr. JUSTUS. We commenced to get an unusual amount of mail to be delivered to the men in the plant and we proceeded to attempt to deliver, and we did possibly for 10 or 12 days with the assistance of the local police department. Now, I did that by counseling with Canton, Ohio, 8 miles to the east, and Akron, Ohio, just 18 miles to the north. Canton was experiencing the same experience we were and Akron had a strike last winter. It was the reverse, however; it was known as a sit-down strike, and on the strength of that I felt it was my duty to attempt to deliver the mail. We did, however, check up the various angles in the P. L. & R.—the Postal Laws and Regulations—and we were cautioning people and asking people about such things as we considered exempt at that time, and that included liquor and firearms and explosives. We did stop some packages that were suspicious looking where we could hear the gurgle or something else in there, you know, and we did probably take out and stop 8 or 10 packages, and we found liquor in the packages going into the plant and notified the sender to come and get his package that he had mailed unmailable matter, but the food and clothing at that time and such packages that seemed to be all right according to the P. L. & R., we attempted to deliver and there was a notice in the Cleveland Plain Dealer that food and clothing were being exempted, and we commenced to have trouble in delivering.

It is against the postal regulations to deliver liquor, firearms, and explosives. Would the Senator have that kind of mail sent through?

Mr. Justus testified there were eight cases of that kind. What would the Senator have the postmaster do? If it was against the postal regulations to carry liquor or firearms or explosives in the mail, would he have had them delivered, regardless of regulations?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; but I would not let the C. I. O. tell me what to do.

Mr. McKELLAR. The C. I. O. had nothing in the world to do with it.

Mr. BRIDGES. The C. I. O. had everything in the world to do with it.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know much about the C. I. O. and do not care anything about the C. I. O., but the Senator knows that in this contest in the three post offices which were investigated under the Senator's resolution, there was no question that every attempt to violate the postal laws was not only condemned by the Post Office Department, but the Department through its inspectors conducted an investigation, and had those who were guilty arrested and put in jail. They are there now unless they are out on bond. They have to be tried for whatever offense they committed. Does the Senator expect never to have any difficulty in regulating postal matters? That may be so in the State from which the Senator comes, but it is not so in any other State.

Mr. BRIDGES. I shall continue my statement. I shall cover the Senator's argument in a few moments.

I may say here that the Post Office Department is apparently not only making agreements with the C. I. O. as to what mail it may deliver, but it is apparently also required to list the contents of mail carried in the trucks to assure the C. I. O. officials that the agreement is being kept.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I challenge the Senator's statement.

Mr. BRIDGES. Read the testimony.

Mr. McKELLAR. I challenge the Senator to point to a single agreement. I hand him the testimony as it is printed, if he has not a copy of it, and ask him to point out a single agreement between Government officials and the C. I. O. or anybody else. What the testimony shows is that the Post Office Department told everybody interested in the matter, regardless of whether they were laboring men or citizens or C. I. O.'s or what not, what the postal regulations received from Washington were. The Senator failed to submit any evidence of any kind of an agreement between the C. I. O. and the Government, or anybody else with the Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. Inasmuch as the Senate has a consignment of sugar which we hope to deliver today, I wonder if there is any hope that we might shorten the discussion about the C. I. O. and the sit-down strikes?

Mr. BRIDGES. I shall yield only for a question and try to finish my remarks.

Mr. BARKLEY. I asked the Senator a question.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, on June 24 the major portion of the hearing was given over to the testimony of Mr. T. M. Girdler, chairman of the board of the Republic Steel Corporation. His testimony was chiefly confined to giving his side in answer to the charges of Mr. Philip Murray of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee and to making counter charges against the C. I. O. The last half of the hearing was taken up listening to statements of Chicago police officers relative to the Memorial Day occurrence in Chicago. At the conclusion of this hearing on June 24 I asked the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR], the chairman of the Post Offices and Post Roads Committee, to have Postmaster General Farley summoned to testify, but the chairman of the committee refused to have Mr. Farley summoned unless I divulged questions which I intended to ask Mr. Farley, although this had not been necessary in the case of any other witnesses subpenaed.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I know the Senator will yield for a question at that point.

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield only for a question.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator, of course, knows that during the entire time of the strike Mr. Farley was not in the city of Washington, but that W. W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General, was in attendance on the committee every day. Mr. Farley knew nothing in the world about the transactions of his own knowledge.

Mr. BRIDGES. Is the Senator asking a question?

Mr. McKELLAR. Of course the Senator must know——

Mr. BRIDGES. Is the Senator asking a question?

Mr. McKELLAR. I will ask a question. Does not the Senator know and does he dare deny that Mr. Farley was not there?

Mr. BRIDGES. I know Mr. Farley should have been there. If the Senator wants to talk, let him explain where Mr. Farley was and why he was not attending to his job.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know where he was.

Mr. BRIDGES. The country might like to know where Mr. Farley spends most of his time.

On June 28 the final hearing of the committee was held, at which time it was determined, by a vote of 12 to 1, to report adversely on my resolution, indicating that a sufficient investigation had been made; by a vote of 7 to 5 to refer the Guffey amendment to my resolution to the Subcommittee on Civil Liberties of the Committee on Labor and Education; and by a vote of 12 to 3 not to call Mr. Farley as a witness.

Mr. President, despite the fact that mine was the sole dissenting vote in the committee on my resolution, I still feel that sufficient evidence has been introduced to warrant a full and extensive senatorial investigation. From the amount of evidence I have outlined, which is at best only a small portion of the whole, it may be seen that the Post Offices and Post Roads Committee has held only preliminary hearings, although these hearings extended over a considerable period of time, and many witnesses were heard. I believe, from evidence which was produced and from testimony which was heard, that it cannot be denied, first, that there are strong grounds for belief that there has been an agreement between United States postal officials and outside parties pertaining to the kinds of mail to be carried; second, that there have been innumerable instances of direct interference with the proper delivery of the United States mails; third, that the Post Office Department is attempting to interpret the United States Postal Laws and Regulations in such a manner as to amount to new legislation and is thereby usurping the power of Congress, which has the sole right to make the laws of the United States; fourth, that crimes have been committed which should not be allowed to go unpunished.

Mr. President, the people of this country have a right to know what we are going to do about this matter. Communications have reached me from all over the country asking that the investigation be not given up. When our citizens, with their letters and packages and newspapers, appear at the windows of our post offices, they are entitled to the services that the United States mail is capable of rendering, without fear or favor. I speak not now of persons like Mr. Lewis L. Guarnieri, who was taking his packages and his witnesses from post office to post office to make out his test case, but I speak of the Mrs. McDonalds, Mrs. Bests, and other mothers, wives, and sisters of steel-plant workers, who have attempted to mail their packages, not containing liquor or firearms, but containing the humble necessities of man, such as food, articles of clothing, and medicine. These people have been turned away from the windows of Government agencies which they assist in supporting with the curt reply that their packages are no longer entitled to the use of the United States mail because they are "irregular."

Mr. President, I ask you to think about the word "irregular." To what laws are we to go to determine what the Post Office Department considers "irregular"? Does the Post Office Department claim that the place of delivery is "irregular"? Does it base its refusal to deliver these packages, offered by citizens who have never before been refused the rights of Uncle Sam's mail, on any such flimsy grounds because of their contents? Or does it classify mail as "irregular" under threat of outside parties, which threat the same outside parties back up by the use of clubs, baseball bats, and threats of physical harm to United States postmen, as we have seen by the testimony given before the committee?

Mr. President, I ask that you think about this, because I have here evidence in the form of an affidavit of an official of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio, which states that from the 20th of February until the 19th of March 1936 mail deliveries were made of foodstuffs to the Goodyear plants, which were then in the grip of a strike. I have here a letter from the United States post office at Akron, Ohio, which states that during the Goodyear strike there was one attempt to interfere with the United States mails, and that was an attempt to disconnect wires from the motor of a mail truck, after which act one of the strikers apologized and promised no further trouble.

Mr. President, I ask you to think about this "irregular" mail delivery, because in the 1936 strike it was not a question of parcel-post packages of wives, mothers, and sisters of workers in the plant, but it was a question of the delivery of packages from Armour & Co. and Swift & Co. containing ham, bacon, eggs, fresh rolls, butter, cheese, and other food products in the sum total of approximately 48,000 pounds.

Mr. President, in the period of a little over 1 month in 1936 the United States mail delivered almost 1 ton of food per day to a strike-bound plant with no question of "irregularity", with no agreements with strikers, and with but one attempt at interference. What has occasioned the change in the policy of our Post Office Department? Why did not the Postmaster General, in February of 1936, order his Department to stop deliveries of tons of food products? Surely it cannot be said that it was any more usual for a tire and rubber company to feed its nonstriking employees tons of food which were sent through the United States mails by Armour & Co. in 1936 than for a steel company to attempt to feed its nonstriking employees food sent through United States mails by Armour & Co. in 1937.

Mr. President, what is the distinction? It is this that we must investigate. If there is an "irregularity" today, why was there not an "irregularity" a year ago?

I suggest, and I firmly believe, that the term "irregular", as used by the Post Office Department as an excuse for failure to carry out its functions, is in reality based upon the fact that it is unusual to have hundreds of men armed with clubs, sticks, broken bottles, slingshots, and ropes, barring proper delivery of mail. If that is the "irregularity", then the people of the Nation have a right to know what we are going to do about it. To whatever source you go you will find the same feeling of horror expressed when the fact is brought home that our Government stands idly by, making excuses instead of taking action.

I have here an article from a magazine called The Nation, which was written by Oswald Garrison Villard, whom I am sure no one can term a reactionary. I quote from it as follows:

> And when labor or capital seeks to prevent the United States mails from being delivered, it is guilty, in my judgment, of a criminal conspiracy. You also ask my opinion of the withholding of mail by the post office from blockaded and besieged factories. I regret that this has happened, and I have made it clear to the Post Office Department that because it has lacked courage it has appeared to take sides, and that must not be. A department which boasts that neither heat, nor cold, nor rain, nor snow deters it from delivering its mail cannot afford to be frightened off by picket lines. The next time this happens we shall resort to armored trucks, and, if need be, United States guards. Neither labor nor capital has the right to suspend the legitimate functions of this Government, and neither will be permitted to do so as long as I am in the White House.

This quotation is from an open letter which Mr. Villard thinks President Roosevelt should have written to the people of the United States.

Why has Mr. Farley, in his attitude, right-about-faced? Why should he deliver these large amounts of food during strike conditions in 1936, and in 1937 find them to be "irregular" mail? If they were "irregular" in 1937, they were "irregular" in 1936.

Mr. President, the Assistant Postmaster General has testified that what little interference with the mails he was aware of was properly investigated.

Since the beginning of the hearing it has been brought to my attention that cases of interference and threats of interference have extended over a period of several months.

On March 10 of this year the United Automobile Workers, who were striking at the Chrysler plants, after much discussion, stated that they would permit mail to enter and leave the plants. On March 11 of this year Richard T. Frankensteen, organizing director of the United Automobile Workers, said that mail deliveries would no longer be permitted to certain buildings within the plant. On May 13 of this year it is reported to me that a mail truck was upset twice at Aliquippa, Pa., by pickets, its windows broken, and its driver cut by glass. Although Washington was informed by the local assistant postmaster, to my knowledge, nothing has been done about it. Again I ask, Mr. President, what is going to be done?

On March 19 last Mr. Patrick McHugh, a special-delivery mailman for the United States, was stopped in his car in Detroit. When he reported the incident to the police, five men were arrested and were registered on the charge of violating the United States Code. These men were strikers in the Chrysler strike of this year. They gave their names as follows: Edward Zerucha, Steve Zajac, Edward Kawalec, Ben Gryglewski, Louis Lafferty.

I quote from a letter written to me by Mr. Henry W. Piehl, chief of detectives of the Detroit police department. Detective Piehl says, concerning the arrest of the five abovenamed men:

> On questioning them, they stated they were ordered to patrol the road by some union member, unknown to them, from the De Soto Motor Car Co. plant, and to allow no cars to park; that they did not know McHugh was a mailman, as his car was a private automobile, and he wore no uniform other than a badge on his hat. Postal Inspector Dale Peterson, who questioned them at the time of their detention at headquarters, stated that in his opinion no action could be taken against these men, inasmuch as there was no mail in the car at the time it was stopped, and McHugh was returning to the Roosevelt post office to go off duty. He stated he would confer with the district attorney and notify us as to his decision. We later released the above men on the recommendation of Inspector Peterson.

That is simply mentioned as a case where the local police in one of the great cities of this Nation have arrested men for violation of the United States Code, and they have been released upon recommendation of a postal inspector.

Are we to assume, then, Mr. President, in one case that the mail is of the greatest importance to the Post Office Department and not the lives and safety of the carriers, and in another case that the mails cannot be delivered because of danger to the lives and safety of the carriers?

But to get back to more recent incidents, how can we honestly tell the people of this Nation that there is no further cause to investigate such situations as have been shown to exist? How much longer is the public expected to permit outside persons armed with weapons to hold up United States mail trucks and threaten to beat the "damned heads off mailmen"? How much longer is the Post Office going to permit packages to be returned with the mark "C. I. O. would not permit delivery"? How much longer must postal officials "bootleg" mail in order that its proper delivery may be executed?

From beginning to end this whole thing is a disgrace to the United States Government. If an investigation does not take place, the responsibility rests with those who have killed this resolution. Information on the subject is coming into my office daily, and I certainly feel it my duty, as a representative of the people of one State of the Union, to see that they know about what has happened, so that this terrible state of affairs may be corrected and no blemish may remain on the record of the Post Office Department. The eyes of the country are open to the fact that our hearing covered only part of this matter. There is popular demand that it be continued to a proper conclusion.

This is only the beginning. If these things are permitted to go uncorrected, and these persons who have threatened the servants of the people in the proper performance of their duty go unpunished, the people of the Nation will know full well where to place the responsibility. Do not mistake the fact that from childhood we have all been taught to respect the sanctity of the mail. Let us not permit any scandal to turn this to disrespect.

Mr. President, from the testimony of the First Assistant Postmaster General it is quite plain that the position of the Post Office Department is based upon the right which Postmaster General Farley considers is given to him by section 492 of title 39 of the United States Code, Annotated, from which I quote:

> Whenever, in the opinion of the Postmaster General, the postal service cannot be safely continued, the revenues collected, or the laws maintained on any post road, he may discontinue the service on such road or any part thereof until the same can be safely restored.

Mr. President, can it be said that the present ruling of the Post Office Department pertaining to "regular" and "irregular" mail can in any way be authorized by this section? In the first place, is it not clear that the section gives the Postmaster General only authority to continue or discontinue service, and not to continue part of a service and discontinue part of a service? Is it not clear that the section refers to safety in the sense of safety to the carrier and the mail as a whole? If it is unsafe for a part, then surely it is unsafe for the whole. To arrive at any other conclusion is to admit that outside persons may at some time have the right to exercise censorship over the United States mail. For the postal authorities in the strike areas to deliver packages of film and letters of one nature and refuse to deliver packages containing clothing and food products amounts to censorship; and I defy anyone to show me that this section of our laws gives Postmaster General Farley or any of his assistants the right to censor United States mail.

This so-called irregular mail regulation is nothing more than a face-saving gesture on the part of the administration. Under existing law it cannot be denied that the Post Office Department is bound to accept and deliver all mailable matter which is wrapped in accordance with postal regulations and the postage for which has been paid. The Supreme Court of the United States so decided in the case of the American School of Magnetic Healing v. McAnnulty (187 U. S. 94). The Supreme Court of the United States commented at some length at that time, saying:

> Here it is contended that the Postmaster General has, in a case not covered by the acts of Congress, excluded from the mails letters addressed to the complainants. His right to exclude letters, or to refuse to permit their delivery to persons addressed, must depend upon some law of Congress, and if no such law exists, then he cannot exclude or refuse to deliver them.

In the case of Payne v. United States ex rel. National Railway Publishing Co. (20 Appeals D. C. 581) the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia said:

> It is very clear that the Congress of the United States has not committed to the Postmaster General or to anyone else the matter of determining what should be carried in the mails as second-class matter and what as matter of the third class. It has reserved that power exclusively to itself. It has itself made the classification; and it is not competent for the Postmaster General to add anything to the statute or to take anything away from it. * * * The citizen who desires to have his publication carried in the mails of the United States as second-class matter, and who has fully and fairly complied with all the requirements of the statute in regard thereto, has acquired a positive legal right to have it so carried; and his right will be enforced by the writ of mandamus if the Postmaster General arbitrarily or without valid legal reasons refuses to receive and transmit such publication. Of course, the Postmaster General and his subordinates are required to use judgment and discretion, and it may sometimes be a matter of much difficulty to identify a publication as one included in the category prescribed by Congress. But their discretion is limited to this question of identification; and it is not competent for them to impose additional requirements beyond those specified in the statute.

These cases were suits brought against postal officials to require them to perform such duties.

It is, therefore, beyond contradiction that the mail which the Post Office Department refused to accept or deliver to a strike-bound plant must necessarily be accepted and delivered except for the question of danger. The very code section the Post Office Department hides behind does not empower them to send part of the mail through and refuse to send other parts through. Such action is censorship, and there is no power given by the Congress of the United States to make that possible. We have reached a deplorable condition when it is possible for such censorship to be so conducted.

In no law do I find the Postmaster General empowered to censor the mail in the interest of safety. The action of the C. I. O. is bringing about a situation where the Post Office Department fears for the safety of its personnel and equipment in carrying out its duties under existing laws of Congress, and cannot be characterized as other than a willful obstruction of the United States mails, which is in itself a criminal offense. The motion to call Mr. Farley before the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads was defeated, but had I been allowed to question Mr. Farley I intended to ask him if the sole reason for the discontinuance of a portion of the service of the Department at Warren and Niles, Ohio, was due to the danger involved, and if so, how he determined what service to discontinue. I think the public is entitled to know what part statements, representations, or threats by C. I. O. pickets or strikers play in assisting the Postmaster General to arrive at his determination.

As I have shown, in 1936 the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. had no trouble whatsoever in enlisting the services of the Post Office Department to deliver almost a ton of food products a day from Armour & Co. At that time there was no use made by the Post Office Department of code section 492 of title 39, but that was 1936. Then came the election, at which time Mr. John L. Lewis' C. I. O. affiliates contributed approximately half a million dollars to the political forces of the administration. The Democratic National Committee still owed $50,000 of this sum, according to last reports. Now in 1937 the same type of mail which passed freely in 1936 is classed as "irregular."

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the Senator talks about the amount of the National Democratic Committee owes. Will he be good enough to tell us how much the Republican National Committee owes?

Mr. BRIDGES. I cannot tell the Senator the exact amount, but I can tell him that we have not resorted to the same tactics for making up the deficit which I understand have been resorted to by the Democratic National Committee.

Mr. McKELLAR. What tactics has the Republican National Committee resorted to? The Senator certainly knows how much his party owes?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; I do not.

Mr. McKELLAR. Why should he be so careful to investigate how much the Democratic Party owes and so careful to leave out what the Republican Party owes? I do not think the Senator knows anything about what either one of them owes.

Mr. BRIDGES. I take the sworn statement of the Democratic National Committee.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator applied for that, why did he not get a statement as to what the Republican Party owed?

Mr. BRIDGES. The Republican Party, so far as I know, has been making no deals and has had nothing to do with the C. I. O. and has received no contributions from C. I. O. affiliates.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator's only interest is in the C. I. O.?

Mr. BRIDGES. I will tell the Senator that, so far as I know, the Republican National Committee does not owe John L. Lewis or his C. I. O. affiliates any money, and I thank God for that.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know that the Democratic Party owes any such money. I never heard of it.

Mr. BRIDGES. It is true according to the sworn reports.

Mr. McKELLAR. That they owe John L. Lewis money?

Mr. BRIDGES. John L. Lewis' C. I. O. affiliates.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have not heard of it.

Mr. BRIDGES. As a matter of fact, so long as the Senator raises that question, the distinguished Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] a few days ago described as a deplorable condition the fact that the Democratic National Committee went out soliciting witnesses before their appearance before the Interstate Commerce Committee, and I think the distinguished Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] is to be complimented for his courage in not standing for such a deplorable thing.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am sure that he will be very highly pleased to get that commendation from the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Hampshire yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. MINTON. I am a member of the committee of which the distinguished Senator from Montana is the chairman, and I did not understand that any witness, knowing himself to be a witness, was solicited by anybody on behalf of the Democratic National Committee.

Mr. BRIDGES. I only know from what I read in the newspapers that a man by the name of Young, who was appearing before the Committee on Interstate Commerce in regard to the Alleghany Corporation, stated sometime before, he had been solicited to buy and had bought certain Democratic convention books, and had paid $15,000 for the books, and the newspapers reported him as making the statement that he would have paid the same amount for soap wrappers if he had been asked.

Mr. MINTON. But there was no intimation or any evidence of any kind, by Mr. Young or anybody else, that the man who sold him the book, or whatever it was, knew that he was coming before the committee to testify, not a scintilla of evidence of that kind.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. ELLENDER. I am sure the Senator is aware of the fact that the Republican Party was supported by John L. Lewis in 1928, is he not?

Mr. BRIDGES. I am not aware of that; but I will take the Senator's word for it if he makes the statement as an actual fact; but it was not supported by him in the recent election.

Mr. ELLENDER. He was O. K. then, I suppose?

Mr. BRIDGES. I will take the Senator's word for it; but I point out that he did not support the Republican Party in the last election, and, so far as I know, if my memory serves me correctly, he or his affiliates did not make any contribution, at least, in 1928. I have no record of it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Was the Senator on the finance committee of the Republican National Committee?

Mr. BRIDGES. No; but I read the newspapers at that time, and have checked up some since.

Mr. McKELLAR. Occasionally the newspapers get things a little wrong.

Mr. BRIDGES. I know they are wrong sometimes, but they cannot all be wrong all the time.

Mr. President, I should like to point out the change of attitude in our Post Office Department following the 1936 election year, and I should like to know whether when Mr. Farley made his decision as Postmaster General, he took into consideration his duties and his obligations as chairman of the Democratic National Committee. That would be very interesting. I wanted to ask him that question.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield for a question.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator asked the question. He said he would like to know about a change of attitude on the part of the Post Office Department. I want to tell him one change of attitude, that under the Hoover administration one of the most diabolical conspiracies to rob the Government by the aviation companies, under the leadership of the then Postmaster General, Mr. Brown, was carried out, and it became——

Mr. BRIDGES. Is the Senator asking me a question?

Mr. McKELLAR. It became a national scandal and a national disgrace; and when James A. Farley became Postmaster General afterward, succeeding Mr. Brown, he canceled those contracts and established a system of honesty in the Post Office Department. I am wondering whether the Senator objects to a system of honesty in the Department.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I should like to ask the Senator from New Hampshire whether he has discovered that the Federal Government has prosecuted any of these so-called conspiracies and frauds which we have heard yelling about on the part of the chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads?

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not know whether any of them have been sent to jail or not, but I know, from an examination of the facts, that a number of them ought to have been sent to jail, because they were dealing with trust funds of the United States Government, and they were distributing their favors in millions of dollars to the aviation companies of that day.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Hampshire yield for another question?

Mr. BRIDGES. Certainly.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the Senator from New Hampshire know that the eight great contractors who were condemned by the executive department of the Government in their absence, and without notice and without trial, and punished, afterward tried to recover from the United States Government damages for such unlawful breach of their contracts, and were denied the opportunity on the ground that the United States had not consented to be sued? Does the Senator know that?

Mr. BRIDGES. I am very glad to have that called to my attention.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Senator from Vermont know it? Let him answer the question.

Mr. BRIDGES. I will answer the question the Senator asked me.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the Senator does not know what happened, I will be glad to say——

Mr. BRIDGES. I am not yielding.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. McKELLAR. The contracts were canceled, and the law holds that they are still canceled.

Mr. CLARK. I merely want to ask the Senator from Vermont whether he does not think that what he stated is a perfectly valid objection to a lawsuit?

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes, that was absolutely perfect; but when they got before the only court in which they could appear for a part of their recovery there it was held that the cancelation was unlawful, without any right under the Constitution. When we ascertain the facts regarding the cancelation of the air-mail contracts, we find that all this noise about conspiracy and fraud is a necessary gesture to save the faces of those who exercised sheer tyranny in depriving citizens of this country of their right to contract and in punishing them without trial in a court of justice, and without notice and an opportunity to be heard.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, quite the contrary is true. The gentlemen whose contracts have been canceled went to the courts and undertook to obtain damages from the Government for the cancelation of the contracts. But this is how they settled: They brought suits for the purpose of saving their own faces, and after bringing the suits they compromised by accepting the amount that was due for the month or part of the month during which they had to carry the mails. That is the truth about the matter. Thereby the contractors whose contracts were canceled by Mr. Farley and by the President of the United States, by accepting the money due them for the month that they had done the work, or for the part of the month during which they had actually carried the mails, agreed that they had no further claims against the Government.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for another question?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Is not the Senator from New Hampshire aware that in addition to this extraordinary punishment of these men—which is not yet completed, because they are disqualified for life from contracting with the Government—the sums of money now mentioned by the distinguished Senator from Tennessee were withheld from these men for a long period of time, more than a year, although the Government and the Post Office Department knew that they owed these gentlemen that money, because they had earned it under the contracts before the contracts were canceled? Yet, in addition to all the other punishments, the Government withheld these funds from the contractors after the funds were earned.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. I understand that the Senator has only two more pages of his speech remaining. I hope his colleagues will let him finish, so that the Senate may transact some business.

Mr. BRIDGES. I thank the Senator.

I desire to quote from an article written by Mr. James Farley in 1933. The article was entitled "Heroes of the Air Mail." In that article Mr. Farley said:

> Then there was Pilot Ambrose Banks, flying over Warren, Ohio, with 31 sacks of mail, when the plane's motor stopped. He could have jumped, but he chose to stay with the plane in a forced landing. He brought it down in a field, but the ship struck a telephone post and burst into flame. Nevertheless, with the aid of firemen from Warren, 28 bags of mail were saved.

The United States mails must go through, according to Mr. Farley at that time.

Why at this time is there a change of front? Why are we not following the precedent established by that great President, Grover Cleveland, who insisted upon respect for the authority of the United States? I believe we are showing today, through the attitude of the Post Office Department in these strike areas, a limp, flaccid, un-American, weak-kneed manner of dealing with these matters, and that we should right-about-face and carry out our normal functions in the name of decent government.

The longer we sit idly by, letting this and that organization dictate to and flout the power of the Federal Government, the bloodier will be the result of the operation which will eventually have to be undertaken. Action is what is desired by the people at this time; action, regardless of any political alliance, regardless of any feelings for either side of the controversy; action in the name of decent government.

Interference with the proper transmission of the United States mails is a crime; and it makes no difference who the individuals may be who interfere, be they employees on strike or be they representatives of the employer. The United States Government should stand firm for law and for the sanctity of the mails. The same rule applies today that applied 40 years ago in the great Pullman strike at Chicago. The same warning should be given to those who have the temerity to make threats and actively to take part in holding up the proper delivery of the mails. The warning is, "Hands off, regardless of who you are, whom you represent, or to what party or organization you belong." If conditions were reversed and Mr. Tom Girdler, of the Republic Steel Co., sought to interfere in any way with the acceptance and delivery of the United States mail, I should ask the Senate for the same investigation I am now asking.

Mr. President, I do not see how the Senate can do otherwise than say that the investigation called for by the resolution is justified. By testimony and by other evidence, sufficient grounds have been established to support the contention that agreements have been made between postal officials and outside persons; that the United States mails have been held up; that employees of the United States Government have been threatened; that high officials in a department of our Government are presuming to make their own interpretations of our laws.

While it is true that the Department of Justice has taken action against nine or more persons charged with committing crimes against the Government in the strike areas, it is quite obvious that many, many times this number are engaged in flouting the authority of the United States. We have no assurance that these troubles are at an end, and that at some time in the near future the mails will not again be held up, the laws will not again be interpreted to suit the whims and fancies of officials and organizations engaged in industrial strife. Let us put an end to this sort of thing once and for all. Let us hold a thorough investigation. Let us call, to testify, all those who should be called to testify, without fear or favor, and without consideration of political consequences.

If we do this it will have a twofold effect. First, it will serve to remove from the record of the Post Office Department any stains now upon it. Second, it will set out a clear rule for the Department to follow in future actions of this kind. If legislation is needed to broaden or curtail Federal laws, now is the time to enact such legislation. Any other action will only serve to put this body in the same category as the Post Office Department in the minds of the public.

We certainly cannot hide behind any United States statute and say that it is "irregular" or "not normal" for the United States Senate to hold an investigation, especially when the grounds warranting the investigation are as strong as those which have just been presented.

I therefore respectfully ask the approval of the Senate of my resolution.

Mr. President, in conclusion, I desire to say very definitely that from my observation and from my studies I believe we have had in certain areas of this country a virtual civil war. The attitude of some minor officials and some major officials has been deplorable. I believe that the United States Government cannot afford to permit the sanctity of the United States mails to be questioned; and I believe it is our duty as a legislative body to make a further investigation to see what actual interference has occurred and is occurring, and to make provision for stopping future interference.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I should like to have inserted in the RECORD certain matter relative to the speech which has just been made by the Senator from New Hampshire.

First, I desire to insert an excerpt from the minutes of the Post Office Committee showing the vote on the resolution asking Mr. Farley to appear before the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. McGILL in the chair). Without objection, the excerpt will be printed in the RECORD.

The excerpt is as follows:

Senator BRIDGES opened the discussion relative to having Postmaster General Farley before the committee to testify on said resolution, and stated to the committee his reasons for asking the committee to require him to be present. After a lengthy discussion by several of the members of the Committee, a motion was made by Senator CHAVEZ "that Mr. Farley be not requested to come before the committee." The motion was duly seconded. A discussion followed. Thereafter the motion was put by the chairman, and the "yeas" and "nays" were as follows:

	Yeas	Nays
Mr. McKellar	Y
Mr. Hayden	Y
Mr. Bailey		Y
Mr. Bulow	Y
Mr. Byrnes	Y
Mr. O'Mahoney	Y
Mr. Murray	Y
Mr. Chavez	Y
Mr. Holt		Y
Mr. Ellender	Y
Mr. Green	Y
Mr. Lundeen	Y
Mr. Smathers	Y
Mr. Frazier [1]
Mr. La Follette	Y
Mr. Bridges		Y
	12	3

[1] Not voting, had left the meeting.

Mr. McKELLAR. I next want to offer a report of the post-office inspectors in charge in Ohio, dated Youngstown, Ohio, June 12, 1937, as found on pages 315 to 322, inclusive, of the committee hearings, which gives the facts surrounding the alleged violations of the postal laws.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the matter will be printed in the RECORD.

The matter referred to is as follows:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF INSPECTOR,
Youngstown, Ohio, June 12, 1937.

Subject: Youngstown, Ohio; Niles, Ohio; Warren, Ohio; Struthers, Ohio; Campbell, Ohio: Mail conditions in the strike area.

INSPECTOR IN CHARGE,
Cincinnati, Ohio:

1. This report is submitted to describe the conditions relative to the delivery and acceptance of mail matter in the area affected by the steel strike, especially as relates to the information desired by the First Assistant Postmaster General, in his request of June 9, 1937, bearing upon the offices of Youngstown, Warren, and Niles, but it also includes information relative to conditions prevailing at Struthers and Campbell, Ohio. The information relating to each town is set out separately in this report.

YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO

2. In the city of Youngstown, Ohio, having a population of 182,000, is located one of the plants of the Republic Steel Corporation. This plant is located about one-fourth mile from the post office. This plant extends over considerable territory, however, and the Mahoning River runs through the plant grounds. While the main entrance where the office is located is but one-fourth mile from the post-office, another entrance to the plant is located at what is known as Stop 5, Poland Avenue, which is 1½ miles from the post office. The Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. has two plants that utilize mail facilities of the Youngstown, Ohio, post office. One of these plants is located in the city limits of Youngstown, Ohio, about 2 miles from the post office, and the other is located in the town limits of Campbell, Ohio, about 3 miles from the Youngstown, Ohio, post office.

3. Prior to the steel strike, which went into effect May 26, 1937, the post office at Youngstown made deliveries of parcel-post mail only to the Republic Steel Corporation office, which is located in the Republic Steel Corporation's plant at 335 Market Street. This delivery was made by truck. All first-, second-, and third-class mail other than large packages, was delivered to the Republic Steel Corporation through post-office box. Prior to the strike no deliveries of any class of mail were made by the post office at Youngstown, to either of the plants of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. Deliveries of all classes of mail for the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. were made through post-office box. Employees from their downtown office, located in the Stambaugh Building, ordinarily called for this mail. Special-delivery mail for this company was always delivered to their downtown office, located in the Stambaugh Building, on the northeast corner of Central Square, which is two blocks from the post office.

4. Prior to the strike, there were two regularly scheduled parcel-post deliveries daily to the Republic Steel Corporation office, located at the Republic Steel Corporation plant at 335 Market Street.

5. Prior to the strike, the Republic Steel Corporation received approximately three sacks of parcel post daily which, as previously stated, was delivered by truck to their office located at the plant. All other classes of mail for this company, as previously stated, were delivered through post-office box. The company employees would call for their mail five or six times a day, and there would be a considerable volume for them upon each call. All mail for the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. was delivered through the post-office box; and employees called five or six times a day, and upon each call, there would be a considerable volume of mail ready for delivery.

6. Not only has the normal service extended to the Republic Steel Corporation, prior to the strike, been continued, but it has been extended at the request of that company, by having the regular mounted parcel-post carrier stop once in the morning and once in the afternoon at the Republic Steel Corporation's plant, located on Stop 5, Poland Avenue. On these two deliveries all mail of all classes on hand and ready for delivery, which includes all mail that was formerly handled through a post-office box, and called for by a company employee, has been delivered twice daily to the plant office by request of the company. The normal service extended to the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. prior to the strike has been maintained since, with the exception that mail bearing special-delivery stamps is being sent, if directed to the plant, to the Brier Hill plant, located 2 miles from the post office on Division Street. This special-delivery mail, prior to the strike, would have been delivered to the offices in the Stambaugh Building. This service was extended at the request of company officials.

7. There has been no interference whatever with the normal service as scheduled, prior to the time of the strike. There has, however, been some interference with the newly scheduled service which has been placed into effect since the strike. This feature will be covered at the end of the data bearing upon Youngstown.

8. Since the inception of the strike to date, the acting postmaster, Carl Armstrong, has not been personally approached by any of the officers or members of the striking employees with reference to the delivery service. Objections have been made by members of the striking employees, through delivering postal employees, concerning the delivery of newspapers and parcels containing food or clothing. No permission to examine any of the mail sent out for delivery to any of the plants involved in the strike has been requested by any of the leaders of the striking employees, but some of the pickets have been reported to have made remarks along this line to special-delivery messengers and upon one occasion, to regular Carrier Reen.

9. At no time did the postmaster at Youngstown give anyone not connected with the Postal Service any privilege of examining any mail. He maintained throughout that his understanding of the orders of the First Assistant, as related to unusual mails, was a function of postal employees only. His employees determined whether or not any matter presented for mailing at post-office windows should be accepted. His employees also determined whether delivery of any mail by means of the new extended services, outlined in paragraph 6 of this report, should be made. The work of the accepting employees and the delivering employees was closely observed by the acting postmaster and his supervisors.

10. The acting postmaster at Youngstown, Ohio, in conference with leaders of the striking employees, did not discuss the advisability of delivering mail to the plants, but maintains that he insisted that there must be no interference with the movement of the mails.

11. On May 28, 1937, a truck load of bread from Cleveland, Ohio, which was addressed for delivery to the Profit Co., care of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., arrived at the Youngstown post office. This mail was offered for delivery at the usual delivery point, namely, the post-office box. In view of the fact that a regular delivery of mail is always made to the Stambaugh Building, and prior to the strike, all mail exclusive of special-delivery matter was delivered by post-office box to employees of said company, who worked in the offices at the Stambaugh Building, the postmaster at Youngstown, as a special courtesy, agreed to make delivery of these parcels containing bread to the offices of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. in the Stambaugh Building. The company refused to accept the mail at or through the post-office box or at the offices in the Stambaugh Building and requested that delivery be made to their Campbell plant. Since at no time, either prior to the strike or since the strike, has ordinary mail other than special-delivery mail, been delivered to this point, and since this plant is actually in the delivery limits of the third-class office of Campbell, Ohio, the postmaster declined to make delivery. Thereupon the matter was subsequently refused by the addressee and returned to the senders as "Unclaimed."

12. During the duration of the strike, food products and clothing have been offered for mailing at the mailing windows of the Youngstown main post office and several stations by a vast number of mailers, which mail was so directed as to require delivery into the plants of the Republic Steel Corporation, or the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. In these instances the acceptance of the mail was declined. While no record of the number of persons who offered this mail has been maintained, the postmaster states that a vast amount of such matter was refused for mailing.

13. Since the beginning of the strike, to date, a number of packages containing food provisions or clothing, directed for delivery to the plants of the Republic Steel Corporation or the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., have been received. Examination of these parcels has not extended to a point of opening the individual packages. However, in some 30 or 40 instances, the parcels, either by outside endorsements or otherwise, clearly showed that they contained food or clothing, and were addressed for delivery by way of the newly extended service outlined in paragraph 6 of this report. They were returned to senders endorsed with the following notation: "Unable to deliver; cannot get through picket lines."

14. Upon one occasion one of the clerks of the Younstown, Ohio, post office refused to accept a mailing of the local newspaper addressed for delivery to the plant of the Republic Steel Corporation because the mailing was a very large package; the clerk considered it as an unusual mailing and believed that delivery by means of the newly extended service could not be accomplished. Newspapers wrapped singly or in small bundles have been accepted by the employees of this office for mailing, regardless of how they were addressed. and delivery of these has been accomplished.

15. While there have been no acts of violence on the part of the strikers toward postal employees, a number of threats have been made. On June 8, 1937, about 1:20 p. m., the regular parcel-post carrier, Ralph A. Reen, attempted to make delivery of all classes of mail matter at stop 5, Poland Avenue, for the Republic Steel Corporation. The driveway leading to the steel plant was blocked by a black Chevrolet sedan automobile bearing a C. I. O. sign, which he believes belonged to one of the pickets of the striking steel workers. The carrier made a left-hand turn to get into the driveway, came in slowly, and stopped within a few feet of the Chevrolet automobile. Within a few minutes possibly 100 strikers and pickets gathered around the truck and inquired of him what he had in the truck; whether he had any food in any of the mail; and he responded that he had mail for delivery. About this time two city policemen, whose names he failed to obtain, arrived and asked the pickets to clear the way; informed them they could not stop the carrier. They requested the man in the Chevrolet to move the car and let the carrier in, but this he refused to do. One of the pickets laid across the front of the mail truck and told the carrier he was not going through. Then the police officers ordered the carrier to drive through even though the pickets would not get out of the way, but this he could not do because of the Chevrolet car.

16. At this juncture one of the pickets, described as being a young fellow about 26 or 27 years of age with light hair, dressed in a brown suit, remarked, "The other carrier walked in; you can walk in, but you can't drive in, cops or no cops." The carrier thereupon backed the mail truck into the street, drove to a telephone, and called the post office and advised his immediate supervisor of the circumstances. The supervisor instructed him to take the mail in and under no circumstances to permit anyone to examine it. The carrier locked the mail truck and carried the mail, which was all in a no. 4 sack, down past the picket line and made delivery into the plant. As he passed the pickets, they called him many names, using profane, obscene, filthy, and vile language. They remarked to him several times that they intended to see what he had in the mail bag and demanded of him that he open it and let them examine it. He refused to acquiesce to any of their demands. When the carrier arrived at the gates, the mill policemen hesitated for some time and acted as though they were afraid to open the gates and let the carrier in. Finally, however, they opened them, and he made delivery of the mail to the plant. While prior to the delivery of this mail several of the pickets had threatened to "get him" when he came out, when he left the plant the two city police officers met him and accompanied him. When they were about half way to the truck a mob of the pickets stopped them and wanted to know of the carrier what he had delivered. He merely told them that he had delivered ordinary mail. The pickets then stated, "Nobody else is going to get in the plant tomorrow", whereupon the carrier asked them if they realized what they were doing, and one of the pickets replied, "The rats inside did not deserve to get nothing."

17. Mr. Reen did not know any of the persons who abused him with the vile language and did not recognize any of the pickets who stopped him. He does not know the policemen. The carrier stated that the principal objection on the part of these pickets, strikers, and sympathizers appeared to be against delivering mail containing food, cigarettes, or newspapers. This incident is the only interference on the part of the strikers with any of the regular classified employees.

18. On June 11, 1937, Robert W. Bannon, who has been employed as a special-delivery messenger at Youngstown for the past 20 months, was prevented from making delivery of some special-delivery parcels on a trip made to stop 5, Poland Avenue, to the Republic Steel Corporation plant. This occurred at 10:10 a. m. Mr. Bannon states that he and Paul Ricker arrived at stop 5 at the time that Robert Burke, an organizer for the C. I. O., was making a speech to the assembled pickets; that he started in the drive with his automobile, which is a privately owned car bearing a sign on the front of the windshield reading, "U. S. Mail", intending to continue on into the plant, when he was stopped by the pickets, who demanded to know what he intended to deliver. He informed them mail matter, whereupon they asked to examine the parcels. He refused to permit this and was told by the strikers not to enter the plant with the parcels. He made delivery of his letter mail and one small parcel endorsed "medicine."

19. Prior to Robert Bannon's entry into the plant, at the time when the pickets stopped him, he called to Robert Burke, one of the organizers for the C. I. O., and asked about going into the plant with the mail. Burke did not reply, but nodded toward a man who had been sitting in a black Ford sedan, and who, while he did not appear to be a picket, gave Bannon the impression that he was one of the organization leaders. He described this man as being of medium height, rather slim, weight about 145 pounds, wearing horn-rimmed glasses, a blue suit, and a straw hat. Bannon stated he did not know this man, but believes he could identify him if dressed the same as on this occasion. This man told Special Delivery Messenger Bannon, "No packages." Carrier Ricker, who was with Bannon at the time, then remarked, "Packages were delivered to this point all day yesterday", and the man replied, "I don't care what you did yesterday; you are not doing so today." The parcels were returned to the post office and subsequently delivered by the parcel-post carrier on his regular scheduled trip without interference.

20. On the evening of the same day Paul A. Ricker, who has served as special-delivery messenger for the past 7 years, met interference in attempting to deliver parcels at stop 5, Poland Avenue. He recites the incident in part as follows:

"On June 11, about 8:30 p. m., I was on my own trip, by myself, and had six special-delivery parcels addressed to the Republic Steel Corporation, stop 5, Poland Avenue. I slowed down, blew my horn, and turned into the driveway to the plant gate. The men at the gate said, 'It is U. S. mail; go ahead.' When I got a little farther down the driveway I was intercepted by a group of men, who informed me that no packages could be delivered. I informed these pickets that I had two very small parcels containing medicine. They said since it was medicine it was all right. I delivered these parcels and returned the other four to the office. I knew none of the men by name who interfered with the delivery."

21. The interferences as outlined in paragraphs 15 to 20 of this report are the only instances of interference, and the parcels which were denied delivery upon those trips were delivered upon subsequent regularly scheduled trips. For the past several days the postmaster at Youngstown has been able to effect the delivery of all mail coming into his office. He is of the opinion that if proper discretion is used upon the part of the accepting employees at all offices, so as to exclude unusual mailings, that is, large-quantity mailings of foodstuffs and clothing, that no difficulty of any consequence will be experienced in the delivery at his office. There are a great many pickets on duty at the plants involved in the strike, and the force is changed quite frequently. The interferences described in paragraphs 15 to 20 of this report appear to be the result of the more radical element and of pickets who do not understand or else will not follow the instructions of their leaders. This conclusion is arrived at by the fact that objections to deliveries have occurred only upon the three occasions cited.

22. The statements of the regular carrier and the two special-delivery messengers were reduced to writing in the form of affidavits. The affidavit of Carrier Reen was transmitted to your office under date of June 8, 1937, accompanied by preliminary report in case no. 125225–D, and copies of the affidavits of Bannon and Ricker are herewith.

NILES, OHIO

23. In the city of Niles, Ohio, having a population of 16,314, is located one of the plants of the Republic Steel Corporation. This plant is outside of the city limits about three-quarters of a mile from the post office. Prior to April 1, 1937, all mail except parcels for this firm was delivered through a post-office box, and one afternoon delivery of parcels was made daily to the storeroom, located in the plant grounds. On April 1, 1937, which was prior to the strike, the Republic Steel Corporation requested that delivery of all their mail be made to the plant and relinquished their post-office box. Since then one delivery has been made in the morning by mounted carrier of first-, second-, and third-class mail, consisting of from 30 to 50 pieces, to the office building, which is located near the entrance to the plant grounds, and an afternoon delivery was made to the storeroom, which has recently been moved and which is now located approximately one-quarter mile inside the plant grounds. This necessitates the mounted carrier crossing seven railroad tracks. The afternoon delivery includes all classes of mail and normally consisted of about 2 parcel-post packages and 20 pieces of other mail.

24. Since the strike the service normally performed during the period April 1 to May 27, 1937, has not been maintained, in that for the period May 27 to June 3 newspapers and parcels, regardless of contents, addressed for delivery to Republic Steel Corporation, were not delivered. After conferring with Inspector Sands on June 3, a complete delivery of all mail addressed for delivery to this firm was made on June 4. The mail then on hand did not appear to include parcels containing food or clothing and numbered only eight or nine.

25. Harry Marceau, the postmaster, states that on May 27 the pickets at the Republic Steel Corporation plant refused to permit delivery of parcels into the plant grounds, but raised no objections to the delivery of letter mail. This occurred on the first regularly scheduled trip of the day. Shortly thereafter the postmaster states he accompanied the special-delivery messenger with matter for delivery and they were denied entrance to the grounds by the pickets. Upon this occasion the leaders of the strike pleaded with him not to attempt delivery of parcels as they could not control the pickets and serious trouble might result. He then returned to the office without making delivery and notified the sheriff of Trumbull County, who went to the plant and talked to the pickets, after which delivery of all mail on hand for that company was delivered. Later the same day an attempt was made by the postmaster and special-delivery messenger to effect delivery of four large special-delivery parcels containing foodstuffs, but upon being denied admittance to the plant grounds, these parcels were returned to the office and subsequently returned to the senders endorsed, "Undeliverable." Since June 4 no interference with the delivery of any mail at this office has been experienced, but the postmaster has made no attempt to effect the delivery of newspapers, or parcels containing clothing or foodstuffs.

26. Since June 3 in no instance have the officers or members of the striking employees approached the postmaster with reference to the delivery service, have entered no objections to the delivery of any mail to the plant, and have not asked to examine any of the mail delivered into the plant. He stated, however, that on June 3 he gave to them his interpretation of the First Assistant's orders concerning the acceptance and delivery of unusual mail as meaning: "That he should not accept for delivery any mail matter which would not normally have come to this plant for delivery." Since that date this postmaster has refused to accept for mailing at his office parcels containing food or clothing intended for delivery to any plant known to be involved in the steel strike, and that he has not attempted to make delivery at his own office of any such parcels. Because the leaders of the strike contended that the mailing of newspapers to the plant of the Republic Steel Corporation was, in fact, an "unusual mailing", and as he concurred in this view, he has not attempted the delivery of such matter. The postmaster contends that by his actions he has avoided certain difficulties and has afforded the Republic Steel Corporation the same service they enjoyed under normal circumstances, for none of the items now not being delivered were ever before included in that firm's normal mail.

27. The postmaster states he has at no time permitted any member of the striking organization, or any person not connected with the Postal Service, to examine any mail matter or pass upon the delivery of same, for he believed this to be entirely his responsibility.

28. Four conferences were had by the postmaster with the strikers and their leaders. On June 3, Walter J. Payne and B. C. Galloway, C. I. O. leaders, met with the postmaster in his office, at which time the necessity of noninterference with the mails on the part of the strikers was impressed upon these leaders. At this same meeting the postmaster explained that only normal mails would be delivered, but that the strikers and their leaders must have confidence in the postal employees' decisions relative to whether the mail should be delivered or not, and that further interference could not and would not be condoned.

29. Since the strike, it is estimated that approximately 100 persons presented parcels containing clothing or food at this office for mailing, which parcels were intended for delivery to one of the plants involved in the steel strike, and these mailings were refused. It is estimated that approximately 60 to 80 parcels containing food or clothing, which were mailed at other offices intended for delivery at the Republic Steel Corporation at Niles, have been returned to the senders endorsed "Undeliverable." No attempt at delivery was made of any of the parcels returned, except those received for delivery May 27, concerning which previous mention has been made in this report.

30. No violence on the part of the strikers toward postal employees has been experienced at this office. No threats have been made to the postmaster or postal employees since May 27. At that time, however, the pickets and the group of strikers at the entrance to the plant grounds informed the postmaster that they would turn over the mail truck and the special-delivery messenger's car, if any further efforts were made to deliver parcels containing foodstuffs or clothing. Since no further attempts on the part of the postmaster to effect delivery of matter of this nature have been made, no further threats have been forthcoming, and the strikers, according to the postmaster, appear to have confidence in him and his employees, to the extent that they believe he is effecting delivery of only normal mails to the plant. The postmaster does not know the names of any of the persons who threatened him and the special-delivery messenger, although he was present at the time the threats were made.

31. In the event that the present policy of declining to attempt to deliver newspapers, and parcels containing food and clothing should be discontinued, the postmaster firmly believes that violence would result. He also firmly believes that had he insisted on making deliveries on May 27, that it would have resulted in serious trouble and probable injury to himself and other employees.

32. As evidence of the fact that the mail at this office is now abnormally heavy, even though the postmaster is declining to attempt delivery of certain mail matter, as previously stated, the special-delivery records show that 99 more special-delivery letters have been delivered during the first 11 days of June as compared with the same period of time during previous normal times.

WARREN, OHIO

33. In the city of Warren, Ohio, having a population of 41,062, is located one plant of the Republic Steel Corporation. This plant is about one-half mile from the post office, outside the corporate limits.

34. Prior to the strike, two regular deliveries daily were made by mounted carrier to this plant. All classes of mail were included in these deliveries, and are said to have normally consisted of about 500 letters and letter-size circulars, and two sacks of parcel-post packages on the morning delivery, and about 200 letters and letter-size circulars and one sack of parcel post on the afternoon delivery.

35. Normal mail service as to deliveries and as to the type of mail handled previous to the strike has been maintained. No attempt at delivery, however, is being made at this office of parcels endorsed as containing, or which by handling clearly show that they contain clothing or foodstuffs, addressed for delivery to the steel plant. On May 29, there was received at this office for delivery 79 large parcels containing bread, mailed by the Strahley Baking Co., Cleveland, Ohio, which required two mail trucks to handle, and a full truckload of towels mailed by the Penn-Ohio Towel & Supply Co., Youngstown, Ohio, addressed to the Republic Steel Corporation. After the regular scheduled trips were completed, attempts were made to deliver these three additional truckloads of "unusual mail", but the mob of pickets and strikers at the gates refused to permit the trucks to enter with these unusual loads. After the postmaster saw that to force the issue would result in difficulty and probable injury to the employees, the matter was returned to the post office where it was held until such a time as he received instructions as to its disposal. Subsequently, this matter was returned to the senders. The only other instance of interference at this office occurred on June 2, at which time a special-delivery messenger was refused entrance into the plant to effect delivery of a small special-delivery parcel. In both these instances of interference, a great many pickets, strikers, and sympathizers were involved, and it was impossible and impracticable to obtain the identity of the persons involved.

36. A conference was held by the postmaster with Mr. J. W. Grajchias, Harry Wines, and Gus Hall, members of the C. I. O. committee, directing the steel strike at this point, on June 3, 1937. At this meeting the postmaster explained the instructions which he had received and which he intended to follow relative to the delivery of matter considered unusual. He invited their attention to the interference experienced by the special-delivery messenger, and these men explained that it was the act of irresponsible pickets and the situation would be immediately corrected. The postmaster emphasized to these men that the right of determining whether or not any mail matter was to be termed unusual was entirely with the postmaster and postal employees, and that interference on the part of any outsider with the delivery of mail could not be condoned. Since that time the postmaster has made no attempt to effect the delivery of any parcels clearly marked or from ordinary handling plainly showing that they contained clothing or foodstuffs, and no interference has been experienced with the deliveries since that time. At no time, states the postmaster, has he permitted any member of the striking organization or any person not connected with the post office to examine any mail matter or pass upon the delivery of same.

37. A vast amount of food products and clothing has been offered for mailing into the local steel plant and steel plants affected by the strike that are located elsewhere. These mailings have been refused. Likewise, a great number of parcels have been received from other offices which are clearly endorsed to show that they contain clothing or foodstuffs, or which in ordinary handling disclose that they contain clothing or foodstuffs, and these have all been returned to senders endorsed "Undeliverable", without any attempt of delivery.

38. No violence on the part of the strikers toward postal employees has been experienced at this office, and the only threats which have been made to the postmaster or postal employees by the strikers are those which have been recited in paragraph 35 of this report.

39. The postmaster states that the mail that he is now delivering, which does not include any matter known to contain food or clothing, is abnormally heavy and is all that he can reasonably deliver on the regularly scheduled trips with his present equipment. By reference to the special-delivery records at this office it was noted that this service has more than doubled in volume during the period of the strike. The postmaster is of the opinion that there would be violence on the part of the striking employees and strike sympathizers and probable injury to postal employees in the event that attempts were made to deliver matter containing food or clothing to the Republic Steel Corporation plant, and is confident that if the present practice of declining this matter were lifted it would result in the necessity of furnishing him additional equipment and more assistance.

STRUTHERS, OHIO

40. In the city of Struthers, Ohio, having a population of 11,249, is located one of the plants of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., the entrance to which is directly across the street from the post office. Now, as prior to the strike, no regular mail of this plant comes directed for delivery to Struthers, Ohio, but all of it comes addressed for delivery through Youngstown, Ohio. (See information in par. 3 of this report bearing on Youngstown, Ohio.) Only in rare instances was an occasional special-delivery article received at the post office at Struthers for delivery to the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., and upon those rare occasions the article would be delivered to the watchman at the gates of the plant.

41. All normal postal functions previously performed at this office prior to the strike have been continued. There have been several special-delivery parcels received at this office since the strike, for delivery at the plant, and delivery of all these has been effected. On June 11, however, objection on the part of striking employees and sympathizers was made to the postmaster when he attempted the delivery of a special-delivery parcel which very clearly showed upon sight that it contained clothing, and he carried the parcel back to the office. Subsequently, the parcel was delivered.

42. The postmaster conferred with the leaders of the C. I. O. and advised them that the matter of determining whether mail was to be considered unusual was a function for postal employees to perform, and suggested that the pickets at the plant at Struthers be instructed not to interfere with any subsequent deliveries of mail. The postmaster has subsequently experienced no difficulty. This postmaster is declining to accept for mailing any parcels addressed for delivery to the local steel plant or any steel plant affected by the strike which contains foodstuffs or clothing. Since the receipt at his office of special-delivery parcels for delivery to the steel plant is certainly "unusual mail", he proposes hereafter to return to sender all parcels which clearly show by endorsement or ordinary handling that they contain food or clothing. This postmaster does not anticipate any further difficulty.

CAMPBELL, OHIO

43. In the city of Campbell, Ohio, having a population of 14,673, is located one plant of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. One of the entrances to this plant is approximately two blocks from the post office.

44. Ordinarily there was no mail due to be received at Campbell, Ohio, for this plant, and no mail from the plant is dispatched through the office. (See information in par. 3 of this report bearing on Youngstown, Ohio.) However, there is an occasional letter or circular received at this office addressed to the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. and as the foot carrier passes the entrance to the plant this mail is delivered to the watchmen, who hold it until the arrival of the company's messenger from Youngstown, and it is delivered to him. It is very seldom that any parcels are received and when they are delivery is effected in the same manner.

45. The postmaster advises that since the strike several parcels containing food or clothing have been received at his office, addressed for delivery to the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. Attempts were made to deliver these and entrance to the plant was refused by the pickets and sympathizers. The parcels were returned to the post office and subsequently returned to the senders, endorsed "Undeliverable." The foot carrier has not experienced any trouble in making delivery of any letter mail which he may have to the watchman at the gate; therefore, the normal mail service at this office is being maintained.

46. The postmaster is of the opinion that to attempt a forcible delivery of these parcels would result in serious trouble and probable injury to postal employees.

47. Mail presented at this office containing food or clothing, and addressed for delivery to the steel plants affected by this strike are being refused. If this policy is continued, there will be no trouble experienced at this office.

48. It is our conclusion that the postmasters at Youngstown, Niles, Warren, Struthers, and Campbell, Ohio, have handled a very delicate situation in a commendable manner. In our opinion, none of these postmasters has connived with any person connected with either side of the strike controversy. Each has made an honest effort to carry out the instructions of the Department by continuing normal postal service. Had parcels containing foodstuffs and clothing been accepted for mailing to the plants affected in this strike area, additional equipment and assistance would have been required, or the normal functions of the offices would have been greatly impaired. Furthermore, delivery by mail of food and clothing into the steel plants in these cities in any large quantities would have undoubtedly resulted in violence, and any attempt to do so now would most certainly endanger the lives of the postal employees.

49. While the threats made to postmasters and postal employees referred to in this report may be interpreted as being in violation of section 2357 of the Postal Laws and Regulations of 1932, the evidence is too meager to serve as a basis of prosecution. The United States attorney's office at Cleveland, Ohio, has, however, been advised by telephone of these occurrences. Further attention will be given these cases and supplementary reports submitted as warranted.

V. F. SANDS,
G. J. RESS,
R. E. ELLINGTON,
Post-Office Inspectors.

Mr. McKELLAR. I also desire at this time to give the names of those who were arrested by the Department for violations of the law. Nine were arrested; six have been indicted, and the others have been bound over to the grand jury in accordance with the report of the post-office inspectors, showing that the Department has done its full duty as to any infringement of the law governing the carriage of the mail. I hand the list to the reporter so that it may be put in the RECORD. I will say, in conclusion, that the action taken absolutely refutes practically every statement made by the Senator from New Hampshire.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the list will be printed in the RECORD.

The list is as follows:

Tony Crish, Youngstown.
Dominic Scrafine, Youngstown.
Mike Walker, Youngstown.
Sam Caputo, Youngstown.
Clyde Rochat, Warren.
Will Williams, Warren.
Four others under arrest in Youngstown and Warren.
Arrested at Pittsburgh, Pa.:
Gabriel Mueller.
Ralph Gindlesperger.
John D. Ziekonski.

PLAN FOR PREVENTION AND CONTROL OF FLOODS—VETO MESSAGE (S. DOC. NO. 95)

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States, which was read, and, with the accompanying joint resolution, referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed:

To the Senate:

I return herewith, without my approval, Senate Joint Resolution No. 57, entitled "Joint resolution to authorize the submission to Congress of a comprehensive national plan for the prevention and control of floods of all the major rivers of the United States, development of hydroelectric-power resources, water and soil conservation, and for other purposes."

In my message of June 3, 1937, I proposed for the consideration of Congress a thoroughly democratic process of national planning of the conservation and utilization of the water, and related land, resources of our country. I expressed the belief that such a process of national planning should start at the bottom through the initiation of planning work in the State and local units, and that it should contemplate the formulation of programs on a regional basis, the integration of fiscal and conservation policies on a national basis, and the submission of a comprehensive development program to the Congress by the President.

The reverse of such a process of national planning is prescribed in Senate Joint Resolution No. 57. By this resolution the War Department would become the national planning agency, not alone for flood control but for all the other multiple uses of water. Although the Department of Agriculture would prepare reports on run-off retardation and soil-erosion prevention, and the Department of the Interior be consulted on reclamation projects, the War Department would report for these coordinate agencies directly to Congress, instead of to the Chief Executive. The local and regional basis of planning would be ignored, and there would be no review of the whole program prior to its presentation to Congress from the standpoints of national budgetary considerations and national conservation policies.

The Corps of Army Engineers has had wide experience in the building of flood-control projects and has executed the projects entrusted to it with great skill and ability. Its experience and background is not alone sufficient, however, for the planning of a comprehensive program for the development of the vast water and related resources of the Nation.

The planning of the use and control of water and related resources is distributed by law among numerous governmental agencies, such as the Departments of Agriculture and Interior, the Federal Power Commission, the United States Public Health Service, the International Boundary Commission, and the Tennessee Valley Authority. The joint resolution encroaches upon the functions of these agencies, and ignores and duplicates the coordinated planning work already in progress under the general guidance of the National Resources Committee.

I find it impossible to subscribe, therefore, to the proposal that has been embodied in this joint resolution.

This does not mean, however, that the objective of this joint resolution cannot be attained without the need of any legislation whatsoever. I propose to present to the Congress in January a comprehensive national plan for flood control and prevention and the development of water and soil conservation, such plan to be prepared by all of the many Government agencies concerned.

I trust that this will meet all the desires of the Congress.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

THE WHITE HOUSE, August 13, 1937.

WORK ON THE BONNEVILLE PROJECT—AUTHORITY TO SIGN ENROLLED BILL

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Vice President be authorized to sign the enrolled House bill 7642, to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes, known as the Bonneville bill, the conference report on which has heretofore been agreed to, if the bill should be brought to the Senate after it has taken a recess or adjourned this evening.

Mr. KING. Were there any amendments to the bill as it passed the Senate?

Mr. BONE. There were some slight changes in conference. The conference report was before the Senate and was agreed to.

Mr. KING. Were any provisions inserted in conference relating to Boulder Dam?

Mr. BONE. No.

Mr. KING. Or any modification of any outstanding contract between the Boulder Dam authority and the Government of the United States, or between the Government of the United States and other power agencies in the United States?

Mr. BONE. No. There was no reference whatever in the bill as agreed to to the Boulder Dam provision which had been in the bill in section 14, if that is what the Senator suggests.

Mr. KING. Yes.

Mr. BONE. That is entirely out of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Washington? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

SUGAR PRODUCTION AND CONTROL

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7667) to regulate commerce among the several States, with the Territories and possessions of the United States, and with foreign countries; to protect the welfare of consumers of sugars and of those engaged in the domestic sugar-producing industry; to promote the export trade of the United States; to raise revenue; and for other purposes.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, for 2 days I have been waiting to make a 10-minute speech. If, in the meantime, I have forgotten most of what I intended to say, the Senate will not regret that fact.

I wish to express my sympathy and good will to the Senator from Florida [Mr. PEPPER]. We could just feel that his heart was in everything he had to say. But he must not be discouraged. It usually takes about 10 years to pass any piece of real legislation in a form satisfactory to its author. So, this being 1937, I should say that by 1947 he will have realized his fondest dreams. I hope the Senator will not be discouraged, but I wish to be entirely frank with him. I speak feelingly because of efforts that I have made in connection with sugar legislation.

For years and years I have striven to have a square deal accorded to the citizens of Puerto Rico, American citizens. I have not forgotten that in due and legal form the people of Puerto Rico were made citizens of our country. One would not think so when he reads this bill.

I should like to say to the other Senator from Florida [Mr. ANDREWS] that he, too, has my sympathy in this matter. As the third Senator from Florida, I shall hope to help him in his undertakings.

Mr. President, one would not think to read this bill that Puerto Rico had any relationship to the United States. Our Government does not understand the first principles of colonial or insular administration. It is a misfortune to any territory outside the continental United States to be annexed to our country. If I needed any proof of it, I would not require more than this particular bill.

I am not speaking now about Hawaii; I do not know anything about Hawaii. But I do know something about Puerto Rico and its needs. I know that the Puerto Ricans are not decently treated by this bill as it is written.

I have no delusions at all, not the least in the world. I might just as well sit down now because what I may say is not going to change the bill in any respect whatsoever. Both Senators from Florida know by this time that I am speaking the truth. No man ever made more earnest efforts to formulate legislation than they have made, but they did not succeed and neither will I succeed. But that does not make any difference; we will do our duty, anyway.

If I had my way, raw sugar, regardless of where it came from, would come in free. Then I would have a protective tariff so high on refined sugar that it would all be refined in our country.

Of course I realize that there are complications. We have the beet-sugar growers who, in good faith, have gone into the business of raising sugar beets and making sugar from sugar beets. That ought never to have been done. That is not the kind of a crop that America ought to raise. Sugar beets should be raised where there is an enslaved or an impoverished population, where little children can be put out in the beet fields to be crippled by the work of pulling the weeds. That is not the kind of a crop that ought to be raised in the United States.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. We do not want our children treated in that way. I am aware of the fact that efforts are being made locally and by various States to overcome these evils. Perhaps they have been overcome and by the progress of invention some of the weeds may be taken out by machinery.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. COPELAND. I cannot yield to all the friends of beet sugar at one time.

Mr. ADAMS. Will the Senator pick one to yield to?

Mr. COPELAND. I will yield first to the Senator from Utah, who was on his feet first.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I regret exceedingly to differ from my dear friend the Senator from New York. I share with him the sympathetic expressions respecting Puerto Rico, but I cannot agree with the animadversions of my friend with respect to those who are engaged in the production of beet sugar.

I may say to my friend, if he will pardon me for a moment, that we have by legislation which I shall not describe, largely cut off our foreign exports of agricultural crops. The result has been that millions of acres that formerly produced profitable agricultural crops now remain fallow. Sugar beets and sugarcane may be grown in the United States profitably and advantageously, and they will, in part, meet the losses which have been sustained by reason of the destruction of the foreign market for our surplus agricultural products. If I had my way, I would enact such legislation as would enable the United States to produce at least 40 to 50 percent of our consumptive sugar needs, in which event there would be more cane sugar and there would be more beet sugar.

May I say to my friend from New York that if he should go into the beet-producing States he would find labor employed under conditions which are more favorable than he will find in many of the great industrial sections of the country. Wages are high. So far as children are concerned, there is no claim whatever that children are employed in the production of beets.

Mr. COPELAND. I will now receive the apology of the Senator from Colorado. [Laughter.]

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, the apology begins with the suggestion that it would have been a good idea for the Senator from New York to read the bill before he made his speech. If he will read the bill he will find, on page 19, that subparagraph (a) specifically provides that no child under the age of 14 years may be employed in a beet field if any payments or benefits are to be received, and that no child between the ages of 14 and 16 may be employed for more than 8 hours. The Senator from New York would have sugar that comes in as raw sugar from the great fields of Cuba, where such fine labor conditions exist, and from Java, where such marvelous labor conditions prevail, rather than to have it raised in the beet fields of the United States under wholesome sanitary conditions, under proper child-labor regulations, and under wage limitations which are to be required under the terms of the bill.

That, Mr. President, is my apology. [Laughter.]

Mr. COPELAND. Are there any other beet-sugar States to be heard from? [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I do not care how many laws we may have, the children of the country will be exploited. Those who make the laws are kind-hearted and well-intentioned, but we do not have to go far to get evidence that there are too many children in this business 14 years of age who have all the appearance of being 10. At any rate, I insist that the soil and climate and genius of America are not suited for that sort of thing.

I do not want the sugar-beet grower to think I want to disregard them and put them into outer darkness and condemn them to everlasting poverty. I know the beet growers were encouraged to plant these crops. When I was a young doctor I practiced in Bay City, Mich., and while I was there in practice the beet-sugar industry of Michigan was started in the Saginaw Valley. Everybody was delighted to think we were going to make sugar. So I know something about it, and I know those people in good faith invested their money.

I am perfectly willing that they should have a bounty. I can see that it is necessary that they should have a bounty. They cannot compete with other countries without it.

But it hurts my feelings a little bit when I find, according to the testimony of the junior Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN], that this "little" bounty of one-half cent a pound means $67,000,000 to the American people—a $67,000,000 tax on the sugar bowl! I have observed always when we start out with half a cent tax, as it is pyramided through the various handlings it soon becomes 2 cents. So the sugar bowl of the American housewife is being taxed in order to make possible carrying out the provisions of this bill.

Mr. President, in the House on the 6th of August Representative JONES placed in the RECORD a statement from one of the departments giving four reasons why the refined sugar interests were already taken care of. I ask to have inserted at this point in my remarks the official statement which Representative JONES at that time had placed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The first three paragraphs of section 207 of H. R. 7667 discriminate against Puerto Rico, Hawaii, and the Virgin Islands by limiting refining operations in these areas without corresponding restrictions on the other domestic areas of the United States. These provisions are demanded by the seaboard refiners of the mainland in order to limit the amount of competition in the sale of refined sugar. The seaboard refiners are given extraordinary benefits and protection under other provisions of the pending bill, as follows:

(1) Under the quota provisions total supplies are adjusted to consumers' needs which stabilizes the sugar market in the United States, as operations under the Jones-Costigan Act have indicated. Refiners thus obtain at public expense, in legal form and under public safeguards the general market stabilization which they sought unsuccessfully to achieve at their own expense through control of sugar marketing practices under the Sugar Institute regime of 1928–30, which control was held by the United States Supreme Court in its decision of March 30, 1936, to be in violation of the antitrust laws of the United States.

(2) For many years refiners have sought to limit importations of liquid sugar into the United States, which, they maintain, replaces their refined product among certain types of consumers (confectionery, baking, etc.). Section 208 of the bill prohibits the importation of liquid sugar from any foreign country except Cuba and Dominican Republic, which two countries are permitted quotas based on previous years' marketings in the United States, thereby limiting competition of foreign liquid sugar with refiners' products. Section 210 (b) provides in effect that any liquid sugar marketed by the domestic areas shall be included in the sugar quotas, thereby limiting possible competition with seaboard refiners' products of liquid sugar which may be produced in domestic areas.

(3) Under section 207 (e) refiners receive the unusual protection of an outright embargo on any importations of direct-consumption sugar from the principal competing country (Cuba) in excess of 375,000 short tons, raw value, which represents a decrease, as compared with the 1936 quota, of 87,000 short tons of sugar, although the United States Tariff Commission, after official investigation of costs of refining in the United States and Cuba, reported to the President on January 22, 1934, that no change was warranted in the tariff differential between raw and refined sugar.

It should be clearly understood that the foregoing reference to the figure of 375,000 tons of direct-consumption sugar is not to be taken as implying acceptance of that figure. The Department of State maintains that the Cuban direct-consumption quota should not be reduced below a quantity equal to 22 percent of the total Cuban quota.

(4) Under the provisions of the Philippine Independence Act the refiners are protected against importations of refined sugar, duty-free, from the Philippine Islands, where great expansion of refined-sugar production would be possible if no restrictions were imposed. To the limitation of 50,000 long tons of duty-free refined sugar provided for in the Philippine Independence Act, there is added the provision in the pending bill in section 207 (d) that no more than 80,214 short tons, raw value, of direct-consumption sugar may be brought in from the Philippines in any calendar year, even with payment of full duty.

Under the quota system the seaboard refiners increased their meltings from 4,129,000 tons in 1933, the year prior to the Jones-Costigan Act, to 4,514,000 tons in 1936. The excess of the American refiners' margin above the world refiners' margin per pound of sugar amounted to over $20,000,000 in 1936 on the refiners' aggregate deliveries of sugar, an indirect subsidy under quota legislation to the 14 refining companies of $1,600 for each person employed by them, as against an average wage of $1,005.

The question at issue is not whether the 14 mainland cane-refining companies, employing approximately 14,000 people, should be protected but whether, after having been granted the foregoing unusual forms of protection against competition in the bill, they should be given this additional protection, which is an outright discrimination against American citizens residing in the Territories and possessions of the United States.

The provisions discriminating against Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands in the matter of refined sugar are in complete violation of traditional American policy and of basic American principles.

First. These discriminatory provisions establish trade barriers within the United States. These provisions establish that a certain part of the Union may not manufacture, may not process, the products of its soil. This discrimination against one part of the Union is established not merely in favor of another part of the Union—in itself an unjustifiable performance. It establishes discriminations against parts of America, inhabited by American citizens, in favor of a few mainland companies already highly privileged by this legislation. As a precedent this kind of discrimination is unthinkable—and because it was introduced without the administration's approval 3 years ago in the Jones-Costigan bill, in an emergency, is no reason for making it continuing national policy.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, in London, on May 6, 1937, was brought into existence what is known as the International Sugar Agreement. It was signed in London on the 6th of May of this year. The United States was a party to the agreement. I hold in my hand an official copy of that agreement as transmitted with a message of the President to the Senate. The agreement was signed by all the delegates of the United States. It was an agreement for all of the United States. When we say "all of the United States" we include Puerto Rico, because our country with all of its possessions is considered as a single unit. But the pending sugar bill seeks to set apart and to treat differently the offshore areas of the United States as against continental United States.

I say again that it is outrageous to treat the people of Puerto Rico as is to be done by the terms of the bill. It is grossly inhuman and unfair for the United States to sit in an international conference and bind the United States as a whole and then by the terms of a bill like this split into areas our family possessions. There is no use talking about it. It is going to be done. I have a dozen amendments which I should like to offer, but I know it would be futile to do so.

Mr. President, there are in my State several sugar refineries. I want them to prosper. I want labor to be employed. I want the families of those employed in the sugar refineries to have the wherewithal to clothe and feed themselves and to provide shelter. I think the bill has in it much, perhaps more than is needed by the refiners, but so far as that feature is concerned I rejoice to think that my own people are about to be taken care of in our refineries.

I go back to my original statement: If I had my way, I should make raw sugar free. I should provide preferences for our own possessions, to see that they had first call upon the demand for raw sugar. Then I should have the refineries of America conduct the manufacturing processes which are necessary to prepare this essential food for the table.

Mr. President, that is all I am going to say. I merely wanted to put myself on record now, as I have done before. Whenever this subject has been before us, I have made the same appeal, more strenuous in other years than now, because I had hoped then that we might accomplish something for Puerto Rico. But from past experience and from what has happened to other amendments here during the past 2 or 3 days, I feel that it is utterly useless to make further effort.

I have declared myself and have made clear what I feel in my heart—that we are not treating Puerto Ricans, who are American citizens, with the degree of consideration which should be accorded them. They are our brothers and sisters so far as nationality is concerned, and we are treating them as if they were stepchildren and utterly unworthy of our thought or consideration.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, is there an amendment pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is no amendment pending.

Mr. PEPPER. I have an amendment, Mr. President, which I will send to the desk in just a minute. The amendment reads as follows:

On page 8, after the table which follows line 2, insert the following:

Whenever the total of the allotments to the producers of sugarcane within any State for any year is less than the equivalent of 125,000 short tons of sugar, raw value, then the sugar used within such State in excess of the quota of such State and not in excess of 150,000 tons, which sugar is the product of sugarcane grown therein, shall not be charged against the quota for the mainland cane-sugar area, and shall not be in violation of the quota of such area.

In addition to that, I offer three other amendments, which strike out, by appropriate reference, certain language.

On page 4, lines 24 and 25, I move to strike out the words "commerce, or in competition with sugar or liquid sugar shipped, transported, or marketed in interstate."

On page 16, lines 20 and 21, I move to strike out the words "commerce, or in competition with sugar or liquid sugar shipped, transported, or marketed in interstate."

On page 21, lines 7 and 8, I move to strike out the comma in line 7 which follows the word "in" and the words "or so as to compete with or otherwise directly affect."

The purport of the fourth amendment is as follows:

In this bill, what is known as the Minnesota Rate Case rule is applied, namely, that persons are not only forbidden to produce sugar for sale in interstate commerce, but they are forbidden to produce sugar for sale in intrastate commerce. In other words, Florida, which was permitted to produce only about one-third of her requirements and by this bill may produce only one-half of the sugar consumed in that State, under the terms of this bill is not only forbidden to send sugar in excess of its quota outside the State, but we are likewise—not by the State government but by the Federal Government—told that the Everglades cannot sell sugar to Florida citizens inside Florida, without crossing State lines, in excess of a quota which is fixed in this bill.

Mr. President, all of us are obligated to observe the Federal Constitution in our conduct here. For the life of me I cannot see how anyone can read the A. A. A. decision which invalidated the processing tax and still decide in favor of the validity of the provision which I am questioning at the present time.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Louisiana.

Mr. OVERTON. Did the Senator from Florida support the wage and hour bill?

Mr. PEPPER. I did support it, and I voted for an amendment which cut out that section, although, unfortunately, the amendment was lost.

Mr. OVERTON. After the amendment was lost, did the Senator vote for the bill?

Mr. PEPPER. I voted for the general bill; yes, I did.

Mr. OVERTON. Did it not contain a similar provision?

Mr. PEPPER. It did contain a similar provision; but I may add for the Senator's attention, if he will examine that bill very carefully, that there are other provisions in it which, in my opinion, either minimize or entirely prevent the operation of the principle of regulating purely intrastate operations under the provisions of that bill, because the subject was not new to me when the wage and hour bill came up, and I devoted considerable time to a scrutiny of it.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. Earlier in the day the Senator from Louisiana offered an amendment increasing the quota of Florida, leaving the quota on the sugar-beet areas and on Louisiana. The same constitutional objection which the Senator now raises would apply to the sugar-beet quota which he was willing to accept, and to the Louisiana quota which he was willing to leave alone, and to the increased quota of Florida which he wished to attain.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Senator is correct. I should like to make two answers to the Senator's suggestion. The first one is that if the Senator from Colorado objects to a prohibition against that State selling to its own citizens any surplus of sugar, I am sure the eloquent and capable Senator from Colorado—who, perhaps more than any other Senator in this body, has influenced the course of sugar legislation—would attempt to remove such restriction. I was primarily concerned about Florida's inability to produce enough sugar even to meet its own needs, because the Senator from Colorado will recall that his quota is something in excess of 300,000 tons, I believe, and the quota of the State of Florida is 63,000 tons. Being able to produce over 300,000 tons in a State the size of Colorado, with a population of—will the Senator refresh my memory as to the population of his State? It is a little over a million, is it not? Am I wrong about that?

Mr. ADAMS. Our population, roughly, is a million and a quarter.

Mr. PEPPER. The population of Colorado is approximately one and one-quarter million, and the State is able to produce over 300,000 tons of sugar. The population of my State is 1,600,000, and we can produce 63,000 tons of sugar. I can understand why the Senator from Colorado might not be as much concerned about a desire to sell his sugar inside the State as I am under our embarrassed circumstances.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. In one moment.

The other answer is that I am perfectly agreeable to vote for, and I will vote for, an amendment which will permit any State in the Union to sell, inside of the limits of such State, all the sugar it cares to produce. So if the Senator from Colorado cares to make that benefit available to any other State I am certainly in accord with him and will try to help him.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, now will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ADAMS. The State of Colorado does not have a quota under this bill. There is a quota of 1,550,000 tons to the beet-producing areas, of which Colorado is a part. That quota would be allocated by the Secretary of Agriculture. That quota, I will say to the Senator, is far below the actual production of beets within the beet-producing areas as of the year before the enactment of the Jones-Costigan Act. It is far below the present capacity of the beet areas to produce. It is far below the desires of the beet areas to produce. It is 50 percent below the capacity of the beet factories to refine. The beet areas in fact conceded a substantial tonnage to the two cane States in order that their quota might be raised, while when the estimated consumption of the United States was increased by the Secretary of Agriculture some 260,000 tons, the beet areas in fact did not ask for any portion of that increase, but did give roughly 160,000 tons to the States of Florida and Louisiana in order to equalize conditions and bring about what seemed to the beet areas fairness to those areas. We are having in the beet areas less than what the Senator would call a fair quota.

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator permit me to inquire of him what the Secretary of Agriculture allowed Colorado last year as its quota under the Jones-Costigan Act?

Mr. ADAMS. I am not able to state the allowance to Colorado. The actual production was somewhere between 200,000 and 300,000 tons of sugar.

Mr. PEPPER. Although it is not specified in the terms of the act itself, the Senator knows that on the historical base, which has been the criterion of allocation by the Secretary of Agriculture, he will get for Colorado in the neighborhood of 300,000 tons next year, and Colorado has been enjoying that in the past. Is not that correct?

Mr. ADAMS. That is substantially true. As a matter of fact, the State of Florida has been a beneficiary of the drought in my State; that is, my State and other Western beet-producing States did not produce the quotas, and the deficit was allocated to the cane States.

Mr. PEPPER. So the next year the State of Colorado, with a million and a quarter inhabitants, will get in the neighborhood of 300,000 tons and benefit payments, and the State of Florida, with a population of 1,600,000, will get 63,000 tons, if the standards of allocation observed in the past are employed in the future.

Mr. ADAMS. But the Senator from Florida, I think, stated on the floor of the Senate that the maximum production of cane sugar in Florida at any time has been 51,000 tons.

Mr. PEPPER. Exactly.

Mr. ADAMS. And it is already allocated, under the bill of which he complains, an increase of 12,000 tons, the only area in the country that is being given an allocation in excess of what they have ever produced.

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator permit a suggestion? Why is it, in justice, to be said that because Colorado happened to begin producing sugar before Florida began producing sugar, for all time to come Colorado shall have 300,000 tons and Florida shall have 63,000, or whatever you charitable gentlemen choose to give it? Is that going to last forever?

Mr. ADAMS. I hope not. I am in entire accord with the Senator on the fundamental theory that the American market should be available to the American producer and that there should be no limitations placed upon Florida or upon Colorado below the actual consuming capacity of the United States. But the State of Colorado and the State of Florida, and the beet industry and the cane industry, have been confronted with a very practical condition.

The administration in Washington have said to us, "You cannot do that. A bill without limitations will not be approved. It probably could not pass Congress." We are simply trying to make the best of a situation which we cannot cure. The Senator from Colorado would be delighted to go with the Senator from Florida and endeavor to have the restrictions removed so that the farmers of our States may not be under restrictions. But so long as they are, we must be reasonable with each other; in Florida, as well as in Colorado, we must accept some limitations in order to accomplish results.

The Costigan Act, passed largely through the influence of my colleague, who by reason of illness is no longer here, but who almost gave his life in his battle for the sugar industry, did things for the sugar industry in Florida, in Louisiana, in the beet areas, in Puerto Rico, and Hawaii, and Cuba, far beyond what they had ever had. A prosperous condition was established; and if we do not pass a bill establishing some quotas we will destroy the industry, at least in every place except in Florida, and that is what some of us are interested in—the preservation of a great industry upon which a million people depend. One criticism I offer of the Senator from Florida is that in his loyalty to his State I think he has overlooked the fact that, if he carried his point, he might tear down the structure built by Senator Costigan, and destroy a great national industry in the United States.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I assure the Senator that I am as far from any intention or desire of doing such a thing as the Senator from Colorado is. I have heretofore stated, and I do not have any disposition to withhold the expression now, that I have had a feeling—and I think that feeling is shared by my colleague, and it may be shared by our colleagues from Louisiana, but they will have to speak for themselves—that the sugar legislation of this Congress has been a little closed corporation. I do know that a few eminent Senators to a large extent have sat down around the table and fixed these quotas without saying a word to any of us little fellows about it, and I happen to be of the little crowd. I say that with all kindliness, but it is no less a fact. No one ever consulted me with regard to how much Florida could get along with. So far as I know, no one ever consulted my colleague. It may be that we as individuals are not worthy of consultation, but we do happen to represent a sovereign State. No one came to us and said, "Let us all sit around the table. We have so many pounds of sugar. Let us divide it up fairly among all and preserve the principle of sugar legislation."

The first I ever heard of sugar legislation in this Congress was when certain Senators early in the year went to the Department of Agriculture and came back with a sugar bill, and handed it out with the interpretation—implied, at least—that it was the approved sugar bill, and that we would have to take it or leave it.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I think the President is rather critical of the bill, is he not?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes.

Mr. COPELAND. I should judge so from a letter I saw printed in the RECORD.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate very much longer.

Mr. OVERTON. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield to me, I do not wish to have the statement go unchallenged in the RECORD that necessarily the ratio between Louisiana and Florida will be 85 percent and 15 percent. The ratio will be established in accordance with the provisions of the pending bill, if it shall be enacted into law, and that takes into consideration three factors—past performance, ability to produce, and the interest of new producers and small producers, and the interest of producers who are cash tenants, share tenants, adherent planters, or sharecroppers. Therefore the quota which may be assigned to Louisiana in the end may be larger than the Senator from Florida anticipates, and that of Florida may be smaller.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I want to express the very earnest hope that the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] may learn the doctrine of neighborliness and extend a little greater generosity than he has shown today. One of the reasons why I have tried to get Florida's share and quotas specified in this bill is because there are just two cane States. I believe in getting along with my neighbors. I love my neighbors, but I want my neighbors to love me a little bit. The sentiments of charity which my friend has exhibited to me here today have almost brought the feeling on my part that he has not been reading his Bible well and lately.

Mr. OVERTON. If the Senator will yield, I will say that I have been trying to be neighborly in this fight. I have fought for an increase of cane-area quota all along. I have not tried to make any distinction between Louisiana and Florida, and the controversy between Louisiana and Florida has been brought up by the Senators and Representatives from Florida and not from Louisiana.

Mr. PEPPER. I can well understand Louisiana's fighting for a general cane quota when she gets 85 percent of it. Under no other theory could she hope to get as much. But will the Senator tell me anything I have said to provoke a controversy with Louisiana in any way, directly or indirectly?

Mr. OVERTON. Indeed I can. I went through the whole argument today for about an hour, in which I endeavored to show that the Senator from Florida, instead of undertaking to increase the cane-area quota, instead of undertaking to increase the continental quota, undertook to take from the quota assigned to Cuba originally and from the Philippines, with the thought—if I may use the expression, and I do not want to use it with any sort of reflection upon the Senator from Florida—but with the thought of "hogging" it all for Florida. That was my objection.

Mr. PEPPER. Do I understand the Senator from Louisiana to prefer that the Philippines keep the quota which they are not going to use, and that the Secretary of State shall have it with which to bargain with foreign countries, rather than that Florida should have it?

Mr. OVERTON. No, Mr. President, that is not my attitude at all. I have no objection to lowering the quota on the Philippines. But when you do take anything from the quota that is assigned to the Philippines, so far as you can legally do so within the Philippine Independence Act, I do not want all of that sugar to be assigned simply to one area, when Louisiana has an infinitely better right and a better claim, according to history, according to past experience, according to present productiveness, and according to capacity to produce, than has Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. Not even when Louisiana has received an increase of 137,000 tons? I will ask the Senator from Louisiana how much it costs to produce sugar in Louisiana?

Mr. OVERTON. The distribution under this legislation is not dependent upon the cost. If it were, most of it would go to Hawaii and Puerto Rico and to Cuba, and scarcely anything to the mainland.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator would not deny the fact, would he, that it costs almost exactly twice as much to produce sugar in Louisiana as it does in Florida?

Mr. OVERTON. No. I think it costs less to produce the sugar in Florida than it does in Louisiana.

Mr. PEPPER. Will the Senator be good enough to tell me whether Louisiana has plowed up any sugarcane or not, or whether it is not a fact that it is exceeding its quota nearly every year, and has come on its knees to the Secretary and has sought to get benefit payments, even though it violated the quota that it was authorized to plant?

Mr. OVERTON. It did not violate the quota that was given to it, Mr. President. I shall have to take some time to answer the Senator's question in that connection. When Louisiana was assigned the ridiculously low quota of 220,000 tons, whereas she had a productive capacity of 400,000 tons——

Mr. PEPPER. And Florida got 40,000 tons.

Mr. OVERTON. And Florida got 40,000 tons, when the largest quantity she had ever produced up to that time was 41,000 tons, and Louisiana had produced over 400,000 tons—then the Department of Agriculture went into Louisiana and experimented with new varieties of cane, and those new varieties were disease-resistant, and they were more prolific, and the result was that we produced a larger yield of cane than we were assigned in the quota. Then the Louisiana farmers and the Louisiana planters came here to the Secretary of Agriculture and stated to him what that situation was. Then it was that the Secretary of Agriculture issued an administrative order reducing the penalties that were to be inflicted upon Louisiana for producing in excess of its quota—did so by reason of the fact largely that the excess production was due to these varieties of cane that the Department of Agriculture had introduced into Louisiana.

Then when the A. A. A. decision came along, and the benefit payments and the processing taxes were set aside under the decision of the Supreme Court, then it was that the Secretary of Agriculture went back to his old ruling, his old administrative order, and inflicted a penalty of over $1,500,000 upon Louisiana producers.

Mr. PEPPER. I thank the Senator very much. The fact is though that the moral obligation to pay on the contracts did not exist in the case of Louisiana whereas it did exist in the other areas, including Florida.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Will the Senator tell me what had been the quota of Florida under the old act?

Mr. PEPPER. Forty thousand tons for Florida. Last year due to distribution of deficits in some other sections it was around 50,000 tons.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. What is the quota proposed under this bill?

Mr. PEPPER. If my generous friend from Louisiana [Mr. OVERTON] does not prevail and reduce the share that we have been getting in the past from the Department of Agriculture, I assume that we would get the glorious proportion of 15 percent of that which goes to the cane area. If my friend is correct we will get less than that, but if we get 15 percent we will get a total of 63,000 tons.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. An increase of 23,000 tons.

Mr. PEPPER. That is exactly correct.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. What was the quota of the beet-sugar States under the old act?

Mr. PEPPER. The initial quota was 1,550,000 short tons. Actual final quotas were: for 1934, 1,556,000 tons; for 1935, 1,550,000; for 1936, 1,342,000 tons. For 1937, due to increased consumption requirements, her initial quota was 1,613,000 tons. Her actual deliveries for 1937, however, will be nearer 1,400,000 tons.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. What is it under this act.

Mr. PEPPER. One million five hundred and fifty thousand tons.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Less than it was under the old act?

Mr. PEPPER. Yes; the beet area is not sharing in the increase in consumption requirements from 6,452,000 tons to 6,682,670 tons.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The Senator is complaining that he was not invited in on these meetings, when the other people met and took a reduction for themselves and made an increase for Florida. Perhaps if he had been there he would have talked them out of that.

Mr. PEPPER. That is entirely possible.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Perhaps it is a good thing that he was not there.

Mr. PEPPER. That is entirely possible. The Senator has not observed this distinction, however. The concession they made came out of thin air, and not out of beet sugar, for the good reason that in 1933–34 the beet area did produce 1,756,228 raw tons. That was in 1933–34, the year before the Jones-Costigan Act. Since the passage of that act the beet area has never produced its full quota and will not do so this year.

In 1935 the beet area had a quota of 1,550,000 tons, and they produced in the year 1934–35 crop 1,239,474 tons.

In 1936 they had a quota of 1,550,000 tons, and they actually produced in the 1935–36 crop 1,261,459 tons.

In 1937 they had a quota of 1,613,576 tons, and they produced in the 1936–37 crop 1,396,426 tons.

Their actual deliveries for 1937 will fall at least 150,000 tons short of the quota. All this time, consumption requirements increase and quite naturally the beet area could not share in this source of quota.

If any sugar expert will not say that the beet people this year contemplate a deficit of 150,000 tons, then I am very sadly misinformed by the experts, and there are some of them here in this Chamber. The truth is that the beet people only one year in their history produced as much as their quota is, and has been, under the Jones-Costigan Act, and they have never produced anything like that much since.

Last year their deficit was so much that Cuba got over 2,000,000 tons by being the beneficiary of that deficit that they were able to send into this country. So the beet growers are giving up something out of the air, whereas, we are giving up sugar that we can and will, if allowed, actually produce.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator again yield?

Mr. PEPPER. I yield.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Regardless of the deficits in production, it is a fact that these people who did not invite the Senator into the room, did not ask for any increase in their quota for themselves, and did give Florida an increase from 40,000 tons to 63,000 tons?

Mr. PEPPER. I will give the Senator from Washington my interest in the throne of Great Britain for 25 cents. I shall be glad to make that kind of sale in exchange, because it is not giving up anything on my part. That is what the Senators from the beet States did. They got generous and gave up part of a quota which they have never enjoyed, and which they have never had the capacity to produce, and they do not now intend to produce, and they call that making a concession, by giving us the difference between 40,000 tons and 63,000 tons, if we get our 15 percent, which my generous friend the Senator from Louisiana I am sure is not, on second thought, going to take away from us.

If he will not take that away from us we will get a 23,000-ton increase.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The quota was 40,000 tons?

Mr. PEPPER. That was the original quota under the Jones-Costigan Act, but last year we had about 51,000 tons.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. There was a drought in certain other areas where they produced beet sugar. So far as the Senator's quota was concerned, there was an actual increase of 23,000 tons, was there not?

Mr. PEPPER. If there has been a drought in the beet area, it has lasted ever since 1934. Any weather condition that lasts that long I would not call temporary.

Mr. President, I did not intend to prolong the discussion. The amendment merely provides that if there is any State which is producing less than 125,000 tons it may produce as a gross production up to 150,000 tons, but all above its quota as fixed in the bill will have to be sold entirely within the confines of the State.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have another amendment which I should like to offer. I send it to the desk for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, strike out lines 14 and 20; and page 8, strike out lines 1 to 2, inclusive, and the table which follows, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

	Area	Quotas (short tons)
(a)	For domestic sugar-producing areas:
	Domestic beet sugar	1,550,000
	Louisiana	357,000
	Florida	92,782
	Hawaii	938,000
	Puerto Rico	798,000
	Virgin Islands	9,000
(b)	For the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands	1,000,000
(c)	For foreign countries:
	Cuba	1,911,476
	Foreign countries other than Cuba	26,412

(d) In the event that the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers is less than 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall first establish the quotas for the areas and in the respective amounts set forth in subsections (a) and (b) and after deducting the total thereof from the determined consumption requirements shall prorate the difference on the basis of the quotas established for Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba in subsection (c); if the Secretary determines that the amount of sugar needed to meet the requirements of consumers exceeds 6,682,670 short tons, then the Secretary shall deduct the total of the quotas set forth in subsection (a) to (c), inclusive, from the determined consumption requirements and shall prorate the balance among the domestic sugar-producing areas set forth in (a) and Cuba and foreign countries other than Cuba, on the basis of the quotas set forth in subsections (a) and (c).

Mr. PEPPER. I will say for the benefit of Senators that I am still referring to the Philippine quota. The bill, as Senators will recall, provides for an excess of 59,782 tons above that which the Philippines are legally entitled to enjoy. The Secretary of State says he wants the whole 59,782 tons to trade with. I propose that we divide it equally, the Secretary of State to take 30,000 tons and let Florida have 29,782 tons. That is making an even division of the 59,782 tons. That would make Florida's quota on the whole about 93,000 tons, Louisiana's 357,000 tons, and the beet area 1,550,000 tons, and the Philippines will get all they are entitled to and the Secretary of State will have half of our heritage with which to bargain.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I offer another amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 9, after the word "current", it is proposed to strike out lines 17, 18, 19, and 20, as follows: "he shall revise the quota for foreign countries other than Cuba by prorating an amount of sugar equal to the deficit so determined to such foreign countries, on the basis of the prorations of the quota then in effect for such countries:" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "he shall allocate the deficit so determined to the mainland cane area and fairly and equitably apportion the deficit so determined among new producers in such area", so as to make the sentence read:

If the Secretary finds that the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands will be unable to market the quota for such area for the calendar year then current, he shall allocate the deficit so determined to the mainland cane area, and fairly and equitably apportion the deficit so determined among new producers in such area.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I ask the particular attention of my friends from Louisiana to the amendment. On page 9 of the bill the language is as follows:

If the Secretary finds that the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands will be unable to market the quota for such area for the calendar year then current, he shall revise the quota for foreign countries other than Cuba by prorating an amount of sugar equal to the deficit so determined to such foreign countries, on the basis of the prorations of the quota then in effect for such countries.

The effect of my amendment would be that the excess which the Philippines have, instead of going to the Secretary of State for bargaining purposes, would be allocated by the Secretary of Agriculture to the mainland cane area, and by the Secretary of Agriculture equitably and fairly apportioned in the cane area among new producers. That means that the historic base would not be used to throttle Florida or Louisiana's natural expansion. It would be the Secretary of Agriculture who would have the authority and discretion to make allocation and apportionment among the members of the cane area. I hope Senators will be good enough to appreciate that point.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 38, line 20, it is proposed to strike out the numerals "1940" and insert "1938", and in line 20 to strike out "1940" and insert "1938", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 513. No tax shall be imposed on the manufacture, use, or importation of sugar after June 30, 1941, and the powers vested in the Secretary under this act shall terminate on December 31, 1938, except that the Secretary shall have power to make payments under title III under programs applicable to the crop year 1938 and previous crop years.

Mr. PEPPER. The effect of the amendment would be that the bill would be in effect for the years 1937 and 1938 only. Before the expiration of that time, if desirable, a new sugar bill could be considered. The amendment would simply reduce by 2 years the period during which the bill would be in effect and provide that it shall expire of its own terms December 31, 1938.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I send to the desk another amendment, which I offer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 19, line 11, after the word "feed", it is proposed to strike out the period and insert a semicolon and the following: "or (5) sugars manufactured in continental United States and used for inedible purposes", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 212. The provisions of this title shall not apply to (1) the first 10 short tons, raw value, of sugar or liquid sugar imported from any foreign country, other than Cuba, in any calendar year; (2) the first 10 short tons, raw value, of sugar or liquid sugar imported from any foreign country, other than Cuba, in any calendar year for religious, sacramental, educational, or experimental purposes; (3) liquid sugar imported from any foreign country, other than Cuba, in individual sealed containers of such capacity as the Secretary may determine, not in excess of 1.1 gallons each; or (4) any sugar or liquid sugar imported, brought into, or produced or manufactured in the United States for the distillation of alcohol, or for livestock feed, or for the production of livestock feed; or (5) sugars manufactured in continental United States and used for inedible purposes.

Mr. PEPPER. The purpose of the amendment is merely to provide that sugar used for nonedible purposes shall not be considered as within the quota provisions. There are two exceptions already in the bill. One is sugar used for livestock and the other is sugar used for alcohol purposes. There are certain particular experimental purposes being studied now. It is true in my State, and may be true in other States, that sugar may be applied by discovery, before the bill expires, to some use that is nonlivestock, nonalcohol, and nonedible. I cannot see why anyone should have an objection to that amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I send to the desk another amendment which I offer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 28, line 17, it is proposed to strike out the numeral "0.465" and insert in lieu thereof the numeral "0.0465"; on page 28, line 19, strike out the numeral "0.00875" and insert in lieu thereof the numeral "0.000875"; on page 28, line 22, strike out the numeral "0.5144" and insert in lieu thereof the numeral "0.05144"; and on page 30, line 11, strike out the numeral "0.465" and insert in lieu thereof the numeral "0.0465."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I offer another amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 7, after line 9, it is proposed to insert:

The Secretary shall make the first revision of sugar quotas for the calendar year 1937 within 60 days after the date of the passage of this act in accordance with the provisions of section 202 thereof.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I send to the desk another amendment which I offer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 8, in lines 20 and 21, it is proposed to strike out the words "as he deems necessary during the calendar year" and insert in lieu thereof "on June 1 and September 1 of each year", so as to make the sentence read:

SEC. 204. (a) The Secretary shall, on June 1 and September 1 of each year, determine whether, in view of the current inventories of sugar, the estimated production from the acreage of sugarcane or sugar beets planted, the normal marketings within a calendar year of new-crop sugar, and other pertinent factors, any domestic area, the Commonwealth of the Philippine Islands, or Cuba, will be unable to market the quota for such area.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I send to the desk another amendment, which I offer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 24, line 20, it is proposed to strike out "60" and insert "37½", so as to make the paragraph read:

SEC. 304. (a) The amount of the base rate of payment shall be 37½ cents per hundred pounds of sugar or liquid sugar, raw value.

Mr. PEPPER. The purpose of the amendment is to reduce the base payment from 60 cents per hundred pounds to 37½ cents. I want it to be known that is for the purpose of reducing the cost of the sugar subsidy to the American sugar consumer.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I have one more amendment which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 11, line 15, after the "made", it is proposed to insert the following:

Any interested person, or the representative authorized by him to appear, shall have the right to appear and be heard at such hearing.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the purpose of that amendment is to provide that any interested person may appear at the hearings before the Secretary of Agriculture to present what he may deem to be his interest in allocations and apportionments and other actions which the Secretary is carrying on.

The bill does not permit an interested person to appear as a matter of right. Surely the right of being heard is not going to be taken away from any American citizen who has a legitimate interest in a matter of that sort which affects his interests.

I offer the amendment, and ask for its adoption.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Florida.

On a division, the amendment was rejected.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 7, line 9, at the end of the committee amendment heretofore agreed to, it is proposed to insert the following:

Provided, however, That such determination of consumption and the total quota supply made available to consumers thereunder shall not be less than the quantity of sugar required to give consumers of sugar in the continental United States a per-capita consumption equal to that of the 8-year period 1927 to 1934, inclusive.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. This is the amendment which clarifies the amendment reported by the Senate committee, is it not?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, this amendment would follow the language inserted by the committee in lieu of certain language stricken out in section 201, which is designed to give some protection to the consumer of sugar

The language inserted by the Finance Committee provides:

That in carrying out this purpose—

That is, the purpose of making additional allowances necessary to meet the requirements of the consumer—

the Secretary shall not cause the price of sugar to be so reduced that the percentage representing the relation between the index of the price of sugar and the index of the average price of all domestic foods will become less than the percentage representing the index relation existing in the period 1932–34.

And the committee amendment provides that the indices which are to be utilized are those compiled by the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Upon consultation with some of the experts, I find that the effect of the committee amendment without the language I have proposed would have resulted in 1935 in the Secretary being required to reduce the allotments for sugar to the point where the price of sugar would have been 6.08 cents per pound instead of 5.7 cents, as it actually was during 1935; that in 1936 the effect of the committee amendment without the language of the pending amendment would have been to have a price of 6.20 cents per pound instead of a price of 5.6 cents; and for the first 6 months of 1937, under the terms of the committee amendment without the addition of the language I have suggested, the price would have averaged 6.5 cents per pound as compared with the actual average price of 5.66 cents per pound.

I am satisfied that this language will help to strengthen this provision and make it more workable; that it will not result in any complication of the quotas which are set up under the bill; and at the same time that it will assure the consumer that there will be not less per-capita consumption provided than there was in the 8-year period 1927–35, namely, 105.8 pounds, or a total of short tons (raw value) of 6,793,894.

I feel certain that there will be no objection to the amendment.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD, at the conclusion of my remarks, a table showing the sugar supplies required for the United States to give consumers the per-capita consumption of past periods.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The table is as follows:

Sugar supplies required for the United States to give consumers the per-capita consumption of past periods [1]

Period	Average per-capita consumption of each period	Total supplies (short tons, raw value)
5 years (1924–25 and 1928–29)	114.1	7,326,874
10 years (1919–20 and 1928–29)	106.9	6,864,530
10 years (1925–26 and 1934–35)	107.2	6,883,794
9 years (1926–27 and 1934–35)	106.3	6,826,001
8 years (1927–28 and 1934–35)	105.8	6,793,894
7 years (1928–29 and 1934–35)	105.1	6,748,944
6 years (1929–30 and 1934–35)	102.7	6,594,829
5 years (1930–31 and 1934–35)	102.5	6,581,986
4 years (1931–32 and 1934–35)	102.3	6,569,143
3 years (1932–33 and 1934–35)	101.8	6,537,036
2 years (1933–34 and 1934–35)	101.6	6,524,193

[1] Assuming July 1, 1936, population of 128,429,000.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, I have talked to the expert and to the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN]. There is no objection to this amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the amendment offered by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is agreed to.

The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 7667) was read the third time and passed.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AIRPORT

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2838, Calendar No. 980.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Utah.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2838) to establish a public airport in the vicinity of the National Capital, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That a public airport for the purposes of the United States and the District of Columbia shall be developed by and under the control and jurisdiction of the Secretary of War on a site south of the road leading from Camp Springs to Meadows, in Prince Georges County, Md., which has been selected and recommended by the "District of Columbia Airport Commission" under authority of the act of April 21, 1936 (49 Stat. 1236), entitled "An act to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia."

The Secretary of War is authorized and empowered to acquire by purchase, or condemnation under and in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to authorize condemnation of land for sites of public buildings, and for other purposes", approved August 1, 1888, as amended (U. S. C., title 40, sec. 257), an area not exceeding 2,500 acres of land on which to locate this public airport. Any land or property now belonging to the Government of the United States, or any department thereof, which may be included in the site selected is hereby transferred to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of War, so that it will be available for airport purposes.

There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $3,286,250 for the acquisition of land and the development of the airport contemplated herein, including the clearing of land, grading, construction of runways, construction and installation of buildings and appurtenances thereto, including interior facilities, fixed, movable and office equipment, necessary services, roads, water supply, sewers, sewage disposal, connections to gas and electric mains, purchase and installation of telephone and radio equipment, and similar improvements, and procurement of transportation incident thereto, without reference to sections 1136 and 3734, Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 10, sec. 1339; title 40, sec. 267), including general overhead expenses of transportation, engineering, supplies, inspection and supervision, travel connected therewith, and such services as may be necessary in the offices of the Secretary of War; and the engagement by contract or otherwise without regard to section 3709, Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5), and at such rates of compensation as the Secretary of War may determine, of the services of architects or firms or corporations thereof and other technical and professional personnel as may be necessary; to remain available until expended.

When, in the opinion of the Secretary of War, the development of the said airport shall have been completed as contemplated within the amount of funds provided in this act, he shall transfer all property, control, and jurisdiction thereover to the Secretary of Commerce, who is hereby empowered to maintain and operate said airport, notwithstanding the provisions of section 5 of the Air Commerce Act of May 20, 1926 (U. S. C., title 49, sec. 175).

The Secretary of Commerce shall, with due regard to existing law and the functions of other Government departments, make reasonable regulations and establish charges, fees, and tolls for the use of such airport; fix penalties for the violation of said regulations; and establish liens to enforce payment of said charges, fees, and tolls.

The landing area of said airport shall be reserved wholly for the use of the public and shall not be leased for public or private purposes but shall be maintained and operated as a public landing field for the use of private and Federal aircraft, including aircraft of organized passenger and freight lines, under such regulations and charges as the Secretary of Commerce may prescribe. Space in public buildings and space on the airport for the erection of hangars and other service buildings may be leased under such regulations as the Secretary of Commerce may prescribe. All departments and agencies of the United States operating aircraft shall have free use of the airport and, subject to the consent and approval of the Secretary of Commerce, may erect and install thereon such structures and improvements as the heads of such departments and agencies deem advisable.

There is authorized to be appropriated annually so much as may be necessary for the operation and maintenance of the airport, including compensation of employees, repairs and accessories, purchase of supplies and materials, and the care, installation, maintenance, repair, and operation of utilities and services. All moneys received from the operation of said airport shall be turned into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

There is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $250,000 for the construction by the Secretary of Agriculture of an express highway from the airport provided for herein to a bridge over the Anacostia River, including the acquisition of land for the right-of-way, construction costs, engineering, supplies, inspection and supervision, and such services as may be necessary in the offices of the Secretary of Agriculture: Provided, That in addition to the amount herein appropriated the Secretary of Agriculture may enter into contracts for these purposes to an additional amount not in excess of $500,000, and his action in doing so shall be deemed a contractual obligation of the Federal Government for the payment thereof. The route and design of this express highway within the District of Columbia and the determination of which bridge over the Anacostia River shall be the terminus of the highway shall be as recommended by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Utah temporarily lay the bill aside so that I may finish the flood-control bill?

Mr. KING. I ask unanimous consent that the pending bill may be temporarily laid aside so that the Senator from New York may ask for the consideration of the bill referred to by him.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah asks unanimous consent to lay the bill aside temporarily. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

FLOOD CONTROL

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate resume the consideration of House bill 7646, Calendar No. 940. This is the flood-control bill, the consideration of which was practically completed the other day; but there are one or two further amendments. Before the Senator from Kentucky offers his amendment, I desire to ask to have certain amendments read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York?

There being no objection, the Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7646) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes", approved June 22, 1936.

Mr. COPELAND. I present a few clarifying amendments, which I ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments offered by the Senator from New York will be stated.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the amendments offered by Mr. COPELAND.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, let us have the amendments read one at a time, please.

Mr. COPELAND. The first one that was read is to add a survey which has not been included.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the first amendment offered by the Senator from New York.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 8, after line 6, it is proposed to insert:

Youghiogheny River watershed above Dawson, Pa.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 8, it is proposed to strike out lines 21, 22, 23, and 24, in the following words:

Navidad River, Tex.
Mill Creek, a tributary of the Brazos River, in Austin County, Tex.
Lavaca River, Tex.

Mr. COPELAND. That is because these rivers and the creek are included in the river and harbor bill, and they should not be included in the flood-control bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from New York to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 9, between lines 21 and 22, it is proposed to insert:

Yellowstone River, Mont.

Mr. COPELAND. That is another survey.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 13, before line 4, it is proposed to insert:

Whatcom Creek at Bellingham, Wash.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 14, after line 9, after the amendment heretofore agreed to, it is proposed to insert:

SEC. 9. That the project for the protection of the city of Memphis, Tenn., from floodwaters by the construction of flood walls, levees, and revetments along Wolf River and Nonconnah Creek, in accordance with plans to be approved by the Chief of Engineers, is hereby adopted and authorized to be prosecuted under the direction of the Secretary of War and supervision of the Chief of Engineers, in accordance with the provisions and conditions of the Flood Control Act of June 22, 1936.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

Mr. BARKLEY. I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have reported.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the amendment.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, after line 10, it is proposed to add the following:

Provided further, That if after investigation the President finds that any city or town is by reason of its financial condition unable to comply with the requirements of section 3 as to local cooperation, he is hereby authorized to waive such requirements in whole or in part.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Kentucky whether this is a provision to exempt only cities in the Ohio Valley from local contributions toward flood-control projects.

Mr. BARKLEY. This bill is an amendment to the Flood Control Act of 1936, and the amendment which I have offered, if adopted, would apply to the whole country.

Mr. CLARK. I have the most intense sympathy with the project, and I wanted to know the purpose of the amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. It is not limited to the Ohio Valley.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment of the amendments and the third reading of the bill.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. COPELAND. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, ask for a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. COPELAND, Mr. SHEPPARD, Mrs. CARAWAY, Mr. MCNARY, and Mr. WHITE conferees on the part of the Senate.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AIRPORT

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (S. 2838) to establish a public airport in the vicinity of the National Capital, which was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. KING. I ask to have inserted in the RECORD the act creating the commission known as the District of Columbia Airport Commission and a letter from the chairman, District of Columbia Airport Commission, transmitting a report of the Commission required by section 2 of the act.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[Public, No. 529, 74th Cong., H. R. 3806]

An act to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby created a commission to be known as the "District of Columbia Airport Commission" (hereinafter referred to as the "Commission"), to be composed of three Members of the United States SENATE, to be appointed by the President of the Senate, three Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and three persons to be appointed by the President of the United States, who because of their official positions are interested in the development of a commercial airport in the District of Columbia. No person shall serve on the Commission who has any financial interest direct or indirect in any site or sites for said airport which may be the subject of consideration. The Commission shall proceed immediately after its appointment and organization to examine all available data concerning potential sites for commercial airports and to inspect such potential sites, and shall select a site for such purpose with due regard to the cost of its acquisition and development, its safety, and its adaptability to the requirements of commercial aviation and national defense.

SEC. 2. The Commission shall preserve its decision and selection in confidence and shall make a confidential report thereon to the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives, or the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives if Congress is not in session: Provided, however, That said report shall be made as soon as practicable.

SEC. 3. The members of the Commission shall receive no salary as such, but shall be reimbursed for actual expenses incurred in the discharge of official duties as such commissioners. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated the sum of $10,000, to be charged one-half to the moneys in the Treasury to the credit of the District of Columbia and one-half to the moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, which shall be used for carrying out the purposes of this act, including the employment of such experts and other assistants as the Commission may deem necessary.

Approved, April 21, 1936.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA AIRPORT COMMISSION

Letter from the Chairman, District of Columbia Airport Commission, transmitting a report of the Commission required by section 2 of the act

July 15, 1937.—Ordered to lie on the table and to be printed

JULY 9, 1937.

The Honorable JOHN N. GARNER,
President of the Senate.

SIR: In conformity with the provisions of an act of Congress (Public, No. 529, 74th Cong. (H. R. 3806)), approved April 21, 1936, a District of Columbia Airport Commission was created to examine all available data concerning potential sites for commercial airports, to inspect such potential sites, and to select a site for such purpose.

I have the honor, therefore, to submit herewith confidential report of the Commission required by section 2 of the act.

Respectfully,

WILLIAM H. KING,
Senator from Utah,
Chairman, District of Columbia Airport Commission.

The Honorable JOHN N. GARNER,
President of the Senate.

SIR: In conformity with section 2 of the provisions of the act of Congress, approved April 21, 1936 (Public, No. 529, 74th Cong. (H. R. 3806)), entitled "An act to establish a commercial airport for the District of Columbia", the District of Columbia Airport Commission, authorized under section 1 of the act, has the honor to submit the following report:

I. ORGANIZATION

1. Under the authority contained in the act the following appointments to the Commission were made:

(1) By the President of the Senate:
William H. King, Senator from Utah.
Royal S. Copeland, Senator from New York.
Warren R. Austin, Senator from Vermont.
(2) By the Speaker of the House of Representatives:
Mary T. Norton, Representative from New Jersey.
W. Sterling Cole, Representative from New York.
Jack Nichols, Representative from Oklahoma.
(3) By the President of the United States:
Mr. Frederic A. Delano, Chairman, National Capital Park and Planning Commission.
Col. Daniel I. Sultan, Engineers Corps, United States Army; Engineer Commissioner, District of Columbia.
Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, Air Corps, Chief of the Air Corps, United States Army.

2. The first meeting was held on May 7, 1936, at which time the Commission was organized, with Senator William H. King as chairman and Mr. Jack Nichols, Representative from Oklahoma, as secretary.

3. A subcommittee with Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover as chairman and Senator Warren R. Austin and Representative Jack Nichols, members, was appointed to undertake an investigation of available data upon which the Commission as a whole could act.

II. THE SCOPE OF THE STUDY

4. Having perfected the organization, the Commission then examined the scope of its responsibility, particularly in view of the very definite directive contained in the closing words of section 1 of the act: "and shall select a site for such purpose with due regard to the cost of its acquisition and development, its safety, and its adaptability to the requirements of commercial aviation and national defense."

The Commission also outlined basic principles to cover its procedure and considered a schedule for accomplishment. In outlining these principles it took cognizance of the tremendous growth of commercial aviation in recent years, and particularly the tremendous strides in engineering development. It informally reviewed the operating records of the major transport companies so far as those records are of common knowledge. The great strides in technical development which forecast the operation of commercial and military planes under conditions of weather which today keep airplanes grounded was discussed in its relation to the problem presented. These ramifications of the problem crystallized the minds of the members of the Commission on the paramount issue of safety of operation under all conditions at the expense of other requirements.

5. The Commission then charged the subcommittee with the preparation of an agenda. This the subcommittee did at a meeting on May 14, 1936. The agenda was presented to the Commission as a whole on May 20, 1936, at which time it was considered and approved.

6. The Commission met regularly thereafter to discuss progress, recommend procedure, and to expand its investigation as the need became apparent. Throughout, the Commission was determined that no factor that might contribute to a final, fair, and unbiased decision would be ignored. Every interested party was given consideration, either in person or by the medium of correspondence or past testimony on this subject. Every site suggested was investigated.

III. ASSISTANCE RENDERED BY THE SEVERAL DEPARTMENTS OF THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

7. Prior to discussing the mechanics of its study, the Commission, at this time, desires to pay tribute to the splendid cooperation of the several departments of the Federal Government in the invaluable assistance those departments rendered to the Commission in its study.

8. Every request brought forth whole-hearted, intelligent, and sympathetic response. It was only thus that the investigation upon which this report is based could be made so exhaustive, so lacking in prejudice. Thus, too, was it possible for the Commission to submit its report at this time.

9. The Commission particularly wishes to express its appreciation for the assistance rendered by the following agencies of the Federal Government:

The War Department: The Air Corps, the Quartermaster Corps, the Engineer Corps.
The National Capital Park and Planning Commission.
The Bureau of Air Commerce of the Department of Commerce.
The Public Works Administration.

IV. SOURCES OF INFORMATION

10. Prior to the compilation of any data or the investigation of any site, the subcommittee made a thorough study of all records available of past research affecting the selection of a site for an airport for the District of Columbia. These records consisted of hearings before congressional committees, files of the United States Army Air Corps, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and of the Bureau of Air Commerce. Among other data available was a Washington and vicinity map prepared by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission indicating 48 sites suggested for investigation. Personnel of these agencies who had made studies of the problem in the past were interviewed and the subcommittee made generous use of their experience and advice.

V. AIRPORT QUESTIONNAIRE

11. Based on the study of the records referred to above, and after consultation with personnel of both the Army Air Corps and the Bureau of Air Commerce experienced in the problems involved in large airplane operation and in the layout and construction of airports, the subcommittee formulated an airport questionnaire designed to contain all information essential for a preliminary decision as to the relative value of any site as an airport.

VII. BASIC REQUIREMENTS FOR A MODERN AIRPORT

12. The subcommittee then reviewed the situation existing or developing at some of the Nation's major airports. It immediately became apparent that engineering development of aircraft was rapidly outdistancing ground facilities; that is to say, that the distance required for take-off and landing of our largest planes and the angle of ascent and glide had become of such an order as to preclude the use of airports that but a few years ago were considered ample for any contingency. And the end is not yet in sight, for even now airplanes are being projected that are more than twice the size of present craft.

13. The result of this unforeseen and unprecedented development has been extremely unfortunate for some municipalities. Either it has been necessary to restrict the use of the airport to the smaller type of airplanes, with a consequent decrease in importance as an aviation center, or the community has been forced to acquire additional land for expansion at tremendous cost. The situation in the United States is not unlike that in Europe. Le Bourget, at Paris, France, is preparing a runway 10,000 feet long. It is reported that the German Government is expanding Templehoff Airdrome, at Berlin, to 2 miles, at tremendous cost, and Croyden, in England, is being enlarged.

14. In most cases the early proponents of municipal airports attempted to locate them as close to the cities which they served as was possible. With older, slower type ships and no attempt to maintain schedules in bad weather, and with generally poor road communications, this was indubitably the ideal situation. But for the same reason that the small airport is outmoded, the airport at the gates of a city has become dangerous.

15. The Commission is well aware that scheduled air-transport operations are being conducted from this type of field with only minor accidents, but they are convinced that no serious, impartial student of the situation will contend that the danger of an appalling accident is not imminent.

16. With these thoughts in mind the subcommittee laid down the following requirements for a modern airport:

(1) That runways at least 5,000 feet long on the major points of the compass with provision for blind-landing runways and unobstructed approach 2 miles long, parallel to the direction of bad weather winds (for blind landings).

(2) That it be located in an area which permits of expansion.

(3) That it be free from obstructions, positively from buildings, towers, stacks, and similar types of construction, and as much as possible from natural hazards.

(4) That the land selected should be relatively flat, with firm soil, good drainage. and preferably high.

(5) That the cost of the land and its preparation be neither exorbitant nor unreasonable.

(6) That it be convenient to the city of Washington, which it is to serve, and that a suitable express highway connecting the two be considered in the cost of the entire project.

(7) That it be as free from the disadvantages of local-area fog prevalence as other circumstances will permit.

It will be observed from a study of these requirements that the Commission desired to select a site that would provide the maximum of safety at the minimum of cost and yet be sufficiently close to Washington to warrant short-haul traffic.

VII. PHOTOGRAPHIC MOSAIC OF WASHINGTON AND VICINITY

17. Having progressed thus far, the Commission called upon the Air Corps to photograph and lay a mosaic of Washington and vicinity. This mosaic covered an area of 36 miles in diameter, with the Capitol as the focal point. In addition to this map, the Air Corps furnished individual prints of every site, thus making it possible to discover particular features of the site that even a close inspection on the ground might not disclose.

VIII. PRELIMINARY INVESTIGATION

18. In all, 49 sites were investigated. These 49 sites included every site that was suggested either by citizens' associations, owners, real-estate agents, or other persons interested in the development of an airport for the District. Each site was inspected from the air and on the ground. For each site an individual file was prepared containing an airport questionnaire and an aerial photograph.

19. The greater majority were limited in size and not subject to expansion due to surrounding construction or terrain. In some the cost of grading and filling would have made the development of an airport prohibitively expensive. In every case where a site showed possibilities, a preliminary runway layout was made on a photographic enlargement of a contour map section and a rough estimate made of the amount of earth it would be necessary to move to provide a level area of the dimensions desired. Where it was obvious that development costs would be unduly high, the site was eliminated from further consideration.

IX. SITES SELECTED FOR FURTHER INVESTIGATION

20. After reviewing the work of the subcommittee to this point, the Commission selected nine sites as most nearly meeting the requirements, and directed that estimates be prepared showing the cost of development.

21. These nine sites are listed below without priority of choice:
Washington-Hoover Airport, Va.
Gravelly Point, Va.
Hybla Valley, Va.
Fort Hunt, Va.
Suitland, Md.
Forestville, Md.
Oakland, Md.
Silver Hill, Md.
Camp Springs, Md.
These sites the Commission inspected.

X. FINAL INVESTIGATION

22. The subcommittee then caused to be prepared photographic enlargements of a contour map of each site as well as aerial photographs measuring 18 by 24 inches. On each of these enlargements the most advantageous runway lay-out, eliminating as much as possible expensive grading and filling by taking full advantage of level areas and natural drainage, was superimposed. Where hazards existed, either constructional or natural, the take-off and glide angle of large transports was plotted, showing dangerous areas and the directions toward which take-off and from which a landing was difficult if not dangerous. For these data the subcommittee again consulted the Bureau of Air Commerce, which agency was in the process of developing some extremely illuminating and interesting information on accident rates and performance of aircraft. The Matériel Division of the Army Air Corps also submitted data of value.

23. Abstracts of costs were then prepared covering each site. Due to the confidential nature of the study, the estimates for land costs were approximations, but later developments indicate that these approximations were reasonably accurate. Runway and building and other costs are based on standard local prices, so may be assumed to be reasonably correct in the absence of detailed drawings and specifications.

The totals are listed below:

Washington-Hoover Airport, Va., 219½ acres	$4,672,000
Gravelly Point, Va. (approximate), 500 acres	4,746,000
Hybla Valley, Va., 2,000 acres	3,396,250
Fort Hunt, Va., 1,800 acres	4,653,750
Suitland, Md., 2,000 acres	5,619,125
Forestville, Md., 2,000 acres	5,392,000
Oakland, Md., 2,000 acres	5,556,875
Silver Hill, Md., 1,500 acres	5,048,125
Camp Springs, Md., 1,900 acres	3,286,250

25. The disparity of costs is attributed to the fact that, with the exception of Gravelly Point, Hybla Valley, and Camp Springs, each site is in an area of either industrial or residential development. A comparison of acreage will also disclose the high cost, for benefits gained, of several sites.

XI. SELECTION OF THREE SITES IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE AGENDA

26. In accordance with the agenda, the Commission as a whole selected three sites from which a final choice was to be made. However, prior to making this choice and recommending any one of the three, it was decided to secure the suggestions and opinions of a number of air-line operators and persons similarly interested, as well as some other witnesses who had expressed a desire to be heard. A number of witnesses were heard and their testimony well covered the scope of the study.

27. It was also believed advisable to gain all possible information relative to management and costs of maintaining and operating an airport.

28. The Commission wishes to express its appreciation to the following-named gentlemen, managers of the Nation's leading airports, for the excellent cooperation they afforded in the study of this phase of the Commission's investigations:

Richard Aldworth, superintendent, Newark Airport.

Ralph W. Page, manager, Lambert-St. Louis Municipal Airport.

John J. McLean, airport manager, Allegheny County (Pa.) Municipal Airport.

John A. Casey, superintendent, Chicago Municipal Airport.

John Berry, commissioner of airports, Cleveland Municipal Airport.

Albert L. Edson, airport superintendent, Boston Municipal Airport.

29. It was found that there is no fixed policy in management, charges, nor control of the several airports. It did find, however, that the income is generally only sufficient to care for ordinary operating and maintenance expenses and in no case sufficient to pay off the bonded indebtedness and interest.

30. The benefits that are derived from a well-operated airport are indirect and intangible. It is the Commission's confident opinion that while this situation may continue for some years, major airports may eventually become self-sustaining.

XII. SELECTION OF THE SITE FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA AIRPORT

31. The three sites selected for further consideration were Washington-Hoover Airport, Va., Gravelly Point, Va., and Camp Springs, Md.

32. Washington-Hoover at best, if the land now belonging to the Department of Agriculture's Experimental Farms and a fill in the boundary channel were included, could not exceed 219½ acres. In addition, it lies at the bottom of a hill, and on the southeast is an industrial area. To the west also are the Arlington radio towers, the tops of which are 800 feet above the field. Not far to the northeast is the Washington Monument. The field has been flooded under periods of unusual high water and is subject to river fogs. To overcome flooding would require a considerable fill. Five-thousand-foot runways are not possible in all directions.

33. Statistics indicate that many accidents occur on the airports in motor failure on take-off. Motor failures occur as an average 40 seconds after take-off has begun from a dead stop. It has also been demonstrated that 5,000 feet is the minimum allowable distance to bring the plane to a safe stop from the point of start if a motor fails after 40 seconds.

34. Large planes are also landed under power; that is, the motors are never completely throttled until the plane is but a few feet from the ground. If at any time during the approach glide a motor fails, it results in a "short" landing which in the case of Washington-Hoover Airport would be fatal in view of the surrounding obstacles and the limited area of the field. In addition, the hills, radio towers, Monument, and other obstacles surrounding the airport make an approach under conditions of bad weather hazardous. Certainly, Washington-Hoover Airport does not fulfill any of the basic requirements, except its proximity to the city, and, as the Commission has previously stated, the safety factor should be stressed at the expense of the convenience factor.

35. The Commission feels that the efforts of the owners of Washington-Hoover Field constantly to improve the facilities at that airport in the interests of safety are worthy of hearty commendation of all concerned. It is greatly to be regretted that due to the rapid development of aviation and limitations of the possible expansion of Washington-Hoover Field, the Commission, in the interests of safety of air transportation at all times and under all conditions cannot favorably consider this airport, although so favorably situated to facilitate travel to and from the city, as capable of meeting modern airport requirements.

36. In the case of Gravelly Point, it is proposed to develop a site by fill. The Commission is of the opinion that the general experience in similar developments is an excellent indication of what may be expected in the present instance.

37. Any fill, unless built up with carefully selected materials at a very high cost, requires years to settle sufficiently to provide a good base for the purpose intended. Thus, it believes that construction could not be started until at least 2 years after the fill at Gravelly Point was completed. Further, similar objections raised with reference to Washington-Hoover have application here, except that the available area would consist of 500 acres.

38. In both developments the cost would be extremely high per acre, and since the bill directed the Commission to "* * * select such a site with due regard to the cost of its acquisition and development * * *", it is the opinion of the Commission that all these considerations and the further danger inherent in heavy operating schedules at both the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, and Bolling Field warrant the elimination from favorable consideration for use at all times, or under all conditions, of both Washington-Hoover and Gravelly Point.

39. In harmony with the opinions of the experts who gave the Commission the benefit of their experience, the Commission found that the site at Camp Springs, Md., most nearly met the requirements for a site for a modern airport for the District of Columbia.

40. Camp Springs is on some of the highest ground in the vicinity; thus it offers excellent drainage as well as being free from river fogs. It is the largest extent of level high ground within miles of Washington, thus reducing to a minimum the grading and filling necesary in the development of the airport and as a consequence the ultimate cost. Five-thousand-foot runways can be developed and constructed immediately, with expansion possibilities of at least 1 mile in the east and west directions and 2 miles in the north and south directions at relatively small cost.

41. The surrounding territory is free of industrial and residential development as well as natural hazards, more so than any other site inspected, thus making its safety factor for blind landings very high.

42. The land is relatively undeveloped, consisting for the most part of scrub timber, or young growth, thus reducing the cost below surrounding land that is now under cultivation. It is accessible to the city on good roads and within 10.2 miles of the Willard Hotel. All facilities are available or can be made available without undue cost except railroad connections, which latter the Commission does not believe to be essential.

XIII. OPTIONS

43. Options have been secured on most of the parcels of land comprising the site. Included in the area is a small tract of land owned by the Bureau of Standards which would be required in the development of the site.

XIV. RECOMMENDATIONS

44. The Commission recommends that the site at Camp Springs be selected as the location for the District of Columbia Airport and that a bill be prepared and enacted, authorizing the project; that the necessary funds be appropriated at the earliest possible moment to carry into effect the recommendations of the Commission to establish a modern airport for the District of Columbia.

45. The Commission urges that conclusive action be not delayed, as the continued use of the present airport is, in the frank opinion of the members, inviting disaster.

46. The Commission also recommends that in preparing the bills authorizing and appropriating for the project that provision be made for the construction of a suitable express highway from the airport to the bridge over the Anacostia River.

47. There was testimony before the Commission to the effect that in addition to an airport such as was contemplated by the act creating the Commission an auxiliary airport would prove advantageous.

XV. RECORDS OF THE COMMISSION

48. All the records prepared by the subcommittee and the Commission are available for official inspection and research in the office of the chairman of the subcommittee, Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, Air Corps, Chief of the Air Corps.

XVI. CONCLUSION

49. The Commission, having made its study, found and recommended, in accordance with the provisions of the act authorizing it, closes its report with the urgent recommendation that in the interests of aviation and in order that there may be available at the District of Columbia the most modern and best air communication and transportation service, its recommendations be accepted.

50. The establishment of such ground facilities and air-transportation service will serve to attract the attention of the world, and should contribute to national unity and leadership and international peace through closer and more frequent good-will contacts.

WILLIAM H. KING,
Senator from Utah,
Chairman, District of Columbia, Airport Commission.
WARREN R. AUSTIN,
Senator from Vermont.
MARY T. NORTON,
Representative from New Jersey.
W. STERLING COLE,
Representative from New York.
FREDERIC A. DELANO,
Chairman, National Capital Park and Planning Commission.
DANIEL I. SULTAN,
Colonel, Engineer Corps.
O. WESTOVER,
Major General, Air Corps, Chief of the Air Corps.

JULY 9, 1937.

PROGRAM FOR RELIEF AND BENEFIT OF AGRICULTURE

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, because it is an emergency matter I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate Joint Resolution 207, the agricultural relief measure.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I desire to offer two amendments, which are strictly clerical, to clarify two words in the joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. We have not yet reached the amendment stage. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I ask that the joint resolution be read.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I also should like to have the joint resolution read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will read the joint resolution.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 207) was read, as follows:

Joint resolution expressing the views of the Congress to a program for the relief and benefit of agriculture

Whereas the whole Nation suffers when agriculture is depressed; and

Whereas the Nation has felt and still feels the unfavorable economic consequences of two different kinds of misfortune in agriculture; and

Whereas the first of these misfortunes was the ruinous decline in farm prices from 1929 to 1932; and

Whereas the second kind of misfortune was the drought of 1934, followed by the drought of 1936; and

Whereas a permanent farm program should (a) provide not only for soil conservation but also for replacing the crop-adjustment methods of the Agricultural Adjustment Act, (b) protect agriculture and consumers against the consequences of drought, and (c) safeguard farmers and the business of the Nation against the consequences of farm-price decline; and

Whereas it is the sense of Congress that the permanent farm legislation should be based upon the following fundamental principles:

(1) That farmers are entitled to their fair share of the national income;

(2) That consumers should be afforded protection against the consequences of drought by storage of reserve supplies of big-crop years for use in time of crop failure;

(3) That if consumers are given the protection of such an ever-normal granary plan, farmers should be safeguarded against undue price declines by a system of loans supplementing their national soil-conservation program; and

(4) That control of agricultural surpluses above the ever-normal granary supply is necessary to safeguard the Nation's investment in loans and to protect farmers against a price collapse due to bumper yields resulting in production beyond all domestic and foreign need.

Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, etc., That abundant production of farm products should be a blessing and not a curse; that therefore legislation carrying out the foregoing principles will be first to engage the attention of the Congress upon its reconvening; and that it is the sense of the Congress that a permanent farm program based upon these principles should be enacted as soon as possible after Congress reconvenes.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator from Mississippi the interpretation of the word "reconvenes." Does the Senator have in mind a special session or the next regular session?

Mr. BILBO. In the event a special session should be called, the joint resolution would apply to that. It means any session.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. That is the interpretation I placed upon it, but I wanted the RECORD to show that that was the understanding of the author of the joint resolution.

Mr. BILBO. It relates to the next session.

Mr. BARKLEY. As I understand, the joint resolution was unanimously reported from the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and follows the instructions given a few days ago to that committee to report a measure along these lines during the first week of the next session, whether it is the regular session or a special session.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Mississippi whether the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], the chairman of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, approves the joint resolution?

Mr. BILBO. He does.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, let me inquire whether or not, after the joint resolution shall be passed, loans will be made by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Mr. BILBO. There is a perfect understanding with the executive department that an Executive order will be issued granting relief to cotton farmers to the extent of 12 cents a pound.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Mississippi whether there is any perfect understanding with the executive department about loans to the producers of any other commodities.

Mr. BILBO. Yes.

Mr. CLARK. There are many other commodities besides cotton.

Mr. BILBO. There were representatives of the corn and wheat producers present at the conference, and they were equally assured that if they were faced with a tragic situation, as the cotton farmers are, they, too, would be relieved.

Mr. CLARK. How about oats?

Mr. BILBO. All commodities are included.

Mr. CLARK. There is a situation existing in some States in the Middle West at the present time, where there was a complete failure of the wheat crop due to very unusual weather conditions, and where there is a very large oat crop, the producers of which are now suffering from exactly the same sort of seasonal glut that has affected the cotton crop.

Mr. BILBO. I am sure that if the Senator would present his cause his constituents would get relief.

Mr. CLARK. To whom should a Senator present his cause?

Mr. BILBO. We had a conference with the Secretary of Agriculture and the President of the United States.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, may I say, regarding the loan matter spoken of by the Senator from Tennessee, that on the 11th of this month I introduced Senate Joint Resolution 205, providing a benefit payment of 2½ cents a pound on the cotton crop of this year, and that the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry today reported the joint resolution to the Senate with an amendment providing for carrying out for the present the same plan that was adopted in 1935, which provides for a 9- or 10-cent loan, and, in case of sale, that the seller is paid by the Government the difference between the sale price and 12 cents, but in no case exceeding 2 cents per pound. That joint resolution is now on the calendar and probably will be called up at an early date.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Mississippi where the money is to come from with which to pay 12 cents a pound for ten or fifteen million bales of cotton.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, if I may answer that question, in section 32 of the Agricultural Adjustment Act there is a provision which the Senator from Texas offered on the floor in the form of an amendment, which was adopted, providing for the segregation of 30 percent of all revenue and income from tariffs into a special fund for the payment of benefits to agriculture, and cotton being a great export crop, and the act being designed to aid in its exportation, the 1935 benefits, to which the Senator from Texas recently adverted, were paid from that fund, it is contemplated now that those benefit payments will be paid from that same fund.

Mr. KING. My recollection of the amounts estimated to result from tariffs on imports is that they would be less than the amounts required for the payment of 12 cents a pound on cotton.

Mr. CONNALLY. That is entirely possible. There is an authorization in the joint resolution for such appropriations as the Congress may see fit.

Mr. KING. Inasmuch as the Treasury of the United States is being resorted to for everything, I suppose we should let this go.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. AUSTIN. This resolution is limited in its scope to action by the Senate, is it not?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is a joint resolution.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from Mississippi a question? Is it the understanding with reference to loans to be made by the Commodity Credit Corporation that such loans shall apply to all commodities, and are not to be limited to any one commodity?

Mr. BILBO. That is the purpose of the organization of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BILBO. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. That has always been the purpose of the Commodity Credit Corporation. That was my purpose and the purpose of the Senator who joined me in introducing the bill creating the Corporation. The fact is that the Commodity Credit Corporation has deliberately violated the purpose for which it was created. It seems to me that the action contemplated ought to be made mandatory on the Commodity Credit Corporation. That is the reason why I asked the Senator from Mississippi, not the purpose for which the Commodity Credit Corporation was originally created, but as to what assurance he had that the Commodity Credit Corporation is willing to carry out its function, or would carry out its function until the next meeting of the Congress.

Mr. BILBO. My understanding is that the President has authority under the existing law to issue an Executive order to carry out the purpose.

Mr. CLARK. The President has always had that authority. If the Senator from Mississippi has assurance from the President that it will be carried out, I am perfectly content. So far as I am concerned, from my experience with the Commodity Credit Corporation and from the experience of other Senators, I would not trust the Commodity Credit Corporation as far as I can throw this desk to carry out the purposes of the act.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President, was it the understanding that if the proposed amendments to this joint resolution were adopted the Commodity Credit Corporation's funds would be made available on all commodities?

Mr. BILBO. That was my understanding.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO]?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 207) expressing the views of the Congress as to a program for the relief and benefit of agriculture.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I offer two amendments which I send to the desk and ask to have stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendments will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, in the second line, it is proposed to strike out the word "replacing" and insert "developing and improving."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, in the 14th line, after the word "drought", it is proposed to add a comma and the words "floods and pestilence causing abnormally high prices."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Oklahoma.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is it proposed to strike out the preamble?

Mr. BARKLEY. I think the preamble of this joint resolution should not be stricken out.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Very well.

The preamble was agreed to.

ARMY HOUSING

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House bill 7645, being Calendar No. 992, the so-called Army housing bill. When that bill was called on the calendar, the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] objected to its consideration. The Senator from Utah has since withdrawn his objection. I now ask for its immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7645) to authorize appropriations for construction and rehabilitation at military posts and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments.

The amendments were, on page 1, line 4, after the word "exceed", to strike out "$21,460,688" and insert "$25,587,456"; on page 2, after the item "Fort Crook, Nebr." and the total, to insert:

Fort Devens, Mass.	Quarters, officers	107,400
	Quarters, noncommissioned officers	42,500
	Telephone, telegraph, and radio station	45,000
	Telephone construction	6,000
Total		200,900

On page 3, after the item "Fort Sam Houston, Tex." and the total, to insert:

Fort Huachuca, Ariz.	Hospital (50 beds, 32 Medical Detachment)	225,000
	Barracks (250 men)	275,000
	Telephone construction	500
Total		500,500

On the same page, after the item "Jefferson Barracks, Mo." and the total, to strike out "Fort Knox, Ky., hospital, 200,000" and insert:

Fort Knox, Ky.	Hospital	200,000
	Barracks	550,000
	Quarters	277,200
	Telephone construction	10,000
Total		1,037,200

On page 4, after the item "Fort Myer, Va." and the total, strike out:

Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.	Barracks	137,500
	Quarters (noncommissioned officers), telephone construction and utilities.	38,870
Total		176,370

And insert:

Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.	Barracks (250 men)	275,000
	Barracks, quartermaster and detachments	275,000
	Telephone construction	5,000
	Quarters (noncommissioned officers) telephone construction and utilities.	38,870
Total		593,870

On page 5, after the item of "Fort Thomas, Ky." and the total, to insert:

Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo.	Barracks, medical detachment	137,500
	Gymnasium	140,000
Total		277,500

And immediately thereafter to insert:

Headquarters Provisional Brigade and Washington Quartermaster Depot, D. C.	Barracks	1,320,000
	Land, purchase of	573,188
Total		1,893,188

On page 5, after the item of "Fort Wayne, Mich.", to strike out:

Total for the United States.	15,090,588

And insert:

Total for the United States.	19,217,356

On page 6, after the item of "Total, Panama", to strike out:

Grand total	21,460,688

And insert:

Grand total	25,587,456

On the same page, line 2, after "Colorado" and the comma, to strike out "an extension to" and insert "a branch of"; on the same page, line 3, after the word "School" to insert "at Chanute Field, Ill."; and at the end of the bill add a new section 3, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated not to exceed $25,587,456, to be expended for the construction, rehabilitation, and installation at military posts of such buildings and utilities and appurtenances thereto as may be necessary, as follows:

Station	Description of construction	Amount
Army and Navy General Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark.	Quarters	$34,000
	Telephone	1,000
Total		35,000
Air Corps Technical School, Denver, Colo.	Barracks	935,000
	Hospital headquarters and administration building	200,000
	School building	540,000
	Runways	300,000
	Grading and improving landing field	300,000
Total		2,275,000
Fort Barrancas, Fla.	Quarters (noncommissioned officers, 10)	85,000
	Telephone construction	2,000
Total		87,000
Fort Benning, Ga.	Water system, improvements to pumping and filtration plants; reservoir storage.	180,000
Fort Bliss, Tex.	Barracks	275,000
	Quarters (warrant officers and noncommissioned officers, 20).	170,000
	Radio station, including towers (Biggs Field)	17,000
	Telephone construction	1,000
Total		463,000
Fort Bragg, N. C.	Barracks	412,500
	Telephone construction	1,000
Total		413,500
Carlisle Barracks, Pa.	Quarters	238,000
	Telephone construction	3,000
	Quarters	348,000
	Sterilizing plant, etc.	35,000
	Barracks (125 men)	137,500
Total		761,500
Chanute Field, Ill.	Barracks, including mess facilities	1,035,000
	Quarters, noncommissioned officers	505,000
	Hospital	300,000
	Central heating plant, beginning	500,000
	School building	540,000
Total		2,880,000
Fort Crook, Nebr.	Barracks (addition to)	55,000
	Barracks	137,500
	Telephone construction	500
Total		193,000
Fort Devens, Mass.	Quarters, officers	107,400
	Quarters, noncommissioned officers	42,500
	Telephone, telegraph, and radio station	45,000
	Telephone construction	6,000
Total		200,900
Fort Douglas, Utah	Medical detachment barracks	42,000
Fort Du Pont, Del.	Barracks	412,500
	Telephone construction	1,000
Total		413,500
Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.	Quarters (30 noncommissioned officers)	255,000
	Telephone	2,500
Total		257,500
Fitzsimons General Hospital, Colo.	Hospital	1,750,000
	Telephone construction	20,000
Total		1,770,000
Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia, Pa.	Office building	225,000
	Extension building no. 127 acoustic laboratory.	23,000
	Extension of annealing room building no. 215	7,000
Total		255,000
Fort Sam Houston, Tex.	Hospital (addition)	235,000
	Basement in transmitter building	4,000
	Barracks	550,000
	Telephone construction	4,000
Total		793,000
Fort Huachuca, Ariz.	Hospital (50 beds, 32 Medical Detachment)	225,000
	Barracks (250 men)	275,000
	Telephone construction	500
Total		500,500
Fort Humphreys, D. C.	Reproduction plant	74,880
	Telephone construction	3,500
Total		78,380

Station	Description of construction	Amount
Jefferson Barracks, Mo.	Barracks (medical and other detachment)	$82,500
	Mess and kitchen addition to barracks	60,000
	Nurses' quarters	63,000
Total		205,000
Fort Knox, Ky.	Hospital	200,000
	Barracks	550,000
	Quarters	277,200
	Telephone construction	10,000
Total		1,037,200
Fort Leavenworth, Kans.	Auditorium and production plant	650,000
Madison Barracks, N. Y.	Barracks	137,500
	Quarters, noncommissioned officers	136,000
	Telephone construction	1,000
	Water supply	85,000
Total		359,500
Fort MacArthur, Calif.	Barracks and utilities	137,500
	Telephone construction	1,000
Total		138,500
Fort McPherson, Ga.	Radio station	23,000
	Dental clinic	85,000
Total		108,000
Fort Monmouth, N. J.	Barracks	137,500
	Signal Corps laboratory	220,000
	Telephone construction	20,000
Total		377,500
Fort Monroe, Va.	Barracks, quartermaster detachment	110,000
	Barracks (addition to)	225,000
	Enlisted Specialists' School	69,500
	Telephone construction	12,000
Total		416,500
Fort Myer, Va.	Hospital addition	9,000
	Barracks Building No. 104	55,000
	Barracks (addition to)	220,000
	Telephone construction	500
Total		284,500
Presidio of San Francisco, Calif.	Barracks (250 men)	275,000
	Barracks, Quartermaster and detachments	275,000
	Telephone construction	5,000
	Quarters (noncommissioned officers) telephone construction and utilities	38,870
Total		593,870
Fort Riley, Kans.	Academic building	400,000
	Telephone construction	5,000
Total		405,000
Fort D. A. Russell, Tex.	Motor shop, truck, and gun shed	77,818
Fort Sill, Okla.	Barracks	330,000
	Telephone construction	1,000
Total		331,000
Fort Thomas, Ky.	Barracks	412,500
	Telephone construction	2,500
Total		415,000
Fort Francis E. Warren, Wyo.	Barracks, medical detachment	137,500
	Gymnasium	140,000
Total		277,500
Headquarters Provisional Brigade and Washington Quartermaster Depot, D. C.	Barracks	1,320,000
	Land, purchase of	573,188
Total		1,893,188
Fort Washington, Md.	Quarters (officers' double)	30,000
Fort Wayne, Mich.	Quarters (8 noncommissioned officers)	68,000
Total for the United States.		19,217,356
HAWAII
Schofield Barracks	Barracks, Eleventh Field Artillery	1,256,200
	Barracks, detachments	498,300
	Telephone construction	11,000
	Barracks, detachments	283,800
Total		2,049,300
Fort Shafter	Barracks	825,000
	Telephone construction	2,500
Total		827,500
Department Headquarters, Fort Shafter.	Quarters	$246,500
Tripler General Hospital	Barracks, medical detachment	176,000
	Telephone construction	3,000
Total		179,000
Total, Hawaii		3,302,300
PANAMA
Fort Clayton	Barracks	825,000
	Telephone	3,000
	Barracks	687,500
	Telephone construction	2,000
Total		1,517,500
Corozal General Depot	Barracks	454,300
	Telephone construction	5,000
Total		459,300
Fort Davis	Barracks	550,000
	Telephone construction	3,000
Total		553,000
Fort de Lesseps	Barracks	120,000
Fort Kobbe	Barracks	55,000
	Warehouse and shops	20,000
	Special project	7,000
	Water tank	8,000
Total		90,000
Panama Canal Zone	Rehabilitation	328,000
Total, Panama		3,067,800
Grand total		25,587,456

SEC. 2. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to establish in or near Denver, Colo., a branch of the Air Corps Technical School at Chanute Field, Ill., and to accept on behalf of the United States, free from encumbrance or conditions and without cost to the United States, for use as a site for the extension to such school, the title in fee simple to 960 acres of land, more or less, within and without the city limits of the city of Denver, Colo., including the property known as the "Agnes (Phipps) Memorial Sanitarium", together with existing buildings and equipment located thereon; and also a tract of land within the State of Colorado, suitable for use as an aerial gunnery and bombing range by the Army Air Corps: Provided, That in the event a donor is unable to perfect title to any land tendered as a donation, condemnation of such land is authorized in the name of the United States, and payment of any and all awards for title to such land as is condemned, together with the cost of suit, shall be made by the donor.

SEC. 3. That the military reservation near Little Rock, Ark., now known as Camp Pike, shall be designated, and hereafter be known as "Camp Joseph T. Robinson."

The amendments were agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

SHORE CONSTRUCTION WORK FOR THE NAVY

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. WALSH. I move that the Senate proceed to consider Senate bill 2338, to authorize the Secretary of the Navy to proceed with the construction of certain public works, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with amendments, on page 2, line 12, after the words "buildings and", to strike out "accessories" and insert "accessories,"; in line 13, after the word "land", to insert "at a cost not to exceed $125,000"; in line 17, after the words "buildings and", strike out "accessories" and insert "accessories,"; in line 18, after the word "land", to insert "at a cost not to exceed $264,000"; in line 24, after the words "buildings and", to strike out "accessories" and insert "accessories,"; in line 25, after the word "land", insert "at a cost not to exceed $36,000"; and on page 3, to strike out lines 9 to 13, inclusive, in the following words:

Naval Supply Depot, Oakland, Calif.: Fleet supply facilities, including buildings and accessories, waterfront structures, dredging, and purchase of land in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–2, approved April 27, 1937.

And to insert:

Marine Barracks, Parris Island, S. C.: Four barracks buildings at main station, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–11, approved April 27, 1937; barracks building and accessories, rifle range, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–12, approved April 27, 1937; barracks building and accessories, receiving station, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–13, approved April 27, 1937.

Navy Yard, Puget Sound, Wash.: Acquisition of private rights in building no. 138, $6,057.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized to proceed with the construction of the following-named public works projects:

Navy Yard, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii: Purchase of land, at a cost not to exceed $165,000.

Submarine Base, New London, Conn.: Submarine training school building and accessories, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–7, approved April 27, 1937; barracks building and accessories, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–8, approved April 27, 1937.

Fleet Air Base, Coco Solo, Canal Zone: Quarters and accessories for officers in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–10, approved April 27, 1937.

Fleet Air Base, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii: Final assembly shop building and accessories, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–9, approved April 27, 1937.

Naval radio and direction-finder stations: Annapolis, Md., additional facilities, including buildings and accessories, and purchase of land at a cost not to exceed $125,000, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–1, approved April 27, 1937; Mare Island, Calif., master receiving and control station, including buildings and accessories, and purchase of land at a cost not to exceed $264,000, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–4, approved April 27, 1937; high-frequency transmitting station, including buildings and accessories, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–5, approved April 27, 1937; Oahu, Hawaii, radio receiving station, including buildings and accessories, and purchase of land at a cost not to exceed $36,000, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–3, approved April 27, 1937; general improvement of radio facilities, including buildings and accessories, at a cost not to exceed $85,000.

Naval Supply Depot, San Diego, Calif.: Storage buildings and accessories, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawings Au–6a, and Au–6b, approved April 27, 1937.

Marine Barracks, Parris Island, S. C.: Four barracks buildings at main station, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–11, approved April 27, 1937; barracks building and accessories, rifle range, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–12, approved April 27, 1937; barracks building and accessories, receiving station, in substantial accord with Bureau of Yards and Docks Drawing Au–13, approved April 27, 1937.

Navy Yard, Puget Sound, Wash.: Acquisition of private rights in building no. 138, $6,057.

SEC. 2. There is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this act.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REGULATION OF AIR TRANSPORTATION

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. McCARRAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Calendar No. 702, being Senate bill 2.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Let the bill be read by title.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, is that motion debatable?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am only asking that the bill be read by title before we vote on the motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. We are going to have a little order in the Senate. The Chair recognized the Senator from Kentucky because he is the leader of the Democrats in the Senate. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I yielded to the Senator from Nevada to make a motion, which he has made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada has moved that the Senate proceed to consider Calendar No. 702, Senate bill 2.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is the motion debatable?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I desire to be recognized to debate the motion.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

Mr. McCARRAN. I have the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nevada has the floor. Does the Senator from Nevada yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. For what purpose?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I wish to inquire what the bill covers, and what is involved in it, before the motion to proceed to its consideration is disposed of. Of course, I have no objection to the Vice President recognizing the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], but I do say that other Senators are entitled to know what business is being transacted in the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. When the Chair recognized the Senator from Kentucky it was on the theory that the Senator from Kentucky would yield to whatever Senator desired him to yield, in order that a motion might be made to take up for consideration some piece of proposed legislation. The Senator from Kentucky was on his feet at the time. The Chair thinks it is his duty to recognize the Senator from Kentucky when he is on his feet, or to recognize the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], who is acting as leader of the minority at the present time, if he should be on his feet. The Senator from Kentucky yielded to the Senator from Nevada for the purpose of making a motion, as the Chair understood, to proceed to the consideration of a certain bill. After that motion was made, the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR] asked whether the motion was debatable. If so, he desired to debate it. That is the parliamentary situation at this moment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I yielded to the Senator from Nevada for the purpose of allowing him to make the motion to consider the bill, not with the view of considering it this afternoon, but to make it the unfinished business. It is the aviation bill which has been on the calendar for some time.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Most respectfully I desire to say that under the rules of the Senate I think it is not permissible for one Senator to be recognized and then to yield to another Senator and thus permit him to obtain the floor to make a motion. The rules of the Senate are very specific, and, in my judgment, they are mandatory upon the Chair. They provide that he must recognize Senators in the order in which they address the Chair.

I have no objection to the Senator from Nevada making the motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill referred to by him, but in view of the rapidity with which the Senate has been proceeding during the past 5 minutes I was very apprehensive that the bill might be made the unfinished business before the Senator from Wisconsin could ascertain what the bill is. When I attempted to secure recognition to obtain information about it, the Chair kept informing the Senator from Wisconsin that he had recognized the Senator from Kentucky, and that the Senator from Kentucky in turn had farmed out the floor to the Senator from Nevada. [Laughter.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair make a statement. The Chair recognized the Senator from Kentucky because he is the leader on the Democratic side of the Chamber. He would recognize the Senator from Vermont [Mr. AUSTIN], acting Republican leader, in the same way. When the Senator from Kentucky yielded to the Senator from Nevada, the Senator from Nevada was on his feet. Had the Senator from Kentucky informed the Chair that he wanted the Senator from Nevada to be recognized, as he was on his feet, the Chair would have recognized him. So the procedure is the same. The Chair would have recognized the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN] because the Senator from Kentucky had suggested to the Chair that he would like to have the Senator from Nevada recognized, and that Senator being on his feet and other Senators on their feet the Chair would have recognized the Senator from Nevada. So the result is about the same.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield further?

Mr. MCCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I recognize that under the rule, where more than one Senator is addressing the Chair, obviously the Chair has a right to recognize the Senator who addresses him first; but it is perfectly clear that when the Chair recognizes one Senator and then permits that Senator, in turn, to yield to another, such procedure does not conform to the rule and the result is not the same, for all Senators are not given an equal opportunity to address the Chair and to seek recognition from the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The statement of the Senator from Wisconsin is absolutely correct. It is only a matter of mathematics. [Laughter.] If the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] had suggested to the Chair that he desired to have the Senator from Nevada take up a certain bill at the conclusion of the consideration of the bill in charge of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], the Chair would have recognized the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN]. Ordinarily he recognizes the Senator from Kentucky at this hour. The Senator from Kentucky yielded to the Senator from Nevada.

The Senator from Wisconsin is absolutely correct that the Senator from Kentucky cannot farm out his time. However, the Chair would have recognized the Senator from Nevada upon the suggestion of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield further?

Mr. MCCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I do not desire to detain the Senate any further by a discussion of the parliamentary situation. However, it is very important from the point of view of precedence and from the point of view of the conduct of the business of the Senate, and that is why I want to make one further statement concerning the situation.

The Chair will obviously recognize that on day before yesterday a situation developed which gave an opportunity to the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER] to move to proceed to the consideration of a bill, which would not have been possible had the Chair been following the procedure which he has followed this evening, because the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] could then have stated that he yielded to the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING]. However, so far as that is concerned, there would be no objection whatsoever to the Senator from Kentucky making all motions to proceed to the consideration of bills.

Let it be understood that I am not in favor of upsetting the procedure here, nor the program; but I believe that the question of recognition is very important from the point of view of preserving the rights of Senators. While I realize that no rights have been sacrificed in this instance, I want to call attention to the question, and I hope the present occupant of the Chair will understand.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Let the Chair make a further statement. The Senator from Wisconsin is absolutely correct. So long as the present occupant of the chair is presiding over the Senate there is going to be absolute compliance with the rule as to recognition. The illustration of the Senator from Wisconsin, however, is unfortunate in this respect, that when the present occupant of the chair recognized the junior Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] was not on his feet nor was any other Senator on his feet and, therefore, the Chair was compelled to recognize the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER]. If the Senator from Kentucky had been on his feet at the time or if any other Senator had been on his feet at the time, the Chair could have taken his choice, but at that time no Senator was on his feet except the junior Senator from New York, and the Chair recognized him, as he should have done.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the Senator from Kentucky would have been on his feet at the time except that he expected another Senator to be on his feet, but he did not happen to be on his feet at the time. [Laughter.]

Mr. President, I have no desire to farm out the right to be recognized on the floor, but from time immemorial it has been the custom late in the afternoon for the Senator in charge of the program to obtain the floor and then yield to other Senators to call up bills which were not controversial. In attempting to arrange the program for today, I had understood that after the sugar bill was out of the way, the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] would be recognized to move consideration of the District airport bill; that following the disposal of that bill the Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] would move to proceed to the consideration of an Army housing bill; and following that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] would ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of a naval housing bill.

Of course that seemed to involve a pretty good day's work, and I had not anticipated those bills would be out of the way in time for the Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], who for days has been seeking recognition to make his bill the unfinished business, to do that this afternoon. Having the floor, while it was not strictly in accordance with the rule, yet it was in accordance with the custom that I should yield to him and for that reason I did so. I have no desire to farm out the time of the Senate to any Senator.

Mr. MCKELLAR. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MCKELLAR. When a Senator is recognized for the purpose of making a motion and he has made the motion, is he entitled to retain the floor?

The VICE PRESIDENT. If he desires to retain the floor he is entitled to it.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I desire to say, if the Senator from Nevada will permit me, that the bill which is in charge of the Senator from Nevada is an exceedingly important bill——

Mr. MCCARRAN. Mr. President, I do not yield for the purpose of a speech.

Mr. MCKELLAR. If the Senator does not yield now, I want to be recognized before action is taken on the motion of the Senator from Nevada to proceed to the consideration of his bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Tennessee will never be deprived of his right to address the Senate.

Mr. MCKELLAR. I know that, particularly so long as the Vice President is in the chair.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is obvious the motion of the Senator from Nevada cannot be disposed of this afternoon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. What is the pleasure of the Senate?

EXECUTIVE SESSION

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting several nominations in the Marine Corps, which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

(For nominations this day received, see the end of Senate proceedings.)

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICES AND POST ROADS

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of sundry postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The reports will be placed on the Executive Calendar.

If there be no further reports of committees, the clerk will state the nominations on the Executive Calendar.

THE JUDICIARY

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Frank J. Hennessy to be United States attorney for the northern district of California.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Benjamin Harrison to be United States attorney for the southern district of California.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

Mr. McADOO. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the President be notified of the confirmation of the nominations of the United States district attorneys for the northern and southern districts in California.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the President will be notified.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Frank F. Gentsch to be collector of internal revenue for the eighteenth district of Ohio.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Harry E. Trimble to be senior surgeon in the Public Health Service.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Mark V. Ziegler to be senior surgeon in the Public Health Service.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of James E. Faris to be senior surgeon in the Public Health Service.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

POSTMASTERS

The legislative clerk proceeded to read sundry nominations of postmasters.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask unanimous consent that nominations of postmasters on the calendar be confirmed en bloc.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the nominations of postmasters are confirmed en bloc.

That completes the Executive Calendar.

CONSIDERATION OF UNOBJECTED-TO BILLS TOMORROW

The Senate resumed legislative session.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I wish to state if the pending business involved in the motion of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] is disposed of in time tomorrow, it is the desire to proceed to the call of the calendar for unobjected bills. I think that ought to be stated for the information of Senators.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Senators will take due notice.

RECESS

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until tomorrow, Saturday, August 14, 1937, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate, August 13 (legislative day of Aug. 9), 1937

APPOINTMENTS AND PROMOTIONS IN THE NAVY

MARINE CORPS

First Lt. John F. Stamm to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 30th day of June 1937.

First Lt. William B. Steiner to be a captain in the Marine Corps from the 30th day of June 1937.

David L. Henderson, a citizen of the State of Virginia, to be a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, revocable for 2 years, from the 1st day of July 1937.

Harry N. Shea, a citizen of the State of New Jersey, to be a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps, revocable for 2 years, from the 1st day of July 1937.

Quartermaster Clerk Walter J. Czapp to be a chief quartermaster clerk in the Marine Corps, to rank with, but after, second lieutenant from the 30th day of June 1937.

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 13 (legislative day of Aug. 9), 1937

UNITED STATES ATTORNEYS

Frank J. Hennessy to be United States attorney for the northern district of California.

Benjamin Harrison to be United States attorney for the southern district of California.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE

Frank F. Gentsch to be collector of internal revenue for the eighteenth district of Ohio.

UNITED STATES PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

Harry E. Trimble to be senior surgeon.
Mark V. Ziegler to be senior surgeon.
James E. Faris to be senior surgeon.

POSTMASTERS

ARKANSAS

Joseph D. Gault, Dardanelle.
Robert R. Holland, Dyess.
Hazel B. Holt, Joiner.

OKLAHOMA

Mr. Laura Lonnie Dolphin, Boley.

TEXAS

Samuel M. Compton, Celeste.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1937

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Hear our prayer, O Jehovah, Father, and give ear to our supplication. May the beauty of the Lord God be upon us and may life become stronger and richer as the days go by. We pray Thee to make the questions of duty clear to our reason and help us to accept the wisest persuasions of our understanding. Enlarge our trust in that better self which beckons us on and bless us with a large and a more wholesome life. May we resolve that we shall be patient, steadfast, and kindly, and, above all, may we not forget that life means giving and not withholding. Our Father, in a world of mingled good and evil, amid a ceaseless struggle of right and wrong, keep us subdued and in accord with Thy will by the discipline of Thy redeeming government. Finally, may we enter into the secret place of the Most High. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Frazier, its legislative clerk, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

H. R. 7092. An act to provide for the transfer of Scotland County to the middle judicial district of North Carolina.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7642) entitled "An act to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigaiton, and for other purposes."

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD and to include therein several tables compiled by the Administration of Public Works.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

ELECTION CONTEST, ROY v. JENKS

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged report in the election contest of Roy against Jenks.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Referred to the House Calendar and ordered printed.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a point of order against the acceptance by the House of the report and resolution just offered by the chairman of Elections Committee No. 3.

Mr. Speaker, it is my contention that the making of this report constitutes a violation of section 47 of rule 11 of the rules of the House of Representatives, which reads as follows:

47. The several elections committees of the House shall make final report to the House in all contested election cases not later than 6 months from the first day of the first regular session of the Congress to which the contestee is elected except in a contest from the Territory of Alaska in which case the time shall not exceed 9 months.

The language of this rule is not permissive; it is mandatory, compelling.

It does not say the committee may, or the committee should, but conclusively and definitely says the committee shall make final report to the House in all contested election cases not later than 6 months from the first day of the first regular session of the Congress, and inasmuch as this regular session of Congress began on January 5, the prescribed period within which this committee can make its final report expired on July 5.

Mr. Speaker, it is your privilege and your duty to insist that the rules which have long been established, and which are set forth in the House Manual, be complied with by an impartial interpretation of the language thereof.

The manifest motive behind this rule is to give 6 months and no more for a contest to be heard and final report rendered to the House.

Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that this report and resolution are not in order and that the committee has had no jurisdiction since the expiration of the time prescribed in the rule, which was July 5 of this year.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be heard on the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, I think the precedents will show that in spite of this rule—clause 47 of rule XI—reports of election committees have been permitted to be filed after the expiration of the 6 months, for the reason that to work out justice in these contests, if for some reason the 6 months elapses before a conclusion is reached, further time is and must necessarily be granted. Furthermore, the House is always a judge of "the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own Members"—article I, section 5—and is entitled at any time to determine the right to a seat between contesting parties. I think this precise question has arisen before.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman has finished and before the Chair rules, I would ask of the Chair the privilege of making brief reply to the argument of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from New York yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Yes.

Mr. DOWELL. Is it not true that where time is needed it has been the rule of this House and the custom always that a resolution is brought before the House, and if permission is given for reasons assigned, that the committee may examine further into the case?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I do not recall such resolutions, and while I cannot put my finger on any exact instance in which this situation has arisen before, the gentleman must always bear in mind that the rules of the House are merely the procedure adopted by the majority of the House.

At any time a majority of this House can work out equity and justice and can change its rules.

Mr. DOWELL. No; that is not correct. I beg the gentleman's pardon. There is only one way to correct a rule and that is in the regular form prescribed in the rules. The question has to be submitted to the House and that has not been done.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. The gentleman is in error.

Mr. DOWELL. The time in this case has expired.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. The gentleman is in error, because Mr. Longworth, a distinguished Speaker of the gentleman's party, considered entertaining a motion from the floor to change the rules as to the Private Calendar.

Mr. DOWELL. That was on a different matter entirely from this. This is a matter purely of procedure in election cases and the rule has been adopted by the House for a very good and sufficient reason. The gentleman will recall that in the past it has been, I will not say the custom, but very frequent that the Elections Committee did not report until the end of the term of service for which the contest was made. I recall one instance in which it was, I think the day before adjournment and the contestee had served during the entire term practically, with the exception of 1 day, and then the Elections Committee made a report and the gentleman was unseated on practically the last day of the session. This rule was adopted for the very purpose of stopping that sort of procedure, as the gentleman knows.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. May I ask the gentleman a question? Suppose that due to the magnitude of the testimony the matter could not be completed within 6 months and on the day after the 6 months the committee found that the contestee was entitled to the seat, would the gentleman then advocate that the duly elected person be denied his seat on purely a matter of the statute of limitations in face of the constitutional provision?

Mr. DOWELL. I will answer that in this way: It has been the custom of the Elections Committee when time is needed to appear before the House, and I well know this and well recall it, to ask for further time. That was promulgated for a good and sufficient reason, and had been the custom of the House prior to the adoption of this rule.

This rule was adopted, as the gentleman will recall, in 1924 after the time when we had spent many, many days here waiting the report of the Elections Committee and it did not report. The rule was adopted for a good and sufficient reason. I think the House intended to follow the rule, I think it will follow the rule, and I am sure it ought to follow the rule.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. In reply to the gentleman, may I say I have no recollection of any resolution being adopted to extend the 6-month limitation. There have been resolutions adopted here where a contestant or the sitting Member did not have time to furnish his testimony or brief within the time limit and he has been given additional time.

Mr. DOWELL. That has been the only purpose for which he would be entitled to anything.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Oh, no.

Mr. DOWELL. There would be no reason for a continuation of the hearings unless there was reason for not getting the evidence before the committee.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. The reason for those extensions of time has nothing to do with this 6-month rule. Under the law a certain time is set when papers must be filed with the Clerk of the House, but there is no connection between those resolutions and this rule of the House. As a matter of fact, under the statute the matter cannot be completed within 6 months. There has never been an instance I can recall where this rule has been enforced to prevent the hearing of a contest in this House.

Mr. DOWELL. But this rule is very specific. It is final. It is definite, and it cannot be misread.

Mr. GREENWOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. GREENWOOD. I want to offer the observation that not only the Constitution but the rules give the House the power to decide the question of its own membership. If the contention of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOWELL] were to be upheld by the technicality of a rule on the filing of a report, then the House of Representatives would be denied the constitutional power of deciding on the qualifications of its Members. I think the contention of the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] is correct. I think the rule can only be considered as directory, and cannot be construed as depriving the House of Representatives of what is its constitutional right and its right as stated in the rule itself.

Mr. RAYBURN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. RAYBURN. Is it not the understanding of the chairman of the Rules Committee that the rule to which the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOWELL] refers was adopted for the sole purpose of expediting matters like this, and grew out of a Pennsylvania case in which a gentleman had held the office for 2 years and on the night of adjournment was unseated? The other Member drew $20,000.

Mr. DOWELL. Under the gentleman's construction of this rule it has absolutely no effect whatever. The gentleman makes the statement it was intended to apply in some other case, and now the rule is to be annulled by giving it no attention whatever. I want to say to the gentleman that this rule was adopted by the House for a good and sufficient reason to be followed by the House, and it was the intention of the House to follow it. I insist it is in plain language; and while it does not affect the constitutionality of the question, it affects the report of the committee here to unseat or seat any Member.

Mr. RAYBURN. It is my understanding there is no question raised that this committee has not completed this case with as much expedition as possible. It was because committees in the past had not moved with expedition that this rule was adopted.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. May I reply further to the gentleman from Iowa, as I recall a previous occasion upon which this question was raised, while the rule says the committee shall report within 6 months, there is no provision in the rule as to what happens if it does not report. That was brought forcibly before the House within the past few years.

Suppose for some reason, negligence or otherwise, the committee failed to report, and the day after the 6 months had expired, or thereafter, the whole House knew the sitting Member was not entitled to his seat. Would the gentleman contend that gentleman should keep his seat?

Mr. DOWELL. I contend we must follow this rule in order to accept a report from the committee, and that a report from the committee filed after the time stated in the rule has expired is invalid and cannot be considered by the House.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. There is no penalty stated in the rule following a failure of the committee to file a report.

Mr. TOBEY. If the gentleman will yield, will the gentleman point out to me some rule of the House which has a penalty attached? Violation of a rule is not a State's prison offense.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. A penalty could have been stated in the rule. Some of our rules provide that in case there is not compliance with the rule, the Speaker shall not recognize Members for a certain purpose, and other rules provide that such matters shall not be considered in the House. No such provision is in this rule. If the gentleman were drafting a rule now, after this occurrence, he could provide in the rule that "in case the committee shall not have reported in 6 months, the Speaker shall not be authorized to recognize a Member to file a report", or it could be provided that "the House shall not be authorized to consider the election contest." However, such provisions are not in the present rule.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. DOWELL. There is a statute of limitations which is just as definite as this rule. When the time stated in such a statute has expired and a question comes before the court, there is no further consideration whatever because the time has expired, as it has under this rule.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Such a statute as this rule does not run against the constitutional right of this House to determine the qualification of its own Members.

Mr. DOWELL. That question is not involved here. It is not a question of determining under the Constitution who has the right to sit here. This is a question of accepting the report of a committee whose time for reporting has expired. Under such circumstances the committee has no jurisdiction whatever.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. If a Member has not been duly elected, surely he is not qualified to sit in this body.

Mr. TOBEY. May I submit to the gentleman that that is not the question here. The last clause of the gentleman's statement is not pertinent. It is not a question of the qualification of a Member to sit; it is a question of what the rules of the House are for, whether they are to be obeyed or thrown out the window. We rest our case on that.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin for a question.

Mr. BOILEAU. May I suggest to the gentleman from New York, and particularly to the Speaker, that the Committee on Elections is a privileged committee. This committee is coming on the floor with what it claims to be a privileged resolution. I submit that after the 6 months' period has expired the committee loses its privilege. I grant what the gentleman states, that the House is still the judge of the right of any of its Members to sit; but it would seem to me that in order to make this resolution in order, it would have to be made in order by a special rule from the Committee on Rules. The Committee on Elections loses its privilege after the expiration of the 6 months' period, it seems to me.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. The privilege of that committee is obtained from an entirely different provision than clause 47 of rule XI. It is granted under clause 45 of the same rule XI.

Mr. BOILEAU. The rules give the committee the privilege of bringing in resolutions which are properly before the committee and properly reported by the committee.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule on the point of order.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, how does it come that the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] has time on this kind of a proposition and can yield time?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no disposition to curtail argument, if the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] desires to be heard.

Mr. SNELL. The gentleman from New York [Mr. O'CONNOR] is yielding time. I maintain the gentleman has no right to yield time in a proceeding of this kind.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] if he desires to make a statement, as soon as the chairman of the Committee on Elections, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KERR] has made his statement.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Speaker, I desire to state the facts in regard to this matter. I do not understand that the House has a right to make any rule which would invalidate the statutes of the Federal Government or to invalidate the plain mandate of the Constitution of the United States. It has been correctly stated that the House is the sole judge of who is properly elected and who is eligible to sit in its membership. This is a direction made and ordained by the Constitution of the United States. I do not understand that anything can abrogate or annul this power.

These are the facts. The Federal statute under which these election contests are governed gives the contestant and the contestee a much longer period than 6 months in which to make out their cases and have them presented to the House. Not only has this statute been faithfully observed, but if the statute had been carried out to its full extent and both the contestant and the contestee had insisted upon their full rights under the law, this case could not have been reported to the House before the 6th or 7th of September. The case has gotten here more than a month before the expiration of the time limit under the Federal statutes and rules of the House. Under the statutes of the United States the case could have been kept from the House even longer than this and probably beyond the limit of this session of Congress. I think my observation about this must be correct, namely, that no rule made by this House can annul either the Constitution or a statute of the United States.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I think I know a little about this rule and why it was put in the Rules of the House of Representatives because I originally wrote it. I wrote this rule, and it was unanimously adopted by the House, and it has been adopted at least 8 or 10 times since then for the reason set forth by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. DOWELL], and I will not repeat those arguments at this time.

When I first came to the House, and for several years thereafter, it was the practice of the committees at various times to bring in a report from an election committee; and, as the gentleman from Iowa has told you, we did it at one time on the night of the last day of the Congress, and it was unanimously agreed that the only fair thing to do to all parties concerned was to bring in a resolution, making it a part of the rules of the House, that an election committee must make its final report inside of 6 months. Remember, this rule was written for this definite purposes.

I have listened to a great many arguments on rules on the floor of the House, but this is the first time in my experience here that the chairman of the Rules Committee himself has ever taken the floor and made the specious argument that the rules of the House of Representatives do not mean anything and can be changed at will at any time. If you want to change the rules, there are express provisions in the rules for making those changes.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. Not just now.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I did not say that.

Mr. SNELL. Does the gentleman say he did not make that statement?

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I did not.

Mr. SNELL. The gentleman made the argument here that, although the rules of the House provide that they shall make this report within a certain time, it is not at all compelling.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. And I may say to the gentleman that this rule has been held heretofore as being directory and not mandatory. Now let me ask the gentleman this question——

Mr. SNELL. I do not yield for a question now.

I claim that every rule in that book is mandatory until you bring in a rule changing it; and there is not a rule in the whole book that is so definitely mandatory in its language as this one.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. A majority of the House can always change a rule.

Mr. SNELL. I admit you can do that; and I am simply asking you to make that change in the manner prescribed in your own rules.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. And the House can change its rules without bringing in another rule.

Mr. SNELL. I admit you can change the rule, but I am contending that until the rule is changed it is a rule of the House.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Of course, it is a rule of the House, but the question is whether it is mandatory or directory.

Mr. SNELL. It is just as mandatory as the English language can make it.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Let me ask the gentleman what would happen if the House adjourned before the expiration of 6 months?

Mr. SNELL. Let me continue with my own argument. The gentleman has made his argument.

Mr. Speaker, I am not saying a word against the constitutional right of this House to pass upon the eligibility of any of its Members, but that is not the question before the House at the present time, and the only argument that I am making is that under the rules of the House that have been unanimously adopted by the present majority, this report is subject to a point of order at this time. This is the only question before the House under this rule, and the rule stands as a rule of the House until the majority decides to bring in a change of the rule and writes something else in its place, and I maintain that no Speaker can go back of the rule.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNELL. I yield.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Suppose we had adjourned on May 1——

Mr. SNELL. This is not a question of supposition; this is a question of the rules of the House as you wrote them.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. Oh, no; you wrote them.

Mr. SNELL. Or as you brought them in here. It is not a hypothetical question.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. The House is not a continuing body——

Mr. SNELL. I admit that I wrote it 15 years ago, but you adopted it unanimously on four separate occasions.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. The House is not a continuing body, and suppose we had adjourned before the 6 months was up.

Mr. SNELL. There is no supposition about the rule involved here.

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York. I suggest that in connection with the intent of the rule.

Mr. SNELL. I know what is the intent of the rule and the gentleman knows that also.

The SPEAKER. In order to clarify the situation as much as possible, will the gentleman from New York allow the Chair to ask a question?

Mr. SNELL. Certainly.

The SPEAKER. Assuming the Elections Committee had made no report upon this contested-election case within 6 months, what would have happened to the case?

Mr. SNELL. As far as I am concerned, the contest would have been dropped, under your own rules, as adopted by the present majority of this House. The rule was adopted to force a decision of contested-election cases early in the session.

Mr. DOWELL. That is exactly the meaning of this rule.

The SPEAKER. The Chair was interrogating the gentleman from New York.

The gentleman from New York.

Mr. SNELL. I have made my answer to the argument that has been made, and I submit that under the rules of the House as now written by the present majority, the Chair is not authorized to receive this report.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule.

Mr. TOBEY. Mr. Speaker, may I be heard in reply to those who oppose my point of order?

Whether or not the committee has been ignorant of the rule or knowingly breached the rule, and whether or not in past years this rule has been more honored in the breach than in the observance has absolutely nothing to do with the issue before you today. The only question to be determined is whether this rule which I have cited has been breached. If it has been breached, then the report and the resolution are not in order.

Mr. Speaker, in this day when standards of morality have gone to the four winds, when business standards and ethics are often thrown into the discard, when even among the nations of the world, as the President of the United States said in my presence, agreements often are nothing but scraps of paper, let there not be established a precedent whereby a standing rule of this House of Representatives is circumvented and nullified under your leadership.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is prepared to rule on this point of order. The matter before the Chair is involved in the contested-election case of Alfonse Roy against Arthur B. Jenks, from the First Congressional District of New Hampshire.

The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. KERR], chairman of Elections Committee No. 3, has filed a report from that committee with reference to its findings on the issue involved in this contested-election case. The gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. TOBEY] challenges the right of the chairman of that committee, or, indeed, of the committee itself, as the Chair understands it, to file the report because, as he asserts, it contravenes the provisions of paragraph 47 of rule XI of the House of Representatives. Of course, this is a rather serious proposition which has been submitted to the Chair, because it involves the right of the contestant or the contestee to have the issue presented to this House as to whether or not the contestant or the contestee is entitled to a seat on the floor. The rule itself in terms states:

> The several elections committees of the House shall make final report to the House in all contested-election cases not later than 6 months from the first day of the first regular session of the Congress to which the contestee is elected except in a contest from the Territory of Alaska, in which case the time shall not exceed 9 months.

The Chair thinks it proper in the construction of this issue not only to take into consideration the verbiage of this rule but also a provision of the Constitution of the United States which has been cited in this argument. Section 5 of article I of the Constitution, in part, provides:

> Each House shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own Members.

The Chair is of opinion that although the terms of the rule are in the language read by the Chair and as argued by the gentleman from New Hampshire, yet, nevertheless, the Chair must look at all the facts in the case in order to reach a decision as to what was the fair intention of the House of Representatives in the adoption of this rule. The Chair refers briefly to the various steps that are authorized under the statute in order to give the contestant and the contestee an opportunity to take evidence, to give proper notice one to the other of the procedures of the case, and to present it finally for the determination of the House of Representatives. The Chair finds on examination that under sections 201, 202, 203, and 223 of title II, United States Code, the contestee and the contestant are allowed more than 6 months in which to present the evidence in the case to the House for its consideration. So that if they used, as they apparently did in this case, the time that was allowed to them by the statute in such case made and provided for presenting the contest, it would have been physically impossible as a matter of time, for the House to have had the case presented to it at all for its consideration. In this case, according to the letter filed by the Clerk of the House with the Speaker, which may be found in House Document 305, Seventy-fifth Congress, the issue was filed on July 21, 1937, and immediately referred to the Committee on Elections No. 3, and it appears to the Chair that the Committee on Elections has not been dilatory in this matter, but, upon the contrary, has exercised great diligence and dispatch in reaching its conclusion with reference to the issues involved. So that the Chair is under the impression that a fair construction of this rule, taken in connection with the constitutional rights of the contestant and the contestee, taken in connection with the fact that both parties to the issue were entitled to use more than 6 months in the preparation of their case, and, taking into consideration the fact that these issues were only presented to the committee on July 21, that a fair construction of the rule under all of the circumstances in this case would indicate that the provisions of this rule properly construed are not strictly mandatory, but directory. Otherwise, the Chair is of opinion that the contestant, or even the contestee, might be deprived not only of his constitutional privilege but under the terms of the statute in such case made and provided it would be made impossible for the issue to be properly presented to the House of Representatives for its determination.

There is one other matter that the Chair feels justified in taking into consideration in an interpretation of the rule under discussion.

It will be remembered that the rule in question was adopted in 1924, at which time Congress ordinarily did not assemble until more than 1 year had expired after the election of Members, and under that situation the 6-month rule would be within the realm of reason and give a fair opportunity to both parties to the contest to comply with its provisions and the provisions of the statutory law. Since its adoption, however, the so-called "lame duck" amendment to the Constitution has been ratified, under the provisions of which the Congress meets in regular session within 2 months after the Members are elected. The Chair is of the opinion that if this status had existed at the time the rule was adopted, that its harsh and impossible terms would never have been agreed to as a permanent rule of the House of Representatives.

The contestee and the contestant having each more than 6 months under the statutes to present their case, the Chair is of opinion that under all of the circumstances the fair and reasonable and just interpretation of this rule justifies him in overruling the point of order, and the Chair does overrule the point of order.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York appeals from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Texas to lay the appeal on the table.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. SNELL) there were—ayes 212, noes 63.

Mr. SNELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 286, nays 69, answered "present" 1, not voting 74, as follows:

[Roll No. 142]

YEAS—286

Aleshire	Eicher	Lanham	Ramsay
Allen, Del.	Elliott	Lanzetta	Ramspeck
Allen, Pa.	Evans	Larrabee	Randolph
Amlie	Faddis	Lea	Rankin
Anderson, Mo.	Farley	Leavy	Rayburn
Arnold	Ferguson	Lesinski	Reilly
Ashbrook	Fitzgerald	Lewis, Colo.	Richards
Atkinson	Flannagan	Lewis, Md.	Rigney
Barden	Flannery	Long	Robertson
Barry	Fleger	Lucas	Robinson, Utah
Beam	Fletcher	Luckey, Nebr.	Rogers, Okla.
Beiter	Forand	Ludlow	Romjue
Bell	Ford, Calif.	Luecke, Mich.	Ryan
Bernard	Ford, Miss.	McAndrews	Sabath
Biermann	Frey, Pa.	McClellan	Sacks
Bigelow	Fries, Ill.	McCormack	Sadowski
Bland	Fuller	McFarlane	Sanders
Boehne	Gambrill	McGehee	Schaefer, Ill.
Boileau	Garrett	McGrath	Schuetz
Boland, Pa.	Gasque	McKeough	Schulte
Boykin	Gehrmann	McMillan	Scott
Boylan, N. Y.	Gildea	McReynolds	Secrest
Bradley	Gingery	McSweeney	Shanley
Brooks	Goldsborough	Magnuson	Shannon
Brown	Gray, Pa.	Mahon, S. C.	Sheppard
Buck	Green	Mahon, Tex.	Smith, Conn.
Buckler, Minn.	Greenwood	Maloney	Smith, Va.
Burch	Greever	Martin, Colo.	Smith, Wash.
Byrne	Gregory	Massingale	Snyder, Pa.
Caldwell	Griffith	Maverick	South
Cannon, Mo.	Griswold	May	Sparkman
Casey, Mass.	Haines	Mead	Spence
Celler	Hamilton	Merritt	Stack
Champion	Hancock, N. C.	Miller	Starnes
Chandler	Harlan	Mills	Steagall
Chapman	Harrington	Mitchell, Ill.	Sumners, Tex.
Citron	Hart	Mitchell, Tenn.	Sutphin
Clark, N. C.	Harter	Moser, Pa.	Sweeney
Claypool	Havenner	Mosier, Ohio	Swope
Cochran	Healey	Mouton	Tarver
Coffee, Nebr.	Hendricks	Murdock, Ariz.	Taylor, S. C.
Coffee, Wash.	Hennings	Murdock, Utah	Teigan
Colden	Higgins	Nelson	Terry
Cole, Md.	Hildebrandt	Nichols	Thom
Collins	Hill, Okla.	Norton	Thomas, Tex.
Colmer	Hill, Wash.	O'Brien, Ill.	Thomason, Tex.
Cooley	Honeyman	O'Brien, Mich.	Thompson, Ill.
Cooper	Hook	O'Connell, Mont.	Tolan
Costello	Houston	O'Connell, R. I.	Towey
Cox	Hunter	O'Connor, Mont.	Transue
Cravens	Imhoff	O'Connor, N. Y.	Turner
Creal	Izac	O'Day	Umstead
Crosser	Jacobsen	O'Leary	Vincent, B. M.
Crowe	Jarman	O'Neill, N. J.	Vinson, Fred M.
Cullen	Johnson, Luther A.	O'Toole	Voorhis
Cummings	Johnson, Lyndon	Owen	Wallgren
Curley	Johnson, Minn.	Pace	Walter
Daly	Johnson, Okla.	Palmisano	Warren
Deen	Johnson, W. Va.	Parsons	Wearin
Delaney	Kee	Patman	Weaver
Dempsey	Keller	Patrick	Wene
DeMuth	Kelly, Ill.	Patterson	West
DeRouen	Kennedy, Md.	Patton	Whelchel
Dingell	Kennedy, N. Y.	Pearson	Whittington
Dixon	Kenney	Peterson, Fla.	Wilcox
Dorsey	Keogh	Peterson, Ga.	Williams
Doughton	Kerr	Pettengill	Withrow
Doxey	Kirwan	Pierce	Wood
Drew, Pa.	Kitchens	Poage	Woodrum
Driver	Kniffin	Polk	Zimmerman
Dunn	Kocialkowski	Quinn
Eberharter	Kopplemann	Rabaut

NAYS—69

Allen, Ill.	Fish	Martin, Mass.	Short
Andresen, Minn.	Gearhart	Mason	Snell
Andrews	Gifford	Michener	Stefan
Arends	Guyer	Millard	Taber
Bacon	Gwynne	Mott	Taylor, Tenn.
Burdick	Halleck	Oliver	Thomas, N. J.
Carlson	Hancock, N. Y.	Plumley	Tinkham
Case, S. Dak.	Holmes	Powers	Tobey
Church	Hope	Reece, Tenn.	Treadway
Clason	Huil	Reed, Ill.	Welch
Cluett	Jarrett	Reed, N. Y.	White, Ohio
Cole, N. Y.	Jenkins, Ohio	Rees, Kans.	Wolcott
Crawford	Kinzer	Rich	Wolfenden
Ditter	Knutson	Robsion, Ky.	Wolverton
Dondero	Lambertson	Rogers, Mass.	Woodruff
Dowell	Luce	Rutherford
Engel	McLean	Sauthoff
Englebright	Mapes	Seger

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Jenks, N. H.

NOT VOTING—74

Allen, La.	Boren	Bulwinkle	Clark, Idaho
Bates	Boyer	Cannon, Wis.	Crosby
Binderup	Brewster	Carter	Crowther
Bloom	Buckley, N. Y.	Cartwright	Culkin
Dickstein	Gavagan	Lamneck	Shafer, Mich.
Dies	Gilchrist	Lemke	Simpson
Dirksen	Gray, Ind.	Lord	Sirovich
Disney	Hartley	McGranery	Smith, Maine
Dockweiler	Hill, Ala.	McGroarty	Smith, W. Va.
Douglas	Hobbs	McLaughlin	Somers, N. Y.
Drewry, Va.	Hoffman	Maas	Sullivan
Duncan	Jenckes, Ind.	Mansfield	Taylor, Colo.
Eaton	Jones	Meeks	Thurston
Eckert	Kelly, N. Y.	O'Malley	Vinson, Ga.
Edmiston	Kleberg	O'Neal, Ky.	Wadsworth
Ellenbogen	Kloeb	Pfeifer	White, Idaho
Fernandez	Kramer	Phillips	Wigglesworth
Fitzpatrick	Kvale	Schneider, Wis.
Fulmer	Lambeth	Scrugham

So the motion was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Vinson of Georgia (for) with Mr. Dirksen (against).
Mr. Fulmer (for) with Mr. Wadsworth (against).
Mr. Gavagan (for) with Mr. Smith of Maine (against).
Mr. Boyer (for) with Mr. Lord (against).
Mr. Sirovich (for) with Mr. Wigglesworth (against).
Mr. Gray of Indiana (for) with Mr. Crowther (against).
Mr. Phillips (for) with Mr. Hoffman (against).
Mr. Binderup (for) with Mr. Simpson (against).
Mr. Kramer (for) with Mr. Carter (against).
Mr. White of Idaho (for) with Mr. Douglas (against).
Mr. Bloom (for) with Mr. Eaton (against).
Mr. Pfeifer (for) with Mr. Shafer of Michigan (against).
Mr. Edmiston (for) with Mr. Culkin (against).
Mr. Scrugham (for) with Mr. Maas (against).
Mr. McLaughlin (for) with Mr. Brewster (against).
Mr. Fernandez (for) with Mr. Gilchrist (against).
Mr. Hobbs (for) with Mr. Hartley (against).

General pairs until further notice:

Mr. Kleberg with Mr. Bates.
Mr. Drewry of Virginia with Mr. Kvale.
Mr. Doughton with Mr. Schneider of Wisconsin.
Mr. Jones with Mr. Lemke.
Mr. Mansfield with Mr. Allen of Louisiana.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. O'Malley.
Mr. Dies with Mr. Crosby.
Mr. Fitzpatrick with Mr. Meeks.
Mr. Lambeth with Mr. Duncan.
Mr. Hill of Alabama with Mrs. Jenckes of Indiana.
Mr. Sullivan with Mr. Kelly of New York.
Mr. Lamneck with Mr. Dockweiler.
Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Somers of New York.
Mr. Disney with Mr. O'Neal of Kentucky.
Mr. Smith of West Virginia with Mr. Cannon of Wisconsin.
Mr. Cartwright with Mr. Dickstein.
Mr. McGranery with Mr. Buckley of New York.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my colleague the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. TAYLOR] may extend his own remarks in the RECORD on the national public-land policy and the workings of the Taylor Grazing Act.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

SUSPENSION OF THE RULES OF THE HOUSE

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York, from the Committee on Rules, submitted the following resolution (H. Res. 308) for printing in the RECORD:

House Resolution 308

Resolved, That during the remainder of the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress it shall be in order for the Speaker at any time to entertain motions to suspend the rules, notwithstanding the provisions of clause 1, rule XXVII; it shall also be in order at any time during the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress for the majority leader, or the chairman of the Committee on Rules, to move that the House take a recess, and said motion is hereby made of the highest privilege; and it shall also be in order at any time during the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress to consider reports from the Committee on Rules, as provided in clause 45, rule XI, except that the provision requiring a two-thirds vote to consider said reports is hereby suspended during the remainder of this session of Congress.

UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION

Mr. KELLER submitted a conference report and statement on the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 363) to authorize an additional appropriation to further the work of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission.

PROCEEDINGS IN ADOPTION IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. PALMISANO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 2281) to regulate proceedings in adoption, in the District of Columbia, with House amendments, insist on the House amendments, and agree to the conference requested.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and appoints the following conferees: Mr. PALMISANO, Mr. KENNEDY of Maryland, and Mr. DIRKSEN.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. GUYER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the disposition of the business on the Speaker's table and the close of legislative business on Monday next, I may address the House for 30 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kansas?

There was no objection.

INTERNATIONAL PETROLEUM EXPOSITION

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 7127) authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the International Petroleum Exposition at Tulsa, Okla., to be held May 14 to May 21, 1938, with Senate amendment, and agree to the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment as follows:

Page 2, line 3, strike out all after "Sec. 2" down to and including "exhibition" in line 10 and insert "All articles which shall be imported from foreign countries for the purpose of exhibition at the International Petroleum Exposition, or for use in constructing, installing, or maintaining foreign buildings or exhibits at the said exposition, upon which articles there shall be a tariff or customs duty, shall be admitted without payment of such tariff, customs duty, fees, or charges under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but it shall be lawful at any time during or within 3 months after the close of the said exposition to sell within the area of the exposition any articles provided for herein."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does this measure carry any appropriation of any kind?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. No, sir; it does not.

Mr. FISH. Is there any indirect promise carried in it?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. No, sir.

Mr. FISH. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the resolution (H. J. Res. 437) relative to determination and payment of certain claims against the Government of Mexico, with Senate amendments, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The Clerk read the title of the House joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to have someone explain the status of this bill. I would like to know what the Senate amendments are.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. The Senate amendments to the bill extend the Mexican Commission a year. We had a provision in the bill that was passed that they should wind up their business by the 1st of September. We passed another bill providing that pro-rata payments should be made on these claims that have already been allowed, and we want that done.

Mr. McFARLANE. Is there an amendment in the bill that will permit of public hearings being held on any of these claims now pending?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. There are no special claims pending, except that some claims have been referred to the General Commission for determination as to whether there are any special claims in the list. If so, provision is made that the Secretary of State may set up a commission to decide those few special claims.

Mr. McFARLANE. The reason I ask is that I have some letters that refer to claims that are now pending before this special Mexican Claims Commission.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. The Special Claims Commission have finished their work, except as I have just stated.

Mr. McFARLANE. They have not finished the particular claims I have in mind. That is the reason for my inquiry.

Mr. McREYNOLDS. The claims will be referred to the General Claims Commission to ascertain whether there are any special claims among them.

Mr. McFARLANE. Has the Secretary of State approved this bill?

Mr. McREYNOLDS. Yes; but he did not approve the amendment placed by the Senate on this bill, and that is the reason for this conference.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: Messrs. McREYNOLDS, BLOOM, and FISH.

Mr. FISH. Mr. Speaker, I respectfully decline to accept the appointment as conferee on this bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman from New York is relieved of responsibility as a conferee.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MARTIN] conferee in the place of the gentleman from New York [Mr. FISH].

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD and to include therein a radio address by our colleague the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. O'NEILL].

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

REORGANIZATION OF GOVERNMENT AGENCIES

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8202) to provide for the reorganization of agencies of the Government, to establish the Department of Welfare, and for other purposes.

Pending that motion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to know of the gentleman from New York if we can agree upon time for general debate.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Speaker, I think an hour and a half will be sufficient on this side. I do not want to ask for more time than we need. I think that would be a fair amount.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate be confined to the bill, to run for 3 hours, to be equally divided, and to be controlled by the gentleman from New York and myself.

Mr. KENNEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does that mean that we shall complete the bill today?

Mr. WARREN. We hope so.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from North Carolina that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 8202.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill H. R. 8202, with Mr. WOODRUM in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

By unanimous consent, the first reading of the bill was dispensed with.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, when I have used 30 minutes I request to be notified.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to complete my general statement before being interrupted. Then, if possible, I shall be glad to yield to any Member.

Mr. Chairman, at the outset I wish to pay a very genuine tribute to my fellow members on this special committee in the work that we have been associated in since last January. This committee consisted, after the death of the late Mr. Buchanan, of Texas; of the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. COCHRAN, chairman; the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. FRED M. VINSON; the gentleman from Utah, Mr. ROBINSON; the gentleman from New York, Mr. MEAD; the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. KNIFFIN; the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. BEAM; the gentleman from New York, Mr. TABER; and the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. GIFFORD. I think that all the members of the committee have been imbued from the start with the desire to bring to the House a measure that might prove fairly and generally acceptable, because all of us have believed, and, as I think a majority of the House believes, that Government reorganization talked about for years but never accomplished, is absolutely imperative, both from the standpoint of efficiency and from the standpoint of economy. I shall not elaborate, for it opens a wide field of discussion.

Mr. Chairman, this bill involves 85 percent of the question of reorganization and of the carrying out of the recommendations made by the President of the United States after a thorough and complete study made by a commission appointed by him. The House has already passed the bill (H. R. 7730) providing six administrative assistants to the President and other measures will follow dealing with the General Accounting Office and the Civil Service. That will practically complete the contemplated program.

The House committee knew that it could consider this matter from now until doomsday with all of its various ramifications, and that we would inevitably come back to the proposition presented to you in the bill now under consideration. We know from past experience, indeed from sad experience here in this body, that the Congress will never of its own accord and of its own initiative reorganize the Government of the Nation. Time after time it has been tried, and time after time it has met with failure. Every agency down the street will say that there ought to be a reorganization, but every agency will immediately step up and say, "It is good for the other fellow but not for us."

We propose today to give to the President of the United States, the only person who is in a position to attempt a reorganization, the power to do it within certain bounds, limitations, and restrictions. We propose to give to the present Executive for a period of 2 years only what we gave Mr. Hoover in 1932, considerably minus, if you please. In 1932 we gave President Hoover without any limitation as to time the right practically to reorganize and consolidate every agency of the Government within certain bounds.

There was a provision in the act of 1932 providing that when an Executive order was issued by the President it might be suspended upon a resolution of either House of the Congress. Attorney General Mitchell held that provision to be invalid. Is there anyone who will question the soundness of that decision?

In the act of March 3, 1933, signed by Mr. Hoover, but passed considerably earlier by both Houses, an amendment was agreed to which provided that these Executive orders could only be set aside by an act of Congress. It also provided that these orders must stand for 60 days, and if there was no act of Congress upsetting them, then they would become the law.

The only change that has been made in that is to reenact the act of 1932 and the amendment of March 3, 1933, as amended, by the act of March 20, 1933, which provides that those orders must be sent here while Congress is in session.

You are going to hear raised an extreme case in reference to these orders. Someone will say, "Suppose the President on the day before adjournment of Congress should send down an Executive order under the provisions of this bill and under the authority we gave the President on March 20, 1933?" That order, if sent down at that late date, would become effective, but there is nothing, nor can there be anything, that would prohibit the Congress at its next session from passing a law to override it if they saw fit.

The President, in the very nature of things, is going to have to send down here a large number of Executive orders to the Congress if he goes into a thoroughgoing reorganization. It might be safe to assume that out of this large number there would be a minimum that might be controversial; yet if you seek to tie his hands while the Congress is in recess over nonessential orders to which no one could possibly object, you have in the very nature of things delayed and hampered any reorganization over a period of perhaps many months.

Mr. COLLINS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. COLLINS. I am in sympathy with the purposes of this bill. There is one question, however, on which I should like to have the gentleman's views. Congress has created an agency of the Government or a governmental corporation and that agency or corporation by Executive order is merged or destroyed under the authority of this act by Executive order. In such case, would the Executive order repeal such existing law or would it be necessary for such Executive order to be specifically approved by Congress through further legislation?

Mr. WARREN. It is my opinion it would repeal existing law because we have reenacted the same provision that we gave to Mr. Hoover and to Mr. Roosevelt for a period of 2 years, which would permit him to liquidate the agency in question, if it was abolished. An Executive order would not require specific approval of Congress.

Mr. COLLINS. In other words, according to the gentleman's views, the President could exercise right to repeal laws by Executive order?

Mr. WARREN. Only within the limitations, of course, named in this act. As I previously stated, that power has been given twice before.

Mr. COLLINS. I have great respect for the gentleman's ability, and therefore am glad to get the gentleman's views.

Mr. WARREN. I may say to my good friend from Mississippi that he voted for that twice. I have the roll calls before me.

Mr. BEITER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. In just a moment.

Here are the standards prescribed in the bill to guide the President in making his reorganizations: To reduce expenditures to the fullest extent, consistent with the efficient operation of the Government; to increase the efficiency of the Government and the operation to the fullest extent practical within the revenues; to group, coordinate, and consolidate executive and administrative agencies of the Government as nearly as may be according to major purposes; to reduce the number of such agencies by consolidating those having similar functions under a similar head by abolishing such agencies or such functions thereof as may not be necessary for the efficient conduct of the Government; to eliminate overlapping and duplication of effort; and to segregate regulatory agencies and functions from those of administrative and executive character.

Mr. Chairman, although on two occasions we gave authority to two different Executives to deal absolutely with regulatory agencies, we have exempted in this bill the regulatory agencies of the Government which act as legislative agents and aid the Congress in the making of law by the process of filling in details. With the exception of the function of preparing estimates of appropriations, we have exempted from the provisions of reorganization the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Power Commission, Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Communications Commission, the National Labor Relations Board, the National Bituminous Coal Commission, the United States Tariff Commission, the United States Maritime Commission. The General Accounting Office, the Engineering Corps of the Army, and the Coast Guard are also exempted.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. What becomes of the personnel of the governmental agency that is abolished or merged with another governmental agency? Let us say the employees are under civil service. Let us assume further they have established homes here and have reared families. Do they lose their civil-service status?

Mr. WARREN. They would not lose their civil-service status. Moreover, the bill has no effect whatever upon the Classification Act. The President would, of course, have the right, if he were to abolish a bureau on the ground of efficiency and economy, to reduce the personnel. I am one who thinks there ought to be a reduction in personnel of the Government. [Applause.]

Mr. BUCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. BUCK. Did the gentleman's committee give any consideration to a similar elimination of the Board of Tax Appeals?

Mr. WARREN. We certainly did.

Mr. BUCK. It seems to me that there is one board which should not be put under the jurisdiction of a department when it is trying cases between the Treasury and individual citizens.

Mr. WARREN. If there is an amendment offered in reference to the Board of Tax Appeals we will try to fully inform the House on that. It has not a leg to stand on to be exempted, because under no strained view could the functions of the Board of Tax Appeals be considered as a regulatory agency. I will be glad to discuss that if there is an amendment offered.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WARREN. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. In answer to the question raised by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. SAUTHOFF], may I call attention to section 404, reading as follows:

SEC. 404. The President's order directing any transfer, consolidation, or elimination under the provisions of this title shall also make provision for the transfer or other disposition of the records, property (including office equipment), and personnel, affected by such transfer, consolidation, or elimination. In any case of a transfer or consolidation under the provisions of this title, the President's order shall also make provision for the transfer of such unexpended balances of appropriations available for use in connection with the function or agency transferred or consolidated, as he deems necessary by reason of the transfer or consolidation, for use in connection with the transferred or consolidated function or for the use of the agency to which the transfer is made or of the agency resulting from such consolidation.

Mr. SAUTHOFF. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. WARREN. Not right now. Just let me finish this statement, and I shall then be pleased to yield.

We included within the provisions of this reorganization corporations owned or controlled by the United States. Mr. Hoover thought they were included in the act of 1932. Mr. Roosevelt thought they were included in the reenactment of that act for a period of 2 years. However, the Attorney General ruled they were not included. We have, springing up like mushrooms, corporations owned either in whole or in part by the Government, scattered about here and there, with no departmental control.

Let me tell you something else we have done in this bill, and I call your attention to title II. I wish to state publicly that we are greatly indebted to our friend the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] for his help in perfecting this title. We have, with the exception heretofore noted, exempted these regulatory agencies, but we are bringing them under budgetary control. Is there any objection to this? You are all familiar with the Humphrey decision. Since the Humphrey decision many of these regulatory agencies are taking the position that they are part of the legislative branch of the Government. What does this mean? It means they take the position that "no; we are not accountable to anyone as far as our budget is concerned. We are part of the legislative branch. Therefore, we can go to Congress itself for our appropriations because we do not come under the Budget." This is their construction of that decision, and that is why we bring them in.

Mr. BEITER and Mr. MAY rose.

Mr. WARREN. I yield first to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. BEITER. The gentleman has referred to title III of the bill, which, of course, provides for a new Cabinet officer.

Mr. WARREN. I have not got to that yet.

Mr. BEITER. The gentleman probably refers to title II, but I understand him to mention title III. I know there are 26 agencies at the present time having to do with public welfare. However, in section 303 of the bill I note that "the Secretary of Welfare shall promote the public health, safety, and sanitation; the protection of the consumer; the cause of education." I am particularly interested in the protection of the consumer and the cause of education. At the present time we have an Office of Education in the Department of the Interior. The Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Agriculture will take care of the protection of the consumer. Will we not have two conflicting departments there, so one secretary will be trying to take duties away from the other?

Mr. WARREN. No; I do not agree with the gentleman. We have three consumers' counsels already. Why should they not be put under one agency?

Mr. BEITER. I agree with the gentleman on that, but of course it would be up to the President to determine which agency.

Mr. WARREN. Yes; that, of course, is entirely up to the President.

I now yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. I am interested particularly in the gentleman's very first statement with regard to the objectives of this legislation, and I am sure that represents the intent of the committee, that is, to save money for the Government.

After providing the exemptions for various agencies of the Government which are not included under the provisions of this bill, you set up the Department of Welfare under title III. Then, after providing for a secretary of welfare, an under secretary of welfare, two assistant secretaries of welfare, and a solicitor, you have a provision in section 303 with reference to what the secretary of welfare shall do. Among these duties are:

The relief of unemployment and of the hardship and suffering caused thereby, the relief of the needy and distressed, the assistance and benefits of the aged, and the relief and vocational rehabilitation of the physically disabled.

Mr. WARREN. They mark the outlines of the new department. I wish the gentleman would be brief.

Mr. MAY. The question I want to ask is, What is going to become of the Social Security Board if this department of public welfare is going to take care of old-age benefits?

Mr. WARREN. Neither I nor anyone else has any knowledge of what will become of the Social Security Board. I do know there are today 26 separate and distinct agencies of the Government dealing with welfare problems. I would assume that if a department of welfare were established, the President would, quite naturally, make the Social Security Board a bureau under that department.

Mr. MAY. In other words, the gentleman thinks the President will probably include all of these 26 separate agencies under this department of public welfare?

Mr. WARREN. I certainly hope he will.

Mr. MAY. If he does not do so, then what hope have we for any economy through setting up a new department or agency of the Government in this bill for the reorganization of Government agencies?

Mr. WARREN. The gentleman is anticipating something which has not happened, and I do not think will happen.

Mr. MAY. It is the very thing that has happened.

Mr. MOTT, Mr. ANDREWS, and Mr. GIFFORD rose.

Mr. WARREN. I yield first to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. MOTT. Under this bill, would the President have authority to transfer the Forest Service from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of the Interior?

Mr. WARREN. He certainly would. There are today 14 different and distinct agencies of the Government dealing with forestry problems, with one of the greatest lobbies around this Capitol that has ever been known in order to keep them from coming under any reorganization plan.

Mr. MOTT. May I also ask if, after transferring the Forest Service from the Department of Agriculture and making such other transfers of bureaus as he may desire to the Department of the Interior——

Mr. WARREN. The gentleman, of course, cannot tell the committee the President is going to transfer the Forest Service to the Department of the Interior. The gentleman does not know and I do not know. It is unfair for him to say that the President will do it.

Mr. MOTT. I am supposing that instance, of course, but I think it is pretty well settled that if he has the authority he will do it. May I ask the gentleman if the President, after he did make these transfers to the Department of the Interior, would also have the authority to change the name of the Department of the Interior to the department of conservation?

Mr. WARREN. He would not.

Mr. MOTT. May I ask the gentleman if under this bill the President would have the authority to do approximately what the Secretary of the Interior is asking in his own bill now pending?

Mr. WARREN. I have no knowledge of the bill the gentleman speaks of, but the President cannot touch a Cabinet officer under this bill; he cannot abolish the Department of the Interior or any other department; and he cannot change the name of any department of the Cabinet.

Mr. MOTT. I have one more question about a matter I would like to have cleared up, if I may. Section 402 of existing law, to which this bill is amendatory, states that the term "executive agency" includes the executive departments, and section 403 gives the President authority, among other things, to change the name of an executive agency.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

I cannot yield further except to answer the gentleman by saying that if he will look at page 5 of the report he will find clear-cut definitions of what the President would have the right to do.

Mr. MOTT. Will the gentleman answer this question, because I think it is enlightening and I think the gentleman can answer it? If "executive agency" includes departments——

Mr. WARREN. They are included only for the purpose of permitting transfers of functions to and from such departments.

Mr. MOTT. Section 402 states it does in so many words, and section 403 provides that he shall have the authority to change the name of any executive agency, and therefore I ask why he cannot change the name of a department.

Mr. WARREN. The gentleman cannot torture section 402 into meaning what he states.

I cannot yield further.

Mr. MOTT. I am not trying to torture it, but asking the question for information.

Mr. WARREN. Now, in reference to title III, the President recommended the creation of a Welfare Department in his message to Congress on January 12 of this year. Many of the most important transfers and consolidations which should be made are in this general field. These activities do not belong in any of the existing 10 executive departments. The Congress itself has recognized this fact. The new agencies, dealing with public welfare, have been set up as independent agencies because there was no executive department in which to put them, and, as I have previously stated, there are 26 of them. Unless a new Department of Welfare is created there will be no executive department to which these activities may be appropriately transferred and consolidated with similar activities of the Government. President Harding recommended a Department of Welfare, and the Joint Committee on Reorganization in 1924, during Mr. Coolidge's tenure, likewise recommended a Department of Welfare. The important activities of the Government in this field cannot be coordinated and carried on effectively and economically unless they are grouped together in a single executive department. The creation of this Department will not increase the number of independent Government agencies but will have just the opposite effect.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the whole thing boiled down in a nutshell is just this: We have today 133 separate agencies, departments, commissions, authorities, administrations, committees, and the like, many of them with overlapping functions. Do we want to get some efficiency in this machine? We have sat here, responsible ourselves at times, and at other times under the urge of executives, and created independent commissions and boards, world without end, until today they have become a Frankenstein to the body of the Government. They ought to be consolidated; they ought to be regrouped; and I will tell you what you already know, there are many bureaus in this Government that have no earthly excuse for existing today. The Executive ought to have the right to abolish them; the Executive ought to have the right to coordinate their functions——

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield at that point?

Mr. WARREN. I must refuse to yield now, because I have no more time.

And the only way you are going to do this is to give the power to an Executive who has the determination and the will to do it, as the present Executive tells us he will. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 20 minutes. I desire to go over this bill as carefully as I can, pointing out what it does, and, insofar as there are defects in it, pointing them out with the hope that those defects may be corrected, so that the bill as a whole will be as near to a good bill as it can be made if they are going to do what they propose to do. I shall take the bill up title by title and discuss it.

With reference to the first title of the bill, I suggest that those who have in their possession a copy of the report turn to pages 4 and 5 of the report and follow along through with it. Title I is very largely the same as the bill that was passed in 1932 when Mr. Hoover was President. It is very largely the same as that that was reenacted on March 20, 1933. The exceptions appear here in the bill. Without attempting to discuss the merits of the bill I shall point out what it does insofar as I can. First, the effect of the passage of title I would be this: The President is instructed to investigate the present organization of the Government, all executive and administrative agencies, and to determine what changes are necessary. By the provisions of section 402, at the top of the page, an executive agency is defined. There is in the old bill and the reenactment no definition of administrative agency. The power of the Executive seems to be given under section 403. An attempt is made to except certain agencies. I am frank to say that I do not believe that the attempt is quite as successful as it ought to be, because I do not believe that the language there is sufficient to absolutely except the agencies that it refers to. I shall come to that later on.

An attempt is made to except from the consideration of the Executive certain independent regulatory bodies, and they are recited there. I shall not read them because Members can do that for themselves. I expect there is going to be a question on the part of some Members of the House as to whether or not certain other agencies might or should be included. I shall name two or three of these that I understand there is an interest on the part of some of the membership to exclude from the operations of this particular bill.

There is a suggestion that the Government Printing Office should be excluded. There is a suggestion that the Federal Board of Tax Appeals should be excluded. I shall not discuss those questions at this time. There is a question as to whether or not the Forest Service should be excluded. There is a question as to whether or not the F. D. I. C. should be excluded. There are other items that I have heard mentioned with reference to which some Members feel exemptions should be made.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. GIFFORD. They have stricken out the statement that we did have an emergency. That was the old law. What I want the gentleman to explain at this moment is what will be the effect, if after 60 calendar days have elapsed, we take no action?

Mr. TABER. I shall come to that in a moment.

Mr. GIFFORD. That is in title I.

Mr. TABER. I have not finished with title I.

Mr. GIFFORD. I wish the gentleman would make that clear.

Mr. TABER. The bill provides that the President by an Executive order can transfer the whole or any part of any executive agency from its present status to another status in the Government. He can abolish completely or place under a department Government corporations and their functions. He can change the name of executive departments. He can transfer all of the functions from any one department to another place, except that he is prohibited by section 403 from transferring all the functions of any executive department.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. ANDREWS. I think the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] made a very excellent statement about this bill, and I am in accord with what he proposes to do. I wonder whether there is any political effect in all this. Has the gentleman any idea that the Senate would consider such a bill as this?

Mr. TABER. I am not sufficiently well informed as to the attitude of the Senate on anything that I would be in a position to make a prediction about it.

Mr. ANDREWS. It seems to me that they have nothing else to do but to bring in some such bill as this. Is not this bill purely a political gesture?

Mr. TABER. It is an attempt, as I understand it, on the part of the committee to have these measures considered and out of the way. Frankly, I think that these measures are entitled to a great deal of consideration. I think that this bill should be brought before the House after the committee has had the bill in front of it for at least a couple of weeks and had an opportunity to go into it thoroughly, and it should be brought before the House after the House has had an opportunity to go into it very thoroughly and understandingly. I do not think that a snap judgment should be undertaken on a bill of this character and of this size.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman makes a broad statement, and so did the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN], to the effect that this gives the President very broad latitude. Of course, I appreciate that the object of the bill is to give the President more authority to exercise personal government.

I should like to know this. It is impossible for the average individual in the time we have to consider this to make these comparisons between one section and another section, one subsection and another subsection. I would like to ask this: As I understand it, each and every department of the Government has its jurisdiction laid down by law. When the Department of Commerce was organized and the Department of Labor, their jurisdiction was confined in strict language. Of course, the jurisdiction of the Secretary of State is confined. This does not give the President authority to change those jurisdictions, does it?

Mr. TABER. Oh, yes. It gives the President authority to transfer any agency in any department to another department, and set up and prescribe its functions, with the exception, insofar as the exception is valid, of those agencies that are described in section 402 as it appears on page 5 of the report, and those exceptions appear on page 2, lines 11 to 19, inclusive, of the bill.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Now, let us assume a case. A department in the Government has far-reaching ramifications and has different divisions. Suppose a division chief in the office of the Secretary of State, some man in charge of a division, does not perform as the President thinks he should perform, would the President have the right to jerk that man out of there or jerk out the matter which had been assigned to him for consideration? Could he relieve him of his responsibility and transfer it over into another department where he thought the personnel might be favorable to him? In other words, could he pack any department like he tried to pack the Supreme Court?

Mr. TABER. The President, without this bill, can discharge any officer or employee of the Government in any department because that employee is not, in the opinion of the President, performing his duty satisfactorily. He can do that without any new law at all.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. One other question: If that is the case, we are surrendering practically all of our authority as a legislative body. If he can do as he pleases with any of these departments, then, if we pass any regulatory laws of any kind, he can juggle them around and put the administration of that into the hands of those who he thinks will decide as he wishes?

Mr. TABER. As I understand it, without this bill, entirely apart from this bill, the President can now do just exactly what the gentleman has suggested.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. That is under the general power of the Executive?

Mr. TABER. Under the statutes that are already in force with reference to the civil service and executive control of departments. The President is in absolute charge of every department of the Government, without any exception whatever, and the officers and employees of those departments are entirely and solely accountable to the President.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. But he cannot determine the jurisdiction and power of those various people? In other words, if a matter of decision comes within the purview, under the fundamental law controlling the Secretary of State, surely he cannot take that out of the office of the Secretary of State, because he anticipates an unfavorable decision, and turn it over to the Postmaster General, for instance, can he?

Mr. TABER. No; but he can get rid of the Secretary of State or any subordinate who is not performing his functions in accordance with the ideas of the President, and put in somebody else.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. WARREN. I am absolutely shocked and surprised at the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS] talking about this delegation of authority and these powers. I just wish to remind the gentleman that on May 3, 1932, and in February 1933 and on March 7, 1933, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. JENKINS], on all three occasions, voted to give to two Presidents far more sweeping powers than are contained in this bill on this very subject.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Oh, that is just an old-fashioned gag.

Mr. WARREN. Well, here is the record.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Anybody can take a vote and interpret it to mean whatever he pleases. At that time I did not vote to satisfy the gentleman from North Carolina. I voted to satisfy myself.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I cannot yield further.

Mr. BEITER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. BEITER. I was pleased at the reply which the gentleman made to my colleague from New York [Mr. ANDREWS]. The gentleman from New York [Mr. ANDREWS] is a fine and capable man, but he is sort of a pessimist. The gentleman stated that this bill was being considered merely for the purpose of passing time——

Mr. TABER. Oh, unless the gentleman has a question to ask about the bill I cannot yield.

Mr. THURSTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. THURSTON. Did anyone appear before your subcommittee and make any estimate as to the number of employees that would be required to have this department function?

Mr. TABER. This new department?

Mr. THURSTON. Yes.

Mr. TABER. Oh, no.

Mr. THURSTON. May I call the gentleman's attention to the fact that last week I placed in the RECORD tables from the Civil Service Commission showing that there are employed now in Washington 115,000 persons, and out in the field 725,000 persons, a total of 840,000 persons in the Government service, and the annual pay roll is $1,500,000,000. It is proposed to add more to these figures.

Mr. TABER. I want to go on and finish title I and then get into these other items.

I am afraid I shall not be able to yield any further.

Mr. Chairman, under the provisions of this bill—that is, the reenactment of the old law for 2 years—the President would have authority to abolish agencies, move them around and change the name of the executive departments by Executive order. That order, however, would not become effective under the provisions of section 407 which appears upon page 6 of the report until after 60 days had elapsed. The Congress could, in the meantime, pass a law which the President would have a right to veto but the Congress would have the right to pass over his veto the law refusing to accept this Executive order.

The result of the passage of this bill would be to give to the President the power to do these things. Whether or not you ought to give it to him I shall discuss in a moment. Frankly, with the exception of these few agencies and perhaps with one or two exceptions that have not been made, but perhaps should be made, I believe it would be better to permit the President to abolish agencies, to move them around, insofar as he wants to, because it would not be giving him any more control over these agencies than he has now.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. KNIFFIN. The gentleman just referred to the limitation of 60 days. If the President should not act wisely under this authority, would it not then become the responsibility of the Congress to vitiate such Executive orders as the President had sent down here?

Mr. TABER. I have just pointed out that that would be the procedure. It is outlined in section 407 and appears on page 6 of the report. It would, of course, be the duty of Congress to do that if the President did something that the Congress did not approve. It would, however, if the President vetoed the bill, require a two-thirds vote to repass it over his veto.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 additional minutes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. The gentleman from North Carolina apparently tries to confuse those who might have voted for certain legislation 2, 3, 4, 5, or 10 years ago with this legislation. If we voted at that time for the same things we are called upon to vote for today, what is the use of it? There are material differences; and if this is not the same thing, in what way is it different?

Mr. TABER. We are asked to vote for the same thing today that we voted for on those other occasions with the exception that some 10 or 12 organizations, including the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission are excepted from the power of the President under this bill. The length of time during which the power may be exercised is just the same. The veto provision is just the same as that which existed before.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. KNIFFIN. My colleague refers to the fact that it would require a two-thirds vote to make effective any act of Congress vitiating any order of the President. Is not that true with respect to all legislation in this body should it be vetoed by the President?

Mr. TABER. That is true; there is no question about that.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. MANSFIELD. There are about 130 governmental agencies. Should this bill become law and go into effect, how many of these agencies will be abolished? Can the gentleman tell us?

Mr. TABER. I have no idea whether the President will abolish any of them. I think at least half of them should be abolished. I do not think there is any question but what the efficiency of the Government would be greater if we had fewer agencies.

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. LUDLOW. I think it is conceded that one of the primary objectives of consolidation of governmental agencies is to effectuate economy. What is the gentleman's thought as to whether economies would be effected under this bill or vice versa?

Mr. TABER. Under the bill as a whole economy would not be effected. I will get to that when I come to discuss title III, because that is a very dangerous thing, and I want the House to understand thoroughly that that is a scheme to organize propaganda and promote governmental activities and departmental activities without accomplishing any efficiency.

Mr. LUDLOW. What, in the gentleman's opinion, would be the effect of establishing a new department so far as effectuating economy is concerned? I have great respect for his opinion.

Mr. TABER. That would not effectuate economy; that would increase expenditures beyond all reason.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. GIFFORD. I thank the gentleman for impressing, as I asked him to, the point about the veto. With the gentleman's indulgence, I would remind the House that while this is about the same bill that we passed in 1932, yet at that time we had a Democratic Congress and a Republican President, and the Democrats easily could have overridden a veto. Today the situation is far different.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman just made the statement that he thought about half the Government agencies should be abolished.

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman knows as well as I do that scattered throughout the departments and also in the form of independent agencies we have any number of organizations that deal with public welfare.

Then in keeping with the suggestion that we abolish them, does he not think it would be wise to consolidate them under one head where one can keep track of what the other is doing, abolishing those that should be abolished and transfer their functions to others? Would that not spell economy? Would that not be in keeping with the gentleman's suggestion of a moment ago, that many of them should be abolished?

Mr. TABER. I think if the gentleman will listen to what I have to say on title III he will get an idea of just what the situation is. I am going to skip title II and will go into that when we consider the bill under the 5-minute rule if we cannot work that out.

Title III provides for the creation of the Department of Welfare. It provides in section 303, page 4, that it shall include items which promote the public health, safety and sanitation, the protection of the consumer, cost of education, relief of unemployment and hardship and suffering, relief of the needy and distressed, assistance and benefit to the aged and the relief and vocational rehabilitation of the physically disabled and in general shall coordinate and promote public health, education, and welfare activities.

Mr. Chairman, I have prepared a list of items and the appropriations which go with them which might come within this Department and might not. I will read them:

Civil-service retirement fund	$72,392,000
Canal Zone retirement and disability fund	500,000
Alaska Railroad retirement and disability fund	175,000
Employees' Compensation Commission	5,124,450
Railroad Retirement Board	35,000,000
Veterans' Administration	585,832
Social Security Board	244,100,000

And this probably will be increased to about $500,000,000 in a year or two.

Department of Agriculture:
Airways weather reporting service	$2,190,179
Enforcement of:
Food and Drugs Act	1,750,000
Tea Importation Act	40,094
Caustic Poison Act	24,741
Seafood Inspectors' Act	40,000
Meat inspection	5,433,000
Department of Interior:
Education of Indians	10,068,525
Conservation of health of Indians	4,955,690
Office of Education	2,287,400
Vocational education	9,730,060
Public schools, Alaska	50,000
Care of insane of Alaska	190,000
St. Elizabeths Hospital	1,535,750
Columbia Institution for the Deaf	145,000
Howard University	700,000
Freedmen's Hospital	329,410
Foreign Service retirement and disability fund	188,000
Department of Justice	12,529,775
Resettlement Administration	100,000,000

The amount they advised the committee they hoped to get.

Rural Electrification Administration	$31,520,000
Federal Prison Industries, Inc	500,000
District of Columbia Alley Dwelling Authority	161,000
Department of Commerce:
Air navigation facilities	3,037,800
Maintenance	5,698,700
Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation	2,412,000
Bureau of Lighthouses	11,020,900
Department of Labor	23,628,500

Mr. MANSFIELD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. MANSFIELD. Would not the Life Saving Service come in there?

Mr. TABER. I am going to state I have only gathered together a few. I shall say afterward there are any number that might be put in here.

Treasury Department: Public Health Service	$20,746,980
The regular appropriations, so-called	1,194,568,304
W. P. A	1,400,000,000
Total	2,594,558,302

On top of that you might have the old-age reserve fund of $500,000,000. You might have tubercular cattle. You might have the C. C. C. $350,000,000. That is a total of practically $4,000,000,000 of Government activities that could be placed in this department.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

There are no two activities of this entire set-up the placing of which within one department can possibly save a single penny. They are not correlated. Let someone who thinks they are get up here in his own time and say so. I say they are not. They are not correlated so that they could be taken out of the place where they are now located and save a single penny in administrative expenses.

The result of this consolidation will cost the Government of the United States hundreds and hundreds of millions of dollars for not just administration alone but hundreds and hundreds of millions of dollars in all activities. The only thing that will be concentrated and organized together will be the power of propaganda against the Congress to force the Congress to appropriate and authorize money for the activities of this department.

The saving of money does not mean anything to this Congress. I am afraid it has not meant as much as it ought to mean. The creation of this department will result in a tremendously organized pressure upon the Congress and there is absolutely no escape from that. That will be the main effect and the main result of the creation of this new department.

There is another thing about the creation of this new department that I do not like. I do not believe it is necessary to create this new department because I believe that the things can be taken care of within the scope of the departments we already have. We are creating this department and permitting the Executives to set up the functions of the department instead of setting them up ourselves by statute. I believe the Congress should meet its responsibility and set up those functions instead of letting somebody else do it. I think that is very important if we want to get an efficient set-up.

Mr. LUCKEY of Nebraska. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. LUCKEY of Nebraska. Under title III a new department is being set up called the Department of Welfare, with a secretary of welfare. Would that secretary have a Cabinet status?

Mr. TABER. Certainly.

Mr. LUCKEY of Nebraska. One of his duties would be the relief of the unemployment and hardship and suffering, as well as the relief of the needy and distressed. Would that mean there would be a permanent relief set-up under this bill?

Mr. TABER. It certainly would.

Mr. LUCKEY of Nebraska. In other words, we are taking away from the States and the localities what really belongs to the States and the localities and putting it under Federal control?

Mr. TABER. There is no question about that.

Mr. MAVERICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. MAVERICK. The gentleman said something about the power of propaganda of this Department.

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. MAVERICK. Would that not be just like any other department? It would not be any more or less, would it?

Mr. TABER. Oh, yes; because all these activities would be concentrated where they could be used for propaganda purposes. The larger and older an outfit gets the more dangerous it is from a propaganda standpoint.

Mr. MAVERICK. It would not be any different in comparison with the Department of Agriculture or the Navy Department?

Mr. TABER. It would not be any worse than the Department of Agriculture has come to be, the way things have developed.

Mr. MAVERICK. Does not the gentleman believe it is advisable to have such activities as relate to relief under a Cabinet officer, where there would be a responsible head, and where the department would come before committees as a responsible part of the Government? Does not the gentleman believe there is some benefit in such a set-up?

Mr. TABER. There is absolutely no benefit in putting anything under a Cabinet officer since we have passed the wedge bill which was passed here the other day, creating six administrative assistants to come between the President and the Cabinet.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN].

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, for 10 years I have been on some committee or other which had to do with the question of reorganizing the Government agencies. I happened to be appointed during the last 2 years of the Hoover administration to the select committee whose efforts resulted in the passage of the act which this bill in part proposes to reenact; yet this bill does not give a Democratic President as much power as I voted to give a Republican President.

At the time the distinguished gentleman from Texas, Mr. Buchanan, passed away I happened to be vice chairman of the Special House Committee on Reorganization. The present Speaker [Mr. BANKHEAD] appointed me chairman of this committee. Since that day I am pleased to say I have had the cooperation of every member of the committee, Democrat and Republican. We have worked together, and we have had no serious quarrels. We have worked not only in the mornings but in the afternoons. We have been required to take home and read report after report, reports which came from the President's committee from time to time, and reports which came from the Brookings Institution from time to time.

Speaking of cooperation, may I especially thank the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] for his speech today. I think he made an excellent argument why this bill should be enacted into law. He told you he was in favor of abolishing Government agencies. This is what the bill seeks to do. Then he criticizes the Department of Welfare, which this bill seeks to create. The only objection he has to such a department, however, is that he fears some propaganda might come from it which would bring pressure to bear upon Members of Congress to enact legislation the department might desire. The reason the House of Representatives and the Senate of the United States have been unable to enact legislation for the reorganization of the Government of the United States is the propaganda which comes from the employees of the United States.

What is the situation which confronts us today and why is it necessary to pass legislation of this character? You have what is known as congressional establishments, six separate agencies. You have 10 departments in the Government. Of the independent agencies, you have 31 executive and 14 regulatory. You have 5 corporations reporting directly to the President. You have 20 establishments and corporations having a separate budget and staff. You have 13 administrative committees. You have 25 advisory committees established by law or Executive order and reporting to the President. You have nine miscellaneous establishments. Altogether there are 133 separate and distinct organizations in the Executive branch of the Government today. There is the answer to why legislation of this character is necessary. Our desire is to coordinate their activities, to abolish some and consolidate others.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield to the gentleman from Arkansas.

Mr. McCLELLAN. It has been stated by the chairman of the committee which has had this bill under consideration, and it has also been stated by the Speaker and the majority leader that a number of these organizations and departments ought to be abolished. I should like to have some information with regard to which department or organizations ought to be abolished. Can anybody give us the names of some of them?

Mr. COCHRAN. If I had the time to enumerate them, I would tell the gentleman that if I had the power to abolish them I would abolish 75 of them or consolidate their activities. In abolishing Government agencies you do not repeal laws.

Mr. McCLELLAN. The Congress has the power. I should like to know which ones ought to be abolished by the Congress of the United States.

Mr. COCHRAN. How many would the gentleman vote to abolish if such a measure came in here?

Mr. McCLELLAN. I might vote to abolish all of them if the gentleman would point out to me which ones should be abolished. The committee has had the matter under consideration, and this is information I think the Congress should have.

Mr. COCHRAN. We have had investigation after investigation. The gentleman who sits on the right of the gentleman from Arkansas, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES] served a long time on a committee which investigated this subject. Other committees have investigated the matter. The hearings are available, if not in separate form, then through the Library. However, the agencies of the Government which should be abolished are the boards and commissions that we set up as independent agencies, when they should be under one head.

Take the Department of Welfare. What can the President do with it? He can take in all the welfare organizations which are spread all over Washington. They have grown up like mushrooms, as the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] has stated. They are undoubtedly duplicating their work in granting relief to the people of this country. The only way you are going to stop this is to put them under one head, so that this head can watch them and see what they are doing. This is the purpose of the pending measure, and the President will have an opportunity to carry it out.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Does not this bill amount to an instruction to the President to reduce the number of such agencies by consolidating and eliminating overlapping agencies?

Mr. COCHRAN. That is what the language of the bill means.

We gave the present President of the United States this power in 1933, but we all know why he did not take advantage of it. A situation confronted him then which was far more important than the reorganization of the Government of the United States. His job then was to save the Government from destruction. The President is ready and willing now to go ahead with it if we give him this authority, which he is entitled to have.

Three separate and distinct branches of this Government are provided for by our Constitution.

We charge the President with the responsibility of running the executive branch of the Government, and why should we not give him the power to run it in an efficient manner?

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. For a brief question; yes.

Mr. MAVERICK. The question I want to ask is this: If we start discussing what ought to be broken down or abolished, will that not impede the work of the President in doing a good job?

Mr. COCHRAN. There is no doubt about that whatever, and that is the reason I did not mention one agency in reply to the gentleman from Arkansas.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] spoke of some amendments that are going to be offered. He did not express any opinion as to whether he would favor them or not, but he mentioned the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Does any Member of this House believe he is ever going to live to see the day when that law will be repealed? Place it where you want, but repeal the law never in your time or mine.

Mr. MAVERICK. If the Republicans get back?

Mr. COCHRAN. No; even if the Republicans get back it will not be repealed, because public sentiment would never permit them to repeal it; but there is no danger of Republicans coming back.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Right in that connection I may say to the distinguished chairman of our committee that in my district the bankers have complained to me about the duplication of examinations and check-ups in the banks.

Mr. COCHRAN. I may say to my colleague from Ohio that at the present time you have four different organizations of the Government examining your national banks: First, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation; second, the Federal Reserve System; third, the Comptroller of the Currency; and, fourth, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation whenever it has any dealings with the banks, and, as we all know, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation owns a great deal of the stock of some of the banks in this country today.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the gentleman 5 additional minutes.

Mr. COCHRAN. They are not accepting each other's examinations, but as a banker told me the other day, there is hardly a day in the year when there is not some Federal examiner in his bank. Is this duplication? No, it is double duplication?

Now, why tie the hands of the President in an effort to do a good job? As I have said, he is charged with the responsibility, we are demanding that he reduce expenditures, the people of the country are demanding that he reduce expenditures, and there is certainly one other thing that the people of the country want, and certainly the businessmen of the country want, and that is a simplification of procedure in our Government. As it is now a, businessman does not know which way to turn in view of the rules and regulations of your various departments and bureaus scattered all over Washington. He has to hire lawyers every time he has any matter to take up with the Government.

This bill will bring about simplification of procedure, it will bring about increased efficiency, and it is bound to bring about economy. You cannot increase efficiency without ultimately bringing about economy. You are also going to stop duplication, even triplication of effort. Our whole trouble is that nobody wants to give up anything. Just the moment you attempt to take anything away from a Government agency, they are down here on the backs of the Congressmen and Senators, saying, "Do that, and I am liable to lose my job."

The question here today is whether you want to legislate for the taxpayers of the United States or whether you want to listen to the employees of the Government of the United States who desire to continue as they have been doing in the past. Instead of impeding or attempting to impede our progress they should be supporting us.

Here is the opportunity for us to do a real job for our constituents at home who are paying the bills and who expect us to cut down Government expenditures. They expect us to pass this bill today giving the power to the President to reorganize the executive branch of the Government. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GIFFORD].

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Massachusetts yield for a question?

Mr. GIFFORD. Yes.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Does this bill come as a result of an investigation so far made by the Joint Committee on Government Reorganization?

Mr. GIFFORD. Not the joint committee, but the House committee.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Then I understand that the Senate select committee has not concurred in the bill as yet?

Mr. GIFFORD. They have not.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Have they made any recommendations along the lines of this bill?

Mr. GIFFORD. I will answer the gentleman by saying the best information I have is that the House committee is reporting these bills piecemeal, but the Senate will probably not act this session on any of them.

Mr. PETTENGILL. The investigation is continuing and witnesses are still being heard?

Mr. GIFFORD. Not in the House committee.

Mr. PETTENGILL. I thought Mr. Eastman, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and others, were before the committee within the past week.

Mr. GIFFORD. Maybe so, I was not in the committee at its last meeting, being occupied in another committee's deliberation.

Mr. PETTENGILL. I just wondered why it seemed appropriate to the committee to bring the bill in at this time, before there is any assurance that it will be concurred in by the Senate Members.

Mr. GIFFORD. The gentleman probably fully understands why, and he is apparently leading me on to say that this is one of the "must" bills and an attempt must be made at this time, in part at least, to satisfy the President. There can be no other construction, seemingly, to me.

I am grateful and exceedingly thankful that we have such a fine committee from the Democratic side of the House who have not yielded to the extraordinary demands of the President; but, as in the Supreme Court bill, they are giving him something. I regret in giving it to him they are not rebuking him, as was done in another body in the Court matter. Here is another enormous grasp for power. The bill has been carefully explained, perhaps. I may be pardoned for making a more generalized statement. I read something this morning that ought to appeal to you for the moment:

> The greatest menace to the legislative branch of our Government, and one threatening its very existence, lies in the delegation of power to the Executive—the abject surrender of many of the express constitutional rights and prerogatives of the legislative. To a certain extent, this may be permissible in a great national emergency, but no effort seems to be made to return them to the Congress. There is today a concentration of power in the hands of the Executive such as our country has never known. Congress seems to have forgotten that these powers are not its own to give away. Congress is the trustee of the people.

Section 1 of this bill says that the act of 1933 is amended. How amended? Not simply by taking out the declaration that there is an emergency. Let me read to you what they did take out:

> Congress hereby declares that a serious emergency exists by reason of the general economic depression; that it is imperative to reduce drastically government expenditures; and that such reduction may be accomplished in a great measure by proceeding immediately under the provisions of this title.

That is struck out. No need now to drastically cut Government expenditures. It now says "to reduce expenditures to the fullest extent consistent with the efficient operation of the Government." Efficiency to be decided upon by whom? The situation is vastly unlike that of 1932, when a Republican President had a Democratic Congress, which could override his veto. Let this President issue an Executive order and bring it here, and although you may decline to approve it, you will be unable to put it over his veto.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. Yes.

Mr. WARREN. The gentleman speaks of a Democratic Congress in 1932. I call attention to the fact that we had a majority over here of four in that Congress, not enough to override any veto, and that the Senate at that time was nominally Republican, under a Republican President.

Mr. GIFFORD. And I answer the gentleman by saying that I have here a report, which probably none of you ever read. Mr. Hoover was given power in June 1932 to present plans to reorganize the Government, and promptly in December 1932 he filed a report. If you will read it through, most of you would agree that it was a full and careful analysis and recommendations in the main that should have received the approval of that Congress immediately. But that Congress, be it with a Democratic majority of only four or not, had sufficient votes to refuse to even consider it, and the committee to which it was referred did not give it even decent burial. But it is a valuable report and you will probably never have another such efficient President capable of such service. A Senate committee was set up under Senator BYRD which showed a disposition to abolish and to cut expenditures. This seemingly so frightened your President that he formed a special committee apparently to blanket this Byrd committee. A fund of $100,000 was obtained for the Brownlow committee, of which $10,000 was taken afterward to give to this House committee. Thus three committees were acting on the same matter at the same time. But it was the report of the Brownlow committee that was referred to us by the President himself in a message, wherein he said, "It will be said that I have asked for more power, but it is not so." We will comment on that later.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. Yes.

Mr. KNUTSON. As I understand it, this legislation is asked for under the guise of economy.

Mr. GIFFORD. Oh, no; I do not think they longer claim that.

Mr. KNUTSON. I was going to say that if they did put into effect an economy program, which no Member in his right mind believes for a moment, it will be thrown away in useless projects all over the country.

Mr. GIFFORD. Oh, no; there is no suggestion of economy anywhere. I noticed this morning that our debt on April 30 was more than $34,000,000,000, but it is almost $37,000,000,000 today, and a housing bill calling for a billion more to be presented immediately. There is no suggestion of economy; no apparent regard for the Treasury or the taxpayers!

Mr. WHITTINGTON. The gentleman stated that the recommendations made by President Hoover were never considered. Is it not a fact that they were referred to the Committee on Expenditures, and hearings were conducted, and there appeared before that committee the Director of the Budget, who recommended it be not approved?

Mr. GIFFORD. If there was that little bit of attention, I would give you credit, but it was exceedingly little.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. Yes.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. I ask the gentleman this question in all seriousness. Nearly every gentleman who has spoken here has said that the President has almost unlimited power now with reference to these matters.

Mr. GIFFORD. To take care of any particular individual. This gives him power to transfer them, fire them in quantities—not only as individuals.

Mr. JENKINS of Ohio. In that connection I cannot see how anybody, the President included, can send up a message asking us to give him more power to do certain things to cut down expenses and cut down employees, when the history is that he himself has established probably 50 times more commissions than any other President who ever served, and the history is also that every month now right along, one month after another, there are 5,000 more people put on the pay roll.

Mr. GIFFORD. I will answer the gentleman by saying it is too bad that some of us at least must come to the unhappy conclusion—and I speak for many of you Democrats, who, if your whisperings would become audible, would say, "This is not the man to whom we ought to give any more power." Demonstrations of unfitness we have had a plenty. As I say, those whisperings may become audible.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. WARREN. I think I ought to remind the gentleman from Massachusetts that on May 3, 1932, February 19, 1933, and March 20, 1933, the gentleman voted to give on this very subject vastly more powers to the President than he is being called upon today.

Mr. GIFFORD. I ought to seek forgiveness for voting for many of those measures. [Applause.] Four billion four hundred and eighty million dollars! Three billion three hundred million dollars! I voted for them; yes. He was the only President I had in that emergency. How often have I told you that? Perhaps I should be forgiven for not knowing in advance how the money was to be squandered. But now we know the great danger of granting this power.

This morning we read a comment on the Court nomination, presumably from the South, "Yes; he gave us a kick in the face, and he used our own boot to do it." Plenty more of these whisperings may soon become audible.

I would ask you to accept this text today. It should be kept in mind. "An inefficient democracy is devoutly to be preferred over a superefficient dictatorship."

Of course, I agree that many of these sprawling departments of government, sprawled even over Alexandria and Baltimore and elsewhere, should be brought into some sort of harmony. I doubt if they wish to bring things into harmony. Rather do I think they wish to create a permanent home for all these special activities they have been setting up. Abolish nothing. Cut expenses? No.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. The gentleman has been a successful businessman.

Mr. GIFFORD. I fear not.

Mr. COCHRAN. Oh, yes. Let us assume the gentleman is head of a great corporation and he has a board of directors and the board of directors refused to give him the power to run that corporation efficiently; what is going to be the ultimate result?

Mr. GIFFORD. Well, if we let our present President select his "yes" men as he is doing, men who are not really his friends, who do not dare tell him what he ought to do, and what he ought not to do—if I had a board of directors like that the responsibility would certainly be wholly on me, but I think the people whose money I took to form the corporation are entitled to a board of directors who would be judiciously minded, who would be fair, who would advise me for my good when my judgment proved to be in error.

Mr. COCHRAN. The desire to be accomplished by this bill is for a board of directors, the Congress of the United States, to give the Chief Executive the power that will enable him to run the Government efficiently.

Mr. GIFFORD. The power to select "yes" men, which he is demonstrating now every day, and which, to all of you without exception, I think, is proving highly dangerous.

Mr. KNUTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield.

Mr. KNUTSON. I am not sure how I am going to vote on this bill in view of the fact that we have a rubber stamp Congress.

Mr. GIFFORD. That is the danger.

Mr. KNUTSON. Perhaps in the interest of efficiency it might be wise to surrender the last vestige of power that this body has retained in its hands.

Mr. VOORHIS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. VOORHIS. Is it not true that according to the very plan and structure of American government the executive department has always been responsible to the President, whose very function is that of Chief Executive, and in order for efficient government to be carried on it has also always been true, and is part of the very form of our Government, that the President shall control the executive branch of government and that those in it shall be responsible to him?

Mr. GIFFORD. And that Congress should control the purse strings and by that means control the President.

Mr. VOORHIS. I am fully in accord with the gentleman so far as the control of the purse strings is concerned.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GIFFORD. Certainly.

Mr. MICHENER. The gentleman just suggested that it has always been the understanding that everybody in this Government is responsible to the Executive.

Mr. VOORHIS. I said everyone in the executive departments. I did not say, nor do I by any means mean, everybody in the Government.

Mr. MICHENER. That was the gentleman's language. I do not care whether it is "department" or "Executive", it is the same thing. That was the real fight we had before we were able to get a Budget Director. We had the same fight, also, in the case of establishing the office of Comptroller General. There are some officers who should not be entirely answerable to the demands of the President at all times.

Mr. GIFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I cannot yield further.

Mr. VOORHIS. But I have been misrepresented rather badly by the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. MICHENER. I just wanted to straighten out the RECORD.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 additional minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. GIFFORD. No emergency exists now upon the word of you people on this side of the aisle.

How boastful was the President in the campaign of 1936. He rejoiced that "factories were singing the song of industry; markets were humming; ships and trains running full; the problems of agriculture and industry had been largely solved." Only triumphant hymns were sung; at his every appearance the bands played Happy Days Are Here Again; no suggestion of the bombshells being prepared which were so promptly exploded and which greatly shocked and brought a great fear upon the Nation.

How suddenly the picture changed. He informed the people that it was necessary for him to become the real master of affairs, even if necessary to the rape of the Supreme Court and the entire control of the executive branches of the Government. Like Mussolini, who allowed himself to control seven cabinet positions at one time. These demands for the actual subversion of the Constitution have made the Nation gasp. Party lines have been split asunder; the gaping wounds may never heal. The mask is off completely. Disclosure as to the type of Supreme Court Justices desired has just been made. Let us join in a song of thanksgiving that there could not be five more similar appointments. Only "yes" men in government are to be tolerated. It is now apparent that only those who favored the measure for the packing of the Court can be named. The stinging rebuke to the President ended with this paragraph: "It is a measure which should be emphatically rejected that its parallel will never again be presented to the free representatives of the free people of America." It is plain, however, that only those who favored that measure, so stigmatized, will be eligible.

Contemplated changes in fundamental law should be fully and openly disclosed with the people, and ample time given for the crystallization of opinion as to the merits of such legislation before the people's representatives should act for them. The fearsome cry of emergency emanating so often from the White House should not in these acknowledged prosperous days be persuasive for hasty and ill-considered action.

With these recent happenings in mind, with what great concern must we grant to this arrogant, ambitious President of ours further control of agencies of Government, until recently so carefully set up by the Congress to deal fairly in the conduct of the Nation's business? Is he arrogant and afflicted with a super ego?

Teacher: What thing of importance did not exist 50 years ago?
Pupil: "Me."

The pupil must have been Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It is not sufficient for the proponents of this bill to argue that they are not giving, and do not propose to give, the full measure of authority demanded. If you desire to save the President, it is perfectly evident that the Congress itself must retain its full power to protect all of its prerogatives. We must not make further surrender to the control of what is now known as "Farleyism", where only jobs to the faithful are to be considered to practically the entire abandonment of the civil service and a continued use of corporate devices placed entirely without the control of this body.

Our empty Treasury and the terrific strain upon the Nation's credit is insufficient to deter the present administration in its mad career of spending. The creation of a new department and a new Cabinet officer with its attendant expensive trappings should not be contemplated at the moment. We are unprepared to acknowledge that these vast sums for relief expenditures will continue. Business must be freed from further intimidation because unemployment can only be taken care of from this source. However, it is now fully and amply demonstrated that this intimidation is to be continued, even in far greater measure. Actual destruction of small business is certain under the wage and hour law if enacted. Enormous powers over all branches of industry granted to a board selected by this President would, indeed, bring a great fear again upon all types of industry. There appears to be no limit to the persecution of those upon whom we depend to bring back prosperity. Actual control of the radio not only seems to be contemplated but seems to have been actually accomplished.

Through this means the President himself has exerted a tremendous influence either for good or evil. Certainly the people have been led to believe that he is their only savior. Confidence in their representative form of government has been undermined. Even the rape of the Supreme Court has not yet brought the masses to their senses, and to the realization that their form of government may be in jeopardy. Real friends who will advise and curb the President are not to be tolerated in executive or other positions of influence.

Under these frightening conditions I make the appeal that further power not be granted. Not the slightest claim is advanced that abuses will be abolished or that any actual savings will be made. Rather, it would appear a haven will be created for these more recent so-called emergency activities to be made permanent, and to bleed the taxpayers for years to come to support more bureaus always ambitious to increase rather than decrease their activities.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McSWEENEY].

Mr. McSWEENEY. Mr. Chairman, I have talked with the committee chairman [Mr. WARREN] relative to this bill and he convinces me that no amendment is necessary to accomplish my desire. I am going to ask my friends and colleagues to collaborate with me, if the bill becomes law, in suggesting to the President of the United States that the Bureau of Prisons be taken from under the control of the Department of Justice. I had the honor to serve as director of welfare in Ohio and I realized there that that department which finds the criminal, prosecutes him, and later sentences him should not have jurisdiction over the man after he is in the penal institution. In Ohio the welfare department has complete charge of the penal and correctional institutions. Those men become a welfare problem and should be treated in a welfare way. In other words, it is bad psychology for the man in the penal institution to realize that his care and rehabilitation is in the hands of the persons who convicted him and sentenced him.

I would not wish my colleagues to interpret what I am saying to mean that I am in favor of a lax parole system, but I do feel that the parole system, the parole board, and the parole officers should be under a separate jurisdiction than that of the department that sent the men to the penitentiary.

I feel that this is something which does not need an amendment, because the bill provides that the President may make the allocations of separate bureaus to the Department of Welfare. However, I am going to ask the cooperation of my friends in suggesting to the President that he make this transfer of the Bureau of Prisons to the newly created Department of Welfare.

I am sure you all realize that mentality and physical condition should be taken into consideration when we treat prisoners, if we are really planning rehabilitation for the men and women who are incarcerated either in our State or Federal penitentiary. I solicit your cooperation.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. MOTT].

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, section 1 of this bill names a number of independent agencies of the Government with which the President, under the bill, if it should become law, would not be allowed to interfere. Aside from those exceptions, if the President were deliberately asking for as great an amount of governmental power as it is possible to acquire under one measure, in my opinion he could not select a more effective method of acquiring it than through enactment of this bill.

It is somewhat embarrassing to me as a Republican to know that the act of which this bill is amendatory was passed during the Hoover administration, although at the time it was passed the House had attained a slightly Democratic majority. It will be contended by Republicans, I presume, that in the Hoover administration there was less danger in an act of this kind, and more excuse for it than there is under the present administration. Perhaps that is true, but I want to say emphatically that even in the circumstances under which the original bill was offered to the Congress in 1932 I would not have voted for it had I been a Member of the House at that time, because I believe the principle is wrong. I believe the object which it is claimed this bill seeks to obtain should be brought about by the action of the Congress through enactment of mandatory law and not by the President of the United States through the issuance of discretionary Executive orders.

Our governmental departments and our various bureaus and governmental agencies were created by Congress in the exercise of its legislative authority under the Constitution. They were created by specific law for a specific purpose. If for any reason they should be changed or consolidated or abolished now, and I think a number of them should be, the Congress itself and not the President should do that. It should decide how it is to be done and when and to what extent it is to be done. That decision should not be left to the discretion of the head of the executive department.

When the original act, of which this bill is supposed to be an amendment, was passed, it was passed for a very definite purpose, which clearly appears in the language of section 401 of the 1932 act. That language, by the way, has been entirely eliminated from this bill. The language of the 1932 act is as follows:

> The Congress hereby declares that a serious emergency exists by reason of the general economic depression; that it is imperative to reduce drastically Government expenditures; and that such reduction may be accomplished in great measure by proceeding immediately under the provisions of this title.

Mr. WARREN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOTT. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. WARREN. I will tell the gentleman why we eliminated that. Because under this administration the depression has been ended, therefore we struck out that language.

Mr. MOTT. I am glad to have the gentleman's observation as to the reason why this was stricken out. I am particularly glad to learn that, in the gentleman's opinion, the depression has ended. But I wonder how many of the million people still out of work would concur in that opinion. Certainly no one can seriously contend now as it was contended when the 1932 act was introduced that it is the object of this administration through this bill to bring about economy. Everything that the Congress and everything that the President has done during the past 4 years proves the contrary. You gentlemen on that side do not now seriously contend that the purpose of this bill is to bring about economy; you had every opportunity to use it for that purpose during the first 2 years of this administration, while it was still in full force and effect. You want it now not to bring about economy but to bring about a still greater concentration of governmental authority and power in the Executive. Every act of the present administration indicates that. Every message the President sends to Congress indicates that. No one can read the Brownlow report without being convinced of that. The purpose of this bill is to bring about by Executive order instead of by law a concentration of authority in the hands of the Executive greater than has ever existed at any time in our history.

In transferring a bureau from one department to another, or in reorganizing bureaus, matters of great controversy and of great concern to the people are at issue, and those issues ought to be decided by the Congress. Many of them involve important legislative policy, and the Congress is the only agency of the Government which is permitted or authorized under the Constitution to decide matters of legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I call attention in connection with the authority proposed to be delegated by this bill to the proposed transfer of the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture to the Department of the Interior. I cannot conceive how any Member of this House from a timber-producing State can possibly vote for a bill which will allow the President, in his own discretion and without consulting Congress, to transfer the Forest Service from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of the Interior. Yet that is what he can do and what, in all probability, he will do if this bill becomes law.

Throughout the 40 years of its existence the Department of Agriculture and the Forest Service have been administering our national forests. Everyone in the forest States, I am sure, is satisfied with that administration and with the results that have been brought about through that administration. No one in any of those States, so far as I know, wants this great agency transferred from the Department which has fostered and nurtured and successfully administered it, to a department which has never had any experience in forestry or in the perpetuation of the national forests for the purpose of maintaining a constant supply of lumber. And yet if you vote for this bill you give the President the power in his own discretion to make this transfer.

There is no one really familiar with the subject who does not believe that if this bill is passed and becomes law the Forest Service will be taken from the jurisdiction of the Department of Agriculture and put under the jurisdiction of the Interior Department, which has never had any experience in forestry, as that term is ordinarily known and used. There is no one in that entire Department who has had experience in the perpetuation of national forests or the uses to which the national forests are devoted.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Will the gentleman yield.

Mr. MOTT. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KNIFFIN. I should like to ask the gentleman if there is an institution in the country that suggests itself more to conservation than does that of forestry?

Mr. MOTT. Forestry certainly includes conservation, but it is conservation of an entirely different character than the kind of conservation in which the Secretary of the Interior is interested. It is conservation involving an entirely different philosophy and purpose than that which the Secretary of the Interior has practiced. It would take a long time to discuss that subject, which, I may say, is rather technical in character.

Mr. KNIFFIN. May I say there is no provision in this proposal, nor any assurances from any source, that the President will transfer the Forest Service to the Department of the Interior.

Mr. MOTT. I have stated it as my opinion, based upon my experience and familiarity with the subject and with the controversy connected with it, that there is no doubt, if this bill is passed and the power is given to the President, that the Forest Service will be transferred to the jurisdiction of the Interior Department. I think there is no one who is familiar with the situation who does not concur in this opinion.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I have mentioned the Forestry Service transfer as an example of what can and probably will be done by the President if this bill becomes law. The Congress created the Forestry Service by law. It placed it where it now is by law. It is performing its functions solely by virtue of law. My own opinion, and it is shared by millions of others, is that it should not be turned over to the jurisdiction of another department, and that its functions should not be changed. I think I am right in that. I may, of course, be wrong. But this is the point I am making. If the jurisdiction or the functions or the purpose or the policy of the Forest Service is to be changed, it should be changed by law, by the Congress which created it. There is no reason under the sun why Congress should delegate this power to the President and permit him to decide in his own discretion what he wants to do with the Forestry Service. That is the duty and the responsibility of the Congress.

Mr. Chairman, it seems to me this Congress has already gone far enough in surrendering its own legislative authority and responsibility to the Executive head of this Government, and that the time has come to stop. I wonder sometimes if gentlemen realize just how far we have gone in the direction of turning all of our responsibility over to the President. You recall back in 1933 this Congress, through the Economy Act, surrendered to the President of the United States its entire jurisdiction over veteran legislation, and it was only upon the demand of an outraged people that the Congress recaptured that jurisdiction. Through the Bankhead cotton bill, the Potato Control Act, and the A. A. A. in general, the Congress surrendered to the Executive practically all its legislative authority in the field of agriculture. In the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act the Congress surrendered to the President its entire effective jurisdiction over the tariff.

The Congress has delegated to the President the power to make laws through the issuance of Executive orders upon practically every important legislative subject. For 5 years whenever the Congress has been confronted with a major problem requiring legislative solution it has shirked its duty and responsibility and has turned the job over to the President by enactment of legislation giving the President blanket discretionary authority to solve the problem himself.

It seems to me it is time for the Congress to consider seriously its delinquency in this regard and to call a halt upon its own actions. It is time for the Congress to resume its constitutional responsibilities as an independent legislative body. It is time for it to assert itself to the end that there may be a return to constitutional, representative government in the United States. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BEAM].

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, to my mind this is one of the most important measures to come before the Congress of the United States at this session.

The people of the entire Nation owe a debt of gratitude to the chairman of our subcommittee, the able gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN], and also the distinguished chairman of the whole committee, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. COCHRAN], for their untiring, assiduous, and determined efforts in bringing this bill to the floor of the House for consideration and determination.

Mr. Chairman, by grouping, coordinating, and consolidating the various agencies of the Governmet, we will, as a result of this proposed legislation, take a decided step in reducing governmental expenditures and place in actual operation economies we have advocated for a long period of time.

The passage of this bill will convey to the President in no uncertain terms that we join with him in his fight to abolish unnecessary and obsolete bureaus and departments in the Government of the United States.

The gentleman who just preceded me, in the course of his remarks, stated that the delegation of power to the Chief Executive was an abridgment of the powers of Congress and should not be given or delegated.

I desire to call the attention of the gentleman from Oregon to the fact that such delegation of power is not without precedent in the annals of our American Government. In the year 1903 authority was granted to the President of the United States in connection with the creation of the Department of Commerce and Labor; again in 1918 by the creation of the Overman Act, a similar delegation was made; and again in 1930 by a delegation of power from the Congress, the Veterans' Administration was created, and in 1932 the Congress granted authority to President Hoover on a much broader and far-reaching scale than that contemplated or desired by the present act.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEAM. I yield to the gentleman from Oregon.

Mr. MOTT. Is the gentleman stating that I claimed in my remarks that this was in the nature of new or novel legislation?

Mr. BEAM. That it was a new step in the annals of legislative power.

Mr. MOTT. I stated I was sorry to admit the original act was passed in the Hoover administration, and that I would not have voted for that measure even in that administration, because it set a dangerous precedent, at least.

Mr. BEAM. May I say to the gentleman that the Democrats of Congress in conjunction with their Republican colleagues delegated this power to Mr. Hoover, then President of the United States, in compliance with his specific request.

Mr. MOTT. I am sorry they ever did it.

Mr. BEAM. Well, the people of America realized that fact in 1932 and elected a Democratic President.

Mr. Chairman, the testimony before the Committee on Government Reorganization discloses the fact that there are at present in the Government 133 separate departments, commissions, boards, authorities, and other agencies. It is perfectly obvious to all that this multiplication of independent agencies defeats the end of effectual and economical administration of the affairs of Government.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEAM. I am sorry I cannot yield.

Every Member of Congress knows and realizes that the pressing need today is to do away with overlapping and duplicating agencies of government. We are all aware of the fact that the functions of regulatory agencies should be segregated from those of an administrative and executive character. We are all desirous of increasing the efficiency of the operations of the Government and we are all vitally concerned in bringing about a reduction in governmental expenditures; consistent with the efficient and effective operation of the Government. Such an opportunity presents itself to the membership of the House by the passage of this bill. This truly is an opportunity to do something constructive for the taxpayers of America.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEAM. I decline to yield, Mr. Chairman. This is a timely and appropriate occasion for us to carry out the mandate and request of the President. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT].

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, this bill is a link in a chain of many other bills which, if not broken, will lead inevitably to dictatorship in this country. This bill vests an additional and vast discretionary power in the hands of the President of the United States, who already has been given more power than was ever granted any other President in the history of our Republic in peacetime or in war.

The President of the United States today has the power of life and death over the economic destiny of the American people. We have given him the power to issue currency and to regulate the value thereof. He can coin silver up to a ratio of 16 to 1. He can reduce the gold content of the dollar 40 percent. He has more than $2,000,000,000 wherewith he can purchase British pounds, French francs, German marks, or Japanese yen. He can close the stock market at any time for 30 days. He has the power and authority to issue currency up to $3,000,000,000.

He has the power to pay farmers of this country money for not planting their fields. He has the authority to say to Chicago, "I will build a subway here", and yet deny it to Indianapolis. He can construct a dog pound in Memphis or a monkey house in Little Rock, as has already been done, or he can deny them to some other State. He can raise or lower the tariff on practically everything that is produced in the United States. More money has been turned over in blank-check form, without any earmarks, to Franklin Delano Roosevelt since the 4th of March, 1933, than was appropriated and turned over to 30 Presidents in the first 143 years of our history. When, oh, when, Mr. Chairman, will this Congress cease to abdicate its powers? We might as well abolish Congress so far as representing the taxpayers back home is concerned.

Now, I am opposed to this bill and to the New Deal in general, not because it is so new, most of the methods of the New Deal are old methods employed by every benevolent despotism in the history of the world from the Pharaohs down through the Caesars and Machiavellis to this present hour.

I have just received a letter from the manager of the Neosho Foundry & Plow Works, an industrial concern in Neosho, Mo., which is in my district, in which he violently registers his protest against the pending wage and hour bill which we hope will die in the Rules Committee of this House, and in closing this letter he says to me:

> The present administration has remodeled everything, or attempted to, from the Supreme Court on down to the pigs and outdoor toilets, has wasted billions of dollars, spoiled the spirit of thousands of American workmen by making conditions which encourage the refusal of private employment, developed a national spirit of get something for nothing, and yet in spite of all these, the natural economic laws have affected considerable recovery. Why, in God's name, cannot Congress adjourn and at least let us assimilate some of our overdose before prescribing further.

[Laughter and applause.]

I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that I consider myself fortunate and honored to represent such a common sense, sane, patriotic American citizenry.

I admit we can never go back to the old order. I know that without change there can be no progress, but I want to say that the underlying philosophy of this crazy, cockeyed New Deal was uttered by that brilliant, philosophic mind which has ended by being stuck in molasses, Dr. Tugwell, who said he would "roll up his sleeves and make America over", and the President is imbued with the same philosophy because on January 3, 1934, he said to the Members of Congress, both Houses in joint session, in his annual message, that they would cooperate "to build on the ruins of the past a new structure." [Applause.]

O Mr. President, I will admit that everything is not perfect in the United States, but where are the ruins of the past? In spite of all the vicissitudes of fortune through which we have passed, in spite of recurring panics, droughts, and storms, floods, wars, and depressions, we have lived and grown to be the greatest Nation on the face of God's earth. Nowhere else under the shining sun will you find so many of the common people living in their own homes, riding in automobiles, listening to radios, enjoying frigidaires, and other physical comforts as well as spiritual benefits as are enjoyed by the citizens who live under the Stars and Stripes.

Mr. SACKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHORT. No; I have not the time.

Here in this democracy under our flag every man can walk the earth his own king, the equal lord of every man to go his own way, work out his own will, weave into the warp and woof of the magic days the dreams that haunt, the duties that inspire and urge him on; and yet these carping critics continually paint what an awful, terrible country we are living in, and sometimes I wish to God, if they are not satisfied with our form of government and the conditions we have in this Nation, they would take the boat to Russia or to Italy or to Germany that seem to possess the kind of government they would have.

Mr. NICHOLS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHORT. I must refuse to yield.

I am not opposing the New Deal, as I say, simply because it is new. I realize changes are necessary. I can illustrate what I mean by saying that many years ago I remember when the first Ford came out. I was a very small boy, but I was driving one of those Fords from Galena, my home town, to Crane, which was 10 miles away, over a narrow, crooked, dangerous highway. Of course, it was a very newfangled machine. It was the kind you had to hold on to the crank to keep it from flying off the handle. You had to clean the spark plugs every 10 miles, and if you got up to 15 miles an hour, you were flying. I was driving along when I met a farmer friend of mine with his wife driving along the road with an old horse and buggy, and when old Dolly saw this newfangled vehicle she could not do anything but shy and commence backing and was threatening to throw the occupants out when I pulled this tin lizzie over to the ditch and she spewed and sputtered and finally stopped. I ran down the road and John had gotten out of the buggy and was holding the old mare by the bridle with her nostrils extended and her sides heaving, and I said, "John, can I help you any?" and he said, "Dewey, for God's sake, if you will just lead my wife by, I will take care of the old mare." [Laughter.]

The old mare was afraid of something new, merely because it was new, not realizing that this newfangled thing which she thought at that time was going to hurt her would in the end turn out to be her best friend, and that on cold, stormy winter's nights she could stand in a nice warm stall, with her nose in the hay, while outside giant trucks would be hauling great loads over great distances. There is not much difference between horses and human beings, except that horses have horse sense. Often they learn more quickly than do we. Today old Dolly is not frightened at the automobile. One nearly has to knock her off the highway in order to get around her.

New ideas frighten some people. They cramp and pinch our minds just as new shoes pinch and cramp our feet. I am not afraid of these novel innovations; but I do know that the present occupant of the White House is a great precedent breaker. He loves to do novel things. With Dr. Tugwell, he wants to "roll up his sleeves and make America over." When I was a student in college and university, we experimented on guinea pigs and not upon 127,000,000 helpless American people. Oh, when will the end of this experimentation be? I am willing to admit changes. We all know that certain economic, social, and political readjustments are imperative and necessary, but I am not going to mistake mere change for progress. While change is essential for progress, it is not synonymous with progress. Change can be for the worse as well as for the better; and while we need the change, let me say that truth in all ages is the same; it never changes. Times and conditions may change, but truth never changes. The principles and truths of Free Masonry have not changed one iota, and are just as true at this hour as when taught by King Solomon or George Washington. The tenets and principles of the holy Roman Catholic Church are just as true today as when they were uttered by St. Peter or by St. Thomas Aquinas. No sensible man in this Chamber, regardless of his politics or religious belief, would want to abolish the Decalogue simply because it was uttered by Moses in the "horse and buggy" days. Those great principles embodied in Holy Writ, in the Constitution of the United States, and the Declaration of Independence, which are the bible and charter of our liberties, are just as true today as they were the day they were written. I am glad that my good friend—and he is my good friend—the very able and distinguished gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] stated in his remarks that many existing bureaus have no excuse whatever for their existence. I think we all heartily agree in that opinion; but I pause to remind you that bureaucracy has sprung up like mushrooms all over this country during the past 4 years, until our American democracy has degenerated into the bureaucracy that it now is. Who, in the name of God, is responsible for it?

Your platform—and it was an excellent one—of 1932 said you were going to abolish bureaus, consolidate agencies, and drastically reduce expenditures of government. Yet you have practically doubled our national debt from $20,000,000,000 to $40,000,000,000; and God help the poor taxpayers of this Nation when pay day rolls around and they are called upon to foot the bill. Oh, yes; you may "roll up your sleeves and make American over!" Perhaps you are going to erect "a new structure upon the ruins of the past", following half-baked panaceas and every wild economic and social theory that is advanced by some of these experimentalists out of Columbia and dear old Harvard. The responsibility for these changes rests directly on the Members of this Congress, the duly chosen representatives of our people, and not upon any other agency. God pity America in the future if we continue to refuse to shoulder the responsibility that is ours, and cowardly, both directly and indirectly, by surreption and every other means, turn over our constitutional prerogatives and surrender not only our rights but also our duties to some individual at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. FRED M. VINSON].

Mr. FRED M. VINSON rose.

Mr. PETTENGILL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield before he begins?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Yes.

Mr. PETTENGILL. A question was raised in the cloakroom a few moments ago as to whether this bill or any powers under it could be so exercised as to change the functions of the Comptroller General's Office, whether its powers could be curtailed or abrogated in any way whatever?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Under the express language of the bill the General Accounting Office is excluded from the powers stated therein.

Mr. Chairman, all will agree that we have enjoyed our distinguished friend from Missouri [Mr. SHORT]. He is always entertaining. Gee, but how be can spill it. But the truth is that he goes in every direction at the same time.

Do you not remember, just a few minutes ago when he talked about tyranny and despotism, and talked about a down-trodden people? Then when he started out on another burst of eloquence, he talked about the 127,000,000 American citizens who had the radio, who had the automobile, who had a home and food and clothing—127,000,000 happy people. Now I submit that as long as that 127,000,000 Americans are happy and content you need not fear the supposed tyranny and supposed despotism of Mr. Tugwell of molasses fame.

Our friend from Missouri is a paradox. The gentleman is behind schedule. He should have made that speech months ago when Mr. Tugwell was in the Government. Mr. Tugwell is no longer in the Government. Today, many of the friends of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] are taking Mr. Tugwell to their bosoms, when they gave him "down the road" when he was an official of the Government.

Ah, it is a different song they sing. When a man is working in this administration, endeavoring to serve the purposes of the administration, he is a tyrant, a despot, a radical, and a dangerous man, but let him fall out with the administration, and, God bless you, the friends of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] immediately enlarge his stature, give him ability, virtue, and patriotism and take him to their bosoms.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. ANDREWS] rose in his place and asked the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] if this bill came here as a political issue. Mr. TABER did not answer him as Mr. ANDREWS wanted or expected. I stand here and say if there is any politics in this bill today, there was politics in the same bill, with added powers, in 1932.

In 1932, as you have been told, more power was given by a Democratic House to a Republican President than is carried in this measure. It so happens that I was one of the Democrats who voted to give Mr. Hoover that power. I hoped he would do something during his administration by which he could be favorably remembered. He came before us and said that money could be saved; that we could have increased efficiency in Government; that if we gave him the powers money would be saved and efficiency promoted; I voted to give him such powers.

Today every single gentleman on the Republican side of the Hall who has spoken today against the measure voted to give Mr. Hoover that power. How can they say today that Mr. Roosevelt should not have that power? How can the Democrats in the House who voted to give Mr. Hoover that power say that the Democratic President should have less power. It is less power because we exclude from the agencies affected certain regulatory activities included in the 1932 act.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] referred to the question of administrative agencies. He made the statement that in the declaratory part of the act, administrative agencies were referred to, but under the definition of "executive agencies", he was fearful that it would not be included, if I understood him correctly.

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I want to say to the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER], who has been quite helpful in the consideration and preparation of this measure, that it has been considered and held that the term "executive agency" in section 402 of the act includes administrative agencies.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I yield.

Mr. TABER. I do not think it is necessary to discuss that. I have been into another part of the bill, section 403, and the only power that is given to the President relates to the executive agencies and not administrative agencies, so I shall not offer any amendment on that.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. But I want to say to the gentleman it has been construed in an opinion handed down by the Attorney General that the term "executive agencies" includes "administrative agencies."

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I yield.

Mr. COCHRAN. As a result of that opinion the Shipping Board was abolished.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. That is correct, as I understand it.

Then certain gentlemen are fearful that someone now holding a position in the Government, under this bill could be ousted. The gentleman from New York met that point fairly and squarely. He said that under prevailing law, under statutory language, and, I might add, under the power that is inherent in the Executive, a man may be ousted for inefficiency.

Mr. TABER. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON I yield.

Mr. TABER. Is it not true that the Executive may remove anyone in the executive department who does not agree with his program?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I do not know that I can go that far. I agree with the statement made by the gentleman from New York [Mr TABER], heretofore that this bill does not add to or take away from the power that he now has under existing law, and I may say under constitutional power, under the inherent power of the Executive to do the job that is entrusted to him under the Constitution by dismissing employees for inefficiency or for just cause.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Chairman, will the genteman yield?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I yield.

Mr. COLLINS. Under the Humphreys case it is very doubtful if a public officer exercising quasi-legislative powers could be removed by the President.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Such employee could only be removed for the causes set forth in the statute.

Mr. COLLINS. I doubt if under the decisions of the Court a public officer in the so-called executive department exercising legislative powers could be removed.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. In the Humphreys case, removal could only occur under certain stated conditions, which were not alleged or relied upon.

Mr. COLLINS. At any rate that is the effect of these decisions.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. In the Humphreys case, certain specific causes for dismissal were written into the act under which he was appointed. The Supreme Court said that he had not come within such language, and, consequently, the President had no power to dismiss him.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 additional minutes.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I yield.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Can the gentleman inform me whether under the provisions of this bill the President is granted authority to establish agencies or additional bureaus or departments?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I do not understand that such power is given to him.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I want to be clear on that; I am trying to secure information.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. And I am giving the gentleman the best information I have.

Mr. McCLELLAN. I wish to learn whether he can abolish one department and create two. Does the bill grant such authority?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. The bill does not give him the authority to create any new agency or department other than the department of public welfare.

Mr. BIERMANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I yield.

Mr. BIERMANN. If there is any doubt as to whether the bill gives the President the authority to abolish jobs, there must be doubt as to whether——

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. No; there is no doubt about that. He cannot create new activities.

Mr. BIERMANN. But the gentleman from Mississippi raised a question as to whether or not the President had the power to abolish jobs.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. As I understood it, the gentleman from Mississippi asked about the President's power to discharge a man occupying a quasi-legislative position.

Mr. BIERMANN. Do not some of these positions fall within that category?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. The regulatory agencies are excluded.

Mr. BIERMANN. But there is no question that under this bill the President can cut down the personnel a whole lot, is there?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. There is not a particle of doubt about that.

Mr. BIERMANN. If there is doubt about that, then there is doubt, too, as to whether we shall save any money under it.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. There is no doubt about his power to cut down personnel. The President can abolish agencies and functions there, as may not be necessary for the efficient conduct of the Government.

Mr. ROMJUE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Yes.

Mr. ROMJUE. Much has been said about the broad power given to President Roosevelt. As a matter of fact, did not those who are now criticizing the grant of power to President Roosevelt contained in this bill vote to give much broader power to President Hoover?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. There is no question about that. In 1932, when this broader power to which my friend from Missouri refers was granted to Mr. Hoover, on a roll call we found the distinguished leaders of the Republican Party, some of whom have spoken here today, voting to grant broader powers to Mr. Hoover. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHORT] was not here. The gentleman from Oregon [Mr. MOTT] was not here. We were unfortunate in not having their presence; but upon a roll call, among others, we found Messrs. SNELL, MARTIN of Massachusetts, MICHENER, TREADWAY, TABER, GIFFORD, WOODRUFF, and RICH—"Where are you going to get the money?" RICH.

Mr. SHORT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Certainly.

Mr. SHORT. And look at the gosh awful fix we are in now.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I think, however, that they represented the views on your side; and if they failed you, then, of course, it is not our fault. I look to them as distinguished leaders of the Republican Party carrying the banner—rather dismally—but carrying the banner of your party as best they can.

Mr. SHORT. I think they have earned their laurels.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I want to say this to my friends, seriously, now: The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks, "Where are you going to get the money?" The gentleman from New York says, "Cut appropriations 10 percent, yea, 15 percent" on each appropriation bill. They are everlastingly talking economy. Here is their opportunity to support a constructive economy measure. Congress has been criticized for spending money. The fact of the matter is, however, that in this present session we are $86,000,000 under the Budget estimates. In the past session we were $82,000,000 under the Budget estimates. In every single session of Congress since the Budget Act was passed, about 1921, except the one which carried the bonus appropriation, Congress, the legislative branch of government, has spent less money than the executive branch asked us to spend.

Here should be the answer of our Republican friends today: The Executive says that he can save money, can promote efficiency—and that is saving money. They, who are so economically minded, who make motions to strike out appropriations, can today support this bill, lay it on the doorstep of the Executive, if they want to treat it that way, and see if the Executive will promote efficiency or economy. I am fearful, however, that their leadership will not do that which a Democratic House did for Mr. Hoover; it may be expecting too much, since they are groping and grasping for a political issue.

Mr. RICH. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. RICH. I am glad to hear the gentleman say we are going to have economy in our Government if this bill passes. How do you know you are going to have economy? How do you know that the President of the United States will do anything in that direction? He has been in there for 2 years and he has not turned his hand so far as saving money is concerned. Instead he has created more bureaus than has any President in the history of the Nation. He has done just the opposite to what he said he would do.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. The answer is that he was busy during those 2 years when he possessed these powers getting us out of the depression. We are out. Now he can turn his attention to constructive effort in the reorganization of the executive branches of our Government. The gentleman from Pennsylvania, of all Members, should support this measure and thus save millions of dollars if it be enacted into law. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KNIFFIN].

Mr. KNIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, I shall not take more than a few minutes of the time. I merely wish to say I am glad to vote for the pending measure. I voted for a similar measure when Mr. Hoover was President, and I am, of course, glad to vote for one that gives less power to the incumbent of the Presidency at the present time.

I invite the attention of the members of the committee to the purposes of this proposal. I am persuaded that it amounts to an instruction, that it is a direction to do the following: To reduce expenditures to the fullest extent consistent with efficient government; to increase the efficiency of the operations of the Government; to group, coordinate, and consolidate executive and administrative agencies of the Government; and to reduce the number of such agencies and to eliminate overlapping and to segregate regulatory agencies, and so forth.

Is there a Member of this House who does not believe now, 20 years after the World War, that at least a careful examination should be made into the functions or the lack of such of all of the wartime agencies? Is there anyone anywhere who does not believe that these commissions, boards, bureaus, authorities, and other agencies are too numerous? I am of the belief there is not a Member of the House who could within the next hour sit down and tabulate a list of the 133 boards, bureaus, agencies, commissions, and so forth, that are now attempting to function within the executive branch of our Government.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNIFFIN. I yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. May I call the attention of the House to the War Minerals Relief Board or Commission? Two or three times in the last several years we have passed bills here to dispose of some of these claims. We were assured each time these bills came up that that would be the end of this Commission. I do not know any of the gentlemen on the Commission. I have had no dealings with them; but it occurs to me this Commission is typical of others that have long since outlived their usefulness. Certainly War Minerals Relief Commission would be an excellent Commission to get rid of. The yearly cost of that Commission, compared with the total Government expenditure, of course, is very small. But whatever it costs is too much.

Mr. KNIFFIN. I may say that is one I would get rid of if I were vested with the power to do so. I would get rid of about half of these boards, bureaus, and commissions, and I think it could be done without impairing the efficiency of the Government one bit.

Mr. LEWIS of Colorado. This was created, as I understand, by Secretary Lane just after the World War, and was supposed to last 2 or 3 years at the longest; but it has been going on all these 18 and more years. I venture the guess that one competent lawyer and a stenographer could have done all the necessary work of the Commission in 6 months.

Mr. KNIFFIN. In that connection may I say to the gentleman, and this is in response to at least part of the statement made by the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] when he said this bill would have a tendency to concentrate propaganda, that it will have the very opposite effect. It will have a tendency to do away with propaganda and manipulations of boards, such as the one to which the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. LEWIS] called attention, the Alien Property Custodian set-up, and all the other departments created for war purposes that have broken down the mails of this country in an effort to justify their continued existence at an excessive cost to the taxpayers of this country. I believe the only way we can stop this wild expense, extravagance, and useless waste of Government funds is to authorize somebody to make a careful examination into the set-up with a view to eliminating overlapping and abolishing at least half of these activities that do not contribute anything to the welfare of the Government, but which amount to a consideration which should not be borne by the people. I further believe the people have been waiting patiently and are hopefully expectant that some Congress some time will do something to alleviate this unjust burden which now rests on the taxpayers. [Applause.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON].

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, the distinguished chairman of the reorganization committee this afternoon said we needed this bill to take these independent agencies and put them under a department in order to save money. My observation as a member of the Appropriations Committee has been that a bureau under a department is independent to a very large degree. It does not make any difference if the agency is independent from the department or not. It will not be any more subservient as a bureau. Bureaus stand out individually in their respective departments. So that argument does not appeal to me.

In answer to the statement made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. MCSWEENEY] when he stated that he hoped in this reorganization program the prisons would be separated from the Department of Justice. May I say that I do not agree with the gentleman. I hope the idea will not prevail. The Superintendent of Prisons is functioning efficiently and satisfactorily. I served on a parole board once. I think the tendency is toward a more strict supervision in regard to parole. Kansas for years never had capital punishment. In the past 2 or 3 years we have gone to capital punishment. Therefore, I think the tendency is the other way and the Department of Justice, that has jurisdiction over the prisons at the present time, is in the best shape to take care of parole matters. The history of a prisoner's case in connection with his parole is more important than his conduct within the walls, and the Department of Justice has all those facts somewhere.

Mr. Chairman, if the President had proposed this in the first 60 days of his administration, some 4 years ago, I believe it would have been logical, and I think I would have voted for it. I thought at that time he was for economy. I voted for his economy program. There are two votes I have made since becoming a Member of the House that I regret. One was my vote for economy under Mr. Roosevelt as President, because I do not believe him to be sincere on that proposition. The other vote was when Mr. Hoover asked us to vote for the first German moratorium. That was a bad precedent. I regret those two votes.

Mr. Chairman, we created another bureau yesterday. There is an urgent bill now pending before the Rules Committee which will create another big, independent bureau. It is not reasonable to believe that the people who have been creating these bureaus day after day and week after week are going to start right in now in this reorganization plan and eliminate all of them. I do not think President Hoover went far enough or did enough. On the other hand, I think the present administration has tried about everything. What we needed was to try a few things and carry them through well. What this country needs is a happy medium between these two Presidents. I believe the thought of many in the present administration is that we must do this now, because no one else worthy is ever going to follow. They take the position, "We want to start everything toward Utopia. We might as well get it started now because nobody else worth while is ever going to be elected President." So they start it.

Mr. Chairman, I do not think we ought to vote for this bill because a wagon cannot unload till it is stopped, and this wagon has never stopped picking up new boards and commissions.

I do not think it is in the interest of economy. I do not think anybody is going to economize who has not economized. If I thought this was real economy I would be for it. This bill provides for hens to hover chickens. No chickens will be permitted to die in the cold world.

Mr. BEVERLY M. VINCENT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. BEVERLY M. VINCENT. The gentleman stated that Roosevelt went too far, that he went to an extreme.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes; that is so.

Mr. BEVERLY M. VINCENT. The gentleman stated that he wanted to get a man who would come somewhere in between.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Yes.

Mr. BEVERLY M. VINCENT. What portion of the Hoover administration would the gentleman accept?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Well, about all of it, but the trouble was we said he did not do enough things. I think he should have done more toward anticipating the conditions which came about. However, we certainly have gone too far. We have tried everything.

I know the gentleman has a good suggestion from our good colleague from Washington. What is it?

Mr. BEVERLY M. VINCENT. Now that the gentleman has answered me on the Hoover administration, what would the gentleman take from the Roosevelt administration?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. What would I take?

Mr. BEVERLY M. VINCENT. Yes; or what would the gentleman discard?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. I have supported many New Deal measures. I have supported probably half of them. I would take all of them I have supported. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Chairman, when I came into the Chamber this afternoon I had no definite intention of discussing this bill, but I would not be true to my own feelings if I did not say a word to compliment the committee on its work in reporting the bill that is before us. [Applause.]

Some of us have studied this question of the reorganization of the executive departments of the Government for a great many years. Everybody recognizes the necessity for reorganization, admits that there is great duplication and waste throughout the departments, and that some of the agencies of the Government have even outlived their usefulness and ought to be abolished. This bill approaches the subject in the only practical way there is to get the job done. As a practical matter, it must be done this way or not at all. Anyone who has given any serious consideration to the question knows that.

The Joint Committee on the Reorganization of the Executive Departments of the Government, created back in the Harding administration, of which the distinguished gentleman from New York, Mr. WADSWORTH, then a Senator, and I were members, tried to do it the other way. After exhaustive hearings and study, that committee reported a bill in which the proposed changes were set out in detail. Everyone who took the time to study the report commended the work of that committee, but we were never able to get the bill recommended by the committee considered in Congress. In fairness to that committee, however, I think it can be said that its report laid the foundation for most reorganization proposals since that time. It might be of interest to some to know that that committee recommended the consolidation of the War and Navy Departments into one department, to be called the department of national defense. It also recommended the establishment of one new department, to be known as the department of education and welfare. The gentleman from Ohio expressed the hope this afternoon that the Bureau of Prisons would be taken from under the control of the Department of Justice. That was one of the recommendations of this joint committee in 1924. It recommended that it be taken out of the Department of Justice and put into the new department of education and welfare.

There will always be differences of opinion in the Congress as to what agencies should be transferred, consolidated, abolished, or interfered with in any way. There will never be a time, I suppose, when there will not be two or more political parties represented in this body, and the Chief Executive is bound to be the head of some party so that any bill of this nature will always lead to more or less partisan debate as it has today. Some day Congress will have to act. It ought not to delay doing its part. This bill is before it today, and it ought to be passed.

If the executive departments are ever to be reorganized some one individual, will have to do it because there are always going to be differences of opinion about what should be done. The Chief Executive by virtue of the office which he occupies is the one individual to do the job and he must have a good deal of strength of character and great determination to do it. He will need to take the bit in his mouth, so to speak, to do it, because members of his own official family, as well as others, will strenuously oppose any proposed reorganization which will seriously disarrange their departments. The President will have to resist strong opposition from many sources in order to accomplish any worth-while results even after the passage of this legislation.

Earlier in the session, after the report of the Brownlow committee, I made a talk opposing the recommendation of that committee to put the independent establishments, including the Interstate Commerce Commission, into some department presided over by a member of the Cabinet.

I expressed the hope then that the reorganization committees of the House and Senate would not follow that recommendation of the Brownlow committee and that I would be able to support the legislation this reorganization committee finally reported. The hope expressed at that time has come true and is realized in this bill. The bill reported by the committee is so much better than I feared it would be that I am pleased to take the floor and support it. [Applause.] I congratulate the committee on the bill as a whole and especially upon that part of it which expressly provides that the 12 independent commissions enumerated in the bill shall be left as they are except on the budgetary matter.

I may say, perhaps parenthetically, that it seems to me the reorganization committee got very little help from the report of the Brownlow committee. I am pleased to see that it has ignored the report of that committee as much as it has.

May I say to my Republican friends and others who have expressed alarm over the power which this bill gives to the Chief Executive that I do not read the bill as they do. As I read it, it gives him no affirmative power as far as increasing the jurisdiction or scope of the work of any existing agency is concerned. It gives him an opportunity to limit the power and work, but not to enlarge them. The President is authorized to transfer, consolidate, or abolish executive agencies, but not to enlarge their functions. In addition to that, of course, every agency is limited by the amount of the appropriation for it. It cannot carry on without money. All appropriation legislation fixes the limitation upon the activities of the departments. This bill is similar to legislation passed during the Hoover administration. I supported it then and I support it now. [Applause.]

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of the time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. DITTER].

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, whenever our good friend and distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON] believes there is any possible attack being made upon the Democratic administration, he resorts to one thing. He delights to go into the Well of the House and, even with his gestures, try to impress upon the Members and the gallery the sorry conditions which he alleges prevailed in 1932. He delights in picturing graphically all those awful conditions of 1932. He tried to answer our distinguished friend from Missouri today by challenging some of the votes on the Republican side. I was not a Member of this body in those days, so probably I can be bold enough to step out without the chance of the challenge applying to me, but I am wondering whether we cannot bring a challenge back to him, too.

This bill is primarily a matter of good faith. You will have neither economy in administration nor efficiency in administration, no matter how carefully you draw laws, unless there is a real purpose, unless there is an honest desire, unless there is a conscientious willingness on the part of those who are to administer such laws to effect economies in government. Since the present majority is responsible for this legislation, I am wondering why it has not brought into this bill a part of the program the distinguished gentleman's party and the leaders of his party advocated in 1932. I am thinking of the combining of the Departments of War and Navy into a national defense organization or bureau or department. I throw out the challenge to the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky and to his party that no less a personage than our late lovable, honored, and revered Speaker on that occasion urged that there be a combination of these two activities into one.

Here a golden opportunity presents itself. Instead of the creation of an entirely new department, instead of the creation of a department of welfare, adding on one new department with all the attendant retinue of favored sons of the Democratic group, why have you not come in here with a bill stating that you are going to effect some real, honest-to-God economies? Why not some show of sincerity? Instead of doing some shadow boxing and putting up a sham about what you are going to do, why have you not brought in a program by which you could save 20 percent in the administration of these two departments, according to our late distinguished Speaker?

Mr. Chairman, as I have said, this whole problem is primarily one of good faith. Efficiency and economy are said to be the goals toward which this reorganization program is directed, but I contend that the sincerity of purpose in trying to reach them can best be determined by an examination of the conduct of the present administration in the entire field of governmental agencies. What have you done thus far? What is the New Deal record? Has it increased or has it decreased the expense of government? You know your record. It rises up today to haunt and shame you. You have piled bureau upon bureau and commission upon commission with a zeal and determination, yea, Mr. Chairman, with a frenzy one might say, which would almost put to shame the ambitions of the builders of the Tower of Babel. And, right in point, there has not been a confusion of tongues, but there has been a babel of letters, a confusion of the alphabet, as these alphabetical agencies, conceived, nurtured and wet-nursed by the New Deal have lustily cried for power and pork. I repeat, it is not legislation primarily we need, it is an evidence of sincerity and good faith that the American taxpayer is anxiously and eagerly anticipating. Hope springs eternal. In spite of the disappointments which it has experienced in the New Deal's promises of economy, it is still hopeful. What it wants is actions, not words. And there is no assurance whatever that the present bill will effect one penny of saving. Personally, I fear the reverse may be the result.

I should like to support a program of reorganization, and would do so were there any reasonable assurances that reorganization would be real and substantial, that it would have the spirit of economy and efficiency about it. But I can only estimate and gage the probable results of this gesture by our experience of the past 4 years in the wild orgy of spending and wasting of public funds indulged in by the New Deal. That, I submit, Mr. Chairman, is the only guide a reasonable man can follow—the experiences of the past to determine a future possibility—and when the present administration evidences a real desire, an honest purpose, a sincere endeavor to economize, I will join with it in supporting a program of reorganization as is now suggested.

There comes to my mind the message of the President when he suggested the reorganization of the executive departments. In that message he declared:

> We can prove to the world that American government is both democratic and effective.

That sentence means much. But, as we contemplate the impotency of government, as we recall the complete collapse of governmental agencies as the recent reign of terror spread throughout the industrial cities, as we remember the refusal of the administration to be assertive and active for the maintenance of law and order and the protection of the lives and property of the workingmen of the country, we are forced to question the effectiveness of which the President spoke. And I fear that the impotency which was so manifested in that crisis will be characteristic of the impotency of economical administration under this reorganization bill.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DITTER. I have only 5 minutes.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I was interested to know whether the gentleman would support such a measure.

Mr. DITTER. I shall not only support it, but I will join with the gentleman from Kentucky in bringing about such a result.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I am already on record in favor of it, 10 or 12 years ago in the Committee on Military Affairs, and also in 1932 when the matter was before the House.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. MEAD].

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Chairman, this is a bill for the purpose of permitting a regrouping and coordination of agencies of government, for the purpose of bringing agencies of government under budgetary control, and it creates a department of welfare.

These are the three principal features of the bill. Now, this is what it does not do: It does not authorize the reduction of the salaries of Government workers. It will not permit the elimination of their vacations; it will not authorize furloughs or cause reductions in veterans' allowances. It does not mean that W. P. A. or any other temporary agency will be made a permanent arm of the Government unless at a later date we say so. It will not give to this new department any authority to expand the law with respect to education or health or labor or any other activity unless at a later date Congress imposes such duty upon the department.

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a brief question?

Mr. MEAD. I am sorry; I have only a few minutes, and I want to finish my statement first.

There has been a great deal of talk today about economy, about the failure of the bill that was passed in the Hoover administration and that passed in the early days of the Roosevelt administration. I am for economy, but we realized anything but economy at that time, and the trouble was not with the law.

It is not, in my judgment, the duty or the function of government to economize or to join in a widespread deflationary movement when depression is at its height. That would be following the example of business and would make bad matters worse. The administration learned that early in its efforts to restore economic order, and therefore it looked for a return to prosperity rather than for a futile and stupid balancing of the Budget at that time. The Government cannot balance its Budget when depression is upon us. It must revive industry and relieve suffering.

Today the Government can, with reason and logic, attempt to balance the Budget. It is in order now, because the period of deflation and depression is over and with this law we can prepare for an efficient and economical administration of the various branches and arms of the Government looking toward such a salutary result.

Mr. Chairman, a great deal has been said here today about dictatorship and bureaucracy, but let me say to you that this bill comes before the House after great and prolonged study by some of the best experts on government in the country. The Congress of the United States on a number of occasions has studied this subject. The President's committee has given it unusual thought, the committee headed by Senator Byrd has delved deeply into the subject, the House committee headed by the late lamented Representative Buchanan, of Texas, went deeply into the question and now our committee has given it prolonged study. In my judgment, this is mature legislation and it is essential to the well-being of the Government. It is following a world trend, it is following the business trend, it is following the trend of the forward-looking State governments of the United States. In my State, during the administration of Governor Smith, we had 183 agencies of government. As a result of a study and an effort to bring about efficiency and cooperation of government, under legislation of this character we reduced the number to 18 departments, and today the State is more efficiently operated than it was prior to that time.

Government all over the world, since the termination of the World War and the coming of this complex machine age, has been struggling for effectiveness and efficiency, but, unfortunately, in other parts of the world they have set up dictatorships, while here in our country we are the real bulwark of democratic governments. We have retained all the privileges and prerogatives inherent in our form of government, and the Congress of the United States is not only a real representative body, but it is the determining element in our country. Look all over the world, if you will, even in England, and you will find that as they drifted toward concentrated and centralized government they took the right of veto away from their King. Unmolested by a written constitution or by a supreme court, similar to the judicial body we have, they pass their legislation and it becomes part of their constitution. Even the power of the House of Lords has been curtailed and, therefore, the House of Commons in England is really the determining power in that land.

This talk of dictatorship has no place here. We retain every parliamentary function that was ever ours, and we retain it in this bill. We proscribe the authority of the President. It is only about 50 percent of the power that was entrusted to President Hoover. We set up a procedure that will give us order and an orderly grouping of agencies of government. Take your Congressional Directory and follow along with me, and you will find that under the heading of "Treasury Department", that at once recommends itself as a department that has to do with the financial activities of the Nation, they have there a bureau that pertains to alcohol; narcotics; to the public health; it has a National Institute of Health; it has the Coast Guard; it has a Procurement or Construction Division; and, likewise, it has a Federal Board for Hospitalization. Then we have in the Interior Department, a department that pertains to land, public parks, mines, and reclamation. It has the Office of Education, the Federal Board for Vocational Training, an insane asylum, a hospital, and a university. It is high time that we make it possible for a President from whom we can expect efficiency in government to exercise the proper means to bring about that efficiency. The reason that President Hoover failed in his regrouping of Federal departments was that he had no proper place to place them. We give the President a department in which to make a grouping of various agencies possible. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired. All time has expired, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.,

TITLE I—REORGANIZATION

SECTION 1. (a) Title IV of part II of the Legislative Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1933, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 5, secs. 124–132), is hereby reenacted and is amended in the following respects:

(1) Section 401, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 5, sec. 124), is amended by striking out the first paragraph and the words "Accordingly, the" in the second paragraph and inserting in lieu thereof the word "The";

(2) Section 402, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 5, sec. 125), is amended by inserting after the word "establishment," the words "corporation owned or controlled by the United States," and by changing the period at the end of the section to a comma and inserting thereafter the following: "but shall not include, except as to the function of preparing estimates of appropriations, the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, the Federal Power Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Communications Commission, the National Labor Relations Board, the National Bituminous Coal Commission, the United States Maritime Commission, the Engineer Corps of the United States Army, the Coast Guard, the General Accounting Office, and the United States Tariff Commission.";

(3) Section 409, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 5, sec. 132), is stricken out.

(b) No Executive order issued by the President under the authority of subsection (a) of this section shall become effective unless transmitted to the Congress within 2 years from the date of the enactment of this act.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RANKIN: Page 2, line 15, after the word "Board" and after the comma, insert "Rural Electrification Administration" and a comma.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment comes too late.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, what I am trying to do here is to except from this reorganization the Rural Electrification Administration. There is no reason why you should except the Labor Relations Board, the Federal Power Commission, and other such agencies, and at the same time not except the one organization in this Government that is doing more for the American farmer than any other instrumentality that we have created since this administration has been in power.

This amendment does not add to or take from the powers of the Rural Electrification Administration, but it guarantees that it shall remain in its present status. We created it as an independent organization to carry on the great work it is now performing and not have it made into a bureau or a subbureau of some department of the Government that might not be in sympathy with the work it is now doing.

I do not hesitate to say that under the leadership of John M. Carmody the Rural Electrification Administration has made greater strides within the last 6 months and has grown more in the hearts of the American farmers than any other organization connected with this Government. I am not willing to see this great organization made into a bureau of some department of the Government that might not be in sympathy with its present program if I can prevent it. I want to see it continue as it is today, in order that it may continue the work it is now doing of making the American farm home more livable, more attractive, more pleasant, and more convenient for the people who till the soil.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. Yes.

Mr. McCLELLAN. Does the gentleman apprehend that if it is not exempted the President will interfere with it in some way?

Mr. RANKIN. I do not know what the object of this bill is.

Mr. McCLELLAN. That is what I have been trying to find out.

Mr. RANKIN. I will say to the gentleman from Arkansas that I know how the President feels about rural electrification. I believe I know as much about his sentiments on that proposition as any other man in the House. I know how he feels toward this organization, but we must remember that the President is only one man. He must get advice from some of his subordinates, and there are some of his subordinates whose advice I would not want to take on rural electrification, and there are some subordinates I should regret to see get control of the Rural Electrification Administration.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RANKIN. No. I cannot yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. MAY. But I want to agree with the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. RANKIN. Well, that shakes my faith in my position a little, but I will yield. [Laughter.]

Mr. MAY. I want to agree with the gentleman when he said he did not know just what this bill meant.

Mr. RANKIN. O Mr. Chairman, with that innocuous concession——

Mr. MAY. And to call attention to the fact that the gentleman from New York has just said——

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, I cannot yield further.

I am fighting for the American farmer, the American farm men and women, the people who live in the rural sections, and I believe the best thing we can do is to adopt this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

In the first place, Mr. Chairman, this amendment has nothing to do with the American farmer or American farm women or anything of that order. This and other similar amendments is a test on this measure, Mr. Chairman. Rural electrification was set up by the present Executive as a temporary agency, and by act of Congress several months ago was made permanent. It is purely an administrative agency under the executive department, and it does not in any way, shape, or form come within the purview of the exemptions which we have made in that section and that title.

Mr. RANKIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

Mr. WARREN. Yes; I yield.

Mr. RANKIN. The Rural Electrification Administration was created by statute, by act of Congress approved May 20, 1936. It is not merely an administrative creation.

Mr. WARREN. I have just told the gentleman from Mississippi that it was originally set up as an emergency agency and then made permanent by statute. But it is an administrative agency under the executive department, and it does not come within the purview of the exemptions we have put in there. I want to be entirely frank with the Committee, and say to those who desire to see this bill pass, to those who desire it to accomplish what we hope it will accomplish, if we exempt one administrative agency, then, personally, I do not see any reason why every single one in the Government should not be exempted.

Everyone knows that the present Executive considers rural electrification as one of his star propositions during this administration. Certainly he is not going to lay profane hands upon it and destroy it. The gentleman from Mississippi, a strong friend of rural electrification, must know that; but there is no reason on the face of the earth why rural electrification should not be put under some cabinet head and made accountable to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. RANKIN].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed out of order for 3 minutes and donate the other 2 minutes to the clock.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

Mr. WARREN. Reserving the right to object—I shall not object in this one instance, but after that I will object to anyone proceeding out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

JUSTICE HUGO L. BLACK

Mr. MARTIN of Colorado. Mr. Chairman, a majority Member of this body is quoted in the public press as saying that the nomination of Senator HUGO L. BLACK to the Supreme Court "is the worst insult that has yet been given this Nation." A minority Member on the floor this afternoon took occasion to reflect on that appointment and on the President for making it.

Mr. Chairman, I would remind those persons and interests who are criticizing in public and cursing in private the nomination of Senator HUGO L. BLACK to the Supreme Court, that his case exactly parallels that of Justice Brandeis. When Justice Brandeis was appointed to the Supreme Court by Woodrow Wilson, he was considered and denounced as tainted with anarchistic philosophies. It was a terrible jolt to Wall Street. Wall Street saw the pillars crumbling. But long since, when it became necessary to remind the country that the Supreme Court, too, is respectable, Justice Brandeis has been put in as exhibit A.

During the past 40 years the names of three men on the Supreme Court have preserved that institution from falling into serious disfavor. These men were Harlan, Holmes, and Brandeis. The corporations, it is true, got the decisions, but the people got the dissenting opinions. The corporations ought to thank their stars for the dissenting opinions. The people ate them for bread. The dissenting opinions appeased the hunger of the people and fostered hope.

When it is necessary to come to the rescue of the Supreme Court, nobody ever mentions Shiras, Peckham, Van Devanter, Butler, Sutherland, McReynolds. It is always Harlan, Holmes, and Brandeis, who seldom got their names on the long end of the 5-to-4 decisions.

It is my wish for Justice BLACK that on the Supreme Court he may fulfill the brilliant promise of his senatorial career as a great lawyer and as a progressive and courageous statesman, whose vision is adjusted to the trends and needs of the times; that he may add his name to the small but illustrious list of men who have written the dissenting opinions; but that he may write the majority opinions. [Applause.]

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MOTT: Page 2, line 19, after the word "Commission", insert a comma and the words "the Forestry Service in the Department of Agriculture."

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to include in the list of exempted agencies the Forestry Service of the Department of Agriculture. I mentioned this in connection with my general remarks on the bill a few moments ago, and I wish now to go a little more into detail.

Let me say in the first place that those who are familiar with the subject know that a controversy over the administration of the national forests has been going on for years, long prior to the incoming of this administration, between the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture. Those familiar with the situation know that if this bill is passed without the Forestry Service being exempted that the Forestry Service will be passed over to the Interior Department.

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOTT. My time is too short; I am sorry I cannot yield.

This is a question so controversial and so important to the States—to every State in the Union—that the Congress itself certainly should have an opportunity to decide the question for itself. A bill proposing the transfer of the Forestry Service from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of the Interior is before a committee of the Senate at the present time and I believe a like bill is also before a committee of the House. Such a bill was before the House committee at the last session. So within a reasonable time in the near future this matter will come before the Congress for consideration and disposal. It is a matter which concerns the Congress and which is exclusively in the jurisdiction of the Congress. Why, I ask, should we tell the President to decide it for us?

The national forests of the United States, comprising millions of acres, and constituting the greatest single source of timber supply in the United States, if not in the world, are located in almost every State of the Union. In many of the great timber States the national forests comprise the main source of timber supply. In my own State, for example, and I think also in the State of Washington, the pay roll of the timber industry comprises more than 60 percent of the entire industrial pay roll of those States. It is one of the most important subjects to the timber-producing States that could possibly come before the Congress.

This vast domain for 40 years has been administered by the Department of Agriculture under a conservation philosophy unique in the history of this country, and which was evolved and developed and perfected by the Department of Agriculture. That Department has a trained force of thousands of men, the most expert in their line in the world, who have been responsible for making this timber supply the important thing that it is in every State in the Union. The Department to which these forests will be transferred if this bill becomes law has no experience and it has never exhibited any interest in the forestry philosophy and practices which are responsible for the national forests today.

Whether this transfer is to be made or not should be for this Congress to decide. We have no right to shirk our responsibility, and we ought to retain it by including the Forest Service among the governmental agencies exempted from the operation of the bill.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 2 additional minutes.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I want to be entirely courteous and fair. We have had considerable general debate, and I shall have to object to extensions under the 5-minute rule, including requests from members of the committee. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER] spoke a few moments ago in reference to propaganda that might develop as a result of the creation of the Department of Public Welfare. I hold in my hand a sample of the propaganda that started 2 days after the President's message came to the Congress, propaganda by the forestry organization. They called meetings here in Washington. Here are photostatic copies of letters that went out. They are the ones who bore down upon your State organizations to send to you and to me telegrams and letters opposing the President's campaign.

The gentleman from Oregon states that the Forest Service is going to be transferred. How does he know? How does he know whether it is going to be transferred or not? The President did not inform our committee, and surely he did not so advise the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. MOTT. I will answer the gentleman's question directly, how I know.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I refuse to yield.

The activities should be consolidated somewhere, no matter where, for 14 separate agencies of the Government today are handling forest lands.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I refuse to yield. Let me show you how the administration of our forests is scattered:

First. The National Forest Service, Department of Agriculture, administers 174,198,902 acres of land, of which about 70 percent is wooded.

Second. The National Park Service, Interior Department, administers 15,491,671 acres, of which 6,637,881 are forested and under the management of a branch of forestry.

Third. The Office of Indian Affairs, Interior Department, has a Division of Forestry and Grazing. Under this division there are 13,927,316 acres of wooded land.

Fourth. The Civilian Conservation Corps, an independent agency, administers camps for forest and other conservation work, with the cooperation of the Forest Service, the Park Service, the Indian Office, and the United States Army.

Fifth. The Quartermaster Corps, United States Army, administers areas of forest land on military reservations (examples are Fort Meade and Fort Belvoir, near Washington).

Sixth. The Resettlement Administration, Agriculture, through the purchase of submarginal lands, has come into the administration of both wooded and submarginal agricultural areas.

Seventh. The Biological Survey, Department of Agriculture, administers a total of 11,492,165 acres, of which less than 1 percent is in forest land.

Eighth. The Soil Conservation Service, Department of Agriculture, has a section on Woodland Management, under the Division of Conservation Operations.

Ninth. The National Arboretum, here in Washington, under the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, is concerned with research on plants and forest matters.

Tenth. The Tennessee Valley Authority has a forestry division with 130 employees, with a current budget of $521,000.

Eleventh. The Grazing Division, Interior Department, and, twelfth, the Public Land Office, administer approximately 110,000,000 acres of public lands, much of which is similar to the lands contained in the national forests and parks, which also are used for grazing.

Thirteenth. The Extension Service, Agriculture, in cooperation with the States, carries on educational work relating to the promotion of farm forests and wood lots.

Fourteenth. The R. F. C. has authority to make loans for the protection and development of private forests.

In addition many other bureaus and divisions carry on activities affecting public and private forests. Some of these are: Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, Bureau of Plant Industry, Bureau of Public Roads, Engineer Corps, Federal Power Commission, Bureau of Reclamation, Works Progress Administration, and others.

Forestry activities at present are spread over 14 separate agencies of the Government, listed above. In addition, a large number of other agencies are administering activities more or less closely related to forestry. In many the duplication and overlapping is more or less unavoidable and should not be the occasion for any concern, but in other cases there is wasteful duplication and overlapping, leading to internal strife and conflict. There are many instances of national forest lands divided into two parts by an imaginary line; on one side is a national forest, on the other a national park, each with an entirely separate force, with separate equipment, and to some extent with conflicting policies and plans. Millions of acres of land are administered for grazing by the Forestry Service, while other millions of acres are administered by the Grazing Division of Interior. Now Resettlement Administration is acquiring large bodies of grazing lands and the Office of Indian Affairs also administers some grazing lands.

All of this goes to show the need for a careful consideration of the administrative organization of the Government, and the vesting of adequate authority and responsibility in the President to consolidate identical or similar activities where this can be done without other unfavorable results. If the forestry activities, including grazing and other parts of forest administration, were exempted, it is easy to see how any real reorganization would be defeated.

Every head of an agency of the Government thinks that his activity is the most important function of the Government, and that it should be left alone where it is. This is readily understood. They all think that reorganization is a fine thing, provided they are given a special exemption, though most of them can tell you of two or three activities which ought to be transferred to them. If the numerous requests for exemption are granted, no power at all will be granted to the President and no reorganization can be made. In the 1933 act no exemption whatever was made. We have gone quite a ways here in trimming the authority granted to the President. If we open the door, all of the independent agencies will want to come in for an excepted position. Those who are most insistent are the ones which most fear some reorganization, and are probably the very ones which should be reorganized.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment should be defeated. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. MOTT].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MOTT) there were—ayes 34, noes 130.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. RAMSPECK: Page 2, line 18, after the comma following the word "office", insert "the Civil Service Commission."

Mr. RAMSPECK. Mr. Chairman, I am not offering this amendment for the same reason the other amendments were offered, which was to exempt certain bureaus from the right of the President to reorganize.

Mr. Chairman, the President's message dealt with four different subject matters, as I recall it. One of them specifically treated was the Civil Service Commission, for which he outlined a very definite program of reorganization, and this committee has now pending before it a definite bill, under the leadership of the gentleman from New York [Mr. MEAD]. If I am wrong, I ask to be corrected now. Therefore, it seems to me it is absolutely foolish for this committee to vote general authority to the President to abolish the Civil Service Commission or to reorganize it, or to abolish its functions, when the very committee that brings in this bill is planning within a few days to bring in another bill which will deal solely with the subject matter I am now discussing, to wit, the Civil Service Commission. Therefore, I think it ought to be taken out of this bill; otherwise we are going to be in the position of considering a separate bill for the Civil Service Commission within a few days and leaving in the hands of the President under this authority the right to change that bill right after we have acted on it.

Mr. Chairman, I cannot see any reason why the Civil Service Commission should be included in this general authority, when the committee which brought in this bill is planning to bring in a separate bill creating a civil service administrator and abolishing the Civil Service Commission. In that bill we will deal definitely with the question of the Commission and the rights of the employees of this great Government of ours which are controlled by that body.

Mr. Chairman, I hope the committee will accept the amendment because it is in line with the exemptions in this language involving the General Accounting Office which it is expected will be dealt with by a separate bill.

Mr. MEAD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, the Civil Service Commission is an executive agency and, as such, is purely an arm of the Executive. The subcommittee of which I am chairman has in preparation a bill that deals with this particular subject. We have in mind in that bill the establishment of a board, which will consider the policy of this particular agency. There will be also a civil-service administrator, and, as I see it, from the character of the bill, there will be no consolidation or grouping of the civil service with any other department of the Government. We have a separate proposal that I hope will be placed before the House within a few days dealing with this general subject. If it is the desire of the House at that time to exempt the Civil Service Commission and set it up as an entity of its own, why, of course, that will be acceptable to the committee if it is the will of the majority of the membership. In view of the fact that we, both in our committee and now in the Committee of the Whole, have established a precedent excluding these purely executive agencies from inclusion in this bill, and for the further reason we will have a bill dealing with the Civil Service Commission before us in a few days, I trust the House will maintain a consistent position and in doing so vote down this and similar amendments.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. RAMSPECK].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 2, after line 21, insert the following:

"(4) Section 407, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 5, sec. 130), is amended by changing the period at the end of the section to a colon and adding the following: 'Provided, however, That if any committee of either the Senate or House having jurisdiction of legislation relating to any of the executive agencies proposed to be regrouped, consolidated, transferred, or abolished, or relating to any of the functions of any such agency, shall report a concurrent resolution within said period of 60 days, relating to said Executive order, or any part thereof, then further proceedings under said Executive order as to the matter covered by said concurrent resolution shall be stayed unless and until said concurrent resolution is finally rejected by the Congress.'"

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to give effect to section 407 of the bill. Without this amendment the section is meaningless. Section 407 does not appear in the text of the bill but appears in the report. It provides that when the Executive shall have regrouped or consolidated or transferred or abolished agencies and shall have decided upon what he is going to do, he shall submit that Executive order to the Congress while in session. It is provided further that the Executive order shall not become effective until after the expiration of 60 calendar days after such transmission unless Congress shall by law provide for an earlier effective date.

If an amendment such as I propose is not accepted, the submission of the order to Congress is a meaningless gesture. Congress can do nothing except accelerate the action of the Executive. What I am suggesting is that Congress shall have power to do that which evidently section 407 intends. If any committee having jurisdiction of the subject shall decide that matter should not go into effect, and should report a concurrent resolution, then that portion of the order will be stayed until the matter is heard. If you gentlemen have ever attempted to get a hearing on a bill, you will know that it is necessary to get the approval of the Committee on Rules. Unless the majority of the Committee on Rules within that period of 60 days shall give you the right to have your resolution heard, you are absolutely powerless. The 60 days pass and the Executive order goes into effect. This will be a lever over the Rules Committee to grant a rule on that resolution when it is reported to Congress to bring the matter to a hearing. My amendment gives the Congress the right to exercise the power that evidently was intended by section 407.

In other words, it simply carries out and makes effective the power supposed to be given by this bill. Without my amendment this portion of the bill is an idle gesture. The President might just as well put the order into effect while Congress is in recess, because you have no power to do anything. If you report a resolution, you cannot do anything so long as a majority of the Committee on Rules refuses to give you a rule within the 60 days.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I do not know that the Committee on Rules of the House of Representatives needs to have a club held over its head to cause it to report out a rule for the consideration of reorganization legislation which will maintain the integrity and the dignity of the House of Representatives. If I heard correctly the statement of my friend, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND] he stated this provision would be a lever to force consideration by the Committee on Rules and to force it to report legislation coming from a committee of the House or the Senate having jurisdiction of matters relating to reorganization.

Mr. BLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. BLAND. The reason is that there is a 60-day limitation.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I understand; but if there is one committee in the House which fights to maintain the responsibility of the House, it seems to me it is the Committee on Rules.

I submit that the language involved herein, section 407, which we are reenacting, is the identical language contained in the resolution passed in 1933 with respect to the power given in the Reorganization Act at that time.

I submit that any legislation looking toward reorganization considered by the select committee of either House or Senate is privileged and no rule is required. It could be reported any time and taken up in House or Senate as privileged matter without a rule.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I ask that this amendment be defeated.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND].

Mr. CALDWELL. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for debate on the pending amendment has expired. The Chair will dispose of this amendment first.

The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BLAND].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. CALDWELL) there were—ayes 63, noes 104.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read, as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BOILEAU: Page 2, after line 25, insert the following new section:

"SEC. 2. (a) There is hereby established at the seat of government an executive department to be known as the Department of National Defense, at the head of which shall be a Secretary of National Defense, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall receive the same compensation as other heads of executive departments.

"(b) There shall be in the Department of National Defense three Assistant Secretaries, to be appointed by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Such Assistant Secretaries shall receive compensation at the rate of $10,000 per annum. They shall be known, respectively, as the Assistant Secretary for the land forces, the Assistant Secretary for the naval forces, and the Assistant Secretary for the air forces. Each Assistant Secretary shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by the Secretary or required by law, and, so far as practicable in the administration of the Department of National Defense, each such Secretary shall, under the general direction of the Secretary of National Defense, have charge of the administration of that branch of the national defense indicated by his title.

"(c) Section 158 of the Revised Statutes is amended to include the Department of National Defense, and the provisions of title IV of the Revised Statutes, as now or hereafter amended, shall be applicable to the Department.

"TRANSFER OF WAR AND NAVY DEPARTMENTS AND COORDINATION OF ACTIVITIES

"SEC. 3. (a) The Department of War and the Department of the Navy, and all that pertains thereto, are transferred to the Department of National Defense, and the Department of War and the Department of the Navy shall cease to exist as separate executive departments.

"(b) The offices of Secretary of War, Secretary of the Navy, Assistant Secretaries of War, and Assistant Secretaries of the Navy are abolished, and the functions, powers, and duties vested in and imposed upon such officers are hereby vested in and imposed upon the Secretary of National Defense.

"SEC. 4. The Secretary of National Defense is authorized, for the purpose of perfecting the organization and coordinating the activities of the Department of National Defense, for the purpose of eliminating duplications, obsolete activities, aggressive warfare agencies, and unnecessary expense, and for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the declaration of policy set forth in section 1 of this act—

"(a) To consolidate, eliminate, or redistribute the functions of offices, bureaus, agencies, branches, and organizations, to create new ones, and fix the powers, duties, and functions of their executive heads;

"(b) To take such other action, consistent with the provisions of this act, as he may deem necessary; and

"(c) To recommend to Congress from time to time such legislation as he deems necessary to perfect such organization and coordination.

"MISCELLANEOUS

"SEC. 5. (a) The Secretary of National Defense shall cause a seal of office to be made for the Department, of such device as the President shall approve, and judicial notice shall be taken thereof.

"(b) The administration of the Department of National Defense shall be governed by the laws in force with respect to the Department of War and the Department of the Navy at the time of their transfer under this act, insofar as such laws are not inconsistent with the provisions of this act and are not inapplicable.

"(c) All orders, rules, regulations, and permits or other privileges made, issued, or granted by or in respect of the Department of War or the Department of the Navy, and in effect at the time of the transfer of such Departments under this act, shall continue in effect to the same extent as if such transfer had not occurred until modified, superseded, or repealed.

"(d) All unexpended appropriations in respect of the Department of War or the Department of the Navy shall be available for expenditure by the Department of National Defense and shall be treated as if the Department had been originally named in the laws making the appropriations.

"TIME OF TAKING EFFECT

"SEC. 6. This act shall take effect upon its enactment, except that sections 3 to 5, inclusive, shall take effect when the Secretary of National Defense and the Assistant Secretaries of National Defense have taken office."

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the point of order comes too late.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order comes too late. The Clerk had finished the reading of the amendment, the gentleman from Wisconsin has started his statement, and no one else was on his feet seeking recognition.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, may I have the attention of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. FRED M. VINSON]? He was here a moment ago. I hope he will be here to help us on this amendment. I do not see him now. I know he must be temporarily absent, because this concerns a matter in which a few moments ago he expressed a genuine interest, stating that for the last 12 years he has been advocating the consolidation of the Army and Navy into one department, the Department of National Defense. This is exactly what this amendment does. I am pleased that my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, is here on the floor. I am sure he will do all he can to bring about the adoption of this amendment, because it is in accord with his hopes.

I see the gentleman from Kentucky is here now. May I call his attention to the fact that I have an amendment here to carry out the purpose expressed a short time ago by the gentleman of consolidating the Army and Navy into one department, the Department of National Defense.

May I say to the Members of the House, and particularly the minority Members, that this amendment is a part of a bill I have introduced for the past 2 years, known as H. R. 1488. There are some other provisions in the bill which I know may be objectionable to many of you, but the part of the bill I have here now as an amendment is practically identical with the language of a bill introduced by the late lamented Speaker Byrns. This amendment has been drawn up by the drafting service of the House, and is well prepared. I take no pride of authorship in this much of the bill.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. I yield to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. I want to know what changes there are between this bill and the other bill the gentleman mentioned.

Mr. BOILEAU. I think I can say with absolute certainty, and I am not trying to deceive the House, that the only change is in the name, in calling it the Department of National Defense. I think we have accepted that bill 100 percent in so much of the bill as I am offering here now as an amendment. If the statement I am making is in error, I may say that I believe the bills are substantially the same.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. It is a very serious matter as to exactly what the bill does.

Mr. BOILEAU. I will tell the gentleman what it does. It provides for a Department of National Defense. It consolidates the work of the War Department and the Navy Department, and consolidates the appropriations. It provides for the creation of an Assistant Secretary for the Navy, an Assistant Secretary for the land forces, and an Assistant Secretary for the Air Corps. In that respect it might be somewhat different from the original Byrns bill, but I do not think so.

This bill is one that I am sure will appeal to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON]. I know he wants it, because it is exactly what he has been advocating for 12 years.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. The trouble is the gentleman from Kentucky cannot know whether it is what he has been advocating or not, because the gentleman from Wisconsin is not certain about what is in it.

Mr. BOILEAU. I can tell the gentleman what is in the amendment, and I have explained just what it does, but as compared with the Byrns bill I do not want to make any misstatement in comparing the amendment with that bill.

The amendment which I proposed consolidates the Army and the Navy into a department of national defense. It abolishes the present War and Navy Departments and creates the one department and also creates an assistant secretary for the land forces, an assistant secretary for the naval forces, and an assistant secretary for the air forces, all of whom shall be coordinated under the Secretary of National Defense, who shall supplant the two men who are now in the Cabinet, and he shall be a Cabinet officer with the same pay and rank and everything else.

Mr. MOTT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BOILEAU. I yield.

Mr. MOTT. To what committee was the gentleman's bill referred when it was introduced?

Mr. BOILEAU. It was referred to the Committee on Expenditures in Government Departments because it was introduced in this session just prior to the creation of this special committee; otherwise, it would have been referred to the special committee. However, this is a subject matter that no Member can claim ignorance about, because it is something that we all know about. If there is a single Member of this House who has not given thought to consolidating the Army and the Navy into one department he has been derelict in his duty.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. HEALEY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Wisconsin may proceed for 3 additional minutes.

Mr. WARREN. I must object to that, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. BEAM. Mr. Chairman, I am sure my good friend the gentleman from Wisconsin is utterly misinformed as to the philosophy of this bill.

Mr. BOILEAU. Of my bill? Will the gentleman yield on that?

Mr. BEAM. The bill which the gentleman from Wisconsin proposes as an amendment was defeated in the House 2 years ago and there has been no request by the President of the United States or any of the respective departments to consolidate these two branches of the Government at this particular time.

These are two distinct Cabinet officers and the intendment of the reorganization bill is not to consolidate these two major departments. Ample time should be taken and sufficient testimony heard by the respective committees of the House, on a matter so far reaching as the gentleman proposes in his amendment.

I may say there are four pages of printed matter in the amendment and before an intelligent vote could be taken by the House sufficient opportunity should be afforded for a complete and detailed study of the effect such a contemplated consolidation of the Army and Navy, would have on the country.

I hope, in view of all the facts, that the committee will overwhelmingly reject the amendment.

Mr. DITTER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word of the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will have to submit his amendment in writing at the desk.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BOILEAU. Is it necessary in offering a pro-forma amendment to have the amendment in writing? I want to know this as a guide for the rest of the session. Is it necessary in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to submit a pro-forma amendment in writing?

The CHAIRMAN. It is necessary when the Chair so rules, and the Chair so rules now.

Mr. BOILEAU. The Chair is going to have occasion to so rule later on.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BOILEAU) there were—ayes 51, noes 122.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE II—BUDGETARY CONTROL

SECTION 201. Section 2 of the Budget and Accounting Act, 1921 (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 31, sec. 2), is amended by inserting after the word "including", the words "any independent regulatory commission or board and."

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that title III, which comes next in the bill, be considered as read and open to amendment to any part of it, and that it be printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I object.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman reserve his objection?

Mr. BOILEAU. Certainly.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, the object of this request on the part of the gentleman from North Carolina is so that we may have one vote on a motion to strike out the whole title, and that anyone may have an opportunity to offer any amendment he may see fit. Otherwise, if I wanted to strike out that whole title, I would have to offer an amendment to each section. With that explanation would the gentleman be willing to withdraw his objection?

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. TABER. Would the gentleman from North Carolina also incorporate in that request that it may be possible to offer an amendment to strike out the title?

Mr. WARREN. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Title III is as follows:

TITLE III—THE DEPARTMENT OF WELFARE

SECTION 301. There shall be at the seat of government an executive department to be known as the Department of Welfare, and a Secretary of Welfare, who shall be the head thereof, and shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and have a tenure of office like that of the heads of the other executive departments. Section 158 of the Revised Statutes, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 5, sec. 1), is amended to include such Department and the provisions of title IV of the Revised Statutes, including all acts amendatory and supplementary thereto, shall be applicable to such Department.

SEC. 302. There shall be in the Department of Welfare an Under Secretary of Welfare and two Assistant Secretaries of Welfare who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and a Solicitor, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of Welfare, and all of whom shall exercise such functions as may be prescribed by the Secretary of Welfare or required by law.

SEC. 303. The Secretary of Welfare shall promote the public health, safety, and sanitation; the protection of the consumer; the cause of education; the relief of unemployment and of the hardship and suffering caused thereby; the relief of the needy and distressed; the assistance and benefits of the aged and the relief and vocational rehabilitation of the physically disabled; and in general shall coordinate and promote public health, education, and welfare activities.

SEC. 304. The Secretary of Welfare shall cause a seal of office to be made for his Department, of such device as the President shall approve, and judicial notice shall be taken of such seal.

SEC. 305. The Secretary of Welfare shall annually, at the close of each fiscal year, make a report in writing to the Congress, giving an account of all money received and expended by him and his Department and describing the work done by the Department. He shall also from time to time make such special investigations and reports as he may be required to make by the President, or by the Congress, or as he himself may deem necessary.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: Page 3, line 6, to page 4, line 22, inclusive, strike out all of title III.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, personally I am in favor of title I of this bill. I believe that is the only way that you can get rid of some of these agencies. I hope something will be done, but I do not know. This idea, however, of creating a new department is a move in extravagance and consolidated propaganda, and the creation of new activities making them permanent is something that I cannot go along with. I call the attention of the House to four or five words from line 5 to line 7 on page 4. This creates as a permanent Federal activity the relief of unemployment, the relief of the needy and distress, the very thing that the President of the United States told us last fall he hoped the Federal Government would get out of as soon as it could. This is a proposition to create a new department which can have transferred to it activities costing the Government anywhere from two and a half to four billion dollars, and making a permanent charge upon the Government, and authorizing money to be appropriated therefor for permanent relief activities. I hope this House will vote down and throw out this section.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. MAY. As a matter of fact, title III of this bill is merely a wastebasket into which to throw all of the other emergencies and continue Federal relief.

Mr. TABER. And under that to create a propaganda organization the like of which this country has never seen, and which would be irresistible.

Mrs. ROGERS of Massachusetts. And would it not also mean that the Government would take over the education of the children of the country?

Mr. TABER. Of course. If this bill is passed with this section in it, it would be absolutely impossible to forbid the Federal Government from getting its fingers on every icta of education.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. I am very much interested in that and I would like to have the gentleman's views as to how that is so.

Mr. TABER. It would be authorized to take over all education and welfare activity. These education department fellows are always reaching out for more and more power.

Mr. FRED M. VINSON. Is not this true, that with reference to the cause of education the language in this act neither adds to nor takes away from any law now on the statute books?

Mr. TABER. That is correct as far as the actual transfer goes, but it creates this tremendous propaganda organization that will reach out in all directions and be uncontrollable.

Mr. PALMISANO. Is it not true that under this section the Capper-Reed Act that has been kicking around here for 30 years could be reenacted.

Mr. TABER. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. Yes; with pleasure.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Does not the gentleman believe that one propaganda agency would be less offensive than 25 that now exist?

Mr. COCHRAN. I was just going to speak on that subject. There are at the present time 25 welfare agencies scattered all over your Government. The purpose of this recommendation from the President's Committee is to bring them together.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. In just a moment. You have these agencies administered for the welfare of the people of the country. A number of them have come up during the depression. One does not know what the other is doing, and there would be absolutely no way for the President of the United States to find out.

A list of the welfare activities of the Government will demonstrate the extent, the permanence, and the absurd distribution of the existing welfare services of the Government. They have been listed in detail in a recent report of the Senate Select Committee to Investigate the Executive Agencies of the Government. The list follows:

In the field of labor:

The Bureau of Labor Statistics, the Women's Bureau, the Division of Labor Standards, the Conciliation Service, the Employment Service, the Unemployment Insurance Unit of the Social Security Board, the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

In the field of education:

The Office of Education, and Howard University, and the Columbia Institute for the Deaf; the Division of Vocational Education of the Office of Education (which division might also be placed in the field of labor).

In the field of public health:

The United States Public Health Service; Freedmen's Hospital, and the Government Hospital for the Insane.

In the field of relief:

The Social Security Board's work in the field of old-age assistance, old-age security insurance, and relief for the blind.

What remains of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

What remains of the Works Progress Administration after the emergency is over, especially its research and fact-finding agencies.

The overhead organization of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The National Youth Administration, or what remains of it.

In the field of child welfare:

The Children's Bureau including its work under the Social Security Act.

All the agencies enumerated above have interrelated activities and objectives. Most of them have intimate relationships with the States, including very generally the administration of grants-in-aid for welfare activities.

This list is not a list of activities which should be transferred to the new department. It was drawn up for the Senate committee as a statement of Agencies Concerned with Public Welfare. It obviously includes a number of activities which no President would think of transferring to a welfare department, and no Congress would permit. It does show, however, that there are more than 25 welfare activities at the present time, without counting emergency welfare and relief services scattered through 6 of the 10 departments, including such absurd allocations as Health to the Treasury, and Education to the Interior. It shows that the great majority of these welfare activities are permanent and are regularly spending over $130,000,000 annually, excluding emergency welfare expenditures; it shows that there is no logical place for them in the Government at the present time; and that the permanent welfare activities, therefore, cannot be represented properly in the Cabinet or brought together in any coordinated fashion. It is these glaring facts which justify and compel the creation of a new department to bring order out of this disorder and coordination and efficiency out of this chaos.

The recent establishment of the Social Security Board with its extensive, permanent responsibilities is the final step which makes it impossible to continue as we are now. Irrespective of the emergency agencies, therefore, a new department with Cabinet representation is now in order to deal with the central problem of public welfare.

PROTECTION OF THE CONSUMER

There are in the Federal Government three agencies which have been organized for the consumers' protection. They are: The Consumers' Project in the Department of Labor; the Consumers' Council in the Bituminous Coal Commission; the Consumers' Council in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Department of Agriculture.

If the Government is to successfully carry on this work, it must be consolidated under a single head and be placed in a department which does not have a primary responsibility to other economic groups whose interests are distinct from, or conflict with, the interests of the consumers. The heads of each of these agencies, I am informed, are in agreement that their activities should be combined to avoid duplication of effort and permit the coordination of consumers' services. The proposed Department of Welfare will deal with that portion of the general public whose welfare as consumers stands in greatest need of protection by the Federal Government. Consideration of consumers' interests will also be of considerable importance in the administration of many of the major activities of this Department. It is therefore made the duty of the Secretary of Welfare to protect and promote the interests of all consumers.

Mr. McCORMACK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. Yes.

Mr. McCORMACK. The gentleman from New York made reference to the use of the cause of education. My understanding is that this does not change existing laws.

Mr. COCHRAN. There is not a line in this bill that can, under any consideration, change the law. Not one. It does not add to nor take away from, as the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON] just said.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. MAY. The gentleman made the statement that the object of this bill was to bring all of these agencies together. Is it proposed to abolish any of them?

Mr. COCHRAN. Why certainly it is proposed to abolish certain activities and to put activities under one head. That one head will administer the law. The law itself is not repealed. This deals with administration.

Mr. MAY. Another member of your committee, the gentleman from New York, made the statement that it was to coordinate them. I think you will never accomplish economy until you abolish some of them.

Mr. COCHRAN. You will abolish some and you will consolidate others. Where there is duplication of effort you will bring them together. That is what the President desires this authority for.

Here is an opportunity to get all the welfare agencies under one head that should be under one control so that the President will know what is going on. What is the situation now? He has to take the word of the head of each of the independent agencies. They are duplicating their work and probably duplicating relief. What is the objection to bringing them together and placing them under one head? If that does not spell efficiency, what does it mean?

Mr. KNIFFIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I yield.

Mr. KNIFFIN. Referring to the inquiry made by the gentleman from Kentucky, paragraph (d), section 401, says "to reduce the number of such agencies by abolishing."

Mr. COCHRAN. I thank the gentleman from Ohio for his contribution.

Mr. Chairman, this amendment should be defeated. [Applause.]

I have a little historical statement that I am placing in the RECORD, as my time prevents me from reading it.

The origin of such departments as Agriculture, Labor, and Commerce is instructive in considering the creation at this time of a new department, the Department of Welfare.

The Department of Agriculture was set up in 1862 (12 Stat. 387) and was administered for 26 years by a Commissioner of Agriculture, who did not have a seat in the Cabinet. In 1889 the powers of the Department were enlarged and the Commissioner became a Secretary and a member of the Cabinet (25 Stat. 659).

The Department of Labor was first established in 1884 as the Bureau of Labor under the Interior Department. It then became an independent department, but without Cabinet rank. In 1903 it again became a bureau of the newly established Department of Commerce and Labor (32 Stat. 827). In 1913, when Commerce and Labor were divided, Labor became an independent department with Cabinet status (37 Stat. 736).

The Department of Commerce first appeared as the Department of Commerce and Labor (32 Stat. 827) in 1903. It originally consisted of the following services, the majority of which previously existed in other Government departments or as independent agencies: Bureau of Lighthouses, Steamboat Inspection Service, Bureau of Navigation, Bureau of Statistics, Bureau of the Census, Bureau of the Fisheries, Bureau of Manufactures, Bureau of Corporations.

In 1913—Thirty-seventh Statutes, page 736—it became the Department of Commerce, certain functions going to the newly set up Department of Labor.

This history is recalled here merely to show that the statesmen who have gone before us have from time to time gathered together the new and permanent activities of the Government which could not be placed in already existing departments and have set up new departments of government for their administration. On the basis of this history it may be said that the Congress should establish a new department whenever (1) the Government has entered upon extensive activities which are (2) permanent in character and where (3) there is no logical place to put these activities within the normal structure of the Government in such a way that they may be represented in the Cabinet.

Any other course of action will produce confusion and inefficiency in the long run and will stand in the way of orderly control and coordination of the activities both by the Congress and by the Executive.

On the basis of these standards the establishment of a department of welfare is long overdue. In fact, the creation of such a department has been repeatedly suggested. It was recommended by President Harding in 1922, by the Joint Committee on Reorganization in 1924, and by many others from time to time.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TABER].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TABER) there were ayes 41 and noes 100.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, I offer a further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TABER: On page 4, line 5, after the semicolon, strike out all down to and including the word "distressed", in line 7.

Mr. TABER. Mr. Chairman, the object of this amendment is to strike out the words which make the problem of relief a permanent Federal problem. I hope this House will come to realize the absolute necessity of not doing that sort of thing. It means a tremendous cost. It means that relief will be administered in the wasteful, extravagant, and impossible way it has been administered during the past 4 years. I hope that if we are going to have relief in the future it will be a temporary proposition. The President of the United States himself, last fall, stated he did not believe we ought to make this a permanent activity. I hope you will follow the President along that line.

Mr. MAY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TABER. I yield.

Mr. MAY. Under this act, on page 4, in lines 5 and 6, it provides that the relief of unemployment and of the hardship and suffering caused thereby shall be maintained by this secretary of welfare.

Mr. TABER. Yes.

Mr. MAY. That is creating a new department of government, and this will become the basic law by which it is created; and when this question is raised by Congress hereafter that they are engaging in an activity that they should not be engaged in, they will cite the basic law and say that Congress gave them the power.

Mr. TABER. Absolutely. If you do not strike this out, you have got this thing on your hands, uncontrolled, forever.

[Here the gavel fell.]

Mr. VOORHIS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment. The question of whether you can stop doing anything about the problem of unemployment depends upon how many unemployed there are. It is almost tragically obvious to say we hope we will not have to have a permanent program of relief and of finding work for the unemployed. Of course, we hope that. Of course, the President hopes that, more perhaps than anybody else in this Nation, except the unemployed themselves. I want to say I believe that one of the most unjust criticisms that has been made of this administration has been to blame the administration for the fact that relief of unemployment has been necessary. It is like blaming the doctor for having spent some money to keep a sick patient alive. The blame belongs on the causes of unemployment. Of course, everybody hopes it will not be necessary to carry this on forever, and anyone who thinks realizes that we have to attack unemployment more fundamentally than we have yet done; but as long as there are millions of unemployed in this country, the mere striking out of a few words in an act like this will not do any good toward removing the problem. You have to have those words in there, and you have to have this Public Welfare Department's work done, and you will have to have a decent public-works program, because we have not solved the problem of unemployment.

I hope the amendment will be defeated.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. TABER) there were—ayes 25, noes 100.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. KERR: On page 3, line 22, after the word "Senate", insert "one of whom shall be a licensed, practicing physician."

Mr. KERR. Mr. Chairman, section 303 of the bill prescribes among the duties of those who administer the Department of Public Welfare the promotion of the public health, safety, and sanitation.

Section 302 reads:

There shall be in the Department of Welfare an Under Secretary of Welfare and two Assistant Secretaries of Welfare, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

The purpose of my amendment is to add, after the word "Senate", "one of whom shall be a licensed practicing physician." Public health being so interwoven with public welfare by the express terms of the bill, I cannot see any possible objection to this requirement.

Mr. MAVERICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KERR. I yield.

Mr. MAVERICK. We have a Public Health Department at the present time, and there are dozens of registered doctors there now.

Mr. KERR. But section 303 of the act provides that there shall be a secretary of welfare and two assistant secretaries of welfare, but does not provide that any of them shall be a physician, yet the duties of these officers under this welfare act are to preserve the sanitation and promote the health of the country. A practicing physician can certainly do this better than anyone else, and this great profession deserves this recognition.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by my colleague.

Mr. Chairman, my office tells me that for the last 48 hours the phone has been ringing busily from doctors in my State phoning to ask me to support such an amendment because by chance some doctor or some medical association up here has phoned them asking them to do it.

If the amendment offered by my colleague should be adopted, why not carry it to its logical conclusion and have a sanitary engineer or a preacher for under secretary of welfare, have some social worker in charge of the needy and distressed, have a nurse for one thing, and a teacher for another, and why not an Indian to head the Bureau of Indian Affairs?

I think that the President in selecting the one who shall serve in his administration in these positions should have a wide field from which to choose, and to appoint whomsoever he desires, subject to their being confirmed by the Senate.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from North Carolina.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. WILCOX. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WILCOX: On page 4, line 10, between the word "promote" and the word "public", insert the word "existing."

Mr. WILCOX. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment for the purpose of making clear the intent of the act in the creation of this new department. I am assured by the members of the committee who reported the bill, and it has been repeatedly stated on the floor during the course of the debate that it is not the intention of this bill in the creation of a new department to give to that department any new duties or powers or functions. The evident intent of this entire legislation is to combine existing agencies for the purpose of economy and efficiency. It was certainly not the intent of the committee, nor do I believe it is the desire or purpose of the Congress, to create a new department of the Government with new functions and new duties. Particularly is that true of the Democrats in the House because we are pledged to a program of abolishing bureaus and not to the creation of new ones. If the purpose of this bill be to coordinate existing activities only, then it seems to me the amendment is germane at this point and that it should be adopted. If not, I wish those in charge of the bill would indicate an appropriate place in the bill where it should be inserted. If my amendment is defeated, I hope they will offer an amendment which will make it perfectly clear that it is the desire and the intent of Congress that the new department now being created shall not have any additional duties or functions unless they sincerely believe that the bill in its present form leaves no doubt on that subject. I offer it at this point for the reason that the clause now reads as follows, describing the duties of the new Department of Welfare:

The Secretary of Welfare shall * * * coordinate and promote public health, education, and welfare activities.

My amendment will make that clause read:

And in general shall coordinate and promote existing public health, education, and welfare activities.

I am in full sympathy and accord with the plan for consolidating existing bureaus and commissions and abolishing many that duplicate the efforts of others, and I commend the committee for bringing in a bill which purports to accomplish that laudable purpose. I have no objection to the creation of this new department, provided it is distinctly understood that in doing so we are merely providing a means whereby existing agencies may be grouped under one head; but I do not want to see any new department of Government created if it means any enlargement or extension of Federal activities or if it means any further enlargement of the Federal establishment. The Federal Government is too big already. It needs to be cut down, and not enlarged.

Now, I know from conversations with the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. WARREN] and the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. VINSON] that they have the same views that I have on this subject; and if my amendment is not accepted, I will take that action to mean an assurance upon their part that this bill does not create any additional power for the new department here provided for.

[Here the gavel fell.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

TITLE IV—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SECTION 401. There is authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 402. This act may be cited as the "Reorganization Act of 1937."

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. WOODRUM, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill, H. R. 8202, to provide for the reorganization of agencies of the Government, to establish the Department of Welfare, and for other purposes, had directed him to report the same back to the House, with the recommendation that the bill do pass.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. BOILEAU. I am not.

The SPEAKER. Does any other Member of the minority desire to offer a motion?

Mr. LAMBERTSON. Mr. Speaker, I will offer it. I am opposed to the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman qualifies. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. LAMBERTSON moves to recommit the bill to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BOILEAU. The amendment has not been read.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands the reading of the motion has been concluded. It was a simple motion to recommit.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the motion to recommit was offered by the gentleman from Kansas.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas offered the motion to recommit.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, he is offering the same motion I submitted. He is offering that same motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. BOILEAU] has submitted a parliamentary inquiry to the Chair. The Chair, upon all motions to recommit, under the rules and precedents, is required to qualify the Member offering the motion. The rule is that a minority member of the committee has the power to offer the motion.

The Chair asked the gentleman from Wisconsin if he were opposed to the bill, and understood the gentleman to say he was not. Then the Chair submitted the inquiry as to whether any member of the minority was opposed to the bill and if he desired to submit a motion to recommit. The gentleman from Kansas said he was opposed to the bill, and the Chair recognized him to offer the motion to recommit.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, I understood that the gentleman from Kansas, believing I probably could not get recognition for the purpose of offering the motion to recommit, intended to offer my motion to recommit. I would like to ascertain from the gentleman from Kansas whether or not that was his intention.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not state a parliamentary inquiry. The Chair cannot pass on the intention of the gentleman from Kansas.

Mr. BOILEAU. Mr. Speaker, I was under the impression that what the gentleman offered was my motion, because no written motion had been sent to the desk. I thought the gentleman was offering my motion; and if there is a mistake on the part of the gentleman from Kansas, the Speaker, or myself, it should be clarified.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows of no mistake on the part of the Speaker.

Mr. BOILEAU. I apologize to the Speaker, but I want to ascertain what the intention of the gentleman from Kansas was.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina has moved the previous question on the motion to recommit.

Mr. BOILEAU. The gentleman from Kansas has offered no motion to recommit in writing.

The SPEAKER. The Chair asked the gentleman from Kansas if he was opposed to the bill and if he desired to offer a motion to recommit. The gentleman from Kansas stated he was opposed to the bill and did desire to offer a motion to recommit, which motion was reported by the Clerk.

Mr. BOILEAU. May I suggest, Mr. Speaker, I believe the stenographic report will show that the gentleman from Kansas stated "I offer the motion to recommit"?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas has offered a motion to recommit. The question is on ordering the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recommit offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. LAMBERTSON].

The motion was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. TABER and Mr. WARREN demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 283, nays 76, not voting 71, as follows:

[Roll No. 143]

YEAS—283

Aleshire	Driver	Kirwan	Rankin
Allen, Pa.	Duncan	Kitchens	Rayburn
Amlie	Dunn	Kloeb	Reece, Tenn.
Anderson, Mo.	Eberharter	Kniffin	Reilly
Andrews	Eckert	Kocialkowski	Richards
Arends	Edmiston	Kopplemann	Rigney
Arnold	Eicher	Lanzetta	Robertson
Ashbrook	Elliott	Larrabee	Robinson, Utah
Atkinson	Engel	Lea	Rogers, Okla.
Bacon	Englebright	Leavy	Romjue
Barden	Farley	Lesinski	Ryan
Barry	Ferguson	Lewis, Colo.	Sabath
Beam	Fitzgerald	Long	Sacks
Beiter	Flannagan	Lucas	Sadowski
Bell	Flannery	Luecke, Mich.	Sanders
Bernard	Fleger	McAndrews	Sauthoff
Biermann	Fletcher	McCormack	Schaefer, Ill.
Bigelow	Forand	McFarlane	Schneider, Wis.
Bland	Ford, Calif.	McGehee	Schuetz
Bloom	Frey, Pa.	McGranery	Schulte
Boehne	Fries, Ill.	McGrath	Scott
Boileau	Fuller	McReynolds	Scrugham
Boland, Pa.	Garrett	McSweeney	Secrest
Boren	Gearhart	Magnuson	Seger
Boykin	Gehrmann	Mahon, S. C.	Shanley
Boylan, N. Y.	Gildea	Mahon, Tex.	Shannon
Bradley	Gingery	Maloney	Sheppard
Brooks	Goldsborough	Mapes	Smith, Conn.
Brown	Green	Martin, Colo.	Smith, Va.
Buck	Greenwood	Massingale	Smith, Wash.
Buckler, Minn.	Greever	Maverick	Snyder, Pa.
Burch	Gregory	Mead	South
Burdick	Griffith	Merritt	Sparkman
Byrne	Haines	Miller	Spence
Caldwell	Halleck	Mills	Stack
Cartwright	Hamilton	Mitchell, Ill.	Starnes
Case, S. Dak.	Hancock, N. C.	Mitchell, Tenn.	Steagall
Casey, Mass.	Harlan	Moser, Pa.	Stefan
Celler	Harrington	Mosier, Ohio	Sumners, Tex.
Champion	Havenner	Mouton	Sutphin
Chandler	Healey	Murdock, Ariz.	Sweeney
Citron	Hendricks	Murdock, Utah	Swope
Claypool	Hennings	Nelson	Teigan
Cochran	Hildebrandt	Nichols	Terry
Coffee, Wash.	Hill, Okla.	Norton	Thom
Colden	Hill, Wash.	O'Brien, Ill.	Thomas, Tex.
Cole, N. Y.	Honeyman	O'Brien, Mich.	Thomason, Tex.
Collins	Hook	O'Connell, Mont.	Thompson, Ill.
Colmer	Hope	O'Connell, R. I.	Tolan
Cooley	Houston	O'Connor, Mont.	Transue
Cooper	Hunter	O'Connor, N. Y.	Turner
Costello	Imhoff	O'Day	Vincent, B. M.
Cox	Isac	O'Leary	Vinson, Fred M.
Cravens	Jacobsen	O'Malley	Voorhis
Creal	Jarman	O'Neill, N. J.	Wallgren
Crosser	Jenckes, Ind.	O'Toole	Walter
Crowe	Johnson, Luther A.	Oliver	Warren
Curley	Johnson, Lyndon	Pace	Wearin
Daly	Johnson, Minn.	Parsons	Weaver
Deen	Johnson, Okla.	Patman	Welch
Delaney	Johnson, W. Va.	Patrick	Wene
Dempsey	Jones	Patterson	West
DeMuth	Kee	Patton	Wheichel
DeRouen	Keller	Pearson	Whittington
Dies	Kelly, Ill.	Pettengill	Wilcox
Dingell	Kelly, N. Y.	Pierce	Williams
Dixon	Kennedy, Md.	Poage	Wolverton
Dockweiler	Kennedy, N. Y.	Polk	Wood
Dorsey	Kenney	Rabaut	Woodrum
Doughton	Keogh	Ramsay	Zimmerman
Drew, Pa.	Kerr	Randolph

NAYS—76

Allen, Ill.	Cole, Md.	Gifford	Hull
Andresen, Minn.	Crawford	Gray, Pa.	Jarrett
Bates	Ditter	Griswold	Jenkins, Ohio
Carlson	Dondero	Guyer	Kinzer
Chapman	Dowell	Gwynne	Knutson
Church	Doxey	Hancock, N. Y.	Lambertson
Clark, N. C.	Evans	Hart	Lanham
Clason	Ford, Miss.	Higgins	Luce
Coffee, Nebr.	Gasque	Holmes	Luckey, Nebr.

Ludlow	Millard	Rich	Thomas, N. J.
McClellan	Mott	Robsion, Ky.	Thurston
McKeough	Owen	Rogers, Mass.	Tinkham
McLaughlin	Palmisano	Rutherford	Tobey
McLean	Peterson, Ga.	Short	Towey
McMillan	Powers	Snell	Treadway
Martin, Mass.	Ramspeck	Taber	Umstead
Mason	Reed, Ill.	Tarver	Wolcott
May	Reed, N. Y.	Taylor, S. C.	Wolfenden
Michener	Rees, Kans.	Taylor, Tenn.	Woodruff

NOT VOTING—71

Allen, Del.	Dirksen	Hobbs	Phillips
Allen, La.	Disney	Hoffman	Plumley
Binderup	Douglas	Jenks, N. H.	Quinn
Boyer	Drewry, Va.	Kleberg	Shafer, Mich.
Brewster	Eaton	Kramer	Simpson
Buckley, N. Y.	Ellenbogen	Kvale	Sirovich
Bulwinkle	Faddis	Lambeth	Smith, Maine
Cannon, Mo.	Fernandez	Lamneck	Smith, W. Va.
Cannon, Wis.	Fish	Lemke	Somers, N. Y.
Carter	Fitzpatrick	Lewis, Md.	Sullivan
Clark, Idaho	Fulmer	Lord	Taylor, Colo.
Cluett	Gambrill	McGroarty	Vinson, Ga.
Crosby	Gavagan	Maas	Wadsworth
Crowther	Gilchrist	Mansfield	White, Idaho
Culkin	Gray, Ind.	Meeks	White, Ohio
Cullen	Harter	O'Neal, Ky.	Wigglesworth
Cummings	Hartley	Peterson, Fla.	Withrow
Dickstein	Hill, Ala.	Pfeifer

Mr. McMILLAN and Mr. McKEOUGH changed their votes from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I arrived here when the Clerk was calling the names beginning with "R."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not qualify.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. If permitted to vote, Mr. Speaker, I would vote "yea."

So the bill was passed.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. Withrow (for) with Mr. Fish (against).
Mr. Boyer (for) with Mr. Kleberg (against).
Mr. Mansfield (for) with Mr. Wigglesworth (against).
Mr. Kramer (for) with Mr. Eaton (against).
Mr. Meeks (for) with Mr. Smith of Maine (against).
Mr. Cullen (for) with Mr. Douglas (against).
Mr. Vinson of Georgia (for) with Mr. Cluett (against).

Additional general pairs:

Mr. Faddis with Mr. White of Ohio.
Mr. Quinn with Mr. Plumley.
Mr. Harter with Mr. Jenks of New Hampshire.
Mr. Bulwinkle with Mr. Wadsworth.
Mr. Disney with Mr. Carter.
Mr. White of Idaho with Mr. Hartley.
Mr. Drewry of Virginia with Mr. Culkin.
Mr. Fernandez with Mr. Gilchrist.
Mr. Pfeifer with Mr. Lord.
Mr. Taylor of Colorado with Mr. Simpson.
Mr. Fitzpatrick with Mr. Maas.
Mr. O'Neal of Kentucky with Mr. Hoffman.
Mr. Gavagan with Mr. Dirksen.
Mr. Hobbs with Mr. Brewster.
Mr. Fulmer with Mr. Crowther.
Mr. Lambeth with Mr. Shafer of Michigan.
Mr. Sullivan with Mr. Lemke.
Mr. Crosby with Mr. Kvale.
Mr. Binderup with Mr. Ellenbogen.
Mr. Phillips with Mr. Lamneck.
Mr. Gray of Indiana with Mr. Dickstein.
Mr. Somers of New York with Mr. Smith of West Virginia.
Mr. Buckley of New York with Mr. Allen of Louisiana.
Mr. Sirovich with Mr. Cannon of Wisconsin.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

WILLIAM H. WILSON

Mr. McGRANERY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. McGRANERY. Mr. Speaker, it is with a feeling of deep regret that I rise to announce to the House the death of William H. Wilson, a Member of the House in the Seventy-fourth Congress, and my predecessor in office. I had known Mr. Wilson for many years, and had known him to love him, as had all the other Members of the Pennsylvania delegation.

HOUSING BILL

Mr. STEAGALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Banking and Currency may have until midnight tomorrow night to file a report on the bill (S. 1685) to provide financial assistance to the States and political subdivisions thereof for the elimination of unsafe and insanitary housing conditions, for the eradication of slums, for the provision of decent, safe, and sanitary dwellings for families of low income, and for the reduction of unemployment and the stimulation of business activity, to create a United States Housing Authority, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. WALTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks in the RECORD and include therein an address delivered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BOLAND] on the bill under discussion today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS

Mr. DOUGHTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Ways and Means may have until midnight tomorrow night to file a privileged report on the bill H. R. 8234.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

REFERENDUM ON WAR

Mr. LUDLOW. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that our colleague the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHANNON] may now address the House for 3 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHANNON. I am glad for this brief allotment of time to give my reasons for signing discharge petition no. 11, for the discharge of the Committee on the Judiciary from further consideration of House Joint Resolution 199, introduced by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. LUDLOW].

House Joint Resolution 199 proposes an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to provide for a referendum on war. The purpose of the discharge petition is to bring the resolution before the House for full debate and a vote. No one signing the discharge petition is bound in any way to vote for the resolution. He merely aids in making it possible for the resolution to receive a hearing.

The proposal for a referendum on war questions is not without precedent. During the World War a conscription act was sought to be passed in Australia through a referendum. The leader in behalf of the conscription act was Mr. W. M. Hughes, the wartime Prime Minister. Mr. Hughes went to London in 1916, where he received great adulation from Lord Northcliffe and others. Under the spell of this excessive praise Mr. Hughes pledged to the British Government to pass a conscription act in Australia.

Upon his return to Australia, however, Mr. Hughes met with strenuous opposition, led by Archbishop Mannix and Premier Ryan. The act providing for the conscription of the youth of Australia was decisively rejected by the people by referendum vote. Australia remained loyal to the Empire, but its loyalty did not extend to sanctioning the conscription of her boys to fight in the wars of Europe. For this act on her part, no one has yet heard of Australia being expelled from the British Empire.

Let me interject here, that if conscription could be abolished from wartime vocabularies of the world, so that there would be no way for the war lords to force the youth of the land to go out and battle for their interests, I do not believe a single country could raise an army the size of an ordinary city police force to participate in foreign wars.

The Ludlow resolution, if adopted, would prevent the sending of American boys to wars in foreign countries without first submitting the question to the people in a national referendum. There is much support back of the resolution, particularly on the part of American parents, and the proposal is entitled to a hearing, regardless of the private views of Members thereon.

The House of Representatives should stand for a free expression of the voice of the people, and should be an open forum for the discussion of all questions as vital as is the one involved in this resolution. Had I failed to sign discharge petition no. 11, I would feel that I had been unfaithful to the trust imposed in me as a Representative of the people of my congressional district. [Applause.]

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to extend their own remarks on the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

Mr. BACON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD, and include therein a brief letter I have received today.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

(Mr. HOOK asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.)

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend in the RECORD the remarks I made this afternoon and include therein certain excerpts from the report of the Joint Committee on the Reorganization of the Executive Departments, of which I was a member in 1924.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

GENERAL ANTHONY WAYNE MEMORIAL COMMISSION

Mr. KELLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table for immediate consideration the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 406) to establish the General Anthony Wayne Memorial Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Gen. Anthony Wayne, with a Senate amendment thereto, and agree to the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Page 2, after line 17, insert:

"SEC. 4. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,500 which shall be available to defray the necessary expenses of the Commission for the performance of their duties herein prescribed. Disbursement of the sum herein authorized shall be made on vouchers approved by the chairman of the Commission."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

The Senate amendment was concurred in, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. COLLINS asked and was given permission to extend his own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. WEARIN. Mr. Speaker I ask unanimous consent that on Tuesday next, after the disposition of business on the Speaker's desk, the completion of the legislative program for the day, and following any special orders heretofore made, I may be permitted to address the House for 20 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

Mr. MURDOCK of Arizona, Mr. HIGGINS, Mr. O'CONNOR of New York, Mr. SHANLEY, Mr. SABATH, and Mr. BLAND asked and were given permission to extend their own remarks in the RECORD.

PERMISSION TO ADDRESS THE HOUSE

Mr. McFARLANE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that after the reading of the Journal and the disposition of business on the calendar, and following the special orders heretofore entered, I may address the House for 20 minutes on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

PROTECTION OF CERTAIN ENLISTED MEN OF THE ARMY

Mr. MAY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 2871) for the protection of certain enlisted men of the Army, and pass the same.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I want to ask a question or two. Do I understand that this embraces a large number of these men who volunteered and served throughout the World War?

Mr. MAY. They are the very men that the bill provides for.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. If this bill is permitted to go through, will they continue the policy of enlisting aliens in the United States Army?

Mr. MAY. They cannot, under existing statutes, and I have assured the House that I would bring in a bill to stop it hereafter if that is necessary.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky. This is to pay wages to those persons who have heretofore enlisted and served and who are now out?

Mr. MAY. That is all there is to it.

Mr. STARNES. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. Speaker, I was of the impression that this bill repealed a certain provision of law that was attached to the War Department Act. I find, upon investigation, that it does not, and I therefore withdraw my reservation of objection.

There being no objection, the Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That, notwithstanding the language contained in the second proviso on page 6 of the act of July 1, 1937 (Public, No. 176, 75th Cong., 1st sess.), or any other act, during the 3-year period following the enactment of this act, enlisted personnel of the Army who have legally declared their intention to become citizens, or who do so during their current enlistment, or who have been discharged from the Army since July 1, 1937, and who also agree to complete expeditiously their naturalization and become citizens of the United States may be reenlisted and receive the pay to which, except for the aforesaid proviso, they would otherwise be legally entitled: Provided, That Filipinos who were serving in the Army on July 1, 1937, may be reenlisted without regard to their citizenship status, and receive the pay to which otherwise legally entitled.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

A similar House bill was laid on the table.

LABOR STANDARDS BILL

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 20 seconds.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, I would like for the Rules Committee to report out a rule for the consideration of the labor-standards bill so we can vote on it next week.

MORTGAGES OF THE HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to speak for one-half minute.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. EBERHARTER. Mr. Speaker, recently there has been a good deal of agitation that the Congress reduce the rate of interest on mortgages issued by the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, and also to extend the period of time within which principal payments can be made.

In that connection recently I had occasion to address a letter to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation with respect to a foreclosure. I ask unanimous consent to insert that letter in the RECORD at this point.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The letter referred to is as follows:

AUGUST 11, 1937.

File: Loan—Elias and Eva Aussenberg, 784 Melbourne Street, Pittsburgh, Pa.
Inquiry: Herman M. Sanovich, Secretary, Home Owners Association, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mr. JOHN W. CHILDRESS,
Assistant to Chairman of H. O. L. C.,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. CHILDRESS: Receipt is acknowledged of your letter of August 7, 1937, in answer to mine of June 18, with respect to the above-mentioned file.

After giving careful and considerate attention to the facts of this case and the reasons for the action of the Corporation, as outlined in your letter, I must confess that I have come to the conclusion that the Corporation acted rather harshly. The delinquency on a loan the size of this one was certainly not large and the borrowers had kept current almost to date their interest payments.

In my experience as a lawyer, I know of no mortgagee who commenced foreclosure proceedings on so slight a delinquency; neither do I know of any reputable business firm which demands absolute strict compliance with the letter of the terms of credit. The simple fact is that mortgages, banks, trust companies, and business concerns realize that in the operation of their financial transactions, it is better to act with leniency than with harshness.

The Home Owners' Loan Corporation should take into consideration in cases of this sort that the borrowers in the first place made a heavy investment and had perhaps for many years concentrated all their energies and ambition toward owning, without encumbrance, the home in which they live. In this new era, when the administration is preaching the gospel of the brotherhood of man and endeavoring to spread the thought that it is the duty of government to help those in distress, it ill behooves the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to ruthlessly snatch the homes of respectable citizens because of small delinquencies. The ownership of homes by citizens is fundamental if we are to progress socially and our civilization is to rest on a firm foundation. This was the spirit in which the act creating the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was passed, and is the spirit again reiterated by the passage recently of the Farm Tenancy Act. Of course, Members of Congress very well appreciate the fact that at times the administration of the laws as enacted is not in keeping with the well-intentioned purposes of the members of the legislative branch.

Heretofore I have been adverse to moderating the terms and conditions of the contracts entered into by borrowers from the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, such as the reduction of interest rates and the length of the period within which to meet the obligation, but now, in view of the circumstances of the case about which I am writing in this letter, as well as some other cases that have recently come to my attention, I entertain grave doubts as to the correctness of the position I previously maintained in this respect.

Sincerely yours,

HERMAN P. EBERHARTER,
Member of Congress.

Mr. AMLIE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my own remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT OVER

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today it adjourn to meet on Monday next.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted as follows:

To Mr. HOBBS, indefinitely, on account of illness in family.

To Mr. ALLEN of Louisiana, for 10 days, on account of illness.

To Mr. CARTER, for 1 week, on account of illness.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

Mr. PARSONS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that that committee had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the House of the following titles, which were thereupon signed by the Speaker:

H. R. 7051. An act authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes;

H. R. 7092. An act to provide for the transfer of Scotland County to the middle judicial district of North Carolina; and

H. R. 7642. An act to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 9 minutes p. m.) the House, under the order previously adopted, adjourned until Monday, August 16, 1937, at 12 o'clock noon.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

COMMITTEE ON FLOOD CONTROL

There will be a hearing of this committee on Monday, August 16, 1937, at 10 a. m., which you are respectfully invited to attend to consider H. J. Res. 482, H. J. Res. 435, H. J. Res. 436, and H. J. Res. 430.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

798. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting the draft of a bill to provide for the exploitation of oil, gas, and other minerals on the lands comprising the Barksdale Field Military Reservation, La.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

799. A letter from the Secretary of the Navy, transmitting the draft of a bill authorizing the Superintendent of the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., to accept gifts and bequests of money for the purpose of erecting a building on land now owned by the United States Government at the Naval Academy, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

800. A letter from the Acting Comptroller General of the United States, transmitting a report and recommendation to the Congress concerning the claim of H. W. Adelberger, Jr., against the United States; to the Committee on Claims.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII,

Mr. O'CONNOR of New York: Committee on Rules. House Resolution 308. Resolution to suspend the rules of the House during the remainder of the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress; without amendment (Rept. No. 1519). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. KERR: Committee on Elections No. 3. House Resolution 309. Resolution relative to the election of Alphonse Roy as a Representative in Congress from the State of New Hampshire (Rept. No. 1521). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. JONES: Committee on Agriculture. S. 1052. An act to provide for the further development of cooperative agricultural extension work; without amendment (Rept. No. 1522). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DEROUEN: Committee on the Public Lands. S. 2583. An act to provide for the acquisition of certain lands for and the addition thereof to the Tahoe National Forest, in the State of Nevada, and the acquisition of certain other lands for the completion of the acquisition of the remaining lands within the limits of the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, in east Tennessee; without amendment (Rept. No. 1523). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. CHANDLER: Committee on the Judiciary. S. 2849. An act to prohibit certain agreements fixing fees or compensation in receivership, bankruptcy, or reorganization proceedings; with amendment (Rept. No. 1524). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. IZAC: Committee on Foreign Affairs. House Joint Resolution 484. Joint resolution providing for the participation of the United States in the continuing international exposition to be known as Pacific Mercado, to be held in the city of Los Angeles, Calif., commencing in the year 1940, and in the year 1942, commemorating the landing of Cabrillo, and for other reasons; without amendment (Rept. No. 1525). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records of the Civil Service Commission in custody of The National Archives (Rept. No. 1526). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Labor Department (Rept. No. 1527). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Civil Service Commission (Rept. 1528). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works (Rept. No. 1529). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Interior Department (Rept. No. 1530). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Navy Department (Rept. No. 1531). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the War Department (Rept. No. 1532). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Federal Communications Commission (Rept. No. 1533). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Veterans' Administration (Rept. No. 1534). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Federal Trade Commission (Rept. No. 1535). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Treasury Department (Rept. No. 1536). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the State Department (Rept. No. 1537). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Commerce Department (Rept. No. 1538). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. COLDEN: Committee on the Disposition of Executive Papers. Report on the disposition of records in the Agriculture Department (Rept. No. 1539). Ordered to be printed.

Mr. HARTER: Committee on Military Affairs. S. 1567. An act authorizing the conservation, production, exploitation, and sale of helium gas, a mineral resource pertaining to the national defense and to the development of commercial aeronautics, authorizing the acquisition, by purchase or otherwise, by the United States of properties for the production of helium gas, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 1540). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. FADDIS: Committee on Military Affairs. H. R. 1608. A bill to provide for the common defense by acquiring certain commodities essential to the manufacture of supplies for the armed forces in time of an emergency, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 1541). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DIMOND: Committee on the Territories. House Concurrent Resolution 24. Concurrent resolution requesting the President to prepare and submit to Congress a plan for development of resources and commerce of Alaska; with amendment (Rept. No. 1542). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. HEALEY: Committee on the Judiciary. H. R. 6178. A bill to abolish appeals in habeas corpus proceedings brought to test the validity of orders of removal; without amendment (Rept. No. 1543). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. O'CONNOR of Montana: Committee on Indian Affairs. S. 2774. An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to relinquish in favor of the Blackfeet Tribe of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, Mont., the interest in certain land acquired by the United States under the Federal reclamation laws; without amendment (Rept. No. 1544). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. STEAGALL: Committee on Banking and Currency. S. 1685. An act to provide financial assistance to the States and political subdivisions thereof for the elimination of unsafe and insanitary housing conditions, for the eradication of slums, for the provision of decent, safe, and sanitary dwellings for families of low income, and for the reduction of unemployment and the stimulation of business activity, to create a United States Housing Authority, and for other purposes; with amendment (Rept. No. 1545). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. DOUGHTON: Committee on Ways and Means. H. R. 8234. A bill to provide revenue, equalize taxation, prevent tax evasion and avoidance, and for other purposes; without amendment (Rept. No. 1546). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XXII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BERNARD: A bill (H. R. 8230) to amend the Communications Act of 1934 to safeguard the freedom of speech; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, a bill (H. R. 8231) authorizing the State of Minnesota to acquire certain lands for highway purposes by purchase, gift, or condemnation, over and across certain lands owned in whole or in part by Indians or Indian tribes or held in trust by the United States Government for Indians, and providing for possession thereof; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. KOCIALKOWSKI: A bill (H. R. 8232) to amend the Liquor Tax Administration Act, approved June 26, 1936; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'BRIEN of Michigan: A bill (H. R. 8233) to provide for the appointment of an additional district judge for the eastern district of Michigan; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. DOUGHTON: A bill (H. R. 8234) to provide revenue, equalize taxation, prevent tax evasion and avoidance, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. MEAD: A bill (H. R. 8235) to permit the printing of black-and-white illustrations of United States and foreign postage stamps for philatelic purposes; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. WILCOX: A bill (H. R. 8236) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to exchange sites for Coast Guard purposes; to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

By Mr. VOORHIS: A bill (H. R. 8237) to provide for the general welfare by establishing a cooperative home board and a system of cooperative home associations; to charter and purchase capital stock of and make grants to cooperative home associations; to insure the security of installment payments made by members to cooperative home associations; and for other purposes benefiting the living conditions of aged persons; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. COSTELLO: A bill (H. R. 8238) to prohibit officers or employees of the Federal Government from establishing any corporation or similar organization for the performance of any function of the Federal Government, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. COFFEE of Washington: A bill (H. R. 8239) to provide for a permanent Bureau of Fine Arts; to the Committee on Education.

By Mr. STACK: Resolution (H. Res. 310) to appoint a special committee to investigate and inquire into the proceedings which resulted in the quashing of the indictments of certain persons connected with the Philadelphia Co. for Guaranteeing Mortgages; to the Committee on Rules.

Also, resolution (H. Res. 311) for the consideration of House Resolution 310; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mrs. NORTON: Resolution (H. Res. 312) for the consideration of S. 2475; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. McFARLANE: Resolution (H. Res. 313) to investigate the Federal Communications Commission; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. KENNEY: Resolution (H. Res. 314) to provide for a recess of Congress to permit Members to attend the Grand Convention of the Order of Ahepa during the week of August 15, 1937; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KELLER: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 487) to authorize the painting of "The Signing of the Constitution" for placement in the Capitol Building; to the Committee on the Library.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. DELANEY: A bill (H. R. 8240) granting a pension to Sophie Feiner; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FISH: A bill (H. R. 8241) to extend the benefits of the Employees' Compensation Act of September 7, 1916, to Fred J. Christoff; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. MAVERICK: A bill (H. R. 8242) for the relief of Clarence Moten; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. O'BRIEN of Michigan: A bill (H. R. 8243) for the relief of Krikor Haroutunian; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SECREST: A bill (H. R. 8244) for the relief of August Ammann; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

3241. By Mr. FITZPATRICK: Petition of the Window Cleaners' Protective Union, urging the passage of the Schwellenbach-Allen resolution with reference to the Works Progress Administration workers; to the Committee on Labor.

3242. By Mr. ANDREWS: Resolution adopted by the Buffalo Building Trades Council, favoring the enactment of the Wagner-Steagall housing bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3243. By Mr. WELCH: Resolution passed by the Native Sons of the Golden West, relative to the Japanese question; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

3244. By Mr. BEITER: Petition of the Buffalo Building Trades Council, Buffalo, N. Y., urging enactment of Wagner-Steagall housing bill, and that Congress remain in session until this much-needed legislation is assured of passage; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3245. By Mr. HART: Petition of Rev. Reginald B. Naugle, Resurrection Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, Pa., urging investigation of settlement of strike at the Apex Hosiery Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; to the Committee on Labor.

3246. By Mr. KEOGH: Petition of the New York Women's Trade Union League, New York City, urging favorable consideration of the wage and hour bill and the Wagner-Steagall housing bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3247. Also, telegram from William Ward, president, New York Typographical Union, No. 6, New York City, concerning the wage and hour bill and the housing bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3248. Also, petition of the Eastern Broker Division of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, New York, concerning the wage and hour bill and the housing bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

3249. Also, petition of the Window Cleaners' Protective Union, Local No. 2, New York City, concerning the Schwellenbach-Allen joint resolution; to the Committee on Labor.

3250. Also, petition of the American Radio Telegraphists Association, New York, concerning the Schwellenbach-Allen joint resolution; to the Committee on Labor.

3251. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the Eastern Broker Division of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, New York City, concerning the wage and hour bill and the housing bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3252. Also, petition of the New York Women's Trade Union League, New York City, urging consideration of the wage and hour bill and the Wagner-Steagall housing bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3253. Also, petition of the United Neighborhood Houses of New York, Inc., New York City, urging the passage of the Wagner-Steagall housing bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3254. Also, telegram from the New York Typographical Union, No. 6, William Ward, president, concerning the wage and hour bill and the housing bill; to the Committee on Labor.

3255. Also, petition of the Interstate Airways Committee, Washington, D. C., concerning the McCarran-Lea air transport bill; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3256. By Mr. LUTHER A. JOHNSON: Petition of Walter P. Taylor, fourth vice president, National Federation of Federal Employees, College Station, Tex., favoring House bill 1595, the 5-day-week bill; to the Committee on the Civil Service.

3257. By Mr. ANDREWS: Resolution adopted by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of the Tonawandas, favoring enactment of House bill 7681, providing for wildlife restoration; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3258. By Mr. PFEIFER: Petition of the American Radio Telegraphists Association, New York City, endorsing the Schwellenbach-Allen joint resolution; to the Committee on Labor.

3259. Also, petition of the Window Cleaners Protective Union, Local No. 2, New York City, urging the passage of the Schwellenbach-Allen joint resolutions; to the Committee on Labor.

3260. By Mr. HART: Petition of the Health Products Corporation of Newark, N. J., recommending certain amendments to House bill 300; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3261. By Mr. KRAMER: Resolution of the Board of Supervisors of the County of Los Angeles, pertaining to the increase of rentals for homes, etc.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3262. Also, resolution of the Southeast Motor Car Dealers Association, Huntington Park, Calif., endorsing House Joint Resolution No. 389; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

3263. Also, resolution of the Motor Car Dealers Association of Orange County, Calif., pertaining to the endorsement of House Joint Resolution No. 389; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE

SATURDAY, AUGUST 14, 1937

(Legislative day of Monday, Aug. 9, 1937)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Friday, August 13, 1937, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Megill, one of its clerks, announced that the House had passed without amendment the bill (S. 2871) for the protection of certain enlisted men of the Army.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 406) to establish the General Anthony Wayne Memorial Commission to formulate plans for the construction of a permanent memorial to the memory of Gen. Anthony Wayne.

The message further announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 8202) to provide for the reorganization of agencies of the Government, to establish the Department of Welfare, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the following enrolled bills, and they were signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 7051. An act authorizing the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 7092. An act to provide for the transfer of Scotland County to the middle judicial district of North Carolina.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. Inasmuch as the calendar is to be called later, I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask for a roll call.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Caraway	Holt	O'Mahoney
Andrews	Chavez	Hughes	Overton
Ashurst	Clark	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper
Austin	Connally	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman
Barkley	Copeland	King	Pope
Berry	Dieterich	La Follette	Reynolds
Bilbo	Donahey	Lee	Schwartz
Black	Ellender	Lewis	Schwellenbach
Bone	Frazier	Lodge	Sheppard
Borah	George	Logan	Smathers
Bridges	Gerry	Lonergan	Smith
Brown, Mich.	Gillette	Lundeen	Steiwer
Brown, N. H.	Glass	McAdoo	Thomas, Okla.
Bulkley	Green	McCarran	Truman
Bulow	Hale	McGill	Van Nuys
Burke	Harrison	McKellar	White
Byrd	Hatch	Maloney
Byrnes	Herring	Murray
Capper	Hitchcock	Nye

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on official duty as members of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

The Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] is absent because of illness.

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. GUFFEY], the Senator from Indiana [Mr. MINTON], the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MOORE], the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY], the junior Senator from Maryland [Mr. RADCLIFFE], the Senator from Utah [Mr. THOMAS], the senior Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], the Senator from New York [Mr. WAGNER], the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], and the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON] is absent in the performance of official duty as a member of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

I also announce that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. TOWNSEND] is necessarily absent.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I announce that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] is detained from the Senate because of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States, submitting a nomination, was communicated to the Senate by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

SIGNING OF AN ENROLLED BILL DURING RECESS

The VICE PRESIDENT announced that, under authority of the order of the Senate of yesterday, he signed during recess of the Senate the enrolled bill (H. R. 7642) to authorize the completion, maintenance, and operation of Bonneville project for navigation, and for other purposes, which bill had been signed previously by the Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATE, TREASURY DEPARTMENT (S. DOC. NO. 98)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the Treasury Department (expenses, National Cancer Institute, Public Health Service), fiscal year 1938, amounting to $400,000, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

SUPPLEMENTAL ESTIMATES, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA (S. DOC. NO. 97)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the President of the United States, transmitting supplemental estimates of appropriations for the District of Columbia, fiscal year 1938 (site for armory, militia, District of Columbia, $210,000; and judgments, gasoline tax, road and street improvements, District of Columbia, $4,206.19), amounting in all to $214,206.19; together with draft of a proposed provision pertaining to the appropriation "Health department, District of Columbia, 1938" (hygiene and sanitation, public schools, salaries), which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

NATIONAL PARK TRUST FUND BOARD

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, reporting, pursuant to law, relative to the activities of the National Park Trust Fund Board and the administration of the National Park trust fund, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

ORDINANCES, ETC., OF COUNCIL OF ST. CROIX, VIRGIN ISLANDS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, copies of ordinances and a resolution adopted by the Municipal Council of St. Croix, and approved by the Governor of the Virgin Islands, which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Territories and Insular Affairs.

OVERTIME SERVICES OF CUSTOMS OFFICERS, ETC.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting a draft of proposed legislation to amend section 6 of the act approved May 27, 1936 (49 U. S. Stat. L. 1380), which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

PETITIONS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the convention of the American Radio Telegraphists Association, at New York City, N. Y., favoring the enactment of legislation establishing minimum wages and maximum hours of work, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also laid before the Senate the petition of Sam Alper, of Brooklyn, N. Y., praying for the enactment of the so-called Schwellenbach resolution, being the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 176) favoring employment by the Works Progress Administration of persons unable to find employment in private industry, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. LODGE presented a petition of sundry citizens of Roxbury and Jamaica Plains, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation to abolish the Federal Reserve system as at present constituted, and also praying that Congress exercise its constitutional right to coin money and regulate the value thereof, which was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. COPELAND, from the Commitee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7985) to promote air commerce by providing for the enlargement of Washington Airport, reported it with an amendment.

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 2711) to create a Division of Water Pollution Control in the United States Public Health Service, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1199) thereon.

Mr. SHEPPARD, from the Committee on Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 2882) to authorize the construction of bridges in Caddo Parish, La., reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1202) thereon.

Mr. O'MAHONEY, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 2909) to amend an act of Congress approved June 17, 1870, entitled "An act to establish a police court for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1200) thereon.

Mr. ASHURST, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the bill (S. 2633) to incorporate the American Chemical Society, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1201) thereon.

EXECUTIVE REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON POST OFFICES AND POST ROADS

As in executive session,

Mr. McKELLAR, from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, reported favorably the nominations of several postmasters, which were ordered to be placed on the Executive Calendar.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. STEIWER (for Mr. McNARY):

A bill (S. 2965) granting a pension to Martha J. Poole (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LOGAN (for Mr. BAILEY):

A bill (S. 2966) authorizing the Comptroller General to settle and adjust the claim of H. W. Adelberger, Jr.; and

A bill (S. 2967) authorizing the Comptroller General to settle and adjust the claim of Tiffany Construction Co.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BILBO:

A bill (S. 2968) to amend the Social Security Act with respect to grants to States for old-age assistance; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. BYRNES:

A bill (S. 2969) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, extending the classified civil service, establishing a General Auditing Office and a Department of Welfare, and for other purposes; to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

By Mr. NYE:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 208) relative to the establishment of title of the United States to certain submerged lands containing petroleum deposits; to the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys.

HOUSE BILL REFERRED

The bill (H. R. 8202) to provide for the reorganization of agencies of the Government, to establish the Department of Welfare, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title and referred to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

CONNECTICUT AND THE FIRST TEN AMENDMENTS TO THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION (S. DOC. NO. 96)

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. President, on August 5 there was printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD an excellent short article by Thomas H. LeDuc, of Yale University, entitled "Connecticut and the First Ten Amendments to the Federal Constitution." I ask unanimous consent to have it printed as a Senate document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY—ADDRESS BY SENATOR M'KELLAR

[Mr. POPE asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD a radio address delivered by Senator McKELLAR on the 13th instant relative to the Tennessee Valley Authority, which appears in the Appendix.]

THE LOST COLONY—ARTICLE BY BEN DIXON MAC NEILL

[Mr. REYNOLDS asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an article on The Lost Colony, written by Ben Dixon Mac Neill and published in the Carolina Co-operator of the issue of August 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

WILLIAM E. JONES—WITHDRAWAL OF MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION

Mr. KING. Mr. President, a few days ago Senate bill 667, for the relief of William E. Jones and others, introduced by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], was passed. At the time I moved to reconsider the action of the Senate in passing the bill. Since that time I have looked into the measure, and I withdraw my motion to reconsider.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the motion to reconsider is withdrawn.

REGULATION OF AIR TRANSPORTATION

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill No. 2, having to do with the regulation of air transportation.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in presenting this matter to the Senate of the United States I do so in the light of history in the making of which I have had the privilege of participating, and I take pride in having made as much of it myself as was possible within the period of time I have served in the Senate of the United States.

In the Seventy-third Congress, second session, I introduced on March 20, the calendar day being March 26, 1934, a bill to provide for the control and regulation of transportation and commerce by air. At that time and in that bill it was provided that a special commission should be appointed to control and regulate commerce by air. That bill was submitted to a vote of this body, at the time when what is known as the Black-McKellar bill, which is now a part of the law, was pending. At that time the President of the United States saw fit to declare to Congress that he was not in favor of a special commission to assume control of commerce by air, but rather did he favor the whole matter of public-service transportation being submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission, that Commission to have control and regulatory authority over the whole subject.

Those who were here at that time will recall that, notwithstanding the President's views on the subject, being wedded to my views, I submitted the matter to a vote of the Senate, and the Senate voted down my bill, though I received a very respectable vote in its favor. But, believing that the President of the United States would go along with his own theory, as he has, I waited until two messages from the President of the United States came before the Senate, each one of which recommended a coordination of all transportation agencies in the United States, including those engaging in commerce by rail, commerce by bus, and commerce by air. So, in keeping with the views of the President, I later redrafted the bill.

I may say in passing that, pursuant to the terms of the Black-McKellar bill, a Federal aviation investigating commission was created. That Commission, appointed by the President, sat for several months in the city of Washington and made a very careful investigation of the entire subject.

In furtherance of the bill now pending, the Aviation Commission, sitting as an independent agency, made its final report in writing and printed form, which report has been and is now before the Senate, recommending in no uncertain terms the very spirit if not the letter of the bill which I introduced initially, recommending an independent commission to regulate and control commerce by air. But that report submitted by a special commission appointed by the President of the United States did not appear to receive the approval of the President. He rather believed, and he rather believes now, according to two messages sent to this body, that all commerce and transportation within and without the United States should be controlled by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

While believing that the Executive had some cogent reasons for his views, I did not abandon my views, and I have not yet abandoned them, but rather have I set them aside in order to be in accord with the President of the United States on a matter as to which he undoubtedly has the facilities for study that enable him to reach the best conclusions possible.

With that idea in mind, I introduced in the Senate S. 3027 on May 13, calendar day of June 10, 1935, providing for an amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act and containing the usual regulatory provisions. Then followed the introduction of other measures. The able Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY], in my behalf and at my request, because of my unfortunate absence from the Senate, submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by me, which was a complete rewriting of Senate bill 3027. Hearings were held on that bill on July 29, 30, and 31, 1935, before a subcommittee of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate.

Then Senate bill 3420 was introduced on July 29, calendar day of August 15, 1935, and reported without amendment to the Senate by the able Senator from Missouri [Mr. TRUMAN] on the same day. The committee substituted that bill for Senate bill 3027 and it became Calendar No. 1381 of the Seventy-fourth Congress, first session. The full committee reported the bill favorably and recommended its passage during the Seventy-fourth Congress.

Senate bill No. 2, which is the bill involved in the motion now pending before the Senate, was introduced January 6, 1937, Seventy-fifth Congress, first session, and was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce. It was made up of two chapters. Chapter 1 contained the usual regulatory provision, while chapter 2 transferred matters affecting safety in connection with scheduled air lines from the Department of Commerce to the Interstate Commerce Commission. A similar bill was introduced in the House by Representative ELLENBOGEN, and is known as H. R. 4600, but the House bill eliminated all provisions with reference to air mail.

Senate bill 738, introduced January 14, 1937, and referred to the Committee on Commerce of the Senate, is an exact duplicate of chapter 2 of Senate bill 2 with reference to safety.

An amendment to Senate bill 2 was submitted February 24, calendar day of March 2, 1937. That amendment covers foreign service.

An amendment to Senate bill 2 in the nature of a substitute striking out all after the enacting clause, including chapter 2, was submitted February 24, calendar day of March 3, 1937. This amendment is identical with House bill 5234, introduced March 2, 1937, by Representative LEA.

Senate bill 1760, introduced February 24, calendar day of March 3, 1937, corresponds in part to Senate bill 738. This bill is identical with House bill 4652, introduced by Representative CROSSER February 11, 1937.

Mr. President, this briefly recites the history of the proposed legislation so far as its introduction is concerned. I only make mention of these incidental things in order that I may bring to the attention of the Senate something that is going to be dwelt upon by a very eminent Member of this body by way of throwing a cloud over this entire piece of proposed legislation before the bill is finally considered.

In other words, the entire legislation has been initiated by a thought which came to the author of the bill when, as a member of the Black committee, I served on that Special Committee to Investigate Ocean Mail and Air Mail Subsidies in the United States. I came to the conclusion—a conclusion that was inevitable so far as my view was concerned—that America had the greatest opportunity in the world to take a place in the vanguard of progress in commerce by air if it saw fit to do so; that while in the ages of the past Britannia ruled the waves, in the ages of the future the United States could rule the air. That thought came to me during the hearings before the Black committee, of which I was a member. It seemed to me inevitable; it seemed to me as though it was an opportunity which we should grasp and with which we should go forward.

Mr. President, I have burdened Senators to listen to the history of the legislation from the time of its inception until the present moment in order that they might know how deeply and earnestly the author of the bill has delved into this subject in the desire to embrace the opportunity to do something for this country by way of promoting transportation and commerce by air.

What does that mean? Does it mean simply the transfer of the control from one department of the Government to another? Not at all. If that were so, then, perchance, we might all rest easy. We might all say, "This is a contentious bill, and therefore we will not fight to have it brought up in these rather troublesome hours. Rather we will let it go over until January." But, as stated by the leader of the majority yesterday, I have for days perplexed him, annoyed him, if you please, in my efforts to get the bill before the Senate. In that respect there is a kindred bill, known as Senate bill 1760, which must be considered in conjunction with this bill and immediately following it.

Why do I go into this subject so much at length? Mr. President, this bill has a manifold attitude. This bill means the development of interstate air commerce within the United States. This bill has within it the development of air commerce without the United States, and to the territorial and insular possessions of the United States. This bill has within it the encompassment of international commerce. What would we get out of all that?

First of all, there is today in the hands of the people of this country a new method of commerce between States, a faster method, a more expeditious method, a method which, whatever we may say about it, is in the future, and cannot be blotted out—the speedy method of transportation of commerce by air from one State to another. Secondly, we have the opportunity to tie closer to us and bring in closer contact our insular possessions and outlying territories.

Today, lying north of us is one of the most valuable assets this country ever acquired—the great Territory of Alaska—far remote, with another national line between us and Alaska, with Russia ever looking with envious eyes to her lost possession, with her citizens able to fly from Moscow over the North Pole, across the old possession that Russia held three-quarters of a century ago, down the North American coast, and alight in California with one plane without a single stop, and yet have gasoline to spare after alighting.

Mr. President, these are things that you and I must pause to think about, and as we think we must make sure that we are able to reach our outlying possessions promptly and speedily and efficiently. Those things are involved in this bill—commerce between continental America and her Territories, and out into her far-flung island possessions.

But that is not all. Let us go into the bill itself. Let us deal with it as it is, at home. What does it mean to us at home? If we had no possessions outside the line between the Atlantic and the Pacific, between the Mexican line and the Canadian line, what would it mean to us?

Let me deal with the bill from a statistical standpoint. It means the transportation of millions of human beings from one State to another. Those of us who have flown, those of us who have covered this country by air, those of us who have seen the air lines in operation, know something of what all that means.

I am going to now deal with something that is not written in Senate bill 2, but that properly belongs to Senate bill 1760, but is nevertheless wedded to Senate bill 2.

The number of persons killed on air lines in the past 5½ years is as follows:

Seventy-seven pilots. Let me dwell on that for a moment. Who goes down to death first in a crash? The unfortunate boy who has given his life to a vocation to which he believes there is a future; the unfortunate one who holds the controls of an airplane. He is the first to die. All others may be saved, but few others are saved. Seventy-seven pilots in the past 5½ years have gone down to their death; 125 passengers, 9 crews, all including stewardesses. The total is 211.

The number of persons killed on domestic and foreign airlines from July 1, 1936, to date, is 19 pilots; 6 of the crew, every one of them a stewardess; 52 passengers; a total of 77.

The number of persons killed during the winter just past, between December 15, 1936, and March 25, 1937, is 50, 11 of whom were pilots.

Since December 15, 1936, less than 8 months, 9 major airline crashes have occurred, resulting in the death of 66 persons, 15 of whom were pilots.

The Air Line Pilots' Association brings these data to my attention.

Mr. President, in dealing with this subject I am dealing with something that is parenthetical to the matter before the Senate, but I deal with it in order that the Senate may be aroused to the condition that is precedent.

Mr. President, I am now going back to deal with the bill that is primarily before the Senate, which is Senate bill 2. It has been before the Senate for many months.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I ask the pardon of the Senator. My attention was diverted. Has the Senator been discussing the other bill at all this morning?

Mr. McCARRAN. I have been discussing the other bill incidentally. It is not before the Senate, but I consider its provisions coextensive with those of this bill, though I have been discussing it only incidentally. I am now about to go back to a full discussion of Senate bill 2.

Mr. COPELAND. I am glad to hear about Senate bill 2 because I am sympathetic to it, but I should have to die on my feet to prevent the passage of the other bill this year.

Mr. McCARRAN. I should not want the Senator to die on his feet until he is elected mayor of New York.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Nevada would not want the Senator from New York to die on his feet then, would he? [Laughter.]

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator from New York is not going to die on his feet then because he is then going to be in a place where he can command attention and become President of the United States some day in the future.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I can plainly see that this is no time to discuss the bill. [Laughter.]

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, if Senators will take the copies of the committee prints that have been placed on their desks and follow me as we go through a cursory review of the bill, I shall be gratified. I especially draw the attention of the able Senator from Tennessee [Mr. McKELLAR] to what I am about to say because I know the heart of the able Senator from Tennessee, and I know that in his heart he is in favor of progress, and I know that in his heart he is in favor of this bill; but I know that he has been misled by those who either have not read the bill, have refused to read the bill, or have refused to give the Senator proper information concerning the bill.

First of all, let it be remembered that this bill is an amendment to the Interstate Commerce Act. The reason for that is that the President of the United States in two messages has said that he wanted all transportation facilities coordinated; and in keeping with that expression during the last session of Congress we did bring in measures dealing with bus and truck transportation. I draw the attention of the Senate to paragraphs one paralleling another.

The first section deals with policies. In other words—

It is hereby declared to be the policy of Congress (1) to regulate transportation by air carriers in such manner as to recognize and preserve the inherent advantages of, and foster sound economic conditions in, such transportation and among such carriers in the public interest—

And so on. If Senators will look across the page, they will find that substantially the same language is used with reference to bus and truck transportation. In addition to that, I draw attention to the fact that the real purpose and object of the Interstate Commerce Commission when it was instituted by law was so to regulate the railroads of the country so that the railroads of the country might prosper, might continue. In that regard, I wish to say now that had a bill of this kind been enacted 50 years before the Interstate Commerce Commission was instituted, the railroads of the country would not have gone through the period of depression and bankruptcy and insolvency and receivership which they did go through. Since the time when the Interstate Commerce Commission was instituted, the railroads of the country have operated with a fair degree of progress and success.

But, Mr. President, if we permit our air lines in this country to continue under the present policy, which is no policy at all, within the short span of life of the very oldest of us we will find the air lines going through the very same unfortunate experience through which our railroads went. It is to save our air lines, it is to build our Nation internally and externally, that the bill is proposed. It is to declare to the world that we have a policy with reference to air transportation, and the President of the United States has gone along in two messages sent to the Senate, which Senators will find on record, and in which he is shown to be in entire accord with this policy.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will the Senator point out anything in the message of the President referring to air mail being put in the hands of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. McCARRAN. I may say to the Senator that the messages of the President of the United States deal with transportation and the coordination of it.

Mr. McKELLAR. He has never expressed himself on this bill——

Mr. McCARRAN. Just a moment. I reserve the right to answer the Senator's question, and I am going to answer it, and I am not going to be interrupted in the midst of an answer.

Mr. McKELLAR. I did not mean to interrupt the Senator.

Mr. McCARRAN. The message of the President of the United States was devoted to coordination of methods of transportation. The railroads are required by law to carry the mails. They must afford facilities for carrying the mails. Under the pending bill the air lines of the United States must accord facilities for carrying the mail. It would be written into the law. They could not avoid it. Whenever the Post Office Department tendered the mail to a line that was licensed to conduct transportation over a given territory, they would have to take the mail.

No; the President of the United States did not deal with the mails, because the President of the United States knew that there was some intelligence left in the Congress of the United States after all; that the mail was uppermost with the people of the United States, and that whenever we brought into existence a recognition of control of any transportation facilities we would see to it that the mail was carried by that facility.

So the bill has seen to it that the mail will be carried by this facility. It does not require the Post Office Department to tender mail to every line, but every line to which mail is tendered must carry the mail.

I shall now follow the Senator's question a little further, because naturally it brings up the thought of the rate at which the facility shall carry the mail. It shall carry the mail at a rate which will be prescribed by a quasi-judicial body which has for half a century determined the rate at which the railroads should carry the mail, namely, the Interstate Commerce Commission.

How many commissions are we to have to control the transportation facilities of this Nation? How many commissions are we going to say shall control our transportation facilities? Shall the Post Office Department control one of the greatest transportation facilities of future efforts, and the Interstate Commerce Commission control merely the railroads?

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CHAVEZ in the chair). Does the Senator from Nevada yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. I am in sympathy with the purpose of the bill, so far as the matter of putting inspection and regulation of safety devices in an experienced quarter is concerned, because the present system of regulation of safety in the air has certainly been very unfortunate and very disastrous.

In connection with what the Senator has just been saying, does he not believe that when we put air transportation, or truck transportation, or bus transportation, or river transportation under the Interstate Commerce Commission in its present form, and until the act now pending in Congress for enlarging the membership of the Commission and dividing it into sections shall be enacted, that when we put any of these activities under the Interstate Commerce Commission we are putting them into the hands of an essentially unfriendly agency? I say that without any reflection whatever on the present membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission, or any prior membership, but that Commission was created as a commission to regulate railroads. Their study and their whole experience have been in connection with the railroad situation. As I have said, it is without any reflection on the Commission or its membership that I say that it is essentially a railroad-minded commission, because all of their experience, all of their precedents, have had to do with railroads; and, without any reflection on anybody, I think anyone who will study the decisions and attitude of the Interstate Commerce Commission, particularly with regard to river transportation and other inland waterway transportation, must come to the conclusion that in the consideration of any question of joint rates, or any question of unfair competition on the part of the railroads against the inland waterway carriers, the inland waterway carriers have gotten the worst of it, and I am very anxious that that should not happen to this growing industry of air transportation.

Mr. McCARRAN. In reply to the observation of the Senator from Missouri, it seems to me that, in keeping with the messages of the President, there should be and must be a coordination of control over all methods of transportation. I cannot go along with the Senator—I wish I could, but I cannot—in the view that the waterways have received the worst of the deal. I do not know enough about that to talk on the subject, but I know the Senator from Missouri understands that particular phase of the subject. I do say, however, that it seems to me we must rely on some one agency, and that agency should not be a political agency, and under present conditions we are holding this entire transportation facility under the control of a political agency.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. I can say to the Senator from Nevada that I agree fully with him. As I said a moment ago, the observation which I made with regard to the Interstate Commerce Commission involves no real criticism of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

I can say to the Senator, to illustrate what I am talking about, that a couple of years ago I started to oppose the confirmation of a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, one who had been renominated to the Commission. He came to my office and showed me that under the precedents of the Commission, and, indeed, under the construction which had been put for many years by the Commission on the original Interstate Commerce Commission Act, he was perfectly consistent. While I am not opposing the pending bill, it seems to me that when we put these multifarious activities of transportation under one central authority, as I agree with the Senator from Nevada they should be, precaution should be taken that there are divisions in the Commission which are particularly familiar with the problems and the necessity of each of these various activities.

I agree entirely with the Senator from Nevada that there should be one authority to regulate transportation, and I agree further that that should not be a political authority but at least a semijudicial board from which impartial decisions could be obtained. But it should be so constituted that there would be no predilection, no attitude of mind, with regard to one transportation activity, so that it would get advantage over another transportation activity.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President——

Mr. McCARRAN. Let me reply to the Senator from Missouri before I yield to the Senator from New York.

Mr. COPELAND. I desired to make reply, too, but I will wait.

Mr. McCARRAN. I want to see the air transportation regulated in terms of the bill; and, if I may, I draw the attention of the Senator from Missouri to section 318, page 117, of the committee print that is before us.

> The Commission is directed to establish a Bureau of Air Transport and appoint a Director thereof.

In other words, the very thing the Senator suggests, if I catch the Senator's thought, I have tried to provide, namely, that in the Interstate Commerce Commission there shall be established a new bureau to handle air transportation. It may be called by any name desired; some of us do not like the term "bureau", but it seems to me that for comprehension of the thing it is all right to use that term. It is to be a new bureau, which undoubtedly the Interstate Commerce Commission will create, and that bureau will have control, as will be seen if the bill is read. It will be found that the bureau will have control of this particular facility.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. CLARK. What I had in mind was the provision of the bill now pending in the Senate, similar to a provision of the bill introduced by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], which was reported favorably by the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate in the last Congress, which provides for the increase of the membership of the Commission itself, with the provision that one division of the Commission, that is, one set of Commissioners, shall be assigned to the handling of railroad matters; another set of Commissioners shall be assigned to a division having to do with truck and bus transportation; another division to river transportation; and another to air transportation, with the provision that in connection with matters of conflict or interrelation between various divisions two or more divisions of the Commission may sit and determine them, or all divisions of the Commission may sit en banc, as we say in the case of courts.

Mr. President, it seems to me that that is a very much preferable provision to the establishment of a mere bureau which still has to come before a "railroad-minded" commission, if I may use that term, for final determination.

I am not opposing this provision; I am not opposing this bill; but I say that it seems to me that the problems presented in this bill illustrate the necessity for the passage of the other measure to which I have referred.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I will say that I will support such a bill, but I believe it is entirely correct to say that it will go along with and will be in entire harmony with the bill now before us.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I am in fullest accord with what the Senator from Missouri has said regarding steamship regulation. The Senator is right when he says that the Interstate Commerce Commission is "railroad minded." Its first chairman, whom I knew, was Mr. Cooley, and Professor Adams, of the University of Michigan, was its first, and, I may say, almost its perennial secretary. I have followed its operations through many years since its organization. It is "railroad minded." The reason why the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] and I have always opposed the transfer to it of the regulation of rates for intercoastal transportation, for example, is that the Commission would be sure to think in terms of railroads. That is to say, suppose there were a contest between the intercoastal lines through the Canal and the railroads on through rates from coast to coast; the railroads would complain that the rates on steamships are so low that they destroy the possibility of any transportation of freight by rail, and, of course, the steamship lines would say, "If we raise our rates we will not get any business." The railroads would say, "We cannot afford to lower our rates." As I view it, if the regulation of intercoastal water transportation were transferred to the Commission, the result would be a higher intercoastal rate by vessel, so high, indeed, that it would be impossible for the intercoastal lines to attract any business.

The reason why the shipping lines between the two coasts prosper is because they can carry heavy freight, bulky freight, slow-moving freight, when there is no occasion for hurry. They can carry steel beams and bulky materials when speed is not essential, and by reason of the lower rate they gain business. It is very important for us to make sure that the intercoastal steamship lines are maintained, because we are seeking to build up the American merchant marine, not only for times of peace, but for times of war. Some of the finest vessels we have are engaged in intercoastal traffic. So anything which would mean a competitive rate which would be destructive of steamship lines would be fatal. That is the way I feel about the ships.

When we come to the matter of air transportation I do not have the same feeling, for the reason that airplanes can in no sense be considered as competitors of freight trains, or of vessels upon the water. The package freight they will carry will be very small. The passenger carriage will be very small as compared with railroad traffic. So I do not think that that is the important thing. I do not believe that the question of competition of rates would ever enter into the quesion.

Therefore, so far as I am concerned, I am glad to endorse Senate bill 2, because there is need in the field of aviation for some governing body to prevent cutthroat competition, and to assist the airlines to prevent undue competition in a given field that is provided for by the certificate of convenience and necessity.

Mr. President, as Senators study Senate bill 2 I think it will become more and more clear to them that it is a wise bill, that it seeks to promote aviation, that it will put the industry upon a level which it has not heretofore reached. It will result in having the financial structure supervised. It will do many things which are important if we are to have a substantial aviation service in America. That is the reason why I am quite willing to endorse Senate bill 2.

Mr. President, I ask to have inserted in the RECORD at this point a paragraph from the report made by the committee of which I have the honor to be chairman on the subject, Safety in Air, in which we make the recommendation that matters having to do with Federal regulation shall be transferred to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The matter referred to is as follows:

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION

Because of the lack of proper legislation, the domestic air-transport industry has not had the benefit of properly coordinated Federal regulation. With the air-mail law undergoing fundamental revision every second or third year, and with the suggestion of a periodic reawarding of air-mail contracts by a completely new process of competitive bidding, periodically raising its head, no operator can plan either confidently or intelligently. There is need for an official body which can keep in close touch with the air-transportation situation, watch developments, study the larger problems, foresee dangers which are impending, promote the cause of coordination, and advise both the President and the Congress in regard to air-transportation policies. We agree with that portion of the report (Rept. No. 1329, 74th Cong., 1st sess.) of the Truman committee to the Senate, wherein was said concerning air carriers:

"The ultimate objective of the entire program is a system of coordinated transportation for the Nation * * * with earnings which will support adequate credit, and the ability to expand as need develops and to take advantage of all improvements in the art. All parts of such a system of transportation should be in the hands of reliable and responsible operators * * * free from unjust discrimination."

Should it seem wise to turn over to the Interstate Commerce Commission certain functions, there should be left to the Department of Commerce the responsibility for safety. With the safety division of the Interstate Commerce Commission there might be placed the responsibility for a decision as to the cause of an airline accident when an appeal is requested from the decision of the Department of Commerce. Such matters in the case of nonscheduled and private flying should remain in the Department of Commerce.

Mr. COPELAND. So, Mr. President, along with the Senator from Nevada and the Senator from Missouri, who have made a long study of this question, and who have spoken words of wisdom in regard to it, I think it is a first-class proposal.

Once more let me say, so far as the other bill is concerned, that I have an entirely different attitude toward it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to permit me to ask a question of the Senator from New York?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from New York says that he does not think that air mail is in competition with the carrying of mail by the railroads.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I did not speak of air mail.

Mr. McKELLAR. Well, airplanes, then, coming in competition with other forms of transportation.

Mr. COPELAND. I was talking about the passengers and light-package freight. When it comes to mail, then we have a different proposal.

Mr. McKELLAR. I may say to the Senator that in the Appropriations Committee, of which he is a member and of which I am a member, and of which the Senator from Nevada is a member, it was found that the air mail costs about $14,000,000 at present, and that accounts in a large measure for the appropriations to the railroads for carrying mail remaining stationary; because all of that mail, or nearly all of it, is taken out of the hands of the railroads and put into airplanes.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in keeping with the observations of the able Senator from New York, as a matter of history I think it might be well that I read some statistics.

In 1926 the air facilities of this country carried 5,782 passengers. In 1936 the air facilities of this country carried 1,146,138 passengers.

In 1926 the air facilities of this country carried 3,555 pounds of express. In 1936 the air facilities of this country carried 8,340,408 pounds of express.

In 1926 the air facilities of this country carried 377,206 pounds of mail. I draw the attention of the Senate to this in particular, and I am going to read it again that it may impress itself on Senators. In 1926 the air facilities of this country carried 377,206 pounds of mail. In 1936, 10 years later, the air facilities of this country carried 8,340,408 pounds of mail.

A mature industry has grown up in our midst in the brief period of 10 years, and what we need now is mature laws properly to regulate our newest and swiftest mode of travel.

I make those observations in keeping with the observation of the Senator from New York to show the growth of this form of transportation, thus to emphasize the fact that it is here to stay, and, being here to stay, it should now receive the benefit that came too late to our railroads and their method of transportation.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President——

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. POPE. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator if he is going to deal with the question raised by the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from New York, that, inasmuch as the Interstate Commerce Commission is railroad-minded, so to speak, because of their training and dealing with railroad regulations, therefore in actual experience they have favored the railroads in the making of joint rates, particularly as to water transportation. I am wondering if the Senator is going to deal with that question, and also the question which raises very serious doubt in the minds of some of us, namely, that if that be true, then they might do the same thing with reference to air transportation.

In my section of the country, as the Senator knows, we have to rely not only upon railroad transportation largely, but, in my State, upon transportation by one railroad. We have had the problem for many years of long-and-short-haul rates, by reason of competition between the railroads and water transportation to the coast, to which low rates may be fixed, and higher rates charged us in the interior. That question raises a very serious problem in our State.

Does the Senator think that the fact, if it be a fact, that the Interstate Commerce Commission as constituted have favored railroad transportation as against other forms of transportation, as asserted by the Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], would raise a doubt as to the advisability of putting this form of transportation under the jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

I have a very high regard for the Interstate Commerce Commission. I feel that they have acted ably and fairly in all matters of transportation rates and regulations with which I am familiar, but the suggestion which has been made does raise some doubt in my mind as to the extension of the jurisdiction of the Commission over air transportation.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I am glad to have the Senator's observation, because it gives me an opportunity for a very brief discussion. I will not go at length into it.

I am not ready, first of all, to say that I would go along with the thought that the Interstate Commerce Commission has become entirely railroad-minded and discriminating as against other methods or facilities of transportation. I may say that, by reason of new facilities of transportation coming into existence, those who would seek to criticize might find a ground for criticism which might in the future not have foundation. As I have said to the Senator from Missouri, I would be one of the first to go along with a proposal for the enlargement of the Interstate Commerce Commission so that the Commission might in the future be divided into sections to deal with separate subjects. But we have got to take one step at a time, and this is one of the steps. We have under the bill placed this facility of transportation in interstate commerce where we believe it belongs. The time may come when some of us, realizing the extent and expanse of this form of transportation, will say, "Certainly the Interstate Commerce Commission should be expanded in membership in order that they may properly handle this subject." But suppose we were to abandon this bill and then say we will enlarge the Interstate Commerce Commission, immediately the question would be raised, Why? Then we would have to say because it is proposed to bring air transportation under the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Now this bill is before us. We are going to bring air commerce into the Interstate Commerce Commission, if we can, in order that all facilities of transportation may be coordinated. We are going to say that, at least temporarily, a bureau shall be set up in the Commission under which this great method of transportation may be developed; and, after all is said and done, however much we may extend or expand or increase the membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission, eventually the Commission will have to come down to a small nucleus; they will have to say, "A smaller body should handle this matter, subject to our regulation after they handle it." In other words, they will have to submit it to a small committee, as is the procedure of the great committees of the Senate. We have said, "This committee is too large to handle it; let us entrust it to a subcommittee of three or five or seven."

Mr. TRUMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I gladly yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. TRUMAN. It is a question either of regulation for air transportation or a question of no regulation at all. Transportation heretofore has been handled by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Under measures enacted in the last session by Congress, they regulate pipe lines and waterways. It is proposed now to give them charge of the regulation of air transportation. The only way they can become air-minded is to give them experience in the handling of such transportation.

Mr. McCARRAN. I thank the Senator from Missouri for his observation.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President——

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator from California.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Caraway	Holt	O'Mahoney
Andrews	Chavez	Hughes	Overton
Ashurst	Clark	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper
Austin	Connally	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman
Barkley	Copeland	King	Pope
Berry	Dieterich	La Follette	Reynolds
Bilbo	Donahey	Lee	Schwartz
Black	Ellender	Lewis	Schwellenbach
Bone	Frazier	Lodge	Sheppard
Borah	George	Logan	Smathers
Bridges	Gerry	Lonergan	Smith
Brown, Mich.	Gillette	Lundeen	Steiwer
Brown, N. H.	Glass	McAdoo	Thomas, Okla.
Bulkley	Green	McCarran	Truman
Bulow	Hale	McGill	Van Nuys
Burke	Harrison	McKellar	White
Byrd	Hatch	Maloney
Byrnes	Herring	Murray
Capper	Hitchcock	Nye

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Seventy-three Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I am not going to deal with that phase of the bill which has entirely to do with definitions. I am going to deal with that phase of the bill which is more material to the general situation. I, therefore, ask Senators who are interested in the bill to turn to page 68 of the committee print dealing with section 304 (a), which is designed to promote the development of efficient interstate, overseas, and foreign air transportation. To speak merely in general terms, the bill proposes to transfer the control and regulatory and economic features of air transportation to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Let me refer to the situation that now exists.

Today four distinct and separate branches of the Government are involved in interstate commerce by air. First of all we have the Department of Agriculture which has charge of weather reports. Weather reports are all-essential to the life of air transportation.

Secondly, we have the Commerce Department, which deals now with certain phases of air transportation, namely, ground facilities, ground protection, ground guides, and those things which belong to the development of safety in the air, part of which should be under the Department of Commerce and part of which should not be, but nevertheless we have the Department of Commerce involved in the matter.

Thirdly, we have the Post Office Department involved. Today the Post Office Department in no blushing terms demands entire and absolute control over the air facilities of the country.

That brings me to one feature of the subject which to my mind no one who has followed the matter from its inception to the present time can deny—that one man in the Post Office Department, today walking the Halls of Congress, today constituting a lobby here contrary to Executive order, is controlling and dominating the air life of the country. His name was "Crouley" in Ireland, but it is Crowley in Texas. That man holds the life of air transportation in his hands, and he nowise blushingly demands that he control it. We are trying to take it out of his hands and turn it over to a nonpolitical body.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield for a question only.

Mr. McKELLAR. Speaking of Mr. Crowley——

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield only for a question.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am going to ask a question. Are not Mr. Keyser, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Mr. Inwood, of the Interstate Commission, on the floor of the Senate, and have they not been on the floor of the Senate with the Senator trying to get the bill brought before the Senate this morning, aiding the Senator? I just want to know if those two gentlemen have not been on the floor of the Senate this morning.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Interstate Commerce Committee, under the guidance of its able chairman, the Senator from Montana [Mr. WHEELER], has had the services of Mr. Keyser and Mr. Inwood in the work of the committee. I have asked Mr. Keyser to sit with me because he is familiar with the provisions of the bill. Mr. Inwood is sitting by the side of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. Mr. Inwood is likewise familiar with the provisions of the bill. Yesterday, when we had the sugar bill before the Senate, an expert from the Department of State sat beside the Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN]. Did we hesitate about that or complain about it?

Yes; I have by my side Mr. Keyser, who aided in the drafting of the bill. We called for assistance to aid the Interstate Commerce Committee in the drafting of the bill. Why does not the Senator from Tennessee complain of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] sitting here, because he sat as chairman of the subcommittee which studies the bill and knows more about the bill than any man on the floor of the Senate? He is sitting here, and yet the Senator from Tennessee does not complain about that.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I do not yield.

Mr. McKELLAR. Does not the Senator want his question answered?

Mr. McCARRAN. I am going to answer the Senator's question first, and then I shall yield for him to ask another question.

Yes; Mr. Keyser is sitting here, just as the Senator from Tennessee has had departmental clerks sitting with him during the consideration of other measures. I have the men sitting here who have worked with the Interstate Commerce Committee and who know what the committee has gone through. We have to have those with us who have studied the matters involved, so that we may have the benefit of their suggestions as we proceed. In a subject so important as this, into which no personalities should enter, where a great national problem is involved, where something is involved that means the development of America so it may take its place among the nations of the earth, then we do call for the best assistance we can find. The Senator from Tennessee has done that exact thing from time to time.

I yield now to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator from Nevada spoke of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] being on the floor. The rules of the Senate permit the Senator from Missouri to be on the floor.

Mr. McCARRAN. Do the rules deny the right of Mr. Keyser to be on the floor?

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; the rules do.

Mr. McCARRAN. Then Mr. Keyser will have to leave the floor; but I want to warn the Senator from Tennessee that the next man who appears on the floor of the Senate to assist a committee in presenting a bill to the Senate will likewise be required to leave the floor, because I shall object.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection; but the Senator was criticizing a man who he said was roaming the corridors working against the bill. I was simply calling attention to the fact that it is a violation of the rules to have two employees of the Interstate Commerce Commission right here on the floor of the Senate. That is contrary to the rules of the Senate.

Mr. McCARRAN. Does the Senator want them taken off the floor?

Mr. McKELLAR. I have made no suggestion of that kind.

Mr. McCARRAN. If the Senator wants them to leave the Chamber, I shall have them excluded.

Mr. McKELLAR. I merely wanted to show that the Senator was talking about somebody roaming around the corridors while at the same time he had two Interstate Commerce Commission employees right here on the floor taking part in the consideration of the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. Neither Mr. Keyser, who sits by my side, has discussed the bill, nor Mr. Inwood, who sits beside the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK], has ever approached the Senator. I make that statement without even discussing the matter with them. Can the Senator say the same about Crowley?

Mr. McKELLAR. Does the Senator ask me a question? Mr. Crowley, who has been before the committee——

Mr. McCARRAN. I call him "Crowley."

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator may call him anything he likes, but his name is Crowley—C-r-o-w-l-e-y—and he is Solicitor of the Post Office Department. He is one of the most accomplished and one of the best men of whom I know in the Government service. He had a perfect right to appear before the committee; he appeared before the committee time and again; he has testified before the committee; but he has not been on the Senate floor at my request or at the request of anybody else.

Mr. McCARRAN. No; but he has been out in the halls, calling Senators out and conversing with them.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator makes that statement. I do not know whether or not it is correct.

Mr. McCARRAN. I shall make a good many more statements before I conclude.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Texas will state it.

Mr. CONNALLY. The debate has degenerated to a point where Senators are making undue implications, not warranted by the rules, as to what has been stated by other Senators. Personal debate of this character is not within the dignity or proper scope of legislative practice of the Senate.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I call the Senator from Texas to order. There has been no personal matter between the Senator from Tennessee and myself. I have a right to refer to those who have interfered in this legislation.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, let me say under my point of order that I was seeking to direct the attention of the Senate, not to the language used by the Senator from Nevada but to that used by the Senator from Tennessee a moment ago, in which he said that the Senator from Nevada had made a statement and he did not know whether it was true or not.

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no, Mr. President; oh, no, Mr. President! The Senator from Texas wholly misunderstood my statement. I am a devoted friend of the Senator from Nevada, and, of course, he would not make a misstatement. I almost feel that I should resent the suggestion that the Senator from Nevada would make a misstatement.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator from Texas did not assume that the Senator from Nevada made a misstatement. If the Senator from Texas misunderstood the Senator from Tennessee—and he hopes he did——

Mr. McKELLAR. He certainly did.

Mr. CONNALLY. If the Senator from Tennessee says the Senator from Texas misunderstood him, the Senator from Texas did misunderstand him.

Mr. McKELLAR. I thank the Senator.

Mr. CONNALLY. Peace and harmony now being restored, the purpose of the Senator from Texas has been accomplished, and he will not insist upon the point of order unless the rules are again seemingly transgressed.

Mr. McCARRAN. I thank the Senator from Texas for withdrawing it.

Mr. President, I take it that Mr. Keyser may remain here with me. I hope he may remain without any criticism.

To return to a discussion of the bill, I have tried to draw to the attention of the Senate the aims and objects of the bill. I shall now draw to the attention of the Senate the objections that will be raised by the able Senator from Tennessee.

My friend from Tennessee will raise some objections. I have heard them before. I have made note of them. I seek to bring them to the attention of the Senate so as to save the time of the able Senator from Tennessee, who undoubtedly will follow me.

Mr. President, the Senator from Tennessee, the able chairman of the Post Offices and Post Roads Committee, undoubtedly will say to the Senate of the United States, as he has said before the committee, that this bill would transfer to the Interstate Commerce Commission all normal functions of the Postmaster General with reference to air-mail transportation. In other words, I take it that the zeal of the able Senator from Tennessee is such that he wants to protect the rights of the Postmaster General in handling the mail. He does not want to protect those rights any more than does the author of the bill. He does not want to protect the rights of the Postmaster General any more than does the committee.

If Senators will kindly turn to section 305 (g) of the committee print on their desks they will see that no postal function of any kind is taken from the Postmaster General. Section 305 (g) provides that certificate holders must—and this I draw to the attention of the Senate—(a) provide facilities for transporting the mail; (b) transport mail when authorized by certificate, and required by the Postmaster General, under the Postmaster General's rules and regulations.

Again, under section 311, subdivisions (g), (h), and (i), the Postmaster General is given all necessary authority for, first, administering air-mail transportation, and, second, making foreign air-mail postal arrangements.

That draws my attention to another phase of the bill, and that is that not only would the Interstate Commerce Commission regulate interstate commerce, but it would also regulate commerce from this country to foreign countries; and how necessary that is. Senators will remember that at the outset I said that not only should we regulate commerce between the States, but we should regulate commerce between this country and foreign countries as well, in order that while other countries in the past have controlled the waves, in the future this country may control the air. Today we have lines flying the American flag from this country through to South America on one coast and back up on the other coast. We have lines under the control of this country flying the American flag flying from this country to the Orient and back. We have today the development of a great line flying from the west coast clear through to Australia, to New Zealand, and thence to Australia, all under the American flag; and we have today—as Senators will know if they have read the current news of the press—the first completed flight from the east coast through, by way of Ireland, to London, and thence to Europe.

So America, by private enterprise, if you please, and by private enterprise only, has acquired rights of flight from this country to South America, thus bringing South America closer to this country for travel, thus bringing South America and the South American coast closer to this country for commerce, and rights of flight extending from the west coast clear through to New Zealand and Australia, thus bringing the antipodes closer to this country for commerce and for travel. So by private enterprise we have today flights extending from the east coast by way of Newfoundland through to Europe, flights that will be carried on for passenger and mail and general service in the not-far-distant future.

All of these lines today are seeking to come under the regulatory features of this bill. Not a single transport line today—and I say this without fear of contradiction—either flying upon the continent or flying from the continent abroad, is opposing any provision of this bill. Every one of them has been advised of the bill, and advised of it from its very initial features, and has given us its views, that we might adopt them so far as we could, and thus bring them under the regulatory features of the bill.

Mr. President, when I returned to Washington in the latter part of last year, I immediately began correspondence with every transport line in America, stating to them that I proposed to bring forward again my bill for the regulation of air transport in this country, and asking them for their constructive criticisms. I have carbon copies of those letters, sent out to every transport company in the country, not only the local transport companies, those that deal entirely with interstate commerce, but also those that deal with commerce to foreign countries. In every instance I have received the careful study, the constructive criticism, the constructive observations, the constructive views of those lines; and their views, so far as it was possible, have been written into this bill.

So today what have we?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I desire to suggest to the able Senator from Nevada that the primary interest of the American people in this particular subject relates not to the transportation of the mail from one part of the United States to the other, or from the United States to various sections of the world, insofar as mail is concerned, but the primary interest is that of the increase of commerce; and we must all necessarily agree that the advent of the Pan-American Airways to the 22 countries to the south of us, serving 100,000,000 people, has done more to create friendly relations between the 135,000,000 people of America and the 100,000,000 people residing to the south of us than all of the Diplomatic Corps we have had there for years. It has planted the American flag conspicuously in 22 countries, and unquestionably has done more to increase the commerce between the United States of America and the Republics to the south of us than any other factor we have ever known.

Mr. McCARRAN. I thank the Senator from North Carolina for his apt and interesting observations. It is in the spirit of his observations and the thought that prompts them that the entire bill has been brought forward. In other words, not only should we develop transportation by air within our own midst, interstate, but that we should develop transportation by air between this country and foreign countries, thus to bring foreign countries closer to us from the commercial standpoint, thus to bring business from foreign countries to our country, and to take business from our country to foreign countries.

Mr. REYNOLDS. And that, I wish to add, is the very reason why the control of all air transportation should be vested with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. McCARRAN. I again thank the Senator from North Carolina for his observation.

Mr. President, I shall proceed now to aid my able friend the Senator from Tennessee so that he shall not be detained too long, by referring to another expression he will make. He will say that the bill would take the right to control schedules away from the Postmaster General. If Senators will turn to section 305, subdivision (g), they will find that the Postmaster General is specifically empowered to prescribe schedules for transporting mail, and is given the power to make all rules and regulations for the transportation of mail. The observation that will be made by the Senator will have no foundation in the lines of the bill, because it was with a studied effort that we proposed that the transportation of the mail by air should not be interfered with, that the right to control the transportation of the mail by air should always be in the Postmaster General.

I ask Senators now to turn to section 311. The Senator from Tennessee will undoubtedly state to the Senate that the bill would not properly protect the Government against excessive rates and expenditures for air-mail transportation, and that it would not limit the Interstate Commerce Commission with reference to the number of miles of air mail to be established, or the frequency of the trips, and that it would increase air-mail transportation costs. I want the Senate to dwell on this for a moment, because this is one of the big points my able friend the Senator from Tennessee will make following my discussion of the bill.

The Senator will say that it would increase the air-mail transportation costs by $5,617,669.02 over present domestic and $2,800,000 for present foreign air-mail costs. I will ask Senators to turn to section 311, found on page 94 of the committee print of the bill. First of all, I say that this bill would add nothing to the cost of any mail service, foreign or domestic, now conducted at fair and reasonable rates. Section 311 provides that rates for air-mail transportation shall be fixed by the Interstate Commerce Commission after notice of hearing, and must be fair and reasonable.

The Interstate Commerce Commission fix the rates for carrying the mail on every railroad in the United States. They fix the rates and the method of carrying the mail. They prescribe the rates for mail carried by pouch, they prescribe space rates, and they prescribe car rates. Those who are familiar with mail rates know that to be true, and no one knows it better than does the able Senator from Tennessee. So, the Interstate Commerce Commission, in keeping with that, would fix fair and reasonable rates.

What have we today? We have what the Senator from Tennessee would call competitive bidding. Let me draw attention to one example. The last competitive bid that was submitted to the Post Office Department was by the Pennsylvania Central Airlines, which agreed to carry the mail for eight one-thousandths of a cent per mile. Let me repeat that. The Pennsylvania Central Airlines just a few weeks ago bid to carry mail over its route for eight one-thousandths of a cent per mile. Do not lose the decimal.

Mr. TRUMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a correction?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. TRUMAN. That is eight ten-thousandths of a mill, eight one-hundred-thousandths of a cent.

Mr. McCARRAN. I thank the Senator for the correction. I go back to the decimal, eight one-hundred-thousandths of a cent per mile.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I am curious to know how any transportation company, air line or otherwise, could possibly carry the mail for the rate suggested by the Senator according to the bid mentioned.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield to me? I should like to answer the question of the Senator from North Carolina.

Mr. McCARRAN. I prefer to answer questions asked me.

Mr. McKELLAR. I will answer it a little later.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I shall be very happy, indeed, to hear the Senator.

Mr. McKELLAR. I can answer it.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I should like to hear the answer of the Senator from Nevada, who is sponsoring the bill.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am going to answer the question by speaking in generalities. First, it cannot be done; secondly, it is a cutthroat bid, and we are now dealing with cutthroat competition, one line trying to destroy another. If Senators will read the hearings on the bill, they will find that the Pennsylvania Central Air Lines have come into existence by freezing out another line, under the direction and observation and permission of Mr. Crowley. I am going back to that. Secondly, that this cutthroat competition is destructive of the entire situation, and if the Pennsylvania Lines or any other lines could carry the mail for such a ridiculous rate, it would simply mean that some other agency must pay the price. It would simply mean that their equipment and their line must either have support from some other source or it must deteriorate, so that the lives of passengers traveling on that line would not be safe. That is my general answer to the Senator's question.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, if such cutthroat competition is permitted today, I should like to ask where provision may be found for the protection of the pioneers of the skies, who have invested millions for the purpose of contributing to the progress of aviation, which has brought us so close to every other section of the world, and which has increased our commerce with all of the nations of the world as a result of rapid transportation.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I can only say that if such a practice as that which is illustrated by the bid made by the Pennsylvania Central Air Lines should be permitted it would mean the destruction of our whole structure of transportation by air; it would simply mean someone who has not some backing could be, through competition, bid out of existence by a false and fictitious bid. That is all it means. If we continue such policies, it is just as certain as day follows night that this great industry and this great facility will be destroyed. I drew this example to the attention of the Senate only to arouse the Senate to a situation which confronts us. The answer is in the bill—that the Interstate Commerce Commission, knowing what it was about, would fix reasonable and proper rates for carrying the mail.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield for a question only.

Mr. McKELLAR. Will not the Senator yield to permit me to answer the question of the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. McCARRAN. I prefer that the Senator answer in his own time. If he answers in his own time, I will help him to answer; but I yield for a question only, because I do not want to be held on the floor all day.

Mr. McKELLAR. Very well.

Mr. McCARRAN. Now I shall proceed to reply to what the Senator from Tennessee will say to the Senate. I repeat, the Senator from Tennessee will say to the Senate that the bill would not properly protect the Government against excessive rates and expenditures for air-mail transportation; that it would not limit the Interstate Commerce Commission with reference to the number of miles of air mail to be established, or the frequency of trips; that it would increase the air-mail transportation costs by $5,617,000 for present domestic and by $2,800,000 for foreign air-mail carriage. I have drawn the attention of the Senate to the bill and to the specific provisions of the bill.

I again draw the attention of the Senate to section 305 of the bill before the Senators, subdivisions (a), (d), (e), (f), (g), and (m). Under those provisions the Interstate Commerce Commission would not establish any routes, air mail or otherwise, but would merely grant authority to conduct air transportation. The Postmaster General would have the sole power to determine whether any airlines with authority should carry the mail. The Postmaster General still would have power to initiate new air-mail service. The Postmaster General would determine on what trips the mail should be carried, and would fix the schedules of mail trips. In other words, by the specific provisions of the bill the Postmaster General would fix the details with reference to carrying the mail.

The Senator from Tennessee undoubtedly will say that the bill would perpetuate present foreign and domestic air-mail contracts, give present contractors perpetual franchises free from competition, empower the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish transport service to whatever points in the world it may desire, and force the Postmaster General to put mail on every one of these lines.

Mr. President, I draw the attention of the Senate to section 311 (a) and (b). Under those provisions any qualified person may secure a certificate of convenience and necessity between any points, including points covered by "grandfather clause" certificates to the present operators.

Section 305, subparagraphs (f), (g), and (m), provides that any certificate may authorize the holder to transmit mails. Every certificate holder so authorized must carry mail whenever required by the Postmaster General under the Postmaster General's rules and regulations. The Postmaster General, and not the Interstate Commerce Commission, controls the mail service.

Section 305 (l) provides that certificates may be issued for a limited time. The Interstate Commerce Commission may suspend any certificate for cause.

Under section 305 the Interstate Commerce Commission may not establish a route, but may only approve an application.

Again, section 305 gives the Postmaster General complete control over initiating extensions of the air-mail map and determining what carriers, planes, and trips shall actually carry the mail.

Undoubtedly the Senator from Tennessee will say during the course of his argument that the bill would permit consolidation. I wish the Senator from Tennessee were here. I am sorry I cannot have his attention. Undoubtedly he will overlook this statement in the RECORD, because he will be so busy in preparing to overcome the specific provisions of the bill. In order that we may possibly have the presence of the able Senator from Tennessee, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWARTZ in the chair). The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the name of Mr. ADAMS.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada withhold his request? No Senator has as yet answered to his name. Would the Senator from Nevada be willing to permit his bill to be laid aside temporarily?

Mr. McKELLAR. The bill has not as yet been taken up for consideration.

Mr. COPELAND. I mean the discussion of the bill. Would the Senator from Nevada be willing to forego discussion of the bill temporarily so that bills on the calendar may be considered?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Nevada will accede to the request of the Senator from New York temporarily to forego the discussion of the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it was my plan that the Senate should continue the present discussion until 2 or 3 o'clock, and then, if we could obtain the consent of the Senators particularly interested in the bill, as well as of the Senate, by unanimous consent temporarily to defer the present discussion, and have the Senate proceed to the consideration of unobjected-to bills on the calendar. I do not believe that should be done at the present moment, however.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, is there any way by which the calendar can be taken up at this time, and the discussion of the bill temporarily deferred, leaving things in the same parliamentary status in which they now are?

Mr. BARKLEY. That can only be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. McCARRAN. I am willing to have the discussion of the bill go over until Monday if it may be understood that I shall have the floor on Monday.

Mr. McKELLAR. When would the Senator from Nevada want to bring up the bill again?

Mr. McCARRAN. On Monday morning.

Mr. McKELLAR. I cannot be here all day Monday.

Mr. McCARRAN. The Senator does not need to be here.

Mr. McKELLAR. Whether I need to be here or not, I am going to be here when the Senator discusses the bill.

Mr. COPELAND. I beg the Senator to let the discussion of the bill be deferred temporarily, so that the calendar may be taken up.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the discussion of the bill can be resumed on Tuesday, I should be willing to accede to that.

Mr. BARKLEY. It cannot be done on Tuesday, because the Senate will then have before it the consideration of the nomination of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK].

Mr. McCARRAN. I am willing to put my motion aside, provided it is understood that we shall continue to have the same status and the same position on the floor on Monday morning.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, if the motion is temporarily laid aside for the purpose of calling the calendar, the motion will resume its present status when the Senate meets again; that is, if it is laid aside by unanimous consent.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I hope that may be done.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at the hour of 2 o'clock the pending motion be temporarily laid aside for the purpose of permitting the Senate to proceed to the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I wish to say that this is a very important measure, and I feel that without considerable discussion the Senate cannot receive a proper exposition of what these two bills really mean; and I should not like to have the discussion deferred aside until I myself have had something to say about the matter.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Tennessee yield for a question?

Mr. McKELLAR. I have not the floor.

Mr. CONNALLY. Will the Senator from Kentucky yield to me?

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Nevada has the floor.

Mr. McCARRAN. I will yield to the Senator from Texas to let him ask a question of the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. CONNALLY. I wish to make a suggestion for the consideration of the Senator from Tennessee, who is opposed to having the bill taken up for consideration. In view of that opposition on his part, it occurs to me that the longer it is postponed, whether by reason of taking up the calendar or anything else, the better the purpose of the Senator from Tennessee would be served.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I have been here long enough to know better than that. When other Senators have no business before this body, they are not interested in taking up this bill or anything else. However, I take it that the Members of the Senate are not going to let this bill be debated in their absence ad infinitum, in view of the important matters that are to come before the Senate.

Mr. President, the bill under discussion is very controversial; it is very important. The President of the United States has strongly recommended the passage of a reorganization bill, which I understand is to be reported on Monday. The President is not in favor of the bill now under discussion. He is not in favor of the passage of the bill at this session of the Congress. For that reason——

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, the Senator from Nevada, as I understand, does not have the floor.

Mr. McCARRAN. I have the floor, and I refuse to yield further.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Nevada had the floor, and yielded to me.

Mr. McKELLAR. The Senator demanded a quorum call, and he cannot do that and also retain the floor.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for one moment?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. COPELAND. I beg the Senator from Tennessee to consider that if he is seeking an audience to hear his argument—and I want to hear it—he will not get it on Saturday. The Senator realizes that a large number of our colleagues are away.

Mr. McKELLAR. And more of them will be away when remaining business in which they are interested shall have been passed by the Senate. Next week I shall be confronted with having to talk for a week, perhaps, to kill this bill, and I do not want to do that. I would rather talk against it now.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. The Senator would not do that now.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, so important do I consider this bill, and so necessary is it that it shall not become law at this session of Congress, that I am going to oppose it to the limit of my physical ability, and I do not care who knows it. I am very strongly opposed to this bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I desire to ask the Senator a question. That is the reason why I rose.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am delighted to answer.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I heard the Senator say that the reorganization bill recommended by the President was to be reported.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am informed that it is to be here next Tuesday.

Mr. BARKLEY. The committee is to meet Monday to consider the bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. That is a different thing.

Mr. McKELLAR. I am told that it is likely that the bill will be reported.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the Senator from Tennessee misunderstood me.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I have the floor through all this.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator from Tennessee misunderstood me if he is now under the impression that I stated that the reorganization bill was to be considered next week.

Mr. McKELLAR. I understood it was to be reported next week.

Mr. BYRNES. I stated that I hoped the bill would be reported to the Senate next week; but there is an understanding that it will not be considered at this session.

Mr. McKELLAR. Then I misunderstood the Senator.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Nevada yield to me to propound a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, for the present I shall object.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator does not agree to that, I withdraw the request.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, I ask for a quorum call. I suggested the absence of a quorum, and I again suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Caraway	Holt	O'Mahoney
Andrews	Chavez	Hughes	Overton
Ashurst	Clark	Johnson, Calif.	Pepper
Austin	Connally	Johnson, Colo.	Pittman
Barkley	Copeland	King	Pope
Berry	Dieterich	La Follette	Reynolds
Bilbo	Donahey	Lee	Schwartz
Black	Ellender	Lewis	Schwellenbach
Bone	Frazier	Lodge	Sheppard
Borah	George	Logan	Shipstead
Bridges	Gerry	Lonergan	Smathers
Brown, Mich.	Gillette	Lundeen	Smith
Brown, N. H.	Glass	McAdoo	Steiwer
Bulkley	Green	McCarran	Thomas, Okla.
Bulow	Hale	McGill	Truman
Burke	Harrison	McKellar	Van Nuys
Byrd	Hatch	Maloney	White
Byrnes	Herring	Murray
Capper	Hitchcock	Nye

Mr. LEWIS. I reannounce the absence of certain Senators as stated by me on the previous roll call, and ask that the announcement may remain in the RECORD for any further calls during the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MURRAY in the chair). Seventy-four Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in keeping with the suggestion of the Senator from New York and the Senator from Kentucky, the leader of the majority, I again express my accord that if it be the desire of the Senate by unanimous consent that the pending matter go over in its present status until Monday, I am entirely content.

I wish to say that if I yield the floor, and the Senator from Tennessee takes the floor, I shall not then be in accord with the view I now express.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator from Nevada yields the floor, and the Senator from Tennessee takes the floor, and later, by unanimous consent, the pending motion is laid aside temporarily for the call of the calendar, it would resume its present status on Monday, and the Senator from Tennessee would still have the floor.

Mr. McKELLAR. I understand.

Mr. BARKLEY. I did not know whether the Senator objected to that procedure.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in order that the Senate, with more Members present, may have the views of the author of the bill, and in the hope that I may have the opportunity of explaining the bill in greater particularity——

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield there?

Mr. McCARRAN. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the Senator should consent to the temporary laying aside of the pending motion while he has the floor himself, would he agree that it go over until 2 o'clock Monday and resume then its present status?

Mr. McCARRAN. Yes.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection to that.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent, if the Senator from Nevada will yield for that purpose, that the pending motion be temporarily laid aside, in order that the Senate may proceed to the call of the calendar for the consideration of unobjected bills, and that at 2 o'clock on Monday next the pending motion resume its status.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Kentucky? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

CONSIDERATION OF UNOBJECTED BILLS ON THE CALENDAR

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, under the agreement just entered into, the Senate should proceed now with the call of the calendar for the consideration of unobjected bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will proceed with the call of the calendar.

The bill (S. 1436) providing for the employment of skilled shorthand reporting in the executive branch of the Government, was announced as first in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask that the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 419) to promote the general welfare through the appropriation of funds to assist the States and Territories in providing more effective programs of public education, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 847) to prevent the use of Federal official patronage in elections and to prohibit Federal officeholders from misuse of positions of public trust for private and partisan ends, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 4276) to amend an act entitled "An act to create a juvenile court in and for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes", was announced as next in order.

Mr. GERRY. I ask that that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2106) for the allowances of certain claims not heretofore paid, for indemnity for spoliations by the French, prior to July 31, 1801, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 1760) to promote the safety of scheduled air transportation was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BENEFITS ON ACCOUNT OF DISABILITY OR DEATH IN THE ARMED FORCES

The bill (S. 2113) to provide benefits on account of disability or death due to service in the armed forces of the United States in the event of war, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in order to provide a system for the relief of persons who may become disabled, and for the dependents of those who may die as a result of disability suffered in the military or naval service of the United States in any future war in which the United States is engaged, the laws providing monetary and other benefits on account of death or disability incurred or aggravated in service during the World War shall be applicable to veterans and dependents of veterans of such future war in the same manner and to at least the same extent as the laws providing such benefits on account of World War service are being applied at the beginning of such future war.

CAPE HATTERAS NATIONAL SEASHORE, N. C.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, in view of the fact that I have an appointment at one of the departments at 1:30 o'clock, I was wondering if the Senate would agree to permit me to call up out of order Calendar No. 1247, being House bill 7022? I have an appointment with a delegation from my State, and I do not want to disappoint them; so I should like to be permitted to call the bill to the attention of the Senate at this time. There is no controversy about it at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 7022) to provide for the establishment of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore in the State of North Carolina, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That when title to all the lands, except those within the limits of established villages, within boundaries to be designated by the Secretary of the Interior within the area of approximately 100 square miles on the islands of Chicamacomico, Ocracoke, Bodie, Roanoke, and Collington, and the waters and the lands beneath the waters adjacent thereto shall have been vested in the United States, said area shall be, and is hereby, established, dedicated, and set apart as a national seashore for the benefit and enjoyment of the people and shall be known as the Cape Hatteras National Seashore: Provided, That the United States shall not purchase by appropriation of public moneys any lands within the aforesaid area, but such lands shall be secured by the United States only by public or private donation.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to accept donations of land, interests in land, buildings, structures, and other property, within the boundaries of said national seashore as determined and fixed hereunder and donations of funds for the purchase and maintenance thereof, the title and evidence of title to lands acquired to be satisfactory to the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That he may acquire on behalf of the United States under any donated funds by purchase, when purchasable at prices deemed by him reasonable, otherwise by condemnation under the provisions of the act of August 1, 1888, such tracts of land within the said national seashore as may be necessary for the completion thereof.

SEC. 3. The administration, protection, and development of the aforesaid national seashore shall be exercised under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior by the National Park Service, subject to the provisions of the act of August 25, 1916 (39 Stat. 535), entitled "An act to establish a National Park Service, and for other purposes", as amended: Provided, That except as hereinafter provided, nothing herein shall be construed to divest the jurisdiction of other agencies of the Government now exercised over Federal-owned lands within the area of the said Cape Hatteras National Seashore: Provided further, That the provisions of the act of June 10, 1920, known as the "Federal Water Power Act", shall not apply to this national seashore: And provided further, That the legal residents of villages referred to in section 1 of this act shall have the right to earn a livelihood by fishing within the boundaries to be designated by the Secretary of the Interior, subject to such rules and regulations as the said Secretary may deem necessary in order to protect the area for recreational use as provided for in this act.

SEC. 4. Except for certain portions of the area, deemed to be especially adaptable for recreational uses, particularly swimming, boating, sailing, fishing, and other recreational activities of similar nature, which shall be developed for such uses as needed, the said area shall be permanently reserved as a primitive wilderness and no development of the project or plan for the convenience of visitors shall be undertaken which would be incompatible with the preservation of the unique flora and fauna or the physiographic conditions now prevailing in this area: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, accept for administration, protection, and development by the National Park Service a minimum of 10,000 acres within the area described in section 1 of this act, including the existing Cape Hatteras State Park, and, in addition, any other portions of the area described in section 1 hereof if the State of North Carolina shall agree that if all the lands described in section 1 of this act shall not have been conveyed to the United States within 10 years from the passage of this act, the establishment of the aforesaid national seashore may, in the discretion of the said Secretary, be abandoned, and that, in the event of such abandonment, the said State will accept a reconveyance of title to all lands conveyed by it to the United States for said national seashore. The lands donated to the United States for the purposes of this act by parties other than said State shall revert in the event of the aforesaid abandonment to the donors, or their heirs, or other persons entitled thereto by law.

In the event of said abandonment, the Secretary of the Interior shall execute any suitable quitclaim deeds, or other writings entitled to record in the proper counties of North Carolina stating the fact of abandonment, whereupon title shall revert to those entitled thereto by law and no further conveyance or proof of reversion of title shall be required.

SEC. 5. Notwithstanding any other provisions of this act, lands and waters now or hereafter included in any migratory bird refuge under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture, within the boundaries of the national seashore as designated by the Secretary of the Interior under section 1 hereof, shall continue as such refuge under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Agriculture for the protection of migratory birds, but such lands and waters shall be a part of the aforesaid national seashore and shall be administered by the National Park Service for recreational uses not inconsistent with the purposes of such refuge under such rules and regulations as the Secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture may jointly approve. The proviso to section 1 of this act shall not limit the power of the Secretary of Agriculture to acquire lands for any migratory bird refuge by purchase with any funds made available therefor by applicable law.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I thank the Senate.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2226) to regulate interstate commerce in the products of child labor, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 6215) to repeal provisions of the income tax requiring lists of compensation paid to officers and employees of corporations was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

JUVENILE COURT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I was out of the Chamber when Calendar 543, being the bill (H. R. 4276) relating to a juvenile court for the District of Columbia, was called. What became of it?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It went over on objection—on objection of the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY].

Mr. COPELAND. Let me explain about it, if the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] will give his attention. This bill was very much desired by our late leader, Senator Robinson. He spoke to me about it repeatedly. I explained on the floor of the Senate several times that certain amendments were desired. I have gone over the amendments with the Senator from Rhode Island and I feel satisfied if his amendments are accepted and the bill passed, in the conference we should be able to work out the kind of bill we desire. We have had the bill before the District Committee for 2 or 3 years. I am sure we are in a position now to realize our desires if the bill can be passed.

I ask unanimous consent to return to Calendar No. 543.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4276) to amend an act entitled "An act to create a juvenile court in and for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes", which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on the District of Columbia was, on page 2, after line 8, to strike out the following:

"The principle is hereby recognized that children under the jurisdiction of the court are subject to the discipline and entitled to the protection of the State, which may intervene to safeguard them from neglect or injury and to enforce the legal obligations due to them and from them.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 4, line 21, after the word "age", to insert "subject to appropriate statutes of limitation", so as to make the paragraph read:

"(b) Concerning any person under 21 years of age charged with having violated any law, or violated any ordinance or regulation of the District of Columbia, prior to having become 18 years of age, subject to appropriate statutes of limitation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 5, line 20, after the words "contributing to", to insert the word "or", and after the words "encouraging or", to strike out "tending to cause" and insert "causing", so as to make the paragraph read:

"2. Adults: The court shall have original and exclusive jurisdiction to determine cases of adults charged with wilfully contributing to, or encouraging, or causing by any act or omission any condition which would bring within the provisions of this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 6, line 21, after the word "verified", to strike out "alleging" and insert "by the officer making the investigation, or some other person having personal knowledge of the case, and shall allege", so as to make the paragraph read:

The petition shall be verified by the officer making the investigation, or some other person having personal knowledge of the case, and shall allege briefly the facts which bring said child within the provisions of this act, and stating the name, age, and residence (1) of the child; (2) of his parents; (3) of his legal guardian, if there be one; (4) of the person or persons having custody or control of the child; and (5) of the nearest known relative, if no parent or guardian can be found. If any of the facts herein required are not known by the petitioner the petition shall so state.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 7, line 21, after the word "presence", to strike out "in the opinion of the judge", so as to make the paragraph read:

SEC. 8. Summons; notice; custody of the child: After a petition shall have been filed, unless the parties hereinafter named shall voluntarily appear, the court shall issue a summons reciting briefly the substance of the petition, and requiring the person or persons who have the custody or control of the child to appear personally and bring the child before the court at a time and place stated. If the person so summoned shall be other than the parent or guardian of the child, then the parent or guardian, or both, shall also be notified of the pendency of the case and of the time and place appointed, by personal service before the hearing, except as hereinafter provided: Provided, That if the child is married, then the other spouse shall also be so notified. Summons may be issued requiring the appearance of any other person whose presence is necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 9, in section 10, line 5, after the word "same", to strike out "or in any case when it shall be made to appear to the judge that the service will be ineffectual", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 10. Failure to obey summons; warrant: If any person summoned as herein provided shall, without reasonable cause, fail to appear, he may be proceeded against for contempt of court. In case the summons cannot be served, or the parties served fail to obey the same, or the welfare of the child requires that he shall be brought forthwith into the custody of the court, a warrant may be issued against the parent or guardian or against the child himself.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 12, line 17, after the word "disposition", to insert "of the child as may be provided by law and", and in line 19, after the words "interests of the", to strike out "child, except as herein otherwise provided" and insert "child: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as authorizing the removal of the child from the custody of his parents until his welfare and the safety and protection of the public cannot be adequately safeguarded without such removal", so as to make the paragraph read:

(3) Make such further disposition of the child as may be provided by law and as the court may deem to be best for the best interests of the child: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as authorizing the removal of the child from the custody of his parents unless his welfare and the safety and protection of the public cannot be adequately safeguarded without such removal.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 19, line 22, after the word "court", to strike out "may designate a social worker of the court" and insert "shall with the approval of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, but without reference to the provisions of section 21 hereof, designate an officer of the court skilled as a social worker", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 25. Appointment of commissioner. The judge of the juvenile court shall with the approval of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, but without reference to the provisions of section 21 hereof, designate an officer of the court skilled as a social worker as commissioner in the first instance to hear any case coming within the provisions of this act and either to dispose thereof or to direct the filing of a petition therein. Whenever a commissioner is appointed in cases of girls, a woman commissioner shall be appointed to hear such cases.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 21, line 9, after the word "inspection", to insert "by defendants, their parents or guardians, or their duly authorized attorneys, but otherwise", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 29. Records; forms. The court shall maintain records of all cases brought before it. Such records shall be open to inspection by defendants, their parents or guardians, or their duly authorized attorneys, but otherwise only by order of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia. The court shall devise and cause to be printed such forms for records and such other papers as may be required.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 22, after line 18, to strike out section 34, as follows:

SEC. 34. Appeal: Any party aggrieved by any final order or judgment of the juvenile court may apply to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia for the allowance of a special appeal, and the said court of appeals may allow such special appeal whenever it is made to appear to said court, upon petition, that it will be in the interest of justice to allow an appeal. The time for, and manner of, taking such special appeal shall be the same as provided by law or rule of court for special appeals in equity cases from the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia to said court of appeals: Provided, That the special appeal or application for the allowance of such special appeal shall not suspend the order of the juvenile court, nor shall it discharge the child from the custody of that court or of the person, institution, or agency to whose care such child shall have been committed, unless the court of appeals shall so order. If the court of appeals does not dismiss the proceedings and discharge the child, it shall affirm or modify the order of the juvenile court and remand the child to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court for supervision and care, and thereafter the child shall be and remain under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court in the same manner as if such court had made said order without an appeal having been taken.

And insert the following:

SEC. 34. Appeal: Any interested party aggrieved by any final order or judgment of the juvenile court may apply to the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia or to one of the justices thereof for the allowance of an appeal, and the said court or justice may allow such appeal whenever in the opinion of said court or justice the order or judgment ought to be reviewed upon any matter of law. The application for said appeal shall be in writing, shall be verified, and shall state fully the grounds on which the same is asked, and shall include the petition and a narrative statement of the evidence authenticated by the judge of the juvenile court and the assignment or assignments of error relied on. If an appeal is allowed, the same shall be placed upon the privileged docket and shall be heard by the court as soon thereafter as is convenient to the court and as counsel may be heard. Any party desiring the benefit of the provisions of this section shall give notice in open court of his intention to apply for an appeal: Provided, That the appeal or application for the allowance of such appeal shall not suspend the order of the juvenile court, nor shall it discharge the child from the custody of that court or of the person, institution, or agency to whose care such child shall have been committed, unless the court of appeals shall so order. If the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia does not dismiss the proceedings and discharge the child, it shall affirm or modify the order of the juvenile court and remand the child to the jurisdiction of the juvenile court for supervision and care, and thereafter the child shall be and remain under the jurisdiction of the juvenile court in the same manner as if such court had made said order without an appeal having been taken.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the committee amendments.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, I desire to offer several amendments, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first amendment of the Senator from Rhode Island will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 5, section 6, paragraph 1 (c), line 4, it is proposed to strike out the words "if he shall so demand" and insert "unless he shall voluntarily waive such right and request a trial by the court", so as to make the paragraph read:

(c) To determine the paternity of any child alleged to have been born out of wedlock and to provide for his support in accordance with the provisions of an act providing for the support and maintenance of children born out of wedlock, approved June 18, 1912 (D. C. Code, title 18, secs. 281–287); in which cases the respondent shall be entitled to jury trial unless he shall voluntarily waive such right and request a trial by the court.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of Mr. GERRY was, on page 5, section 6, paragraph 2, line 19, after the word "jurisdiction", to strike out "to determine cases of adults charged with willfully contributing to, or encouraging, or causing by any act or omission any condition which would bring a child within the provisions of this act" and insert "of any act which shall bring a child within the provisions of this act", so as to make the paragraph read:

2. Adults: The court shall have original and exclusive jurisdiction of any act which shall bring a child within the provisions of this act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An amendment to that paragraph has just been agreed to. It will be necessary to reconsider the vote by which that amendment was agreed to. Without objection, the vote is reconsidered. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Rhode Island to the committee amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The next amendment of Mr. GERRY was, on page 12, section 14, line 2, after the words "without a jury", to strike out "unless a jury be demanded by the child, his parents, or guardian" and insert "only where the child or its parent or guardian has expressly waived a jury trial", so as to make the sentence read:

The court shall herein determine all cases of children without a jury only where the child or its parents or guardian has expressly waived jury trial.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of Mr. GERRY was, on page 16, section 18, to strike out lines 24 and 25, and on page 17, to strike out lines 1, 2, and 3, as follows:

If an adult is charged with an offense for which he is entitled to a trial by jury, and if he shall so demand, a jury shall be selected in accordance with the provisions of law regulating the selection of juries in the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia.

And insert the following:

If an adult is charged with an offense for which he is entitled to a trial by jury, he shall be so tried unless he shall have expressly waive his right to such trial.

So as to make the section read:

SEC. 18. Procedure in adult cases: All provisions of this act relative to procedure in cases of children so far as practicable shall be construed as applying also to cases against adults arising under section 6 of this act with the consent of the defendant or when not inconsistent with other provisions of law relating to the conduct of adult cases. Proceedings may be instituted upon complaint of an interested party or upon the court's own motion, and a reasonable opportunity to appear shall be afforded the respondent. The court may issue a summons, a warrant of arrest, or other process in order to secure or to compel the attendance of any necessary person. Any person who by act or omission willfully causes, encourages, or contributes to any condition which would bring a child within the provisions of this act, or who by such act or omission tends to cause such a condition, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and punished by a fine not exceeding $200 or imprisoned not exceeding 12 months, or by both fine and imprisonment. Upon the trial of such cases the court shall have power to impose such sentence as the law provides, or may suspend sentence and place on probation, and by order impose upon such adult such duty as shall be deemed to be for the best interests of the child or other persons concerned. If an adult is charged with an offense for which he is entitled to a trial by jury, he shall be so tried, unless he shall expressly waive his right to such trial.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of Mr. GERRY was, on pages 19 and 20, to strike out section 25, as follows:

SEC. 25. Appointment of commissioner: The judge of the juvenile court shall, with the approval of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, but without reference to the provisions of section 21 hereof, designate an officer of the court skilled as a social worker as commissioner in the first instance to hear any case coming within the provisions of this act, and either to dispose thereof or to direct the filing of a petition therein. Whenever a commissioner is appointed in cases of girls, a woman commissioner shall be appointed to hear such cases.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of Mr. GERRY was, on page 6, section 7, to strike out lines 8 to 22, inclusive, as follows:

After a petition shall have been filed, unless the parties hereinafter named shall voluntarily appear, the court shall issue a summons reciting briefly the substance of the petition, and requiring the person or persons who have the custody or control of the child to appear personally and bring the child before the court at a time and place stated. If the person so summoned shall be other than the parent or guardian of the child then the parent or guardian or both shall also be notified of the pendency of the case and of the time and place appointed, by personal service before the hearing, except as hereinafter provided: Provided, That if the child is married then the other spouse shall also be so notified. Summons may be issued requiring the appearance of any other person whose presence is necessary.

And insert in lieu thereof the following:

Whenever any person shall give to the assistant corporation counsel regularly assigned to the court information in his possession that a child is within the provisions of this act, it shall be the duty of a duly designated officer of the court to make preliminary investigation to determine whether the interests of the public or of the child require that further action be taken and report his finding, together with a statement of the facts, to the corporation counsel. Whenever practicable such inquiry shall include a preliminary investigation of the home and environmental situation of the child, his previous history, and the circumstances which were the subject of the information. If the corporation counsel shall determine that such formal jurisdiction should be acquired, he shall authorize a petition to be filed. The proceedings shall be entitled "In the matter of ———, a child under 18 years of age."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President, was the amendment on page 5, section 6, paragraph 2, line 19, adopted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was agreed to. Are there any further amendments? If not, the question is, Shall the amendments be engrossed and the bill be read a third time?

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, ask for a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. KING, Mr. COPELAND, Mr. TYDINGS, and Mr. AUSTIN conferees on the part of the Senate.

AGREEMENTS OF MEMBERS OF CONGRESS UNDER AGRICULTURAL PROGRAM

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2229) to permit Members of Congress to enter into agreements under agricultural programs.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, an amendment to the bill has been submitted by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. VANDENBERG]. I understand from the proponents of the measure in the House that they have no objection to it. The amendment merely proposes to make the contracts made by Members of the Congress with the Secretary of Agriculture public records so they may be open to public inspection.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from Georgia if that is the same matter about which I talked with him?

Mr. GEORGE. It is the same matter. I ask that the amendment of the Senator from Michigan may be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 1, at the end of line 9, after the word "farmers", it is proposed to insert "Provided, That such exemptions shall be made a matter of public record", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act relating to contracts and agreements under the Agricultural Adjustment Act", approved January 25, 1934, as amended, is amended by inserting before the period at the end thereof a comma and the following: "and shall not apply to contracts or agreements of a kind which the Secretary of Agriculture may enter into with farmers: Provided, That such exemptions shall be made a matter of public record."

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

NATIONAL SAFETY STANDARDS COMMISSION

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 18) to establish a National Safety Standards Commission, to reduce the danger of accidents at highway grade crossings and drawbridges, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Interstate Commerce with amendments.

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. President, in lieu of the committee amendment on page 2, line 19, I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The amendment was, on page 2, after line 18, to insert a new paragraph in lieu of the committee amendment to section 2 (a), so as to make the entire section read:

SEC. 2 (a). It shall be the duty of the Commission to make investigations, studies, and examinations of devices, appliances, systems, and methods now in use or hereafter proposed for the protection of the public and promotion of safety on railroads, drawbridges, and highways in those cases where the duty or authority to make such investigations, studies, and examinations is not vested in any other Federal agency or department; to collect and consolidate information resulting from such investigations, studies, and examinations by other Federal agencies and departments; to coordinate the work of other Federal agencies and departments in promoting safety on railroads, drawbridges, and highways; to recommend safety standards for devices, appliances, systems, and methods used on railroads, drawbridges, and highways for the protection of the public and the promotion of safety in cases (1) where such safety standards established by other Federal agencies or departments are in conflict, and (2) where because of the intersection of a drawbridge with a railroad or highway or the intersection of a railroad and a highway, two or more Federal agencies or departments exercise such jurisdiction within the area contingent to such intersection; and to make available to the States and their political subdivisions the results of its investigations, studies, and examinations; and to establish such safety standards in cases where other Federal agencies or departments are not authorized to establish such safety standards: Provided, That nothing in this section, with the exception of the authority of the Commission to recommend such safety standards in cases where other Federal safety standards are in conflict and in connection with intersections, shall be considered as a repeal or modification of the provisions of any other act, but shall be construed as supplemental thereto.

(b) The Commission is authorized and directed to cooperate to the fullest practicable extent with the various departments and agencies of the Federal Government and with State and local authorities in reducing the danger of accidents at highway grade crossings and drawbridges through the installation of safety and protective devices, the adoption of uniform safety standards, or otherwise.

(c) The Commission is further authorized, subject to the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, to employ and fix the compensation of such officers and employees, and to make such expenditures, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

(d) The Commission is further authorized to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

(e) The Commission may publish from time to time such information with respect to the matters covered by this act as it deems desirable and shall make a report to Congress in January of each year of its activities under this act.

(f) The Secretary of Agriculture, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Secretary of War may detail to the Commission from time to time such personnel as the Commission may request to aid it in carrying out its functions under this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments reported by the committee, other than that superseded by the amendment of the Senator from Connecticut, will be stated.

The first amendment of the Committee on Interstate Commerce was, in section 1, page 1, line 6, after the word "designated", to strike out "annually"; in line 8, after the word "designated", to strike out "annually"; and on page 2, line 1, after the word "designated", to strike out "annually", so as to make the section read:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby established a National Safety Standards Commission (hereinafter referred to as the Commission) to be composed of a representative of the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture to be designated by the Secretary of Agriculture, a representative of the Department of War to be designated by the Secretary of War, and a representative of the Interstate Commerce Commission to be designated by the Chairman thereof. The three members of the Commission so designated shall receive no additional compensation for their services as such members, but shall be entitled to receive their necessary travel and subsistence expenses while engaged in the work of the Commission.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out section 4 in the following words:

SEC. 4. After the date of enactment of this act no part of the appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Federal Aid Act or the Federal Highway Act, or any acts amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, shall be made available to any State for expenditure on any highway until the proper State authority shows to the satisfaction of the Secretary of Agriculture that the safety or protective devices, if any, to be installed or in operation at the highway grade crossings or on the drawbridges on that portion of the highway with respect to which such expenditures are to be made will comply in all respects with the safety standards generally recognized at that time as being adequate, or if safety standards have been established by the Commission with respect to safety or protective devices for use at such grade crossings or on such drawbridges, then with the standards so established.

And in lieu thereof to insert a new section 4, so as to make sections 3 and 4 read:

SEC. 3. After the date of enactment of this act the plans and specifications for the construction of any drawbridge authorized by Congress to be constructed and maintained across or over any of the navigable waters of the United States shall not be approved by the Secretary of War and the Chief of Engineers until they are satisfied that the safety or protective devices, if any, to be installed on such drawbridge will comply in all respects with the safety standards generally recognized at that time as being adequate, or if safety standards have been established by the Commission with respect to safety or protective devices for use on such bridges, then with the standards so established.

SEC. 4. The act entitled "An act to amend the Federal Aid Highway Act, approved July 11, 1916, as amended and supplemented, and for other purposes", approved June 16, 1936, is amended by adding, before the period at the end of section 8 thereof, a comma and the following: "but, if safety standards for such devices have been established by the National Safety Standards Commission, then such devises shall comply with the standards established by said Commission."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. President, I ask that another amendment heretofore submitted by me be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LONERGAN] proposes an amendment to section 5, which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out section 5 in the following words:

SEC. 5. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sums as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I should like to inquire of the Senator from Connecticut if these are the same amendments which he and I recently considered.

Mr. LONERGAN. They are; yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Connecticut.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2410) to amend the Judicial Code, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WHITE. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 144) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibiting child labor was announced as next in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let the joint resolution go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

PREVENTION OF AND PUNISHMENT FOR LYNCHING

The bill (H. R. 1507) to assure to persons within the jurisdiction of every State the equal protection of the laws and to punish the crime of lynching was announced as next in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This bill, having been made a special order, will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2482) to provide for the assignment of officers of the Navy for duty under the Department of Commerce and appointment to positions therein was announced as next in order.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. May we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH], who introduced and reported the bill, is not present. I suggest that it go over.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

INTERSTATE TRANSPORTATION OF CERTAIN PERSONS DURING LABOR CONTROVERSIES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2403) to prohibit the transportation of certain persons in interstate or foreign commerce during labor controversies, and for other purposes, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act making it a felony to transport in interstate or foreign commerce persons to be employed to obstruct or interfere with the right of peaceful picketing during labor controversies", approved June 24, 1936, is amended to read as follows:

"That (a) it shall be unlawful to transport or cause to be transported in interstate or foreign commerce any person who is employed or is to be employed for the purpose of obstructing or interfering by force or threats with (1) peaceful picketing by employees during any labor controversy affecting wages, hours, or conditions of labor; or (2) the exercise by employees of any of the rights of self-organization, collective bargaining, or other concerted activities for mutual aid or protection.

"(b) Any person who willfully violates or aids or abets any person in violating any provision of this act, and any person who is knowingly transported in or travels in interstate or foreign commerce for any of the purposes enumerated in this act shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both."

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the bill simply seeks to amend the existing law in two or three particulars at the suggestion of the Assistants to the Attorney General, who believe that the amendments will merely clarify the intent of the Congress as expressed in the so-called Byrnes Act.

Mr. BARKLEY. I have no objection to it.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, the Senator's statement hardly explains the changes.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, it is still my contention that the individual who is hired by a strike-breaking agency, and is transported in interstate commerce for the purpose of using acts of violence to interfere with one engaged in peaceful picketing, is amenable to the original act, and that that act sufficiently expresses the intention of the Congress; but the contention of attorneys representing a defendant in a particular case was that the original act applied only to the employer, and did not apply to an individual employed by one of these agencies and transported for the purpose stated. The purpose of the act certainly was to cover the individual transported in interstate commerce, as well as the man who employs that individual.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from South Carolina if the original law as it now stands, and this amendment as it is proposed to be, have for their objective the maintenance of peace in strikes?

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, the measures have no other purpose. It was my contention in advocating the original measure that whenever there is a difficulty, those who are interested in the maintenance of law and order may look to the peace officers and to the Governor of the State; that if the peace officers of a community are unable to enforce the law, the Governor may call out the National Guard; but that whenever an agency such as the Bergoff agency is employed to send an army into any State of the Union for the purpose of using violence to interfere with men who are engaged in peaceful picketing, the only result of such action is to bring about bloodshed, and to disturb peace, and to arouse the passions of people.

The purpose of the original act was to deal with that situation. The object of this amendatory bill is simply to make certain that the language of the original act applies to the man who goes into the State as well as to the head of the agency who sends him.

Mr. AUSTIN. I will ask the Senator if the effect of the amendatory bill is to create a crime or a misdemeanor by defining such acts of violence as crimes.

Mr. BYRNES. The pending bill, of course, makes it unlawful to transport anyone for that specific purpose. It is incumbent upon the prosecution in each case to prove that the transportation was for the purpose of interfering with one engaged in a lawful act, and not of interfering with one engaged in an unlawful act.

Mr. AUSTIN. That is, interfering by force or threats.

Mr. BYRNES. The Senator is correct.

Mr. AUSTIN. With that understanding, I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REFUND OF AMOUNTS COLLECTED AS TAX UNDER CERTAIN ACTS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2601) to provide for refund of amounts collected as tax under the Bankhead Cotton Act of 1934; the Kerr Tobacco Act, as amended; and the Potato Act of 1935; which had been reported from the Committee on Claims, with amendments.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I desire to make a brief explanation of this bill.

It will be recalled that the Bankhead Cotton Act of 1934, the Kerr Tobacco Act, and the Potato Act of 1935 were repealed by the Congress after the Supreme Court held the Agricultural Adjustment Act unconstitutional. Processing taxes had been collected. There was no provision for refunding them. Most of the amounts involved are small. The Claims Committee has considered this matter. Several bills on the subject have been introduced; but when the Claims Committee took up this particular bill, introduced by the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL], we added a very harmless-looking amendment; but it tore up things considerably, and it changed the point of view of the Department from a favorable to an unfavorable position. The amendment is found on page 3 of the bill.

The original bill read in this way:

For the purposes of this act satisfaction of tax liability by surrender or submission of tax-exemption certificates, tax-payment warrants, or tax-exemption stamps shall not be considered as payment of tax.

We struck out "not to be considered as payment of tax" and inserted "be considered as payment of tax to the extent of the actual amount paid for such certificate by the claimant."

Originally the bill as it was introduced by the Senator from Georgia would have called for the payment of claims aggregating about $4,000,000, as I recall. I will give the exact figures, so that we may have them before us. The refunds under the Bankhead Cotton Act would have been $1,562,097; under the Kerr Tobacco Act, $4,446,255; and under the Potato Act, $43,900. The effect of the amendment which was added would have been to increase the payments to about $60,000,000. So when the amendment was added the Department of Agriculture, which had previously expressed a favorable opinion of the original bill, the Attorney General, and all the others then said that that would not do at all; and my purpose now in explaining the situation is that I mean to ask that the first committee amendment be rejected and let the original bill stand with a slight amendment further on.

I will explain what the second amendment is, because while the Treasury Department objects to that, I think it ought to be in the bill for this reason:

A great many of the claims have already been filed. The proof has been submitted. The claimants employed attorneys to prepare the claims. They are small. The claimants in most cases are poor. If they have to submit claims anew, they will have to pay another fee, and the claims are not worth it. So the second amendment simply provides that the Department shall consider the claims that have already been submitted. Additional proof may be called for if it is so desired.

The second amendment is on page 4 of the bill and inserts the words:

Provided, however, That claims filed prior to the passage of this act may be considered without the filing of another claim.

The objection to that amendment by the Department is that it would prefer to send out blanks and have claims filed on a regular form; but I do not believe that a person having a small claim should be compelled to incur the additional expense of submitting another claim when the first is sufficient.

So, Mr. President, I hope the bill may be passed after rejecting the first amendment. The bill is fair and equitable, and I take it that no one objects to it. I am advised by the Attorney General that he has hundreds of suits now pending in the Federal courts; and I was advised yesterday, I believe, that 1,200 more suits are to be filed, and that the cost eventually will amount to twice the amount of the original claims. So I ask that the bill be considered at this time, and that the first amendment be rejected altogether.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, on the question of whether we ought to proceed with this bill, I should like to ask the Senator from Kentucky a question.

Mr. LOGAN. I shall be very glad to answer the question if I can.

Mr. AUSTIN. Is this a bill which has been pretty generally studied in the Senate?

Mr. LOGAN. It has been pretty thoroughly considered by the Committee on Claims, and it has been talked of a long time. The Committee on Claims, knowing the importance of the matter, last year, I believe, perhaps at the beginning of this session, appointed a subcommittee to draft a bill to do what is sought in the measure before us, because the committee knew that eventually there would be thousands of these little claims coming in under special acts. I prepared and introduced a bill myself, as the chairman of the committee, but the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] apparently had conferred with the legal department and introduced a bill which I thought was better than the one I had introduced; consequently the committee reported the Russell bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Will the Senator give us the interpretation of the words "for whose account there was paid", in line 2, at the top of page 2?

Mr. LOGAN. That would involve a rather complicated explanation, which I perhaps could not make. I do not know that there was such a thing as someone else paying the tax, and there was considerable tax evasion connected with it. Perhaps the senior Senator from Georgia can explain that better than I can.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I can illustrate very briefly. In the case of cotton, when the producer, the farmer, gathered more cotton than he was entitled to gin under his allotment he was compelled to pay a tax of approximately $20 a bale, or 4 cents a pound, before he was allowed to gin and market the cotton. Frequently the farmer who was ginning his cotton and carrying it to the market from the gin was not able to advance the tax, and the warehouseman, in many instances, advanced it; the ginner in other instances settled for it; but it was done always on the account of the farmer and for the benefit of the farmer. Then, upon final sale of the cotton, the farmer, or the producer of the cotton, of course, accounted for the tax actually paid either by the ginner or by the warehouseman or by factors, as we have them in the South.

Mr. AUSTIN. I should like to ask further about this matter either of the Senator from Kentucky or the Senator from Georgia. Why is this right limited to those who paid the processing tax on these particular basic commodities instead of being general in its application to all basic commodities?

Mr. GEORGE. Under the 1936 Revenue Act general provision was made for the refunding of floor-stock taxes paid by the merchants and the manufacturers who had stocks on hand, and by the packing houses and manufacturers for the processing taxes which they paid. The Senator will recall that such taxes were designated as the so-called "unjust enrichment" taxes, and in the 1936 Revenue Act provision was made for refunding these taxes under certain conditions, principally under the condition that the tax had not been passed on to someone else.

The same general provision is carried in the pending bill, but this bill relates entirely to taxes paid by the farmer, by the producers of tobacco, potatoes, and cotton, they being the only commodities which were under a control act; that is, the production of which was regulated and controlled by act of Congress.

The validity of these several acts was never determined by the courts. Cases were pending, however; but, following the decision of the Supreme Court in the A. A. A. case, the departments themselves recognized that perhaps the acts would be upset, and upon recommendation of the departments the acts were repealed.

The individual farmer who, for instance, had an allotment of 10 bales of cotton, but may have made 12, had to pay $20 per bale for the excess over 10, or $40, in order to be allowed to gin and market his two bales. He has never been compensated for that tax. The same condition applies to tobacco and to potatoes.

Nor can he receive a refund under the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1936 relating to the unjust-enrichment tax and for the refunding of taxes to manufacturers and merchants who had processed articles made of products on which the processing tax was impossed. It is therefore necessary to pass the pending bill.

I may say to the Senator from Vermont that if the individual farmer or producer, in the case of tobacco or cotton or potatoes, is able to prosecute a suit, in all probability he can recover a greater amount than he can receive by way of refund under the pending bill. In fact, I dare say that he can recover a much greater amount. But there are many small producers who perhaps in 1 year had only one bale of cotton or a limited number of pounds of tobacco or potatoes, on which they were required to pay the excess tax, and they cannot afford to employ an attorney, go into court and bring a suit, test the question, and abide the result of the litigation.

The bill is in the interest of all producers in that it gives at least a fair degree of compensation to those who did pay out moneys under an illegal tax act in order to market their products. At the same time, it would mean a very great saving to the Government, because if all these cases were actually prosecuted to judgment and final recovery, the amount would far exceed the amount the claimants can receive by way of refund under the pending bill.

The Senator will realize also that if some of the large producers, as a result of their suits now pending, some long since brought, shall finally recover—and they will—and establish judgments against the United States, naturally the Congress will at some time feel disposed to grant the same measure of relief to the small producers throughout the country of the articles to which the control legislation applies, who were not able to prosecute their cases; so, in the long run, the total charges against the Treasury would far exceed the actual amount of refunds which may be allowed under the pending bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a further question? Or perhaps the Senator from Kentucky would like to comment at this time.

Mr. LOGAN. If the Senator will allow me, I may say that, in the first place, this bill is for the refund of money that was actually paid into the Treasury; it is not for the purpose of taking any money out of the Treasury.

This is the situation as described recently by the Attorney General:

There have been filed 83 suits in 10 district courts attacking the constitutionality of the Kerr-Smith Tobacco Act. They involve an approximate total of $131,394.53. The two cases which have actually been tried are test cases, controlling those which are pending decision. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit in Taylor against Robertson, on June 14, 1937, held the act unconstitutional and directed refund of taxes paid. The Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit in Smith against Glenn, on June 28, 1937, similarly held the act unconstitutional. These decisions control every suit which has been brought except one in the Middle District of Pennsylvania.

I am informally advised that a total of $4,446,255.41 has been collected under the Kerr-Smith Act, and that some 32,473 claims for refund, totaling $1,931,497.49, have been filed.

Then he describes the matter a little more in detail.

I may say to the Senator from Vermont that these acts have been held unconstitutional. Thirty-two thousand claims have already been filed. They are small. The Committee on Claims reached the conclusion that the cost and the expense of collecting the claims, dragging out through the years, as some of them have, would be a continual nuisance, and that these taxes, which the Government had no right to collect, should be refunded in a perfectly orderly way, that the bill should be so drawn as to confine the refunds exclusively to the amount of money collected under these illegal acts.

Mr. AUSTIN. There is one further question I should like to ask.

Mr. LOGAN. Very well.

Mr. AUSTIN. To whom shall the Government pay, under the pending bill if it shall be enacted, those sums which have been paid for the benefit of others?

Mr. LOGAN. Oh, that is an insignificant amount. The sums were paid to the collector of internal revenue. The tax records show who paid the tax. Whoever has a claim must file his claim, showing exactly why he is entitled to the refund, and the Department then passes on the claim, and determines whether he is entitled to collect the amount or whether he really paid it or not. That provision is in the bill because there was some shenanigan down in Kentucky concerning the tobacco tax, I know, and there were some who perhaps might be able to collect the tax although they never did pay it. That is the reason why it is required that an individual claim be filed, so that it shall be certain that the man who paid in the money will collect back the money.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask the Senator if, then, it would not be more in accord with his understanding of what is desired if the words "or for whose account there was paid" were stricken out?

Mr. LOGAN. The only reason I would suggest that they be not stricken out is this: If the Senator will examine the report, he will find that the question has been most carefully considered by the Treasury Department, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of Justice. They have attempted to make every phrase some cloak of protection to those who are entitled to have the money refunded; and I am just a little afraid that if now we were to strike out something, we might do exactly what we did when on another occasion we added something. In one case we added a little phrase, and it made a difference of over $55,000,000. So if that language should be stricken out, it might bring about some controversy; and I see no harm in letting it remain.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President, I think those words undoubtedly should remain in the bill. Under the Bankhead Cotton Act—I am using it for purposes of illustration, but what I shall say probably will hold good in connection with some of the other control acts; certainly it is true with respect to the Bankhead Cotton Act—in many cases farmers had certificates which entitled them to gin so many pounds of cotton, or so many bales, if it is desired to express it in bales. Perhaps they did not make the cotton that year, and perhaps they sold their certificates to others, and, as was actually the case in many instances, they did not get the amounts that the purchasers would have been compelled to pay as a tax to the Government. The farmer who did not make his allotment was permitted to realize on the gin certificates that he held—that is, certificates which entitled him to gin and sell his cotton—but he sold at a discount. Perhaps he sold for 2 cents a pound as against 4 cents which the purchaser must have paid if he had come to the Government and paid the tax directly to the Government. Therefore, the claimant is limited to the actual amount of money paid into the Treasury, and the money must be paid to the person who paid it, or for whose account it was paid.

I think that, perhaps, is another reason for inserting that particular language in this bill. I am quite sure the language has a place in the bill, and it would be a mistake to take it out of the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I am wholly unfamiliar with the bill. That is why I asked this question before deciding whether or not to object.

I have another question that I should like to ask. Is it not true that out of these processing taxes the Government pays benefits and rentals?

Mr. GEORGE. Yes; but, Mr. President, the Senator is confusing the processing taxes with taxes imposed under the Crop Control Act. That is what I am trying to make clear. The Bankhead Cotton Act was a wholly different act from the A. A. A. The processing taxes were imposed under the A. A. A. The Bankhead Cotton Act was an act to control production—a supplemental act, entirely disconnected from the other act. So was the Potato Act, known as the Warren Potato Act, and so was the Kerr-Smith Tobacco Act. Under those acts taxes were imposed on producers who desired to prepare for the market and to sell cotton, tobacco, and potatoes in excess of the amounts allotted to them under the Agricultural Adjustment Act, or under the Control Act itself, there being an allotment provided in each of those acts. Those taxes had nothing directly to do with the processing taxes. Provision for their imposition was supplementary to the act under which the processing taxes were imposed.

Provision has been made for the refund of all processing taxes paid under the Revenue Act of 1936. It is rather a cumbersome and onerous provision, under which there cannot be very much recovery from the Government, I may say; but the processing tax is not the tax here involved.

In the case of cotton, all cotton produced and marketed in excess of the cotton allotted to the producer is subject to a tax of 4 cents per pound, or $20 per bale; but the allotment could be marketed without the payment of any sum of money. However, on any excess production the tax of 4 cents a pound must be paid to the Government. When there was an underproduction on the part of any producer—and during the first year of the Bankhead Cotton Act there was underproduction in a large area of the Southwest, but an overproduction in a large part of the Southeast—the Department permitted the sale of the certificates issued to a bona-fide producer, and not used by him because his crops failed, to anyone who had an excess production. Otherwise the producer of the excess cotton would have gone to the Treasury and paid the tax direct to the Treasury. So this tax is not the processing tax but is purely a refund of the taxes imposed under the Control Act.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I desire to ask a further question. Did the Government apply the funds so collected by way of taxes to the control of the production of cotton?

Mr. GEORGE. The funds went into the Treasury, and presumably they were, of course, used in connection with the general farm program.

Mr. AUSTIN. In that event, is it not true that this bill really calls upon the Government for the payment of additional money?

Mr. LOGAN. Oh, no, Mr. President.

Mr. GEORGE. No.

Mr. AUSTIN. Let us get it clear. Mr. President, I think the bill had better go over. It is an important bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

SOUTHEASTERN UNIVERSITY OF DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA Y. M. C. A.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, for the reason I gave a moment ago with regard to an important appointment, I want to ask Senators to accommodate me by permitting me to ask unanimous consent that House bill 3406, which has been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, be now considered by the Senate. It is Calendar No. 1215.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, I shall not object to that.

Mr. REYNOLDS. I thank the Senator.

Mr. LOGAN. But I think it is manifestly unfair to all of us who are trying to get to certain bills, and who have been waiting and watching, that first one and then another Senator should call up bills for consideration out of order. I shall not object this time, but I shall object the next time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from North Carolina?

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 3406) for the relief of the Southeastern University of the Young Men's Christian Association of the District of Columbia was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INCREASED RANK FOR CERTAIN RETIRED BRIGADIER GENERALS

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I have the consent of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] for the consideration of another bill, and then I shall be out of the way. I do this only because I have an important engagement relative to governmental matters.

I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of Senate bill 2765, to grant recognition to distinguished military service, being Calendar No. 1236.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, does the Senator have the consent of all the Members of this body?

Mr. REYNOLDS. I hope I do.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I object.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. President, I hope my distinguished friend from the State of Vermont will withdraw his objection to that bill. I am sure the general for whose benefit the bill was favorably reported to the Senate impressed my friend from Vermont. Yesterday we had action by the full Committee on Military Affairs, but unfortunately at that time the Senator from Vermont was not present.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, that is not the reason for my objection to the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

REIMBURSEMENT FOR LOSSES IN EARTHQUAKE AT MANAGUA, NICARAGUA

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 4689) to provide an additional sum for the payment of claims under the act entitled "An act to provide for the reimbursement of certain officers and enlisted men or former officers and enlisted men of the Navy and Marine Corps for personal property lost, damaged, or destroyed as a result of the earthquake which occurred at Managua, Nicaragua, on March 31, 1931", approved January 21, 1936 (49 Stat. 2212), which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, on page 1, line 8, after the word "reimburse", to insert "after claimants shall have filed itemized statements showing actual damages sustained by proper appraisal, and", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such sum or sums, amounting in the aggregate not to exceed $3,144.35, as may be required by the Secretary of the Navy to reimburse, after claimants shall have filed itemized statements showing actual damages sustained by proper appraisal, and under such regulations as he has or may prescribe pursuant to the provisions of the act approved January 21, 1936 (49 Stat. 2212), Private Law No. 373, Seventy-fourth Congress, the persons hereafter named, in sums not exceeding the amounts set forth, for losses of and damages to reasonable and necessary personal property resulting from the earthquake which occurred at Managua, Nicaragua, on March 31, 1931: Mrs. Alice V. Baske, widow of the late Lt. Comdr. Hugo F. A. Baske, Medical Corps, United States Navy, $2,573; Radio Electrician Mack C. Veltman, United States Navy, $42.75; Harry Marion Mayfield, chief pharmacist's mate, United States Navy, $850; Capt. Charles L. Pike, United States Marine Corps, $528.60; in all, $3,144.35: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with these claims, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of the bill. How much money is involved?

Mr. CAPPER. Three thousand one hundred and forty-four dollars and thirty-five cents.

Mr. McKELLAR. What is the claim for?

Mr. CAPPER. For reimbursement for property damage suffered in an earthquake which occurred at Managua, Nicaragua. The Navy Department recommends the measure.

Mr. LOGAN. Mr. President, the bill is perfectly regular. The Senator from Kansas favorably reported the bill from the Committee on Claims. It is for loss and damage to personal property. Some of the loss has already been paid for, and some has not been paid for. This bill is in the nature of an amendment for payment of an additional sum in the amount of slightly over $3,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

RESOLUTION AND BILLS PASSED OVER

The resolution (S. Res. 140) authorizing an investigation of the delivery or nondelivery of mail to establishments where industrial strife is in progress, which had been reported adversely by the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the resolution go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2707) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine the claim of the Mack Copper Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 988) to amend an act entitled "An act to establish in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce a Foreign Commerce Service of the United States, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1927, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. I ask that that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

CLASSIFICATION AND PAY OF LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2578) to authorize the Secretary of Commerce to continue the existing system of classification and pay of positions of lighthouse keepers, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That notwithstanding the provisions of section 2 of the act approved July 3, 1930 (46 Stat. 1003), the Secretary of Commerce is authorized, in his discretion, to continue the existing system governing the classification and pay of the positions of lighthouse keepers, pending the enactment by the Congress of legislation establishing and prescribing a system of classification and pay applicable to these positions.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation of the bill.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this bill is proposed so as to satisfy the General Accounting Office. There was some conflict regarding the classification of lighthouse keepers, and the Department asked for the passage of a bill such as this in order that they might be justified in their procedure.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CONTRIBUTIONS BY LOCAL COMMUNITIES IN FLOOD-CONTROL WORKS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2638) to amend an act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes", approved June 22, 1936, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes", approved June 22, 1936, is hereby amended by adding to the first paragraph of section 5 a proviso reading as follows: "Provided further, That the Secretary of War is authorized to receive from States, political subdivisions thereof, or other responsible local agencies such funds as may be contributed by them to be expended in connection with funds appropriated by the United States for any authorized flood-control work whenever such work and expenditure may be considered by the Secretary of War, on recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, as advantageous in the public interest, and the plans for any reservoir project may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, on recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, be modified to provide additional storage capacity for domestic water supply or other conservation storage, on condition that the cost of such increased storage capacity is contributed by local agencies and that local agencies agree to utilize such additional storage capacity in a manner consistent with Federal uses and purposes: And provided further, That when contributions made by States, political subdivisions thereof, or other responsible local agencies are in excess of the actual cost of the work contemplated and properly chargeable to such contributions, such excess contributions may, with the approval of the Secretary of War, be returned to the proper representatives of the contributing interests."

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President has not that bill already passed the Senate?

Mr. COPELAND. Such a bill did pass with reference to Oklahoma City, as will be recalled. The Senator from Tennessee will remember that in the Appropriations Committee we considered it. Under this bill the Army engineers may accept contributions from the local communities to build a higher dam than would be needed for flood-control purposes if it is desired to use the water for potable purposes.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Does the bill have any relation to power that may be developed?

Mr. COPELAND. Not at all. I may say to the Senator that in the act under which this reservoir would be built a penstock is installed in every dam. This bill merely has to do with the height of the dam, as was done in the case of Oklahoma City.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOINT RESOLUTIONS AND BILLS PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 413) to permit the transportation of passengers by Canadian passenger vessels between ports or places in the United States on Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River was announced as next in order.

Mr. WHITE. I ask that the joint resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2024) to amend the civil-service law to permit certain employees of the legislative branch of the Government to qualify for positions under the competitive classified civil service was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 589) prohibiting the operation of motor vehicles in interstate commerce by unlicensed operators was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, that is a very important bill, and we may not have time to consider it under the unanimous-consent agreement under which we are now operating, so I ask that it be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 177) consenting to an interstate compact relating to flood control in the Connecticut River Valley was announced as next in order.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask that the joint resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

WASHINGTON AIRPORT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2846) to promote air commerce by providing for the enlargement of Washington Airport in the public interest, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce without amendment.

Mr. KING. I understand that the Senator from New York desires to suggest an amendment to the bill.

Mr. COPELAND. On page 4, line 20, after the word "Airport", the words "if agreed upon by the Park and Planning Commission" should be inserted.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is this the bill concerning the present Washington Airport concerning which some controversy arose, which has now been adjusted, with a county of Virginia?

Mr. COPELAND. That is correct.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I should like to have the Senator from New York explain what this bill proposes to do in the way of establishing an airport here. I do not think there is anybody who has had any experience in flying, whether as pilot or passenger, who does not regard the Washington Airport as the most dangerous spot in the United States from a flying standpoint. If we are going to keep up this airport at its present location, and simply enlarge it without removing the dangers that have existed there heretofore, I do not think the Senate should approve the bill. On the other hand, if there is any way by which the very great dangers that have existed there heretofore may be obviated, I think the chairman should explain it at this time.

Mr. COPELAND. I think I can make it clear. The object of this bill is to accomplish exactly the laudable purpose the Senator from Missouri has in mind. The Washington Airport is unsafe. It is unsafe for two reasons. The first one is that a military road crosses the airport, bisects it, and only this morning there was a very narrow escape there. A low-flying plane passed over an automobile, and I was told there was hardly a foot between the plane and the automobile. The arrangement as proposed by the bill closes the military road, and at their own expense those operating the airport are to provide a substitute road to the south of the airport, so that there will be a military road but one not crossing the airport.

Mr. CLARK. May I ask the Senator how large a field that would make? The present field is about as large as a pocket handkerchief in comparison with the landing fields in comparable cities all over the United States.

Mr. COPELAND. I did not complete the answer to the previous question of the Senator. This bill also provides that there shall be leased from the Agricultural Department sufficient land between the railroad and the present airport practically to double the area of the airport. That will make it possible to install a paved take-off about where the take-off now is, but a thoroughly good one. Then, at right angles to it, there will be sufficient land to provide for a double take-off; so that, according to the direction of the wind, there may be a safe place from which planes may take off.

There is one other question which was raised by the Senator from Utah relating to the lagoon. The lagoon, in my opinion, ought to be closed for two reasons. In the first place, in order to give space; and, in the next place, because it is a mosquito-breeding place. The Senator from Utah has suggested that there be included in the bill a provision that the Park and Planning Commission shall pass upon the closing up of the lagoon. If this airport is developed as contemplated by this bill, for 95 percent of the time it will be as good and as safe an airport as there is in the United States.

The only justification, as I see it, for the bill we passed yesterday is that under it an airport will be provided out in the country which will be safe all the time. But, of course, the traffic out of the Washington Airport is largely local; that is, traffic between Washington and New York, Washington and Richmond, and Washington and Pittsburgh. An airport in the country would not cause the disappearance of the local service at the other airport because of the distance necessary to travel to the latter and the time required to reach it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President——

Mr. COPELAND. I yield to the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is it expected to make this a permanent airport or airfield?

Mr. COPELAND. With the present state of the art, I should assume that it would be permanent.

Mr. McKELLAR. May I interrupt the Senator to say that I agree with what the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] said a few moments ago. I think this is the poorest airport in the entire country. I do not know of another that is in worse condition, that is smaller, or where there are so many obstacles.

Just the other night a very bad accident occurred at Daytona, I believe, or near Daytona, Fla. I am informed that the cause of that accident was the action of a public-utility company in erecting telephone posts or poles where there had not been any before and the airplane flew into one of them; there was a crash, and several lives were lost. At the Washington Airport almost every day buildings or telephone posts or telegraph posts or other obstructions are being raised in and around the field, which makes it a constant source of danger.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, as a matter of fact, if the Senator will permit me, every time an airplane comes in or takes off from the Washington Airport there is a constant menace exactly along the line of that which caused the disaster at Daytona Beach the other day.

Mr. McKELLAR. In my opinion, the Senator is correct, and I hope it will not be made a permanent landing field.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I am familiar with the accident at Daytona Beach. I received a report from the Air Commerce Bureau the morning of the accident. The difficulty there was not that there was a wire but that there was a newly installed——

Mr. McKELLAR. Oh, no. It was a post or a pole—a telephone or telegraph pole—that had been erected during the night. For some reason the public utility company went there at nighttime, between, as I understand, 2 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock a. m. and erected that pole. Those operating the airfield were not informed about it; the accident took place and several lives were lost.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, that is exactly what happened. By reason of a break-down it was necessary for the power company to provide emergency facilities.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. COPELAND. Yes.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Is this measure similar to a measure which has already passed the House?

Mr. COPELAND. It is.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. The bill which has passed the House is now before the Senator's committee?

Mr. COPELAND. The Senate bill is before the Senate; but if it should be considered I had hoped to strike out all after the enacting clause of the House bill and insert the Senate bill, so that it might be in conference.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Did the Senator intend to substitute the House bill for the Senate bill? The House bill is not on the calendar; and if it is not——

Mr. COPELAND. It is on the calendar, the report having been made this morning, but it is not printed on the calendar.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. So that the Senator's plan is to pass the bill which has already been passed by the House?

Mr. COPELAND. To pass the House bill, but with the amendment which I hope may be adopted by the Senate. That is correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Because, of course, if that were not done it would be impossible to secure the enactment of the bill at the present session.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. COPELAND. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I have not had an opportunity to study the situation as carefully as I should like to have done, but my understanding is that, unless this bill passes, during all the time that will be necessary to develop the Camp Springs Airport the very hazardous condition described by the Senator from Missouri and the Senator from Tennessee will continue at the Washington Airport. Every person who comes into Washington or goes out by air will be subjected to terrific hazard. Therefore, it seems to me, this bill is of great importance and should be enacted at the present session of Congress, for if a disaster should occur it would seem that Congress would be compelled to share the responsibility for the reason that it had not remedied a situation which had been brought to its attention.

In the second place, my understanding is that even when the Camp Springs Airport is built, the airport contemplated under the bill in charge of the Senator from New York will be a safe port and one which can be used except during foggy weather or when the river is exceedingly high because of heavy rains. Is not that correct?

Mr. COPELAND. The Senator is absolutely correct.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, the highway that runs through the present airport is one about which there has been great controversy for a long time. Everyone has recognized the lack of safety there, not only for aviation but for automobile traffic. The bill would eliminate that highway completely from the airport and locate it at a place entirely away from danger both to automobile travelers and aviators.

Mr. COPELAND. That is correct.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator explain the difference between the House bill and the Senate bill?

Mr. COPELAND. The House bill has no reference at all to the lagoon. It provides that the rental of the land from the Secretary of Agriculture shall be by mutual agreement. The Senate bill provides for nominal payment for those lands. If I should happen to be a conferee, I have no doubt we shall be able to secure some adjustment to bring about a closer reconciliation of the two bills with respect to that matter.

Mr. KING. Frankness compels me to say, while I am not objecting to the consideration of the bill, that it contains provisions to which I do not assent. It calls for approximately 56 acres of land belonging to the Government to be rented for a dollar a year. That land is worth, perhaps, $10,000 an acre. This would mean a very large subsidy to the airport.

Mr. COPELAND. It is a pretty high price to pay for land on which to grow corn.

Mr. KING. It is a very high price, but many things the Government does cost the taxpayers of the United States a great deal.

Another provision which does not meet my approval is with respect to the lagoon. The Park and Planning Commission do not believe the lagoon should be moved by this organization or by any other organization.

Mr. President, the Camp Springs Airport to which Senators have referred is 7½ miles from the Capitol, very near to the city. It would make one of the finest airports in the United States; at least that is the design of the committee which made the selection of the site. I am sure that is the design of the Government officials who will have to do with the construction of the airport.

I appreciate there have been many demands that the Washington-Hoover Airport be continued. Even with the acquisition, without cost, of the 56 acres of land belonging to the Government, I do not think the present Washington Airport would be a suitable airport. It would have then less than 200 acres, whereas a modern airport ought to have at least 1,500 to 2,500 acres and runways at least 5,000 feet in length. In Paris and in London and in the large cities of Europe, as well as in the larger cities of the United States, the airports which were constructed at considerable expense have been found to be inadequate to meet modern demands of the large planes carrying 30 or 40 passengers. The result is that at enormous expense those air fields are being enlarged.

I hope the Camp Springs airport will be constructed. I have not objected to the consideration of the bill, though I have said that provisions are in it which do not meet with my approval. I am not ready to concede that we should give the Washington-Hoover Airport a subsidy of perhaps $500,000 or $600,000 because leasing for $1 a year this additional acreage amounts to that. However, the matter is for the Senate to determine.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, in the interest of safety we are obliged to pass the bill, I have no doubt. I have long felt that the airport across the river was virtually a death-trap and ought to be gotten rid of as soon as possible. I hope the airport at Camp Springs will soon be built and that it will be built along such lines as to provide for safety in landing at Washington. I do not see how we can do anything else than pass the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. I think the Senate is entitled to have called to its attention in this connection that the Airport Commission studied the Washington-Hoover Airport with respect to all the possibilities for enlargement and improvement that might be made. There was no controversy as to the claim that the Washington-Hoover Airport could never be made a safe airport. The Commission had a duty under the law to recommend to the Senate an airport with the objective of having for our National Capital a safe airport—nothing more.

There is brought into our study of the matter a fact which cannot be overlooked, but to which we could not give any validity in our report, and that is the peculiar conditions of congested traffic in the air between New York City, Newark, and Washington. Therefore I have no doubt that every person on that Commission of nine was persuaded that we should have the Washington Airport made as safe as possible for the purpose of meeting about 95 percent of the weather conditions. We believe it can be made safe by the adoption of the provisions contained in the bill. We appear to be approaching the ideal which we would have been glad to report to the Senate had we been authorized to do any such thing. Therefore, I hope the Senate will pass the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING] will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 4, line 20, after the word "Airport", it is proposed to insert "if agreed upon by the Park and Planning Commission", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That (a) the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to convey by quitclaim deed to the National Airport Corporation, a corporation organized under the laws of the State of Delaware, the lands forming that part of Military Road, Fort Myer Military Reservation, Arlington County, Va., described as follows: Beginning at a point on the easterly line of the Arlington Reservation N. 16° W. 75.29 feet from the stone marking the southeast corner of said reservation; thence with said easterly line of said reservation N. 16°00′ W. 71.73 feet; thence N. 85°35′ E. 263.25 feet; thence by a curve to the right of 608.7 feet radius 336.42 feet; thence S. 62°45′ E. 1,253.11 feet; thence by a curve to the left of 406.7 feet radius 454.27 feet; thence N. 53°15′ E. 32.09 feet to a point; thence S. 31°27′ E. 8.96 feet to the northwest corner of the right-of-way of the Virginia approach to the Highway Bridge; thence with the westerly line of said right-of-way S. 20°55′ W. 110.91 feet; thence S. 66°15′ W. 45.85 feet; thence by a curve to the right of 476.7 feet radius 424.3 feet; thence N. 62°45′ W. 1,253.11 feet; thence by a curve to the left of 538.7 feet radius 297.73 feet; thence S. 85°35′ W. 247.63 feet to the point of beginning. The above-described parcel of land comprises a strip of land 70 feet in width, the center line of said 70-foot strip being coincident with the center line of the highway from the Highway Bridge to Arlington National Cemetery, and contains 3.7165 acres of land more or less.

(b) The Secretary of War is further authorized and directed to lease to such corporation for airport purposes, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, for a period not exceeding 50 years and only for such period as the adjoining land shall be used for an airport, at a rental of $1 per annum, that part of such Military Road lying east of the Washington and Southern Freight Branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad and which is not included in the conveyance provided for in paragraph (a) of this section.

(c) The Secretary of War shall not make such conveyance or lease until he shall have received from such corporation to be paid to the board of commissioners, Arlington County, Va., such sum as may be necessary, but not to exceed $25,000, for the construction of a substitute road.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to lease to such corporation for airport purposes, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, for a period not exceeding 50 years and only for such period as the adjoining land shall be used for an airport, at a rental of $1 per annum, that part of the lands (originally known as the Arlington Plantation and now commonly known as the Arlington Experimental Farm) lying east of the Washington and Southern Freight Branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad, containing 53 acres more or less.

SEC. 3. The Secretary of War is authorized and directed to lease to such corporation for airport purposes, under such terms and conditions as he may prescribe, for a period not exceeding 50 years and only for such period as the adjoining land shall be used for an airport, at a rental of $1 per annum, the portion of the bed of the Potomac River adjoining the Washington Airport, if agreed upon by the Park and Planning Commission, commonly known as the lagoon area of the Boundary Channel, better described as the area lying south and east of the following-described arc: Beginning at a point which is the center of the west face of the south abutment of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway Bridge over Boundary Channel at its mouth, thence upstream in a straight line south 54°35′ W. (true meridian) a distance of 200 feet, thence in a series of curves to the right (upstream) the chords of which bear south 70°55′ W. 150 feet, north 81°35′ W. 200 feet, north 62°30′ W. 300 feet, north 51°35′ W. 400 feet, and north 38°10′ W. 250 feet to intersect the approximate high-water shore line on the west bank of the said Boundary Channel. Such lease shall contain express conditions that the corporation, if deemed necessary by the Secretary of War, will widen and deepen the Boundary Channel and will construct a retaining wall along the above-described arc, or cause such work to be done, under the supervision of the Secretary of War and in accordance with such terms and conditions as he may prescribe: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall prevent the expenditures, upon lands belonging to the United States, of funds heretofore appropriated by Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. COPELAND. I now ask that the House bill (H. R. 7985) of similar import be substituted for the Senate bill and considered at this time.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7985) to promote air commerce by providing for the enlargement of the Washington Airport.

Mr. COPELAND. I move to amend the House bill by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting the text of the Senate bill as amended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate bill 2846 will be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. COPELAND. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment to the House bill, ask a conference with the House thereon, and that the Chair appoint conferees.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. COPELAND, Mr. CLARK, Mr. DONAHEY, Mr. JOHNSON of California, and Mr. WHITE conferees on the part of the Senate.

JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 178) consenting to an interstate compact relating to flood control in the Merrimack River Valley was announced as next in order.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

ONE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF ESTABLISHMENT OF CHICAGO

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, may I interrupt the normal proceedings of the Senate for just a moment? The great city of Chicago is celebrating its one hundredth birthday. At 2 o'clock today the celebration begins with some form of military and other display, and tomorrow those who are supposed to be our native-born citizens will take part in certain celebrations. We sought here to have something in the form of coins struck off in commemoration of the event. That was denied because it is not assumed wise to do so in connection with such celebration.

A bill has been reported by the Committee on Banking and Currency authorizing the striking off of certain medals. That is all to be done at the expense of the city of Chicago.

Would it be too much of an imposition for me to request permission to allow the Senate to return to that bill at once, since it was unanimously reported by the committee, and there is no objection, so far as I know, in order that I might send a telegram to reach Chicago at 2 o'clock informing them of the passage of the bill?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will we have to appoint a committee?

Mr. LEWIS. No; no committee, and not a penny of expense is involved to the Federal Government. It will take nothing out of the Treasury in any way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Illinois?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2918) to authorize the striking of an appropriate medal in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of Chicago, Ill., as a city was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of Chicago, Ill., as a city, and the granting of a charter for such establishment, there shall be struck at a mint of the United States to be designated by the Director of the Mint 100,000 commemorative medals of a special appropriate single design, size, weight, and composition to be fixed by the Director of the Mint with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

SEC. 2. Such commemorative medals shall be delivered to the duly authorized officers of Chicago's Charter Jubilee Committee upon payment to the Director of the Mint of an amount to be fixed by the Director of the Mint not less than the estimated cost of manufacture, including labor, materials, dies, use of machinery, and overhead expenses; and security satisfactory to the Director of the Mint shall be furnished to indemnify the United States for the full payment of such cost.

SEC. 3. Whoever shall falsely make, forge, or counterfeit or cause or procure to be falsely made, forged, or counterfeited or shall aid in falsely making, forging, or counterfeiting any medal issued under the provisions of this act, or whoever shall sell or bring into the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof from any foreign place, or have in his possession any such false, forged, or counterfeited medal, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both.

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, I thank the Senate for its gracious granting of my request for the passage of the bill, which will enable me now, before 2 o'clock, to telegraph my friends in Chicago that the bill has passed the Senate.

AMENDMENT OF PERISHABLE AGRICULTURAL COMMODITIES ACT, 1930

The bill (H. R. 6762) to amend the act known as the "Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act, 1930", approved June 10, 1930, as amended, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, just a moment. Who made the objection, please?

Mr. KING. I indicated an objection. The bill is a very formidable one, and I supposed its consideration would take some time.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. It is a formidable bill because it presents a lot of amendments to existing law, none of which is of particular consequence to the marketing of perishable fruits and vegetables. I may say to the Senator that the bill has passed the House. It has the approval of the Agricultural Department. It has been favorably reported by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and comes here without any objection at all. I ask the Senator to withhold his objection.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator state just what changes the bill makes in existing law, whether it increases the expenses of the Government or imposes any additional burdens upon the consumer?

Mr. JOHNSON of California. No, sir; it is self-supporting and self-sustaining. It requires no appropriation.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I will say that the bill makes 13 minor changes in the 1930 act, simply strengthening the act and making it possible to prevent fraud by dealers who take these perishable products and sell them on the market. The report itself sets out, as briefly as I could state them, the 13 minor changes. A hearing was held on the bill last year before a subcommittee of the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry; but the committee did not report out the bill, because it was so late in the session.

Mr. KING. Was the committee unanimous?

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. The committee was unanimous in reporting the bill.

Mr. KING. Very well; I will withdraw my objection.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, I ask to have the bill passed over temporarily. The committee recommended an amendment to it.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, am I to understand that the Senator from South Carolina asks that the bill be passed over?

Mr. SMITH. Just temporarily; yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Here is a report from the committee of the House which shows the amendments. No amendments were recommended by the Senate committee.

Mr. SMITH. I was under the impression that the Senate committee had reported an amendment; but I am informed that that is not the case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT OF PACKERS AND STOCKYARDS ACT, 1921

The bill (S. 1351) to amend the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921, as amended, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation from the chairman of the commitee as to the changes this bill makes in existing law.

Mr. SMITH. Mr. President, all the Departments were agreed that authority to bring criminal proceedings for the enforcement of the original act should be transferred to the Federal Trade Commission rather than being left where it now is.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SMITH. Yes.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I observe that the last report from the Department of Agriculture indicates that in view of the possibility of reorganization legislation this bill should not be passed, or that the Department should not take a position concerning it.

Mr. SMITH. At the meeting of the commitee the information given it was to the effect that this feature of the Packers and Stockyards Act could be administered by the Federal Trade Commission better than by the Agricultural Department. Had I been prepared, I should have been able to place before the Senate the letter from the Department. Perhaps it is in the report; but, at any rate, that is the information of the committee.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I note that the letter under date of March 15, 1937, signed by the Secretary of Commerce, reads in part as follows:

A similar bill (S. 4455) was introduced in the Seventy-fourth Congress and submitted to the Department by you for consideration. At that time the Department stated that it had no objection to the enactment of the bill. However, in regard to the present bill (S. 1351), as you know, the President recently submitted certain recommendations to the Congress concerning reorganization of the executive departments which may ultimately involve a rearrangement of the administration of various laws, in view of which it is not believed that it would be appropriate for this Department to express any opinion concerning the desirability of the provisions of S. 1351.

In view of that statement, Mr. President, I ask that the Senator permit the bill to go over until I can confer with some of the Senators who are serving on the Select Committee on Governmental Organization.

Mr. SMITH. I desire to state that a subcommittee was appointed to investigate this very matter, and the report of the committee includes the statement from the Department which the Senator has before him. The Department says:

The bill, if enacted, would give the Commission, instead of the Secretary of Agriculture, authority to investigate the practices of packers engaged in the handling of livestock for slaughter, meats, meat-food products, dairy products, poultry, poultry products, or eggs in commerce, including the purchase of livestock at public markets. The Commission would have authority to issue orders requiring packers to cease and desist from unlawful practices and in all other ways would have the authority now vested in the Secretary to deal with packers' activities, including the filing of annual and special reports. The bill, however, specifically provides that the Commission shall not have authority over persons licensed under title V of the act dealing with handlers of live poultry in commerce.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If it would be agreeable to the Senator, I should appreciate it if the bill might go over; and I will confer with some of my colleagues on the reorganization committee before the call of the calendar.

Mr. SMITH. I merely wish to call attention to the fact that, as I stated, the Federal Trade Commission, the Secretary of Agriculture, and all parties interested agreed that the bill should pass.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I ask that it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 2904) for the relief of officers and soldiers of the volunteer services of the United States mustered into service for the War with Spain, and who were held in service in the Philippine Islands after ratification of the treaty of peace April 11, 1899, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 610) to amend the act entitled "An act conferring upon the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Southern Division, jurisdiction of the claim of Minnie C. de Back against the Alaska Railroad", approved June 24, 1935, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of this bill. From a hasty examination of the report I note that the bill was adversely reported upon by the former Attorney General, and there are other reports on it. I think the bill had better go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (S. 2817) providing for the purchase by the United States of air-navigation facilities established with the approval of the Secretary of Commerce by air-mail contractors on their contract routes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. COPELAND. I ask that this bill be passed over without prejudice.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

SAFETY AT SEA

The bill (S. 2580) to amend existing laws so as to promote safety at sea by requiring the proper design, construction, maintenance, inspection, and operation of ships; to give effect to the Convention for Promoting Safety of Life at Sea, 1929; and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, I have an amendment to this bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. This seems to be a very important bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, this is an important bill.

Mr. McKELLAR. I do not believe it would be possible to consider the bill today.

Mr. COPELAND. Just a minute. I hope the Senator will not commit himself.

This bill is the outgrowth of 2 years of hearings in connection with the loss of the Morro Castle and the Mohawk, with great loss of life. We have before us the report made by a technical committee presided over by Admiral George H. Rock, one of the greatest naval architects in the world.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is the bill recommended by the Department?

Mr. COPELAND. It is recommended by the Department; and I may say that the new rules have been accepted by the Maritime Commission, and the new sister ship of the Queen Mary, of Great Britain, is being built according to the rules which are laid down in this book.

Mr. McKELLAR. If the bill provides for safety at sea, I shall withdraw my objection.

Mr. COPELAND. I thank the Senator.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I am in sympathy with the purposes of the bill; but it is such a very lengthy and complicated bill that it seems to me it ought not to be passed in this manner, without debate, during the consideration of bills on the calendar.

Mr. COPELAND. I beg my colleague on the Commerce Committee not to object to the consideration of the bill. The Senator knows the long hearings we have had. We have had days and days of hearings. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. BROWN] is going to offer an amendment which satisfies those operating ships on the Great Lakes. That was the last remaining objection of any sort.

Mr. CLARK. I suggest that the bill go over for the present.

Mr. COPELAND. I beg the Senator not to make the request.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I desire to say a brief word about the situation.

The Senator has in mind the fact that in 1929 a conference on safety of life at sea was held at London which painstakingly worked out rules to promote safety for vessels engaged in international voyages. Following the disasters to which the Senator from New York has referred, the Committee on Commerce, by special resolution of the Senate, was asked to study the question of safety of life at sea, and to make recommendations to this body, and to bring in proposed legislation.

Under the general authority the Commerce Committee appointed the finest body of experts to be found in the United States. This proposed legislation in large part is based on the recommendation of those experts; and in all the United States there could be found no body of men better qualified than that group to advise us on technical matters.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I have no objection to the present consideration of the bill. I know that the Senator from New York has worked on it for a very long time, and has had very comprehensive hearings, and has given very complete study to the subject.

Mr. COPELAND. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce, with amendments.

The first amendment of the Committee on Commerce was, under the heading "Title VI.—Rules and inspections—Part 1—Rules", in section 601, page 5, line 18, before the word "shall", to insert "as modified by this act"; on page 6, line 13, after the word "sources", to insert "including a representative for the Great Lakes"; in line 23, after the name "Congress" and the period, to strike out "If, 60 days after receiving" and insert "If, after the expiration of 60 calendar days following the receipt of"; at the end of line 25, after the word "action" and the comma, to insert "the"; and on page 7, line 2, after the word "law" and the period, to strike out "They shall be sufficiently inclusive" and insert "Existing rules and regulations such as those promulgated under Public Law No. 934, Seventieth Congress, approved March 2, 1929 (Load Line Act); Public Law No. 354, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 27, 1935, as amended (Coastwise Loadline Act); Public Law No. 343, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 26, 1935 (Dangerous Cargo Act); Public Law No. 765, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved June 23, 1936 (Inflammable or Combustible Liquid Cargo Act) shall remain in effect. Future changes or revisions in such rules and regulations, together with such rules and regulations as are required by titles VII, VIII, IX, and X of this act shall be submitted to the Congress and shall be promulgated and take effect in the same manner as is provided for the changes in the rules and regulations contained in Senate Report No. 184, Seventy-fifth Congress. The rules and regulations shall be, in every case, sufficiently inclusive", so as to read:

SECTION 601. (a) The Board of Supervising Inspectors, established by Revised Statutes 4405, as amended, is hereby abolished, and all authority, powers, and duties of such Board shall be transferred to the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation.

(b) Upon the approval of this act the rules and regulations set forth in Senate Report No. 184 (75th Cong., 1st sess.), pages 83 to 586, inclusive, as modified by this act, shall be promulgated by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, after approval by the Secretary of Commerce. Thereafter these rules and regulations shall be kept up to date by the Bureau, and they shall be completely reviewed and revised, in accordance with the requirements of this act, at least once every 5 years. When a special situation arises, as contemplated by the third paragraph, page 83, of said Senate Report No. 184 (75th Cong., 1st sess.), and the Bureau finds that a relaxation of the rules and regulations seems necessary, the Bureau will consider the case and will relax the rules only when no other course is reasonable. In each case where a relaxation of the rules and regulations is permitted, the Bureau, through the Secretary of Commerce, shall report the facts and reasons to the Congress. For the purpose of revising the rules, the Bureau shall convene, whenever necessary, a committee composed of technical representatives from the United States Maritime Commission, the Navy Department, the Coast Guard, and such other Government agencies as may be helpful, together with naval architects and marine engineers from other than Government sources, including a representative for the Great Lakes, to advise and assist the Bureau in the preparation of adequate rules. The necessary expenses of this technical committee are hereby authorized to be appropriated and shall be covered as an item in the Bureau's request for funds for the year concerned. Changes or revisions in such rules and regulations shall not seek to lower the safety standards set up in the original rules and regulations and, when approved by the Secretary of Commerce, shall be submitted to the Congress. If, after the expiration of 60 calendar days following the receipt of the revised rules and regulations, the Congress has taken no action, the rules and regulations shall be promulgated by the Bureau, and shall have the effect of law. Existing rules and regulations such as those promulgated under Public Law No. 934, Seventieth Congress, approved March 2, 1929 (Load Line Act); Public Law No. 354, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 27, 1935, as amended (Coastwise Loadline Act); Public Law No. 343, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 26, 1935 (Dangerous Cargo Act); Public Law No. 765, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved June 23, 1936 (Inflammable or Combustible Liquid Cargo Act) shall remain in effect. Future changes or revisions in such rules and regulations, together with such rules and regulations as are required by titles VII, VIII, IX, and X of this act shall be submitted to the Congress and shall be promulgated and take effect in the same manner as is provided for the changes in the rules and regulations contained in Senate Report No. 184, Seventy-fifth Congress. The rules and regulations shall be, in every case, sufficiently inclusive to insure that, from the point of view of safety, each vessel is fit for the service for which it is intended.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Part 2—Inspections", in section 603, page 10, line 9, after the word "vessels", to strike out "in groups 2, 3, and 5", so as to read:

SEC. 603. For passenger vessels the inspections required by section 602 shall be carried out, in general, as follows:

(a) The inspection before the vessel is first put in service shall include a complete inspection of the hull, machinery, and equipment, including the outside of the ship's bottom and the inside and outside of the boilers (when installed). This inspection shall be such as to insure that the arrangements, material, and scantlings of the hull, boilers, and their appurtenances, as well as main and auxiliary machinery, steering gear, life-saving appliances, and other equipments fully comply with the requirements of this act and of the detailed rules and regulations promulgated in accordance with it. This inspection shall be such also as to insure that the workmanship of all parts of the ship, its machinery and its equipment, are in all respects satisfactory.

(b) The periodical inspection shall include an inspection of the whole of the hull, boilers, machinery, and equipment, including the outside of the vessel's bottom. The inspection shall be such as to insure that the vessel, as regards the hull, boilers, their appurtenances, main and auxiliary machinery, steering gear, life-saving appliances, and other equipments, is in satisfactory condition and fit for the service for which it is intended, and that it complies with the requirements of this act and of the detailed rules and regulations promulgated in accordance with it: Provided, That the inspection of "the outside of the vessel's bottom" shall not be required annually as regards to vessels which remain at all times in fresh water.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 702, page 17, line 1, before the word "seat", to insert "toilet", so as to read:

(f) Toilets shall be provided for each group of the crew and, except in the smaller vessels where the space is limited and the crew small, these shall be in rooms separate from those containing bathing and washing facilities. There shall be a toilet seat for each 10 persons, or fraction thereof, and, in addition, a urinal for each 10 male persons, or fraction thereof, in the group to be accommodated. All toilet rooms shall be properly drained and so constructed and arranged that they can be kept in a clean, workable, and sanitary condition

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 711, page 21, line 2, after the word "this", to strike out "part" and insert "title", so as to read:

SEC. 711. The tonnage of all of the spaces named in this title shall be deducted from the gross tonnage in arriving at the net or register tonnage of a vessel in addition to any other deductions allowed by law.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 712, page 21, line 8, after the word "section", to strike out "772" and insert "702", so as to read:

SEC. 712. When the Bureau finds, after appropriate notice and opportunity for hearing, that it is practicable and necessary, in any particular case, they shall require that the minimum requirements, provided for in section 702, be raised.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title IX—Operation of ships—Station bills on passenger vessels in groups 1 and 2", in section 902, page 25, line 22, after the word "lifesaving", to strike out "equipment" and insert "equipments", so as to read:

(e) Abandon ship: The station bill shall show the station and duty of each member of the crew in case it becomes necessary to abandon ship, to the end that all lifeboats, life rafts, and other lifesaving equipments are properly manned, so that they can be placed in the water with the least possible delay; that the passengers may be embarked promptly and safely; that the passengers are warned to be dressed and to wear their life preservers properly; and that men are stationed to guide the passengers to their embarkation stations.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Drills", in section 912, page 29, line 4, after the word "that", to insert "the members of", so as to read:

(b) Collision or stranding: The Bureau's inspectors shall conduct a collision drill and shall assure themselves that the members of the crew who perform the various duties are the ones assigned to those duties by the station bills. The Bureau's inspectors shall see that all power-operated watertight doors close promptly when the bridge control is used; that all other watertight doors are closed and attended; that all side lights, ports, and other openings in the sides are properly closed and attended; that the valves on all lines which pass through the ship's sides below the bulkhead deck, such as sanitary and scupper lines, are properly attended, and that they can be closed; that all valves which will prevent water from a damaged compartment finding its way into an intact compartment are properly attended and that they can be closed; that the emergency light and power system is attended and in operation; that all available bilge pumps, particularly the submersible bilge pumps, are manned and that the crew is properly instructed in the operation of the necessary valves, from above the bulkhead deck, to make possible the pumping out of the various compartments; and that the members of the crew, assigned to guide passengers, are at their stations and fully instructed in their duties.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 1008, page 33, line 16, after the word "vessel", to insert a comma and "to which this title applies," so as to read:

SEC. 1008. It shall be the duty of the owner to have the inspections made as a prerequisite to the issuance of a "Safety Certificate" or a "Safety Radiotelegraphy Certificate", as the case may be, and no vessel to which this title applies shall be in service unless there is on board and in force a proper certificate or certificates required by this title.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the heading "Title XI—Organization of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation—Part 1—Duties", in section 1101, page 34, line 17, after the word "machinery", to insert "steering machinery," so as to read:

SECTION 1101. (a) The Bureau shall enforce the requirements of this act, and all laws or parts of laws not repealed by this act which have heretofore been required to be enforced by the Bureau. Among its other duties the Bureau shall:

(1) Issue rules, as prescribed in this act, for the design, construction, inspection, and operation of all merchant vessels of the United States, such as to insure the maximum safety of the ship and of the passengers and crew.

(2) Decide upon, in accordance with the requirements of this act, in the case of all merchant vessels already built, which in the future may be built, or which may be entered for United States registry from any other source, for operation under the United States flag, all questions concerning structural strength, loading, watertight subdivision, stability under all conditions, fire-resisting qualities, fire-detecting equipment, fire-fighting equipment, lifesaving equipment, equipment for communications other than radio, electrical equipment, navigational equipment, bilge and fire pumps, propelling machinery, steering machinery, ground tackle, and all other features which may be necessary to insure that the vessels are fully and properly constructed and equipped and safe for operation in their trades.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead "Part 2—Organization", in section 1102, page 38, line 24, after the word "the" where it occurs the second time to strike out "Bureau in the District of Columbia" and insert "Bureau, in addition to the field forces engaged in the inspection of ships", so as to read:

(d) There shall be under the Assistant Director in charge of the Matériel Division of the Bureau, in addition to the field forces engaged in the inspection of ships, a technical section consisting of a technical staff, the members of which shall have the necessary background of education and experience to permit them to render correct judgment on all matters, of whatever nature, having to do with the design and construction of ships. The senior members of the technical staff shall be selected for their special expertness in naval architecture, marine engineering, and electrical engineering, without regard to civil-service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. These senior members shall consist of a senior naval architect at a salary not to exceed $7,000 per annum, a senior engineer at a salary not to exceed $7,000 per annum, and an electrical engineer at a salary not to exceed $6,000 per annum, the junior members of the staff to be selected in accordance with the provisions of the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. The services of this permanent staff may be augmented by the part-time employment of technical experts in special fields as may be found necessary to keep up with the advance in the art of shipbuilding. The duties of the technical section shall be to advise the Director upon all matters of design connected with merchant vessels to be built and merchant vessels to be reconditioned or repaired, so that all the requirements of this act are properly met so far as design is concerned, and to control the admeasurement of merchant vessels and the maximum loaded drafts for them.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the subhead, "Part 5—Assignment of Shipping Commissioners", in section 1109, page 45, line 16, after the word "at", to strike out "each port of ocean and Gulf navigation and such ports of the Great Lakes" and insert "such ports", so as to read:

SEC. 1109. (a) Section 4501 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4501. The Director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation shall assign an officer of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation to perform the duties of a shipping commissioner at such ports as, in his judgment, may require the same; while the officer is so assigned he shall have the authority and duties of a shipping commissioner under this title."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BROWN of Michigan. Mr. President, I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed, on page 4, line 24, after the word "practicable", to change the period to a colon and insert the following:

Provided, That said requirements and the rules and regulations to be promulgated under this act, so far as the same relate to construction and design of vessels, shall not be applicable to existing passenger vessels upon the Great Lakes, but such requirements as to such matters shall conform to the applicable provisions of law as effective immediately prior to the enactment of this act: And further provided, That said Bureau may exempt from all other provisions and requirements of said rules and regulations, existing vessels navigating the Great Lakes and the rivers of the United States to such extent as the same may be done with due regard to safety of passengers and crews of such vessels.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill (S. 2580) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the time time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc.,

TITLE I—PURPOSE

SECTION 1. The purpose of this act is to insure that all merchant vessels documented under the laws of the United States are so designed, constructed, equipped, maintained, operated, and inspected as to insure the maximum of safety to life and property in the services for which they are used.

TITLE II—BUREAU OF MARINE INSPECTION AND NAVIGATION

DUTIES

SECTION 201. The Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation shall be responsible, under the Secretary of Commerce, for the general supervision of all matters relating to merchant ships and merchant seamen and shall execute the provisions of this act and all other acts relating to merchant shipping and merchant seamen except where specifically provided to the contrary in those acts.

TITLE III—DEFINITIONS (GENERAL)

SECTION 301. As used in this act—

(a) "Ship" or "vessel" includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance, except aircraft, used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water, whether or not it is actually afloat.

(b) A ship or vessel shall be considered a "passenger ship" if it carries or is licensed or certificated to carry more than 12 passengers.

(c) A "passenger" is any person carried on board a ship or vessel except (1) the officers and crew actually employed to man and operate the ship; (2) persons employed to carry on the business of the ship; and (3) persons on board a ship when they are carried, either because of the obligation laid upon the master to carry shipwrecked, distressed, or other persons in like or similar situations or by reason of any circumstance over which neither the master, the owner, nor the charterer (if any) has control.

(d) A "cargo ship" or "cargo vessel" means any ship or vessel not a passenger ship or vessel.

(e) A "new ship" or "new vessel" is one which is laid down or the plans of which are approved after 90 days following the approval of this act.

(f) The word "approved", when used alone, means approved by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation.

(g) The word "Bureau", when used alone, means the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation.

(h) The word "inspector", when used alone, means a duly authorized inspector of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation.

TITLE IV—GROUPING

SECTION 401. (a) All vessels documented under the laws of the United States shall be grouped in accordance with the service for which they are intended, as follows:

(1) Group 1. Ocean-going vessels navigating more than 20 miles offshore.

(2) Group 2. Great Lakes vessels. Ocean-going vessels navigating less than 20 miles offshore.

(3) Group 3. Ocean-going or Great Lakes vessels navigating partially protected waters.

(4) Group 4. Vessels navigating bays, sounds, and protected waters.

(5) Group 5. Vessels navigating rivers, harbors, and small lakes.

SEC. 402. The Bureau may divide each of the groups set forth in section 401 of this act into subgroups in accordance with the type of ship, such as "passenger vessel", "passenger vessel carrying unberthed passengers", "passenger ferry", "passenger vessel used for amusement or recreation (whether mobile or immobile)", "yacht", "cargo vessel", "tanker", "dredge", "fisherman", "wrecking vessel", "towing vessel", "cargo barge", "tank barge", "sailing vessel", and such others as may be required based on the trade in which the vessel may be engaged.

TITLE V—APPLICATION

SECTION 501. The requirements of this act shall apply, unless otherwise specified, to any new passenger vessel, documented under the laws of the United States, falling in groups 1, 2, or 3, which is of 100 gross tons or over, and to any new passenger vessel, documented under the laws of the United States, falling in groups 4 or 5, which is of 50 gross tons or over. The requirements of this act shall be applied to all vessels in all groups to as great an extent as is practicable; provided said requirements and the rules and regulations to be promulgated under this act, so far as the same relate to construction and design of vessels, shall not be applicable to existing passenger vessels upon the Great Lakes, but such requirements as to such matters shall conform to the applicable provisions of law as effective immediately prior to the enactment of this act; and further provided said Bureau may exempt from all other provisions and requirements of said rules and regulations, existing vessels navigating the Great Lakes and the rivers of the United States to such extent as the same may be done with due regard to safety of passengers and crews of such vessels.

SEC. 502. The provisions of this act shall not apply to—

(a) A ship of war.

(b) A vessel of the United States belonging to and operated by the Government, except a ship of the United States Maritime Commission, the Inland Coastwise Waterways Service, or the Panama Railroad.

TITLE VI—RULES AND INSPECTIONS

PART 1—RULES

SECTION 601. (a) The Board of Supervising Inspectors, established by Revised Statutes 4405, as amended, is hereby abolished, and all authority, powers, and duties of such Board shall be transferred to the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation.

(b) Upon the approval of this act the rules and regulations set forth in Senate Report No. 184 (75th Cong., 1st sess.), pages 83 to 586, inclusive, as modified by this act, shall be promulgated by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, after approval by the Secretary of Commerce. Thereafter these rules and regulations shall be kept up to date by the Bureau, and they shall be completely reviewed and revised, in accordance with the requirements of this act, at least once every 5 years. When a special situation arises, as contemplated by the third paragraph, page 83, of said Senate Report No. 184 (75th Cong., 1st sess.), and the Bureau finds that a relaxation of the rules and regulations seems necessary, the Bureau will consider the case and will relax the rules only when no other course is reasonable. In each case where a relaxation of the rules and regulations is permitted, the Bureau, through the Secretary of Commerce, shall report the facts and reasons to the Congress. For the purpose of revising the rules the Bureau shall convene, whenever necessary, a committee composed of technical representatives from the United States Maritime Commission, the Navy Department, the Coast Guard, and such other Government agencies as may be helpful, together with naval architects and marine engineers from other than Government sources, including a representative for the Great Lakes, to advise and assist the Bureau in the preparation of adequate rules. The necessary expenses of this technical committee are hereby authorized to be appropriated and shall be covered as an item in the Bureau's request for funds for the year concerned. Changes or revisions in such rules and regulations shall not seek to lower the safety standards set up in the original rules and regulations and, when approved by the Secretary of Commerce, shall be submitted to the Congress. If, after the expiration of 60 calendar days following the receipt of the revised rules and regulations, the Congress has taken no action, the rules and regulations shall be promulgated by the Bureau, and shall have the effect of law. Existing rules and regulations such as those promulgated under Public Law No. 934, Seventieth Congress, approved March 2, 1929 (Load Line Act); Public Law No. 354, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 27, 1935, as amended (Coastwise Load Line Act); Public Law No. 343, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved August 26, 1935 (Dangerous Cargo Act); Public Law No. 765, Seventy-fourth Congress, approved June 23, 1936 (Inflammable or Combustible Liquid Cargo Act) shall remain in effect. Future changes or revisions in such rules and regulations, together with such rules and regulations as are required by titles VII, VIII, IX, and X of this act shall be submitted to the Congress and shall be promulgated and take effect in the same manner as is provided for the changes in the rules and regulations contained in Senate Report No. 184, Seventy-fifth Congress. The rules and regulations shall be, in every case, sufficiently inclusive to insure that, from the point of view of safety, each vessel is fit for the service for which it is intended: Provided, That each year, at the beginning of the session, the Bureau, through the Secretary of Commerce, shall report to the Congress whether or not any new legislation is required to insure the safety of life at sea. If such legislation is deemed necessary, the Bureau shall submit definite recommendations for it to the Congress through the Secretary of Commerce.

(c) In each case where it is provided, in this act or in the Bureau's rules and regulations promulgated in pursuance of the requirements of this act, that plans, plans and specifications, or stress calculations, be submitted to the Bureau for approval, the Bureau shall act upon them with as little delay as possible. When the Bureau approves the proposed design it shall endorse the plans and specifications to that effect, returning one set to the owner or his accredited representative, sending another to the Bureau's inspector having the responsibility of inspecting the work, and retaining one set for the Bureau's records. After the approval of the plans or the plans and specifications, no change in design or material shall be made without first obtaining the Bureau's written approval of the changes. Before any such plans, or plans and specifications, are disapproved, appropriate notice and opportunity for hearing shall be granted by the Bureau to all interested parties.

PART 2—INSPECTIONS

SEC. 602. Every new or existing vessel, documented under the laws of the United States, shall be subject to inspection by the Bureau, to determine her material condition, as follows:

(1) An inspection shall be made before the vessel is first placed in service.

(2) A periodical inspection shall be made at least once every year.

(3) Additional inspections shall be made whenever necessary.

SEC. 603. For passenger vessels the inspections required by section 602 shall be carried out, in general, as follows:

(a) The inspection before the vessel is first put in service shall include a complete inspection of the hull, machinery, and equipment, including the outside of the ship's bottom and the inside and outside of the boilers (when installed). This inspection shall be such as to insure that the arrangements, material, and scantlings of the hull, boilers, and their appurtenances, as well as main and auxiliary machinery, steering gear, lifesaving appliances, and other equipments fully comply with the requirements of this act and of the detailed rules and regulations promulgated in accordance with it. This inspection shall be such also as to insure that the workmanship of all parts of the ship, its machinery and its equipment, are in all respects satisfactory.

(b) The periodical inspection shall include an inspection of the whole of the hull, boilers, machinery, and equipment, including the outside of the vessel's bottom. The inspection shall be such as to insure that the vessel, as regards the hull, boilers, their appurtenances, main and auxiliary machinery, steering gear, lifesaving appliances, and other equipments, is in satisfactory condition and fit for the service for which it is intended, and that it complies with the requirements of this act and of the detailed rules and regulations promulgated in accordance with it: Provided, That the inspection of "the outside of the vessel's bottom" shall not be required annually as regards to vessels which remain at all times in fresh water.

(c) An inspection, either general or partial, according to the circumstances, shall be made every time an accident occurs or a defect is discovered which affects the safety of the vessel or the efficiency or completeness of its lifesaving appliances, machinery, or other equipment, and likewise when any important repairs or renewals are made. The inspection shall be such as to insure that the necessary repairs or renewals have been effectivly made, that the material and workmanship of such repairs or renewals are in all respects satisfactory, and that the vessel complies in all respects with the provisions of this act and of the detailed rules and regulations promulgated in accordance with it.

(d) In the case of a new vessel the vessel shall be inspected during the progress of construction to insure that all pertinent requirements of this act are fulfilled.

(e) An inspection shall be made, before sailing, of each passenger vessel in groups 1 and 2, which is undertaking a voyage of more than 1 week's duration without calling at a port of the United States, to determine that the lifesaving and fire-fighting equipment is in satisfactory condition and that the watertight integrity and stability of the vessel are being properly maintained. In the case of passenger ships in groups 1 and 2 making shorter voyages, and passenger ships falling in other groups, a similar inspection shall be made at least once each month during the period the vessel is in service.

(f) An inspection of vessels in group 1 shall be made to insure that vessels do not leave port with a dangerous list or so down by the head or stern as to make them unmanageable in a heavy sea or in narrow waters.

(g) After the inspection of a vessel, as provided in paragraphs (a), (b), (c), and (d) of this section, has been completed, no change shall be made in the structural arrangements, machinery, equipment, or other parts covered by the inspections without the written approval of the Bureau.

(h) On request of the owner, vessels out of service in a lay-up condition shall be exempt from the periodic inspections otherwise required.

(i) Vessels built abroad, which may be entered for documentation under the laws of the United States, shall be subjected to the inspection required by paragraph (a) of this section upon their first arrival in a port of the United States.

SEC. 604. For cargo vessels the inspections required by section 602 shall be carried out, in general, as follows:

(a) The inspection before the vessel is first put in service shall include a complete inspection of the hull, machinery, and equipment, including the outside of the ship's bottom and the inside and outside of the boilers (when installed). This inspection shall be such as to insure that the arrangements, material, and scantlings of the hull, boilers, and their appurtenances, as well as main and auxiliary machinery, steering gear, lifesaving appliances, and other equipments fully comply with the requirements of this act and of the detailed rules and regulations promulgated in accordance with it. This inspection shall be such also as to insure that the workmanship of all parts of the ship, its machinery and its equipment, are in all respects satisfactory.

(b) The periodical inspection shall include an inspection of the hull, boilers, machinery, and equipment. The inspection shall be such as to insure that the ship, as regards the hull, boilers, their appurtenances, main and auxiliary machinery, steering gear, lifesaving appliances, and other equipments, is in satisfactory condition and fit for the service for which it is intended, and that it complies with the requirements of this act and of the detailed rules and regulations promulgated in accordance with it: Provided, That the inspection of the outside of the ship's bottom shall not be required annually on vessels which remain in fresh water a major part of the time.

(c) An inspection, either general or partial, according to the circumstances, shall be made every time an accident occurs or a defect is discovered which affects the safety of the vessel or the efficiency or completeness of its livesaving appliances, machinery, or other equipment, and likewise when any other important repairs or renewals are made. The inspection shall be such as to insure that the necessary repairs or renewals have been effectively made and that the material and workmanship of such repairs or renewals are in all respects satisfactory.

(d) In the case of a new vessel the vessel shall be inspected during the progress of construction to insure that all pertinent requirements of this act are fulfilled.

(e) After the inspection of a vessel, as provided in paragraphs (a), (b), (c), and (d) of this section, has been completed, no change affecting the safety of the vessel shall be made in the structural arrangements, machinery, equipment, or other parts covered by the inspections without the written approval of the Bureau.

(f) On request of the owner, vessels out of service in a lay-up condition shall be exempt from the periodic inspections otherwise required.

(g) Vessels built abroad, which may be entered for documentation under the laws of the United States, shall be subjected to the inspection required by paragraph (a) above upon their first arrival in a port of the United States.

TITLE VII—ACCOMMODATIONS FOR OFFICERS AND CREW

SECTION 701. The Bureau shall give constant attention to the construction, arrangement, sanitation, and ventilation of the quarters and facilities provided on ships of all groups for the accommodation of the officers and crew.

CREW SPACES

SEC. 702. In new vessels of group 1, and ocean-going vessels in group 2 which are over 750 gross tons, the requirements for crew accommodations shall provide for at least the following:

(a) Accommodations for the crew shall not be located forward of the forward collision bulkhead nor on a deck which is below the deepest load line for its entire length.

(b) Sleeping accommodations for the crew shall be divided into staterooms, no one of which shall berth more than four persons, except that on the larger passenger ships, where the stewards and waiters are numerous, rooms may be arranged to accommodate not more than 10 stewards or waiters (or both). So far as is practicable, the rooms for watch standers shall be so arranged that all those in a room belong to the same watch and are called at the same time.

(c) Each stateroom shall be of a size that there is at least 20 square feet of deck area and a volume of at least 150 cubic feet for each person accommodated. Each person shall have a separate berth and not more than two berths, a lower and an upper, shall be placed between two decks. The berths shall be of metal framework and shall be so arranged that they provide ample room for easy occupancy. The berths shall not be obstructed by pipes, ventilating ducts, or other installations which interfere with their proper use. Each stateroom shall be provided with a metal locker for each person accommodated. Each locker shall be not less than 12 inches by 21 inches by 5 feet high and so placed as to be readily accessible. The interior of the locker shall be so arranged as to facilitate the proper stowage of clothes.

(d) Messrooms shall be provided for all members of the crew which shall be placed as near the galley as is practicable. The messrooms shall be properly equipped with tables and a seat for each person, and shall be of sufficient size to permit easy access to each seat. In vessels of over 5,000 gross tons, separate messrooms shall be provided for the deck, engine, and steward groups. On the larger passenger ships, where the stewards and waiters are numerous, arrangements may be made for those in the steward's department to eat in one of the passenger dining rooms before or after the times set apart for the service of meals to passengers.

(e) Bathrooms shall be provided for the deck, engine, and steward groups of the crew; in each of these there shall be installed 1 shower for each 10 persons or fraction thereof, in the group to be accommodated, and 1 wash basin for each 4 persons or fraction thereof. The showers and basins shall be supplied with hot and cold fresh water. On small vessels where this is found impracticable one bathroom may be approved. On vessels where the engine group contains 10 or more persons a separate bathroom shall be provided for them. On vessels where the steward group contains six or more persons, a separate bathroom shall be provided for them. All bathrooms shall be properly drained and so constructed and arranged that they can be kept in a clean, workable, and sanitary condition.

(f) Toilets shall be provided for each group of the crew and, except in the smaller vessels where the space is limited and the crew small, these shall be in rooms separate from those containing bathing and washing facilities. There shall be a toilet seat for each 10 persons, or fraction thereof, and, in addition, a urinal for each 10 male persons, or fraction thereof, in the group to be accommodated. All toilet rooms shall be properly drained and so constructed and arranged that they can be kept in a clean, workable, and sanitary condition.

(g) On vessels where the crew comprises 12 or more persons, a hospital space shall be provided. Except on vessels making a voyage of 24 hours or less from port to port, this space shall be used for the care of the sick and for no other purpose except where an emergency or an unusual occasion, such as a trial trip, makes it necessary. The space shall be completely enclosed so that contagious diseases can be isolated. It shall contain 1 berth for each 12 persons in the crew (but no more than 6 berths will be required in any case) and it shall be so constructed and arranged that it can be kept in a clean and sanitary condition.

(h) Except for such crew spaces as are located in deckhouses where, under all ordinary weather conditions, the windows or ports can be kept open, all crew spaces shall be supplied with air by forced ventilation. Each sleeping room and messroom shall be supplied with air equal to 10 times the volume of the room each hour and shall be so ventilated both at sea and in port so long as the spaces are occupied. Each bathroom, toilet, and hospital space shall be supplied each hour with air equal to 15 times the volume of the space, and shall also be fitted with exhaust ventilation to remove a volume of air 25 percent in excess of that supplied so that it is possible to have these spaces properly ventilated when all doors, ports, and other openings are closed.

(i) All crew spaces shall be adequately heated in cold weather, and care shall be taken to insure that both heat and ventilation are supplied in the various spaces so that it will not be necessary to curtail the ventilation in order to have warmth.

(j) All crew spaces shall be adequately lighted and special provisions shall be made for properly screened reading lights.

SEC. 703. The Bureau shall cause to be cut in a beam or other part of the permanent structure a legend indicating the purpose for which each space enumerated in section 702 is to be used and the number of persons it may accommodate. A sign conveying the same information shall be placed over the door of each space.

SEC. 704. So far as is practicable and reasonable the requirements for new vessels, outlined in section 702 of this act, shall be applied to existing vessels of similar type and, in principle, to the vessels of less than 750 gross tons in group 1 and ocean-going vessels in group 2, and to vessels in other groups, to the end that habitable and sanitary accommodations may be provided in each case.

SEC. 705. So far as is practicable the Bureau shall require an inspection of all crew spaces in vessels of group 1 and ocean-going vessels in group 2 at least once each month. The inspectors shall give particular attention (1) to the cleanliness and sanitation of these spaces, (2) to insuring that no space is occupied by a greater number of persons than it is authorized to accommodate, and (3) to insuring that none of the spaces enumerated in section 702 of this act are used for other purposes than the accommodation of the crew. No person shall be carried in the employ of a ship unless the accommodations are sufficient to care for him or her in accordance with this act.

OFFICERS' QUARTERS

SEC. 706. In new vessels of group 1 and ocean-going vessels in group 2, which are over 1,000 gross tons, each licensed officer shall be provided with a separate stateroom suitably equipped, and so far as is practicable licensed officers' quarters shall be located on or above the weather deck.

SEC. 707. (a) On each new vessel, in group 1 and ocean-going vessels in group 2, a messroom shall be provided for the licensed officers which shall be of sufficient size to seat all the officers at one time and to permit easy access to each seat. If a new cargo vessel is fitted to carry passengers, provision shall be made for seating them in the officers' messroom in addition to the officers, or a separate dining room may be provided for them.

(b) In passenger ships, where all licensed officers are required to have meals in the main dining room, a separate messroom shall be provided to accommodate those officers whose duty interferes with their appearing in the main dining room at the regular time.

SEC. 708. Bathroom and toilet facilities shall be provided for all officers who do not occupy rooms to which these facilities are attached.

SEC. 709. The ventilation requirements for officers' quarters shall be at least equal to the requirements for crew spaces, as set forth in section 702 (h) of this act.

SEC. 710. So far as is practicable and reasonable the requirements for new vessels, outlined in sections 706, 707, 708, and 709 of this act, shall be applied to existing vessels of similar type and, in principle, to vessels of less than 1,000 gross tons in group 1 and ocean-going vessels in group 2, and to vessels in other groups, to the end that habitable and sanitary accommodations may be provided in each case.

SEC. 711. The tonnage of all of the spaces named in this title shall be deducted from the gross tonnage in arriving at the net or register tonnage of a vessel in addition to any other deductions allowed by law.

SEC. 712. When the Bureau finds, after appropriate notice and opportunity for hearing, that it is practicable and necessary, in any particular case, they shall require that the minimum requirements provided for in section 702 be raised.

TITLE VIII—GRAIN CARGOES

SECTION 801. (a) As used in this section, a "grain or seed cargo" means a cargo consisting of the seeds of cereal grasses such as maize, wheat, rye, barley, oats, and rice, together with such seeds as flaxseed, cottonseed, nuts, and nut kernels, when loaded in a vessel in bulk.

(b) The Bureau's rules and regulations covering the loading of grain or seed cargoes shall set forth all necessary precautions to be taken and the methods which shall be followed for the safe stowage of such cargoes. Before permitting a vessel to load a grain or seed cargo for an ocean voyage the Bureau's inspector shall make an inspection to insure that the vessel is properly prepared to receive the cargo and after the vessel is loaded the inspector shall assure himself that the cargo is properly trimmed and stowed, that proper feeders are provided, and that the vessel has the freeboard required by the load-line acts.

(c) Where a grain or seed cargo is loaded on board any vessel, bound on an ocean voyage, in a port of the United States all necessary precautions shall be taken to prevent the grain or seed cargo from shifting and the vessel shall not be cleared until the Bureau's inspector has found the stowage of the cargo satisfactory.

(d) Where all such necessary precautions have not been taken, in the case of any vessel of the United States, whether the vessel was loaded in a United States port or not, the master of the vessel, and any agent of the owner who was charged with the loading of the vessel or the sending of it to sea, shall each be liable to a fine not exceeding $1,000, and the owner of the vessel shall also be liable to the same fine, unless he shows that he took all reasonable means to enforce the observance of this section and was not privy to the violation.

(e) If, after 90 days after the approval of this act, any foreign vessel loaded with a grain or seed cargo arrives in or attempts to leave a port of the United States, having the grain or seed cargo loaded in such a manner that the master of the vessel, if the vessel were documented under the laws of the United States, would be liable to a penalty under paragraph (d), the master of that foreign vessel shall be liable to a fine not exceeding $1,000.

TITLE IX—OPERATION OF SHIPS

PART 1—DUTIES OF OWNERS

SECTION 901. (a) It shall be the responsibility of the owner of each vessel to have the crew fully instructed to meet the emergencies that may come to pass, and he shall give particular attention to the drills necessary for proper training in the duties necessary to meet emergencies due to fire, collision, and stranding.

(b) It shall be the responsibility of the owner of each passenger vessel in group 1 to see that the passengers are properly instructed as to the procedure in case of an emergency. To this end a drill shall be held, as soon after departure from port as possible, for the benefit and instruction of the passengers. This instruction shall include the proper method of wearing life preservers, the nearest route by which passengers may reach the embarkation deck, the boat to which they are assigned for abandon ship, and such other information as is necessary. The time of holding such drills and their duration shall be entered in the official log. Failure to comply with the requirements of this paragraph shall subject the owner to a civil penalty of $10,000, which may be remitted or mitigated by the Secretary of Commerce in accordance with such proceedings as the Secretary shall by regulations prescribe.

STATION BILLS ON PASSENGER VESSELS IN GROUPS 1 AND 2

SEC. 902. (a) On passenger vessels in groups 1 and 2 station bills that are clearly legible shall be prepared and posted in several parts of the vessel, and, in particular, in all spaces occupied by the crew. These station bills shall show the normal station and duty of each member of the crew, his special duties in all emergency conditions, and his duties when it is necessary to abandon ship.

(b) Signals: The station bill shall show in detail the various signals to be used, first, to arouse the crew and to designate the type of emergency; and, second, to arouse the passengers, if any. In addition, the station bills shall show the signals to be used at abandon ship for manning, swinging out, and lowering the boats, and other lifesaving equipment.

(c) Fire: The station bill shall show the station and duty of each member of the crew in case of fire, to the end that all fire pumps are properly manned with the minimum loss of time; that the fire hoses are properly manned; that the available chemical, foam, or gas-extinguishing equipment is properly manned; that the fire-screen doors are closed properly; that escapes are clear for the use of passengers and crew; that the ventilation blowers (except those for the machinery spaces) are shut down; that the emergency light and power system is manned and ready for use; that the breathing apparatus is provided and ready for use; and that, where passengers are carried, men are stationed to guide the passengers to the open decks or other places of safety.

(d) Collision or stranding: The station bill shall show the station and duty of each member of the crew in case of a collision or stranding, to the end that all watertight doors are manned and properly closed; that all airports (side scuttles), ports, and other openings in the sides are properly closed; that the valves on all lines, which pass through the ship's side, such as sanitary and scupper lines, are properly closed; that all valves which will prevent water from a damaged compartment finding its way into an intact compartment are closed; that all available bilge pumps are manned and properly used; that the emergency light and power system is manned and ready for use; and, where passengers are carried, that men are stationed to guide the passengers to the open decks or other places of safety.

(e) Abandon ship: The station bill shall show the station and duty of each member of the crew in case it becomes necessary to abandon ship, to the end that all lifeboats, life rafts, and other lifesaving equipments are properly manned, so that they can be placed in the water with the least possible delay; that the passengers may be embarked promptly and safely; that the passengers are warned to be dressed and to wear their life preservers properly; and that men are stationed to guide the passengers to their embarkation stations.

DRILLS ON PASSENGER VESSELS IN GROUPS 1 AND 2

SEC. 903. In order that the crew may become expert in all the duties covered by the station bills as set forth in section 902, each member, when he comes on board, shall be furnished with a card or paper on which shall be set forth all of his duties as provided in the station bills. On each passenger ship, except one on which the same crew is employed over a long period, each member of the crew shall be shown his various stations and instructed in his duties at each station prior to the vessel's sailing and as soon as practicable after the arrival of the crew on board.

SEC. 904. (a) It shall be the duty of the owner, through his representative the master, to hold, while at sea, weekly drills of the crew in all their emergency duties. Sufficient drills shall be held so that each member of the crew may become familiar with the duties required of him in each emergency condition set forth in section 902. More frequent drills shall be held if necessary for the proper training of the crew. These drills shall be recorded in the official log.

(b) The owner, through his representative the master, shall give special attention to the training of the members of the crew in the use of the breathing apparatus carried, so that the required number of men may remain at their stations in the machinery spaces, and that the men detailed to fight a fire can approach the scene of the fire with a minimum of danger from smoke or gas.

PART 2—DUTIES OF INSPECTORS AS TO PASSENGER VESSELS IN GROUPS 1 AND 2

SEC. 911. In conducting the inspections of passenger ships of groups 1 and 2, as required by section 603 (e) and (f) of this act, the Bureau's inspectors shall assure themselves, first, that the crew is properly stationed and instructed as required by this title; second, that the station bills are in proper form and posted and lighted in such a manner that they can be read without difficulty; and, third, that each member of the crew has been furnished with full information as to his duties in an emergency as set forth in section 903.

DRILLS

SEC. 912. (a) Fire: The Bureau's inspectors shall conduct a fire drill and shall assure themselves that the members of the crew who perform the various duties are the ones assigned to those duties by the station bills. The Bureau's inspectors shall see that the full fire-pump capacity is utilized; that the proper number of fire hoses is in use; that the proper chemical, foam, or gas extinguishing equipment is manned and ready for use; that all fire-screen doors are closed and are properly attended; that the escapes from all spaces are clear; that the proper ventilation blowers are shut down; that the emergency light and power system is attended and tested; that the breathing apparatus is in proper working condition, and that the proper members of the crew are instructed in its use, and that the members of the crew, assigned to guide the passengers, are at their stations and fully instructed in their duties.

(b) Collision or stranding: The Bureau's inspectors shall conduct a collision drill and shall assure themselves that the members of the crew who perform the various duties are the ones assigned to those duties by the station bills. The Bureau's inspectors shall see that all power-operated watertight doors close promptly when the bridge control is used; that all other watertight doors are closed and attended; that all side lights, ports, and other openings in the sides are properly closed and attended; that the valves on all lines which pass through the ship's sides below the bulkhead deck, such as sanitary and scupper lines, are properly attended and that they can be closed; that all valves which will prevent water from a damaged compartment finding its way into an intact compartment are properly attended and that they can be closed; that the emergency light and power system is attended and in operation; that all available bilge pumps, particularly the submersible bilge pumps, are manned and that the crew is properly instructed in the operation of the necessary valves, from above the bulkhead deck, to make possible the pumping out of the various compartments; and that the members of the crew, assigned to guide passengers, are at their stations and fully instructed in their duties.

(c) Abandon ship: The Bureau's inspectors shall conduct an abandon-ship drill and shall assure themselves that all the lifeboats, life rafts, and similar apparatus are properly equipped; that all lifeboats, life rafts, and similar apparatus can be placed in the water when all the ship's power is shut off; that a sufficient number of lifeboats are lowered to demonstrate the skill of the crew and the satisfactoriness of the handling gear; that the lifeboats lowered are handled and manned by the members of the crews assigned to them, that all other lifeboats are attended by the members of the crew assigned to them; that it is possible and practicable to embark the passengers in the lifeboats at the embarkation stations, and that the members of the crew assigned to guide and assist the passengers are fully instructed in their duties.

COMPLIANCE

SEC. 913. The Bureau's inspectors shall not permit any passenger vessel in groups 1 and 2 to depart from any United States port if it fails to comply in any respect with the requirements of this title. A reinspection may be held, but not sooner than 24 hours after the last one on which the vessel failed to comply.

TITLE X—SAFETY CERTIFICATES

SECTION 1001. All vessels of the United States complying with the requirements of this act as well as any law or convention requiring radio equipment, shall be issued a safety certificate. Such certificate shall show in detail the requirements necessary for each particular vessel and that such requirements have been met.

SEC. 1002. (a) Safety certificate: The Bureau, after the proper inspections have been made, shall issue a safety certificate to each passenger vessel in group 1, and ocean-going passenger vessels in group 2. These safety certificates shall follow the form prescribed in the Convention for Promoting Safety of Life at Sea, in force, and, for vessels engaged in international voyages, the certificates shall bear the heading prescribed by the Convention. The certificates shall include the following information:

(1) The kind of voyage for which the certificate is granted.

(2) The name, distinguishing number or letters, port of registry or enrollment, and gross tonnage.

(3) That the vessel has been properly inspected in accordance with the requirements of this act.

(4) That the inspection showed that the vessel complied with the requirements of this act so far as the hull, main and auxiliary machinery, and all boilers are concerned, and especially the details of the watertight subdivision arrangements, the stability conditions, the protection against fire, and other details having to do with the safety of the ship as a whole.

(5) The subdivision load line (or lines) assigned and the exact conditions under which it is to apply.

(6) That the lifeboats, life rafts, and other lifesaving appliances comply with the requirements of this act and shall give the maximum number of persons this equipment permits having on board.

(7) That the radio installation is satisfactory and in accordance with law. The information shall be at least as complete as that required by the Convention for Promoting Safety of Life at Sea, in force.

(8) That in all other respects the vessel complies with the requirements of this act.

(b) The safety certificate shall be dated and shall be signed by the Chief of the Bureau, or, in his absence, by his next assistant.

(c) A similar safety certificate shall be issued, under the same conditions, to any other passenger vessel which engages in an international voyage as defined by the Convention for Promoting Safety of Life at Sea, in force.

SEC. 1003. Safety radiotelegraphy certificate: A safety radiotelegraphy certificate shall be issued by the Bureau to each cargo vessel of the United States of 1,600 gross tons and over, which is subject to and complies with the requirements of the radio provisions of the Convention for Promoting Safety of Life at Sea, in force, and any act requiring the vessel to be equipped with radio apparatus.

SEC. 1004. Exemption certificate: The Bureau may issue an exemption certificate to any ship to which an exemption is granted in accordance with any of the provisions of this act, of the Convention for Promoting Safety of Life at Sea, in force, or any act requiring the vessel to be equipped with radio apparatus. No exemption from any of the requirements of the Federal Communications Commission respecting radio equipment shall be issued without first receiving from the Commission the necessary authority.

SEC. 1005. All entries in the certificates, required by sections 1002, 1003, and 1004 of this act, regarding radio equipments and installations shall be as prescribed and determined by the Federal Communications Commissions in accordance with law, treaty, or convention.

SEC. 1006. None of the certificates covered by this title shall be issued for a period of more than 12 months. The certificates may be extended under the necessities and conditions set forth in the Convention for Promoting Safety of Life at Sea, in force.

SEC. 1007. Nothing in this act shall be construed as lessening in any degree the control of the Federal Communications Commission over any matters connected with the radio equipment and its operation on shipboard; and its decision, or determination, in regard to the radio requirements and installations, or exemptions, shall be final, subject only to review in accordance with law.

SEC. 1008. It shall be the duty of the owner to have the inspections made as a prerequisite to the issuance of a "Safety Certificate" or a "Safety Radiotelegraphy Certificate", as the case may be, and no vessel, to which this title applies, shall be in service unless there is on board and in force a proper certificate or certificates required by this title.

TITLE XI—ORGANIZATION OF THE BUREAU OF MARINE INSPECTION AND NAVIGATION

PART 1—DUTIES

SECTION 1101. (a) The Bureau shall enforce the requirements of this act, and all laws or parts of laws not repealed by this act which have heretofore been required to be enforced by the Bureau. Among its other duties the Bureau shall:

(1) Issue rules, as prescribed in this act, for the design, construction, inspection, and operation of all merchant vessels of the United States, such as to insure the maximum safety of the ship and of the passengers and crew.

(2) Decide upon, in accordance with the requirements of this act, in the case of all merchant vessels already built, which in the future may be built, or which may be entered for United States registry from any other source, for operation under the United States flag, all questions concerning structural strength, loading, watertight subdivision, stability under all conditions, fire-resisting qualities, fire-detecting equipment, fire-fighting equipment, life-saving equipment, equipment for communications other than radio, electrical equipment, navigational equipment, bilge and fire pumps, propelling machinery, steering machinery, ground tackle, and all other features which may be necessary to insure that the vessels are fully and properly constructed and equipped and safe for operation in their trades.

(3) Inspect each vessel, as set forth in title VI, part 2, of this act, together with all its machinery and appurtenances at the time of her building, or, in the case of a vessel built abroad, at the time of her entry for United States registry, to insure that it complies with all the technical requirements for design, material, and workmanship, and to inspect each existing vessel as frequently as necessary, but at least once each year, to ascertain and insure that she is maintained in proper condition to warrant continuance in her trade.

(4) Determine upon and fix the gross tonnage and the net register tonnage of each vessel, and perform all necessary duties in connection with the admeasurement and readmeasurement of all vessels.

(5) Assign subdivision load lines for all new passenger vessels and for all existing passenger vessels in groups 1 and 2, and loaded drafts for all other vessels of the United States.

(6) Study the reports of all disasters and accidents to determine the failure of material involved, to promulgate to all in the service the results of these investigations, and to keep complete records of all data that can be obtained bearing on such disasters and accidents.

(7) Enforce all laws relating to the efficiency and discipline of licensed officers and seamen and the employment and discharge of seamen, the licensing of officers, the certification of seamen, and the issuance of continuous-discharge books or certificates of service.

(8) Prepare, compile, and publish statistical and other data concerning the merchant marine, licensed officers, and seamen, including navigation laws and list of merchant vessels.

(b) To carry out the duties set forth in this section the Bureau shall be reorganized in accordance with part 2 of this title.

PART 2—ORGANIZATION

SEC. 1102. (a) There shall be in the regular establishment of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation in the Department of Commerce not to exceed 600 officers distributed in grades proportioned as follows: 1 director, 3 assistant directors, 10 supervising inspectors, 8 assistant supervising inspectors, 20 traveling inspectors, 66 inspectors of hulls, 163 assistant inspectors of hulls, 66 inspectors engineering, 163 assistant inspectors engineering, 20 shipping commissioners, 30 deputy shipping commissioners, and 50 assistant deputy shipping commissioners: Provided, That the numbers herein prescribed in the grades of inspectors of hulls, assistant inspectors of hulls, inspectors engineering, assistant inspectors engineering, deputy shipping commissioners, and assistant deputy shipping commissioners shall be the limiting numbers in those respective grades, and only so many shall be appointed to the respective grades as the exigencies of the service shall require.

(b) All provisions of law applicable to, and the rights, privileges, and duties of, the Director (or Chief of Bureau), supervising inspectors, principal traveling inspectors, local inspectors of hulls, assistant inspectors of hulls, local inspectors of boilers, assistant inspectors of boilers, shipping commissioners, and deputy shipping commissioners, respectively, in the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, shall be applicable in like manner to and shall be the rights, privileges, and duties of the Director, supervising inspectors, traveling inspectors, inspectors of hulls, assistant inspectors of hulls, inspectors engineering, assistant inspectors engineering, shipping commissioners, and deputy shipping commissioners, respectively, appointed under this section.

(c) The Director shall direct all the activities of the Bureau and shall be responsible for the conservation and expenditure of funds appropriated for or allotted to the Bureau and shall certify the accounts of the Bureau to the General Accounting Office. There shall be in the Bureau a Matériel Division, a Personnel Division, and an Administrative Division. At the head of each division there shall be an Assistant Director, who shall perform such duties as may be prescribed by the Director or required by law. In the absence of the Director the duties of that officer shall be performed by an Assistant Director in the order of seniority, or if all have the same seniority then according to the following order of precedence: First, the head of the Matériel Division; second, the head of the Personnel Division; third, the head of the Administrative Division. Three of the supervising inspectors, of wide experience, appointed under this section shall serve in the Bureau as aides to the heads of the three Divisions and the other supervising inspectors shall be in the field service of the Bureau. The assistant supervising inspectors appointed under this section shall perform such of the duties of supervising inspectors and under such circumstances and conditions as the Director, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Commerce, shall prescribe by regulations. The deputy shipping commissioners and assistant deputy shipping commissioners appointed under this section shall perform such of the duties of shipping commissioners and under such circumstances and conditions as the Director, subject to the approval of the Secretary of Commerce, shall prescribe by regulation. Any officer appointed under this section may, when so ordered by the Director of the Bureau, be temporarily assigned to the performance of duties prescribed for any other officer so appointed without additional compensation. When any officer appointed under this section is performing the duties prescribed for another officer, all laws applicable to such other officer shall apply to the officer performing such duties.

(d) There shall be under the Assistant Director in charge of the Matériel Division of the Bureau, in addition to the field forces engaged in the inspection of ships, a technical section consisting of a technical staff, the members of which shall have the necessary background of education and experience to permit them to render correct judgment on all matters, of whatever nature, having to do with the design and construction of ships. The senior members of the technical staff shall be selected for their special expertness in naval architecture, marine engineering, and electrical engineering, without regard to civil-service laws or the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. These senior members shall consist of a senior naval architect at a salary not to exceed $7,000 per annum, a senior engineer at a salary not to exceed $7,000 per annum, and an electrical engineer at a salary not to exceed $6,000 per annum, the junior members of the staff to be selected in accordance with the provisions of the civil-service laws and the Classification Act of 1923, as amended. The services of this permanent staff may be augmented by the part-time employment of technical experts in special fields as may be found necessary to keep up with the advance in the art of shipbuilding. The duties of the technical section shall be to advise the Director upon all matters of design connected with merchant vessels to be built and merchant vessels to be reconditioned or repaired, so that all the requirements of this act are properly met so far as design is concerned, and to control the admeasurement of merchant vessels and the maximum loaded drafts for them.

(e) No person interested, either directly or indirectly, in any patented article required to be used on any vessel by this act or by any existing law, or who is a member of any association of owners, masters, engineers, pilots, or seamen of vessels, or who is directly or indirectly pecuniarily interested in any vessel, shall be eligible for appointment to any position established under this section.

SEC. 1103. In addition to the officers appointed, and the technical section prescribed under the preceding section, there shall be in the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, under each Assistant Director, such other sections as are required by good administration and such other officers and employees as are or may be authorized by law.

PART 3—APPOINTMENT

SEC. 1104. (a) Any present incumbent of a position in the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, or a position corresponding to senior naval architect, senior engineer, or electrical engineer, who is qualified under the provisions of this act, shall be appointed to a corresponding grade under section 1102 without examination.

SEC. 1105. (a) No person shall be eligible for appointment as an assistant deputy shipping commissioner who has not served at least 3 years afloat as a licensed officer of ocean-going vessels.

(b) No person shall be appointed under this act as an assistant inspector of hulls who is not by experience and technical education well versed in all the details of vessel building or vessel operation. After the passage of this act, all men appointed to this position shall have gained their experience in building and repairing vessels in yards where vessels are built until at least 50 percent of the assistant inspectors of hulls have had this background. Thereafter the ratio of one-half licensed officers who, in addition to their knowledge and experience gained afloat, have the necessary knowledge and experience to compete in the examinations, and one-half those who have gained their experience in yards where vessels are built, shall be maintained as nearly as practicable.

(c) No person shall be appointed under this act as an assistant inspector of engineering, who is not by experience and technical education well versed in all the details of building machinery for vessels or operating machinery in vessels. After the passage of this act all of the men appointed to this position shall have gained their experience in building and repairing machinery for vessels, until at least 50 percent of the assistant inspectors of engineering have had this background; and at least one-quarter of those thus appointed shall be well qualified in the installation, repair, and operation of all electrical wiring and appliances used aboard modern ships. Thereafter, the ratio of one-half licensed engineers who, in addition to their knowledge and experience gained afloat, have the necessary knowledge and experience to compete in the examinations, and one-half those who have gained their experience in shops where machinery for vessels is built or repaired shall be maintained, as nearly as practicable.

SEC. 1106. The Director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation shall cause each officer in the employ of the Bureau to be physically examined at least once each calendar year by a board of officers of the United States Public Health Service, and a record shall be kept of the physical condition thus found. Any officer of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation found physically disqualified for further duty by reason of disease or injury due to vicious habits, intemperance, or willful misconduct on his part, shall, upon approval of the Secretary of Commerce, be dismissed from the service.

DISCIPLINE

SEC. 1107. (a) Whenever allegations are made against the conduct of an officer of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation appointed under section 1102, or against his manner of performing duty, the Secretary of Commerce shall cause an investigation to be made of the allegations, and, if the circumstances warrant, the Secretary of Commerce shall cause written charges to be preferred against the accused officer; and these charges shall be heard by a board of three officers of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, senior in grade to the accused, at which hearing the officer shall be accorded all of the rights of an accused person. The board shall be sworn to perform its duties fully and impartially, the oath to be administered in the presence of the accused, to the president of the board by the junior member, and to the other two members by the president of the board. Testimony taken before such a board shall be under oath administered to the witness by the president of the board. Allegations of the following offenses shall be heard before such a board: Disobedience of or refusal to obey a lawful order; failure in the performance of duty or neglect of duty; unauthorized absence from duty. For an offense found proved, the board shall recommend the following penalties: Disobedience of or refusal to obey a lawful order—dismissal, or one of the lesser degrees of punishment herein prescribed; failure in performance of duty or neglect of duty—demotion to the next lower grade and pay, or suspension from duty for a period not to exceed 6 months, or official reprimand; unauthorized absence from duty—suspension from duty for a period not to exceed 6 months, or official reprimand.

(b) When the recommendations of a board constituted under this section are approved by the Secretary of Commerce, the penalty imposed shall be carried into effect: Provided, That the Secretary of Commerce, upon reviewing a case, is authorized to mitigate or remit any of the penalties herein prescribed whenever, in his judgment, the facts and circumstances warrant. Any action taken pursuant to this section shall not be a bar to trial of the accused person by any competent court of law or equity in a cause growing out of the same facts.

PART 4—INSPECTION

SEC. 1108. In addition to any inspections now required by law, the Director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation shall cause an inspection of every office in the field service of the Bureau, including that part of the activities of a collector of customs devoted solely to performing duties for the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, to be made by one or more traveling inspectors at least once each calendar year, and more frequently if he deems it advisable, and reports thereon shall be made to him. At such inspections, all of the records, equipment, methods of procedure, and acts of personnel shall be open to inspection. A copy of the report of the inspection shall be furnished to the officer in charge of the office inspected, who shall be permitted to comment upon the report. No inspection in the office of a collector of customs shall be made by an officer of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation without previous written notice to the collector, or without the presence throughout the inspection of a representative of the collector. Nothing contained in this section shall be construed to abridge or limit the right of the Secretary of Commerce to cause investigations to be made of the conduct of officers or offices of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation by persons outside of that Bureau.

PART 5—ASSIGNMENT OF SHIPPING COMMISSIONERS

SEC. 1109. (a) Section 4501 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 4501. The Director of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation shall assign an officer of the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation to perform the duties of a shipping commissioner at such ports as, in his judgment, may require the same; while the officer is so assigned he shall have the authority and duties of a shipping commissioner under this title."

(b) Section 4502 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is hereby repealed.

(c) The first sentence of section 4506 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows: "The Secretary of Commerce shall provide each shipping commissioner with an official seal of such design as may be fixed by the Secretary."

TITLE XII—MISCELLANEOUS

LAWS REPEALED

SECTION 1201. All acts or parts of acts insofar as they are inconsistent or in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

EFFECTIVE DATE OF ACT

SEC. 1202. This act shall take effect after the expiration of 90 days from the date of its enactment.

SEPARABILITY CLAUSE

SEC. 1203. If any provision of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of the act and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby

SEC. 1204. This act may be cited as the "Safety at Sea Act of 1937."

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I will ask the Senate to bear with me while I say that I think the passage of the bill just acted on has been one of the most progressive steps we have taken for a long, long time. I believe it makes for safety at sea, and in the committee we are satisfied that if the rules provided for had been in existence the Mohawk disaster certainly would not have happened. I cannot say as much in regard to the Morro Castle disaster, perhaps; but at least the lives needlessly lost in the Mohawk disaster would not have been lost.

EMIGRATION OF FILIPINOS TO HAWAII

The bill (H. R. 7561) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the complete independence of the Philippine Islands, to provide for the adoption of a constitution and a form of government for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes", approved March 24, 1934, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the chairman of the committee is not present. This bill has been before a committee of which I am a member.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill has been passed over.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will not the Senator withhold his objection a moment?

Mr. McKELLAR. Certainly.

Mr. KING. The bill is intended merely to prevent Filipinos from coming into the Hawaiian Islands. When we passed the Philippine independence bill an exception was made so that Filipinos would be permitted to enter the Hawaiian Islands. The Hawaiian people do not want any more immigration of Filipinos, and this bill is merely to amend the act in order to prevent Filipinos from entering the Hawaiian Islands.

Mr. McKELLAR. I withdraw the objection.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2791) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, by including hops as a commodity to which orders under such act are applicable was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 7836) to amend the Agricultural Adjustment Act, as amended, by including hops as a commodity to which orders under such act are applicable was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let that go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

EXTENSION OF AIR MAIL SERVICE

The bill (H. R. 6628) to permit the further extension of the Air Mail Service was announced as next in order.

Mr. HOLT. Let the bill go over.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I give notice that at the earliest moment when I can get the attention of the Chair I am going to move to take this bill up for consideration. The mileage permitted by the law in the extension of air routes has been used up except 100 miles, and it is necessary, if any extension of the Air Mail Service is to be afforded, to increase that by the 3,000 miles provided in this bill. I cannot imagine how anyone familiar with the air legislation could possibly object. If the Senator from West Virginia could offer a single objection to it, I am wondering what it would be. Would he be good enough to state?

Mr. HOLT. I would rather have the bill go over.

Mr. McKELLAR. I give notice that at the very first opportunity when I can get the attention of the Chair I shall move to take the bill up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being heard, the bill will be passed over.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2206) to provide for the transfer of enlisted men of the Coast Guard to the Fleet Naval Reserve was announced as next in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let this bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

LICENSING OF ELECTRICIANS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 992) to make electricians licensed officers after an examination, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert the following:

That any person serving as an electrician on board a vessel of the United States shall, after examination as to his professional qualifications by the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, be issued a certificate of competency as an electrician. Any person who has served 3 years as an electrician on board a vessel of the United States and who holds such a certificate of competency shall be eligible for a license as third assistant engineer, subject to the same examination as other members of the engineer department, and when granted such a license it shall be superscribed "qualified electrician." Subsequent licenses of a higher grade granted to any such person shall be similarly superscribed.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FURNISHING OF CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, I am under obligations to leave the Chamber, and there is one other bill which I should like very much to have considered. It is Order of Business No. 1213, being Senate bill 2940, to make confidential certain information furnished to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. It is a department bill, and the Department of Commerce is anxious to have it passed. It merely serves to make confidential reports which are sent in to the Department from industrial concerns in order to make up the statistical work of the Bureau.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Let the bill go over.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, I am going to have to object to this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. CLARK. In the Munitions Committee investigation we discovered that there were matters of very vital importance to the people of the United States contained in these reports, and that the Department, without any authority of law, as I saw it at the time, and as other members of the committee saw it, refused to furnish the facts to the committee unless the committee would agree not to make them public. They are trying to obviate that difficulty by getting authority of law by which they can officially refuse to furnish necessary information to Senate committees and House committees, and I do not think the bill ought to be passed.

Mr. COPELAND. Mr. President, so far as I am concerned, I have no interest in the matter beyond the desire of the Department. In collecting material as to the volume of sales, and all that sort of thing, if the information were made confidential, the Department would be able to get more of it, in their opinion. So far as I am personally concerned, I do not care anything about it.

Mr. BARKLEY. I suggest that we not delay by discussing a bill after it has gone over.

RECORDS OF STATE LIQUOR-DISPENSING SYSTEMS

The bill (H. R. 7949) to exempt State liquor-dispensing systems from the requirement of keeping certain records and rendering transcripts and summaries of entries with respect to distilled spirits was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROSE M'GIRR

The bill (H. R. 3426) for the relief of Rose McGirr was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ROBERT COATES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 854) for the relief of Robert Coates, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the limitations of time in sections 15 to 20, both inclusive, of the act entitled "An act to provide compensation for employees of the United States suffering injuries while in the performance of their duties, and for other purposes", approved September 7, 1916, as amended, are hereby waived in favor of Robert Coates, of Glass, Gloucester County, Va., and the United States Employees' Compensation Commission is authorized to receive and consider his claim, under the remaining provisions of said act, for tuberculosis alleged to have been contracted as a result of his employment on ships of the Reserve Fleet Division of the United States Shipping Board Merchant Fleet Corporation during the months of October, November, and December 1921; October and November 1923; and October 1924: Provided, That claim hereunder shall be filed within 6 months from the approval of this act: Provided further, That no benefits shall accrue prior to the approval of this act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, let the bill go over.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, I hope the Senator from Utah will withhold his objection for a moment while I make a short statement about the bill.

Mr. KING. I assent to the request of the Senator.

Mr. SCHWARTZ. Mr. President, the boy who is the claimant in this case was employed on several ships under the control of the Merchant Fleet Corporation in 1921, 1923, and 1924, and worked in the holds of vessels, and during that period he contracted tuberculosis, a fact which the records of the Government hospital disclose. As the bills for his relief were originally introduced, in previous Congresses, they foreclosed the question as to whether or not the Compensation Commission should pay, and directed it to pay him compensation. That was the occasion of the original objection.

The bill has been changed so that in its present form it merely waives the statute of limitations, and provides that the claimant may present his claim for consideration within 6 months, and that no benefits shall accrue prior to the approval of the act. He has been and is now suffering from tuberculosis.

At this session of the Congress we have passed half a dozen or more bills identical with this one; and if this man is not given an opportunity shortly to present his claim, he will never present it, because he will be under the ground.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I withdraw the objection, but I should like to make the observation that we are waiving the statute of limitations, and the Government is placed at a great disadvantage. Ten or fifteen or twenty years after an alleged injury to an employee the Government has no evidence, is denied the opportunity of getting witnesses, and it places the advantage entirely in the hands of the claimant.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 3058) for the relief of former employees of the Federal Subsistence Homesteads Corporation was announced as next in order.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

WAYNE M. COTNER

The bill (H. R. 1375) for the relief of Wayne M. Cotner was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 1355) for the relief of Lawrence E. Thomas was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I would like to have an explanation of this bill. Let it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

ROWESVILLE OIL CO.

The bill (H. R. 1767) for the relief of Rowesville Oil Co. was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MEASUREMENT OF VESSELS USING THE PANAMA CANAL

The bill (H. R. 5417) to provide for the measurement of vessels using the Panama Canal, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. WHITE. Let the bill go over.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, this is a very important matter, which has been before the Congress for many years. It has been filibustered time after time by the steamship interests of the country, and after having in the last Congress obtained what they claimed to desire, an impartial committee to pass on the matter, and after the impartial committee had reported, they are now coming back with a number of absolutely extraneous and irrelevant objections. I had occasion to go down town shortly after the meeting of the Senate today, and one of those interested met me on the street and informed me that this bill could not be considered at this session because they would have objection made to it.

I desire to give notice that at the first opportunity, when I can get the attention of the Chair and the cooperation of the majority leader, I am going to move to take up this bill, because I think it is now a matter of importance as to whether a steamship lobby can control the action of the United States Senate and the United States Congress. The bill passed the House of Representatives by unanimous vote a few days ago, and there is absolutely nothing in the bill except what is in conformity with the recommendations of the impartial committee which the steamship owners sought, and with whose decision they claimed to be willing to abide.

EMPLOYMENT BY W. P. A.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 176) favoring employment by the Works Progress Administration of persons unable to find employment in private industry was announced as next in order.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask that the joint resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I ask the Senator who made the objection to withhold it so that I may have an opportunity to explain the provisions of the joint resolution.

Mr. AUSTIN. I withhold my objection.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, this joint resolution refers to the Works Progress Administration, and provides two things. In the first place, it provides that those who are now on the rolls of the Works Progress Administration and who are not able to find employment in private industry in positions which they are by qualification and age and training competent to hold, shall not be dropped from the rolls of W. P. A. In the second place, it provides that those who secure temporary private employment shall not be dropped from the rolls, but shall be furloughed from the rolls, with the right to return.

When we provided in the appropriation act $1,500,000,000, it was on the very definite understanding upon the part of the Congress, resulting from the testimony of Mr. Hopkins given before the Appropriations Committees of the House and Senate, that there would be a reduction in the rolls of W. P. A. down to 1,730,000 persons. He testified as follows, as found on page 213 of the House committee hearings on the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1937:

> Thus, for the appropriation of $1,500,000,000 to meet the employment situation during the coming year, it will be necessary for private industry to absorb the difference between $2,255,000 persons and 1,730,000 persons, or a total of 525,000 persons now employed on the Works Progress Administration program.

It was possible, in my opinion, to secure the appropriation of one and a half billion dollars without the objection of many of us who did not feel that the amount was sufficient to take care of the problem which the Government has assumed to attempt to solve, only upon the representation and the statement that the number was to be cut only to 1,730,000, and that the reduction would be gradually made over the year, to permit private industry to take care of the slack represented by those dropped by the Works Progress Administration.

I do not think there is any Member of this body who thought there would be such a curtailment and reduction as has gone on in the Works Progress Administration since the enactment of that appropriation bill. Instead of a reduction down to 1,730,000 by July 17 of this year a reduction had been made down to 1,657,000 and by July 31 of this year to 1,573,000. The Works Progress Administration quota for August is 1,580,000, for September 1,474,000, and for October 1,463,000. The reduction proposed by the W. P. A. is greater in number by some 300,000 than was contemplated when this appropriation was presented to the committees and was passed upon by Congress.

The reason given for these increased reductions is the fact that what is known as the Woodrum amendment was adopted, which provided that the $1,500,000,000 should necessarily carry the W. P. A. over the entire year. The W. P. A. officials have construed that to mean that the money must be divided, not evenly between the 12 months but so divided during the 12 months that they will be sure to have sufficient money with which to operate during the whole 12 months' period.

Mr. President, I shall be perfectly frank with the Members of this body with respect to the purpose of the joint resolution. The purpose of the first part of the joint resolution is to negative the provisions of the Woodrum amendment, in that it will stop the Works Progress Administration from continuing its policy of cutting the Works Progress rolls. I am perfectly frank with the body in stating that if this joint resolution is enacted, and if its provisions are carried out conscientiously by the Works Progress Administration, it may result in the necessity for a deficiency appropriation next year. I do not believe, however, that the Members of this body would ever have agreed to a billion and a half dollars as the amount of the appropriation had they known that it was going to result in a reduction, not of 585,000 persons but a total reduction of some 850,000 persons during the course of a period of just 4 months.

The second part of the joint resolution, as I have argued with Members of this body privately many times, in my opinion, would result in a reduction of expenditures. There has been a great deal of complaint because persons will not take private employment. The reason why persons will not take private employment is because of difficulties that are placed in their way in getting back on the W. P. A. rolls. The purpose of the second part of the joint resolution is to make it possible for them to take temporary private employment while being only furloughed from W. P. A. rolls; and I believe it will result in a very great decrease in the necessary expenditures of the W. P. A.

Mr. President, I appreciate the fact that objection has been made to the joint resolution, and that it cannot be passed on this calendar day, but I desire to serve notice now——

Mr. KING. Regular order!

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is called for.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, I understood that I had the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has the floor under the 5-minute rule.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I desire to serve notice now, Mr. President, that immediately after the conclusion of the pending business, being the motion to proceed to the consideration of Senate bill no. 2, which has been temporarily laid aside, I shall attempt to secure recognition and ask that this joint resolution be made the order of business.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask that the joint resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 161) authorizing the Bureau of Labor Statistics to collect information as to amount and value of all goods produced in State and Federal prisons was announced as next in order.

Mr. AUSTIN. I ask that the joint resolution be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

WILLIAM R. KELLOGG

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 371) for the relief of William R. Kellogg, which had been reported from the Committee on Claims with amendments, on page 1, line 6, after the words "sum of", to strike out "$10,800, being the amount of" and insert "$1,000, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for", and at the end of the bill to insert a proviso, so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to William R. Kellogg, of Jamestown, N. Dak., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $1,000, in full settlement of all claims against the United States for damages caused to him by the failure of post-office officials of the United States Government to furnish to said William R. Kellogg a lease to lots 8 and 9, block 33, city of Jamestown, N. Dak., in accordance with the inducements and oral agreements whereby said William R. Kellogg was induced to erect a building and purchase fixtures for the use of the United States as a post-office building for the city of Jamestown, N. Dak. Said building being erected and fixtures being purchased in good faith upon the promise of officials of the Post Office Department that a 10-year interminable lease would be entered into by the United States, and not until after the building was fully erected and the fixtures bought was the said William R. Kellogg advised that such a lease would not be furnished to him: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or attorney on account of services rendered in connection with this claim, and the same shall be unlawful, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. KING subsequently said: Mr. President, I notice that the Post Office Department has reported adversely on Senate bill 371, being Calendar No. 1194. I ask that the vote by which the bill was passed be reconsidered, and that an explanation thereof be made.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, did the Senator from Utah ask that the vote by which the bill was passed be reconsidered?

Mr. KING. I ask that the vote by which the bill was passed be reconsidered, and that the bill go over, unless an explanation of it be made, in view of the adverse recommendation of the Post Office Department.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Utah that the Senate bill 371 by which the bill was passed be reconsidered? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, the facts in this case are substantially as follows: I have forgotten the name of the town in which this post office was located; but somewhere in North Dakota a citizen had an oral understanding with the Post Office Department that if he would build a suitable building, the Post Office Department would take a 10-year lease for the use and occupation of the building. The building was built in accordance with the oral understanding. There was written into the lease, however, a provision giving to the Government the right to terminate the lease at any time; and after a short occupation the Government gave notice and terminated the lease.

The claim as it was originally filed called for reimbursement for the expense involved in erecting the building in reliance on the promise to lease. The committee felt that the claimant was not entitled to that amount because of the terms of the contract. There was, however, a further term in the contract calling for 90 days' notice of termination. The Post Office Department failed to give 90 days' notice, and the Post Office Department itself indicated a willingness that there should be paid an amount between $600 and $700. That was the recommendation of the Post Office Department. The Department objected to payment of the full amount but approved the payment of from $600 to $700 in compromise of the whole matter. The committee hit on the figure of $1,000, which was only about $300 more than the Post Office Department itself felt was a just payment.

Mr. KING. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2008) for the relief of the Cleveland Railway Co. was announced as next in order.

Mr. BRIDGES. I ask that the bill be passed over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

AMERICAN PRINTING HOUSE FOR THE BLIND

The bill (H. R. 4582) to amend the act approved August 4, 1919, as amended, providing additional aid for the American Printing House for the Blind was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ADDITIONAL TERM OF DISTRICT COURT AT TALLAHASSEE, FLA.

The bill (H. R. 3493) to amend section 76 of the Judicial Code, as amended, with respect to the terms of the Federal district court held at Tallahassee, Fla., was announced as next in order.

Mr. AUSTIN. I should like an explanation of this bill. Unless an explanation is made, I shall ask that it go over.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, will the Senator indulge me to make an explanation of the bill?

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes.

Mr. PEPPER. The Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] was chairman of a subcommittee consisting of himself, the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], and the Senator from Deleware [Mr. HUGHES], which on behalf of the Senate Judiciary Committee considered this matter. The Judiciary Committee then called upon the Attorney General to know whether or not there was any objection to the bill on the part of the Department of Justice, and also inquired whether there was objection on the part of the Bureau of the Budget; and the committee was advised that there was concurrence in the bill by the Department of Justice and the Bureau of the Budget.

The bill itself provides a second term of court at Tallahassee, the capital of Florida, which happens to be my home city. We already have one term of the Federal court. No new building is required under the terms of the bill. No additional expense is required.

The bill merely authorizes two terms of the Federal court during the year instead of one, which is deemed inadequate on account of the increasing business in the Federal court.

The bill has already passed the House and has been approved by the subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate and by the full committee. The amendments suggested in committee have been incorporated in the bill.

I sincerely hope the Senator from Vermont will not object to the consideration of the bill, since, if passed by the Senate, it will have to go back to the House for certain technical reasons, and I am very anxious to have it enacted during the present session of Congress.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Florida if he does not realize that the bill provides for additional expense to the Government?

Mr. PEPPER. No, Mr. President; it does not.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, when this matter first came before the Judiciary Committee the question I have just asked the Senator from Florida was asked, and the committee was assured that if the bill was permitted to be reported favorably and passed it would not carry any additional burden for the Government. When it came back to the committee, however, we found in it the words now in the bill on page 4:

Provided further, That suitable rooms and accommodations for holding court at Orlando are furnished without expense to the United States until a Federal building containing quarters for the court is erected at such place.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, if my colleague will allow me to explain, I will say what happened was this: A previous act of Congress—I do not remember in what Congress; my colleague, who lives at Orlando, can tell more accurately—authorized a second term of the Federal court to be held at Orlando with a restriction, namely, that the expense of the second term should be paid for by the local authorities. There is provided in a pending appropriation bill an authorization for a new Federal building at Orlando. If a new Federal building is erected and there are provided adequate courtroom facilities, which do not now exist for a term of the court to be held there, I do not suppose that anybody would object to the term being held in the new building which is to be constructed.

Of course, the Senator from Vermont understands that we are not trying to get a Federal building erected under the provisions of this bill. It is necessary that the correction be made in this bill to keep from defeating the bill which my colleague has previously gotten through the Congress, authorizing a new term of court at Orlando.

There is a difference in the way the Senate handles amendments to the Judicial Code and the way the House handles them, if I may so observe. The Senate merely provides an amendment to the code, but it is the custom of the House if there are amendments to the Judicial Code to rewrite the whole section. So that everything that is in this bill as to Orlando or any other place, except Tallahassee, is already incorporated in the Federal statutes. We are merely incorporating it all into one rewriting of a certain section—I believe it is section 76—of the Judicial Code. The affirmative report that is filed with this bill shows that the bill does nothing more than to put in one place the revision of this section of the code, and to add a second term of the Federal court at Tallahassee without any additional expense.

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. President——

Mr. AUSTIN. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. ANDREWS. Let me say, by way of explanation, that Congress passed at the present session a bill permitting the Government to include in a public building to be constructed there facilities for holding court. We had to amend the old law to permit even the Government to hold court in its own building. So this bill does not make any change whatever in what is already the law in regard to holding a term of court at Orlando.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I feel bound to object to the consideration of this bill, unless the Senators from Florida are willing to strike from it the words "until a Federal building containing quarters for the court is erected at such place." If they are willing to do that, I will withdraw the objection.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, the Senator, I am sure, does not designedly intend to take the position if the Federal Government, in the regular course, erects a Federal building at Orlando, where there is none now, that the people there should still be required to pay the expense of providing quarters for the court.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, let us get down to the real situation. I object to stepping in under the fence just by degrees and committing Congress to an expenditure with respect to a matter concerning which there was a pretty fair understanding. It was my understanding that there would not be any additional expense to the Government by reason of the permission granted to hold a term of court at Orlando. This bill does not appear to be in accord with the understanding, and I shall object.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I wish to say, before the Senator from Vermont objects, that not a dollar of additional expense is to be incurred by the Government by reason of the passage of this bill, and there could not be a dollar of additional expense incurred. We went into that carefully. Of course, if a Federal building is constructed there at some time, we would not expect private interests to continue to pay the expense; but if a Federal building shall never be constructed there they will continue to pay so long as a term of court is held there.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I desire to come to the assistance of the Senator from Florida. May I suggest to the Senator from Vermont that if the word "until" were changed to "unless" it would probably meet his objection and the objective of the Senator from Florida?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, that would not quite serve the purpose. I object.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President, I am not going to say any more if I may be indulged to say this: The fallacy of the position of the Senator from Vermont is that the thing to which he objects is already the law; it has already been passed by the Congress. The Senator is assuming that we are writing a new provision in the law. We are merely taking about four or five different isolated statutes that have been passed covering terms of court here and terms of court there and putting them all into one section of the judicial code. We have not added a new word except as to Tallahassee.

Mr. BORAH. May I ask the Senator is it not a fact that the only thing sought to be accomplished by this bill is provision for an additional term of court at Tallahassee?

Mr. PEPPER. Exactly.

Mr. BORAH. Everything else contained in the bill is already in the law?

Mr. PEPPER. Exactly so.

Mr. AUSTIN. Then, Mr. President, why not strike out everything else?

Mr. KING. I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill will be passed over.

STELLA VAN DEWERKER

The bill (H. R. 4489) for the relief of Stella Van Dewerker was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INVESTIGATION OF CLAIMS OF CITY OF NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J.

Mr. BYRNES. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which Senate Resolution 165 was passed on Thursday last.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from South Carolina that the vote by which Senate Resolution 165 was passed be reconsidered?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, may the resolution be read by its title?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will state the resolution by its title.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution (S. Res. 165), submitted by Mr. MOORE on the calendar day August 3, 1937, and subsequently reported from the Committee on Claims and the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate and agreed to on the calendar day August 12, 1937, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee composed of three members of the Committee on Claims, to be appointed by the chairman of said Claims Committee, is hereby authorized and directed to investigate the claims of the city of New Brunswick, N. J., for compensation for municipal services furnished to purchasers of lands from the United States Housing Corporation, the title to which lands still remains in the United States.

Such committee to be so appointed is authorized to hold hearings and to sit during recesses or sessions of the Seventy-fifth Congress at such times and places as it may deem advisable, to send for persons or papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer to report such hearings, the cost of which shall not be in excess of 25 cents per hundred words, the expenses of such investigation to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to reconsidering the vote by which the resolution was passed? The Chair hears none, and the vote is reconsidered.

Mr. BYRNES. I now ask for the consideration of an amendment to the resolution. I send the amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 2, line 5, after the word "investigation", it is proposed to insert a comma and the words "not to exceed $1,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution, as amended, was agreed to.

WALTER G. ANDERSON

The bill (H. R. 5927) for the relief of Walter G. Anderson was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CLAIMS AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 437) relative to determination and payment of certain claims against the Government of Mexico, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. CONNALLY. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the request of the House for a conference, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding officer appointed Mr. PITTMAN, Mr. CONNALLY, and Mr. BORAH conferees on the part of the Senate.

JESSE A. LA RUE

The bill (H. R. 7172) for the relief of Jesse A. LaRue was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BILLS PASSED OVER

The bill (H. R. 2657) authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to advance on the retired list of the Navy David J. Mahoney, David Bolger, Cleve B. Farran, James Johnson, and Hans Terkelsen, retired, to chief boilermaker, retired, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I should like to inquire what is the purpose of that bill? Let it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

The bill (H. R. 3372) for the relief of Luke Francis Brennan was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. I ask that that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

SURCHARGE ON ALASKAN AIR MAIL

The bill (H. R. 6167) to provide a surcharge on certain air mail carried in Alaska was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the act of February 21, 1925, as amended by the act approved August 24, 1935 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. II, title 39, sec. 488), be, and it is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"The Postmaster General may provide difficult or emergency mail service in Alaska, at a total annual cost of not exceeding $25,000, including the establishment and equipment of relay stations, in such manner as he may think advisable, without advertising therefor; and he is authorized, in his discretion, to contract, after advertisement in accordance with law, for the carriage of all classes of mail to, from, or within the Territory of Alaska, by airplane, payment therefor to be made from the appropriation for star-route service in Alaska: Provided, That the Postmaster General, in his discretion, may fix the postage for the mails carried, or any part thereof, by aircraft to, from, or within Alaska, at rates not exceeding in any case 30 cents per ounce or 15 cents per half ounce, notwithstanding the domestic air-mail rate authorized by the act of June 12, 1934 (39 U. S. C., 463, 1934 edition)."

SUBSTITUTES IN CLASSIFIED POST-OFFICE STATIONS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1972) giving superintendents at classified post-office stations credit for substitutes serving under them, which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That the fourth paragraph of section 3 of the act entitled "An act reclassifying the salaries of postmasters and employees of the Postal Service, readjusting their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis, increasing postal rates to provide for such readjustments, and for other purposes", approved February 28, 1925, as amended (U. S. C., title 39, sec. 93), is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a colon and the following: Provided, That in determining the number of employees at a classified station credit shall be allowed for service performed by regular employees, substitute employees other than those serving in lieu of regular employees absent from duty for any cause and temporary employees assigned to the station, and for each 2,448 hours of service performed by such employees the station superintendent shall be allowed credit for one employee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

PRINTING OF ILLUSTRATIONS OF POSTAGE STAMPS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2550) to permit the printing of black-and-white illustrations of United States and foreign postage stamps for philatelic purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with amendments, in section 2, page 2, line 19, after the word "for", to strike out "use only in philatelic or historical" and insert "philatelic purposes in"; in line 21, after the word "journals", to insert "newspapers"; in line 22, after the word "or", to insert "advertising literature"; on page 3, line 18, after the word "for", to strike out "use only in philatelic or historical" and insert "philatelic purposes in"; in line 20, after the word "journals", to insert "newspapers"; and in line 21, after the word "circulars", to insert "or advertising literature", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Postmaster General shall prepare, in such form and at such times as he shall deem advisable, and, upon his request, the Public Printer shall print as a public document to be sold by the Superintendent of Documents, illustrations in black and white of postage stamps of the United States, together with such descriptive, historical, and philatelic information with regard to such stamps as the Postmaster General may deem suitable: Provided, That notwithstanding the provisions of section 52 of the act of January 12, 1895 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 44, sec. 58), stereotype or electrotype plates, or duplicates thereof, used in the publications authorized to be printed by this section shall not be sold or otherwise disposed of but shall remain the property of the United States: And provided further, That notwithstanding the provisions of section 7 of the Copyright Act of March 4, 1909 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 17, sec. 7), or any other provision of law, copyright may be secured by the Postmaster General on behalf of the United States in the whole or any part of the publication authorized by this section.

SEC. 2. The act of March 3, 1923 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 18, sec. 350), is amended to read as follows: "That (a) nothing in sections 161, 172, and 220 of the Criminal Code, as amended, or in any other provision of law, shall be construed to forbid or prevent the printing, publishing, or importation, or the making or importation of the necessary plates for such printing or publishing, for philatelic purposes in articles, books, journals, newspapers, or albums (including the circulars or advertising literature of legitimate dealers in stamps or publishers of or dealers in philatelic or historical articles, books, journals, or albums), of black and white illustrations of—

"(1) foreign revenue stamps if from plates so defaced as to indicate that the illustrations are not adapted or intended for use as stamps;

"(2) foreign postage stamps; or

"(3) such portion of the border of a stamp of the United States as may be necessary to show minor distinctive features of the stamp so illustrated, but all such illustrations shall be at least four times as large as the portion of the original United States stamp so illustrated.

"(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Treasury, subject to the approval of the President, may, upon finding that no hindrance to the suppression of counterfeiting and no tendency to bring into disrepute any obligation or other security of the United States will result, by regulations, permit, to the extent and under such conditions as he may deem appropriate, the printing, publishing, or importation or the making or importation of the necessary plates for such printing or publishing, for philatelic purposes in articles, books, journals, newspapers, or albums (including the circulars or advertising literature of legitimate dealers in stamps or publishers of or dealers in philatelic or historical articles, books, journals, or albums), of black-and-white illustrations of canceled or uncanceled United States postage stamps. The Secretary, subject to the approval of the President, may amend or repeal such regulations at any time. Such regulations, and any amendment or repeal thereof, shall become effective upon publication thereof in the Federal Register or upon such date as may be specified therein if later than the date of publication. All findings of fact made hereunder shall be final and conclusive and shall not be subject to review."

SEC. 3. Section 147 of the Criminal Code is hereby amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and adding a comma and the following: "and canceled United States stamps."

SEC. 4. Section 172 of the Criminal Code is hereby amended by the addition of the following new paragraph at the end thereof:

"Except as to counterfeits, material, and apparatus referred to in the preceding paragraph, all articles and devices and any other thing whatsoever made, possessed, or in any manner used in violation of any of the provisions of chapter 7 or sections 205, 218, 219, or 220 of chapter 8 of the Criminal Code, or the act of August 26, 1935 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 18, ch. 7, and secs. 328, 347, 348, 349, and 349a, ch. 8), as amended, or in respect to which a violation of any such provision has occurred, and all material or apparatus fitted or intended to be used, or that shall have been used, in the making of such articles, devices, or other things, that shall be found in the possession of any person without authority from the Secretary of the Treasury or other proper officer to have the same, shall be taken possession of by any authorized agent of the Treasury Department and forfeited to the United States and disposed of in any manner the Secretary of the Treasury may direct. Whoever having the custody or control of any such articles, devices, or other things, material, or apparatus shall fail or refuse to surrender possession thereof upon request by any such authorized agent of the Treasury Department shall be fined not more than $100 or imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both. Whenever any person interested in any article, device, or other thing, or material or apparatus seized under this paragraph files with the Secretary of the Treasury, before the disposition thereof, a petition for the remission or mitigation of such forfeiture, the Secretary of the Treasury, if he finds that such forfeiture was incurred without willful negligence or without any intention on the part of the petitioner to violate the law, or finds the existence of such mitigating circumstances as to justify the remission or the mitigation of such forfeiture, may remit or mitigate the same upon such terms and conditions as he deems reasonable and just."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARY LUCIA HAVEN

The bill (H. R. 7430) for the relief of Mary Lucia Haven, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TRANSPORTATION AND SALE OF NATURAL GAS

The bill (H. R. 6586) to regulate the transportation and sale of natural gas in interstate commerce, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill? If not, let it go over.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I am not a member of the committee that reported the bill, but the measure has the unanimous endorsement of the regulatory commissions of the several States.

It is proposed to provide regulations for the transportation of natural gas in interstate commerce. No such regulation is now provided. At present the States can regulate the intrastate sale and transportation of natural gas, but when it goes into interstate commerce it is not subject to regulation.

I invite attention to the fact that on page 2 of the report there appears a resolution unanimously adopted by the National Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners in which they express their approval of the measure. A detailed analysis of the sections of the bill will be found beginning on page 4 of the report of the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce. So far as I am aware, the bill appears to have been unanimously reported; at least no minority report has been filed.

Mr. McKELLAR. The purposes of the bill seem to be good. I shall not object.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] has stated the situation as it is. The bill was before the Committee on Interstate Commerce. There were no hearings held, but there were before the committee the recommendations of the utility commissioners as has been stated. So far as I am advised, there was no opposition on the part of anyone to the bill, and I think it passed through the committee with the understanding that there was no objection.

Mr. McKELLAR. I objected in the first instance because I saw no favorable report from the department. It is a bill which should have gone to the department.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I am unable to inform the Senator whether it was submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission or some department of the Government, because the report does not so disclose. As I have said, I am not a member of the committee, but I have investigated the bill to some extent because of the interest which was expressed in it by the Public Service Commission of my own State.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, while it is sometimes customary, in the matter of a bill which attempts to exercise the right to regulate commerce among the States, to refer it to a department for approval or disapproval, it is not essential that that shall be done. It is the duty of Congress to determine the policies relating to the regulation of commerce among the States.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I understand there were no hearings and no opportunity given for any individuals or corporations or States to appear. I shall not object to the present consideration of the bill, with the understanding that at the conclusion of the call of the calendar I shall enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed, so as to give me a chance between now and Monday to examine it. If I find it is entirely satisfactory I shall withdraw the motion.

Mr. WHITE. The bill passed the House in the early days of July and was on the committee calendar for something over a month. I think we all felt that if there was any opposition in any quarter it would have manifested itself in that time.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I may add for the benefit of the Senator from Utah that the measure was pending for some time before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and is similar to a bill which that committee reported at the last session of Congress. I am certain if there was any opposition of any substantial character to the measure, interested parties were on notice that it was to be considered and they had ample opportunity to file their objections.

Mr. KING. In order that I may not be charged with bad faith, I shall not object now to the consideration of the bill, but I shall enter a motion to reconsider the vote by which it shall be passed. During the time between now and Monday I shall give some consideration to the matter, and if I am convinced it is all right I shall withdraw my motion on Monday.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I should like to inquire whether the bill undertakes to gain control over the natural resource of gas—that is, the natural gas of any State—to enable the Federal Government to control it? If it does, of course I should object. I inquire whether anyone knows about that?

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, it is my understanding, and I think the Senator will find from a study of the bill, that all it attempts to do is to give the Federal Power Commission the right to regulate interstate transportation and sale and resale of natural gas which moves in interstate commerce.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I have not had time to read the bill carefully, but I find in the report this statement:

If enacted, the present bill would for the first time provide for the regulation of natural-gas companies transporting and selling natural gas in interstate commerce.

Of course, if it relates only to actual transportation and regulations regarding transportation, that would be one thing.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, in view of what I learn by just glancing at the bill, and what appears on page 15—and this is the first time I have seen the bill, and I doubt whether many Senators have read it—I shall ask to have it go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PALISADES INTERSTATE PARK COMMISSION

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 445) granting the consent of Congress to a compact between the States of New York and New Jersey providing for the creation of the Palisades Interstate Park Commission as a joint corporate municipal instrumentality of said States with appropriate rights, powers, duties, and immunities, for the transfer to said commission of certain functions, jurisdiction, rights, powers, and duties, together with the properties of the bodies politic now existing in each State known as "Commissioners of the Palisades Interstate Park", and for the continuance of the Palisades Interstate Park.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the joint resolution?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, this is a measure which gives consent to a compact between the States of New Jersey and New York. I think the essential facts are that for something like 30 years or more separate State authorities have been undertaking to work out plans with reference to the Palisades on both sides of the Hudson River, in New York and New Jersey. After long experience it has been found necessary to have some joint authority to accomplish the desired purpose. The bill, as I understand, simply sets up under this compact a joint body to exercise jurisdiction and to perform the functions which the States have been undertaking heretofore to carry on separately.

Mr. McKELLAR. I see there is a recommendation from the Acting Secretary of the Interior and from the Attorney General. I had not noticed that before. I have no objection.

The joint resolution was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Whereas, pursuant to chapter 170 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York and chapter 148 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New Jersey, the States of New York and New Jersey entered into a compact which is as follows:

"COMPACT

"Whereas, heretofore the States of New York and New Jersey have cooperated in the establishment and maintenance of an interstate park along the front of the Palisades in said States and in the mountainous lands in Rockland and Orange Counties in the State of New York, by respectively enacting legislation creating in each State a body politic by the name and style of 'Commissioners of the Palisades Interstate Park', with power to acquire lands for such park, and improve and manage the same, and by respectively appointing, in practically all cases, the same persons as members of each of such State bodies politic; and

"Whereas, it is confidently believed that the creation, by interstate compact, of a joint corporate municipal instrumentality to hold and manage such interstate park will provide greater flexibility and harmony in the management of the park,

"Now, therefore, in consideration of the premises and of the mutual advantages and benefits to accrue to the peoples of the States of New York and New Jersey from this compact and in consideration of the mutual covenants of the parties hereto herein contained, the sovereign State of New York and the sovereign State of New Jersey do hereby agree as follows:

"ARTICLE I

"The park or parks in the State of New York under the jurisdiction, management, or control of Commissioners of the Palisades Interstate Park, a body politic created pursuant to chapter 170 of the Laws of 1900 of the State of New York (hereinafter referred to as 'New York State board'), and the park or parks in the State of New Jersey now under the jurisdiction, management, or control of Commissioners of the Palisades Interstate Park, a body politic created pursuant to chapter 87 of the Laws of 1900 of the State of New Jersey (hereinafter referred to as 'New Jersey State board', the New York State board and the New Jersey State board being hereinafter referred to collectively as 'State boards'), shall continue to exist and shall be maintained in the two States as an interstate park for the use of the public and for the purpose of preserving the scenic beauty of the Palisades and other lands therein. Such park shall be called 'Palisades Interstate Park.' The parties hereto do hereby agree to and pledge, each to the other, faithful cooperation in the future planning, improvement, development, maintenance, government, and management of the park, holding in high trust for the benefit of the public the special blessings and natural advantages thereof.

"ARTICLE II

"There is hereby created a body corporate and politic with the name and style of 'Palisades Interstate Park Commission' (for brevity hereinafter referred to as 'the commission') which shall be a joint corporate municipal instrumentality of both the State of New York and the State of New Jersey for the purpose of effecting the objects of this compact and which shall be deemed to be performing governmental functions of the two States in the performance of its duties hereunder. The commission shall have power to sue and be sued, to use a common seal and to make and adopt suitable bylaws. The commission shall consist of 10 members, 5 of whom shall be citizens and residents of the State of New York and 5 of whom shall be citizens and residents of the State of New Jersey. For the purpose of doing business the members of the commission shall constitute a board. The present members of the two State boards shall be the first members of the commission for their respective States for the remainder of the terms for which they were respectively appointed. Each member of the commission shall be a citizen and resident of the State of which his predecessor was a citizen and each member of the commission other than the first members shall be appointed by the Governor of the State of which his predecessor was a citizen, by and with the approval of the senate of such State. Each member shall take an oath of office to perform faithfully all of the duties of his office according to the best of his ability. Such oath of office may be administered by any officer of the State of which such member is a citizen who is authorized to take oaths of office of any State officer and shall be filed in the office of the secretary of state of such State. The term of office of each member other than said first members shall be 5 years. Each member shall hold office until his successor shall have been appointed and shall have taken his oath of office, but each term shall be deemed to commence at the end of the preceding 5-year term, regardless of when the incumbent is appointed or takes the oath of office. If a member shall cease to be a citizen and resident of the State for which he was appointed, he shall cease to be a member of the commission. If a member of the commission shall die, resign, be removed, refuse to act, or cease to be a citizen and resident of the State for which he was appointed, the vacancy so created shall be filled, for the unexpired term only, by the appointment of a citizen and resident of the State of which such member was a citizen by the Governor thereof, by and with the approval of the senate of such State. Each member of the commission may be removed from office for neglect of duty or misconduct in office by the Governor of the State of which such member is a citizen after giving such member a copy of the charges against him and an opportunity of being publicly heard in person or by counsel, or both, in his own defense, upon not less than 10 days' notice. No member of the commission shall receive any compensation for his services as a member, but each member shall be entitled to receive his actual disbursements for his expenses in performing the duties of his office. The commission shall annually choose a president, a vice president, a treasurer, and a secretary from among its members and may also appoint such other officers as it may deem necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this compact.

"ARTICLE III

"There are hereby transferred to the commission all of the functions, jurisdiction, rights, powers, and duties of the respective State boards, as now prescribed by the laws of the respective States, and the same shall hereafter be exercised and performed by the commission, subject to such modifications thereof as are contained in this compact. Either the State of New York or the State of New Jersey may by law applicable to parks or park commissions generally within such State, or by law specifically applicable to the commission or to any of the parks within such State under its jurisdiction, and without the concurrence of the other State, withdraw, modify, alter, or amend any of the functions, jurisdiction, rights, powers, and duties transferred to the commission by this article or confer additional functions, jurisdiction, rights, powers, and duties on the commission, but such action by one State shall be effective only within the territorial limits of such State. The commission shall also have such additional functions, jurisdiction, rights, powers, and duties as may be conferred upon it by both States.

"ARTICLE IV

"1. All legal and equitable title to or in any property, tangible or intangible and whether real, personal or mixed, used or held as a part of, in connection with, or for the purposes of the park or parks now under the jurisdiction, management or control of the respective State boards, or connected with the maintenance or control thereof, insofar as the same shall have heretofore been vested in either of such State boards, is hereby transferred to and vested in the commission, subject to such liens, easements, permits, life rights, and other contracts relating thereto or in respect thereof as may now lawfully exist. All such legal and equitable title shall, upon the taking effect of this compact, forthwith and thereafter reside in the commission without further act or deed or transfer.

"2. The commission shall succeed and shall be and hereby is substituted for each of the State boards insofar as either of them has any obligation or liability to any person, firm or corporation, has undertaken or commenced any proceeding or other business, is a party to any action, suit or proceeding (the substitution of the commission for either of the State boards in any action, suit or proceeding to be deemed to be by operation hereof without motion or order) or has issued or promulgated any orders, rules, or regulations, and also insofar as consistent with the other provisions and the purposes of this compact, the commission should be regarded as succeeding and as substituted for either of the State boards in any other respect in order that the purposes of this compact may be accomplished. The balance of all appropriations heretofore made by either State and remaining to the credit of either of the State boards, to which either State board is entitled, or in the future would become entitled if its existence continued, shall be deemed to be appropriations to the commission herein created, and the commission shall, upon the taking effect of this compact, succeed to all the rights to any such appropriations theretofore made with the same force and effect as if the commission had originally been specifically named in the respective appropriation acts instead of the respective State boards for which such appropriations were made.

"3. All lands the title to which is hereby transferred to or shall hereafter be owned by the commission shall be and continue under the jurisdiction of the commission and shall be used only for public park purposes and none of said lands or any part thereof shall be sold, exchanged, or conveyed except with the consent of both States by specific enactments; provided, however, That the commission shall have power to grant easements, licenses, permits, and other rights over any lands held by it in either State when in the opinion of the commission the same will not interfere with the use and enjoyment of the park by the public.

"4. Each State may by legislation make rules and regulations for the use and government, including regulation of traffic, of such portions of the park as lie within the boundaries of the State, and such parts of any State, county, or other public highways as lie within the limits of such portions of the park, and all lands, parks, and parkways in the State under the jurisdiction of the commission, prescribe the penalty or penalties for violation of any such rules or regulations, prescribe the procedure for enforcement of any such penalty or penalties and provide the court or courts in which any such enforcement is to be sought.

"ARTICLE V

"1. All money, securities and other property, real and personal, heretofore received by either of the State boards or hereafter received by the commission by way of gift, bequest, or devise, may be retained by the commission and, except insofar as the purpose or manner of using the same is otherwise specifically designated or restricted by the terms of any such gift, bequest, or devise, may be used in the commission's discretion in either State for any park purpose; and the commission may likewise retain and use all revenue and income arising solely from such money, securities, and other property so received by way of gift, bequest, or devise or from facilities or operations financed solely by funds so received. In the case of revenue and income arising partly from specific property received by way of gift, bequest, or devise or from specific facilities or operations financed partly by funds so received, the commission may likewise retain and use such proportion of such revenue and income as the amount of gifts, bequests, or devices, or the proceeds thereof, invested in each such property, facility, or operation, bears to the total amount invested therein. The legislature of either State may from time to time by law specifically made applicable to the commission prescribe other terms and conditions upon which or purposes for which any gifts, bequests, or devises thereafter made of money, securities, or other property may be accepted for use in such State or used in such State or prescribe a different manner of administering gifts, bequests, or devises thereafter made in such State and the disposition of all revenues or income arising therefrom.

"2. Either State may from time to time by law require the commission to render to any designated official or official body of such State such reports and such estimates of revenues and expenditures as may be specified in such law.

"ARTICLE VI

"The commission shall not pledge the credit of either State except by and with the authority of the legislature thereof.

"ARTICLE VII

"Neither the State of New York nor the State of New Jersey shall be liable for any torts of the commission, its members, officers or employees, except as provided by the laws of such State, but each member, officer, and employee of the commission shall, with respect to any tort committed by him in the exercise of his duties or in the course of his employment as such member, officer or employee, be deemed to be an officer or employee of the State where such tort was committed, and any liability arising from such tort shall be governed by the laws of such State.

"ARTICLE VIII

"This compact may be amended from time to time by the concurrent action of the two States who are parties hereto.

"In witness whereof, the sovereign States of New York and New Jersey, respectively, have caused this compact to be signed and sealed in triplicate by their respective commissioners thereunto duly authorized this 28th day of June, 1937.

"For the State of New York:

"J. DU PRATT WHITE. [L. S.]
"W. AVERELL HARRIMAN. [L. S.]
"GEO. W. PERKINS. [L. S.]
"FREDERICK OSBORN. [L. S.]
"ALFRED E. SMITH. [L. S.]
"JOHN J. BENNETT, Jr. [L. S.]

"Attorney General of the State of New York.

"As commissioners authorized by chapter 170 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New York.

"Approved:

"HERBERT H. LEHMAN,
"Governor of the State of New York.

"In the presence of:

"FREDERICK C. SUTRO,

"For the State of New Jersey:

"CHARLES W. BAKER. [L. S.]
"WILLIAM CHILDS. [L. S.]
"EDMUND W. WAKELEE. [L. S.]
"ABRAM DE RONDE. [L. S.]
"VICTOR H. BERMAN. [L. S.]
"DAVID T. WILENTZ. [L. S.]

"Attorney General of the State of New Jersey.

"As commissioners authorized by chapter 148 of the Laws of 1937 of the State of New Jersey.

"Approved:

"HAROLD G. HOFFMAN,
"Governor of the State of New Jersey.

"In the presence of:

"FREDERICK C. SUTRO."

Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to said compact, and to each and every part and article thereof: Provided, That nothing therein contained shall be construed as impairing or in any manner affecting any right or jurisdiction of the United States in and over the region which forms the subject of said compact.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this resolution is hereby expressly reserved.

The preamble was agreed to.

LABORERS IN POSTAL SERVICE

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1609) to credit laborers in the Postal Service with any fractional part of a year's substitute service toward promotion, which had been reported from the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads with amendments.

The first amendment of the committee was, on page 2, line 10, after the words "basis of", to strike out "two hundred and fifty-four" and insert "three hundred and six", and in line 16 to strike out "two hundred and fifty-four" and insert "three hundred and six", so as to read:

That Public Act No. 366, entitled "An act to provide time credits for substitute laborers in the post office when appointed as regular laborers", approved August 27, 1935 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. I, title 39, sec. 101), is amended to read as follows:

"That section 5 of the act entitled 'An act reclassifying the salaries of postmasters and employees of the Postal Service, readjusting their salaries and compensation on an equitable basis, increasing postal rates to provide for such readjustment, and for other purposes', approved February 28, 1925 (43 Stat. 1060; U. S. C., title 39, sec. 101), is amended by adding thereto a new paragraph to read as follows:

" 'Whenever any substitute laborer, watchman, or messenger is appointed to a permanent position as laborer, watchman, or messenger, the substitute service performed by such laborer, watchman, or messenger shall be computed in determining the eligibility of such person for promotion to grade 2 on the basis of 306 days of 8 hours constituting a year's service. Effective at the beginning of the first quarter following approval of this act, all laborers, watchmen, and messengers who have not progressed to grade 2 shall be promoted to that grade, provided they have the necessary credit of 306 days of 8 hours each constituting a year's service.' "

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, line 2, after the words "credit of", to strike out "two hundred and fifty-four" and insert "three hundred and six", so as to read:

Any fractional part of a year's substitute service will be included with service as a regular laborer, watchman, or messenger in the Postal Service in determining eligibility for promotion to the next higher grade following appointment to a regular position. Effective at once following approval of this act, all laborers, watchmen, and messengers who have not progressed to grade 2 shall be promoted to that grade, provided they have the necessary credit of 306 days of 8 hours each constituting a year's service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2940) to make confidential certain information furnished to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

DESIGNATION OF STREETS IN THE MALL

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 171) for the designation of certain streets or avenues in the Mall as Ohio, Missouri, Oklahoma, and Maine Avenues was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the four avenues extending east and west in the Mall between Third Street and Fourteenth Street and south of the National Museum and north of the Smithsonian Institution in the National Capital, the city of Washington, D. C., shall be named as follows: In honor of the State of Missouri the most southerly of such avenues shall be known as Missouri Avenue; in honor of the State of Maine the most northerly of such avenues shall be known as Maine Avenue; in honor of the State of Oklahoma the more northerly of the two center avenues shall be known as Oklahoma Avenue; and in honor of the State of Ohio the more southerly of the two center avenues shall be known as Ohio Avenue.

The preamble was agreed to.

POTOMAC VALLEY CONSERVANCY DISTRICT

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 162) to permit the States of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia to enter into a compact or agreement respecting the creation of a Potomac Valley Conservancy District for the prevention or abatement of harmful pollution of the waters thereof was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby given to the States of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia to negotiate and enter into a compact or agreement providing for the creation of a conservancy district to consist of the drainage area of the Potomac River and the main and tributary streams therein, said district to be organized and maintained for the purpose of regulating, controlling, preventing, or otherwise rendering unobjectionable and harmless the pollution of the waters of said Potomac drainage area by sewage and industrial and other wastes, upon conditions that a suitable person shall be appointed by the President of the United States from the Department of the Treasury who shall participate in said negotiation as representative of the United States and shall make a report to Congress of the proceedings of any compact or agreement entered thereto: Provided, That any such compact or agreement shall not be binding or obligatory upon any of the parties thereto unless and until the same shall have been approved by the legislatures of each of said States and by the Congress of the United States.

CONSERVATION IN ARID AND SEMIARID AREAS

The bill (S. 2863) to promote conservation in the arid and semiarid areas of the United States by aiding in the development of facilities for water storage and utilization, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That it is hereby recognized that the wastage and inadequate utilization of water resources on farm, grazing, and forest lands in the arid and semiarid areas of the United States resulting from inadequate facilities for water storage and utilization contribute to the destruction of natural resources, injuries to public health and public lands, droughts, periodic floods, crop failures, decline in standards of living, and excessive dependence upon public relief, and thereby menace the national welfare. It is therefore hereby declared to be the policy of Congress to assist in providing facilities for water storage and utilization in the arid and semiarid areas of the United States.

SEC. 2. In order to effectuate this policy and promote proper land use in the said areas, the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized, from time to time—

(1) To formulate and keep current a program of projects for the construction and maintenance in the said areas of ponds, reservoirs, wells, check dams, pumping installations, and other facilities for water storage or utilization, together with appurtenances to such facilities. The facilities to be included within such program shall be located where they will promote the proper utilization of lands and no such facilities shall be located where they will encourage the cultivation of lands which are submarginal and which should be devoted to other uses in the public interest;

(2) To construct and to sell or lease, with or without a money consideration, under such terms and conditions as will advance the purposes of this act, the facilities mentioned in section 2 (1) and included within the program there provided for, including the lands upon which such facilities are located if they have been acquired or reserved for the purposes of this act;

(3) To cooperate or enter into agreements with, or to furnish financial or other aid to, any agency, governmental or otherwise, or any person, subject to such conditions as he may deem necessary for the purposes of this act; and

(4) To obtain options upon and to acquire lands, or rights or interests therein, or rights to the use of water, by purchase, lease, gift, exchange, condemnation, or otherwise, only when necessary for the purposes of this act.

SEC. 3. The facilities included in the program provided for in section 2 (1) may be located—

(a) On lands owned or controlled by the United States or any of its agencies, with the cooperation of the agency having jurisdiction thereof; and

(b) On any other lands upon obtaining proper consent or the necessary rights or interests in such lands.

SEC. 4. As a condition to extending benefits under this act to any lands not owned or controlled by the United States or any of its agencies, the Secretary of Agriculture may, insofar as he may deem necessary for the purposes of this act, require—

(1) The enactment of State and local laws providing for soil conserving land uses and practices, and the storage, conservation, and equitable utilization of waters.

(2) Agreements or covenants in regard to the maintenance and permanent use of such water, facilities, or lands benefited by such facilities.

(3) Contributions in money, services, materials, or otherwise to any operations conferring such benefits.

SEC. 5. The Secretary of Agriculture, in administering the provisions of this act, shall utilize the officers, employees, and facilities of agencies within the Department of Agriculture whose functions are related to the program provided for in this act, and may allot to such agencies or transfer to such other agencies of the Federal Government as he may request to assist in carrying out any of the provisions of this act, any funds available for the purposes of this act.

SEC. 6. For the purposes of this act, the Secretary of Agriculture may—

(1) Secure the cooperation of any governmental agency;

(2) Make expenditures for personal services and rent in the District of Columbia and elsewhere, for the purchase of lawbooks and books of reference, for printing and binding, for the purchase, exchange, operation, and maintenance of passenger-carrying vehicles, for supplies and equipment, for traveling expenses and for other administrative expenses; and

(3) Perform such acts and prescribe such rules and regulations as he may deem proper to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 7. There are hereby authorized to be appropriated for the purposes of this act such sums as Congress may from time to time determine to be necessary.

GENERAL STAFF DUTY IN THE ARMY

The bill (S. 2886) to amend an act entitled "An act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes", approved June 3, 1916, as amended by the act of June 4, 1920, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, under existing law, no officer can be detailed to the General Staff of the Army unless he has served the previous 2 years in actual command of troops of one or more of the combat arms. Furthermore, under present law, an officer commissioned in a staff corps cannot be detailed in the General Staff Corps unless he has served 1 year immediately preceding such detail with troops of one or more of the combat arms. At the time this law was enacted, 1916, there were available enough officers of the line and of the Staff Corps to qualify under it for General Staff duty without handicapping the War Department in the selection of officers for duty on the General Staff Corps. This condition, however, no longer exists, and it is constantly becoming more difficult to find qualified officers for General Staff duty who also have had the 2 years of duty in actual command of troops of the combat arms immediately preceding the period for which it is desired to detail them on the General Staff. This situation is due to the large number of officers who must now be assigned to duty with the National Guard, the Organized Reserves, the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, to schools for technical training, and to other duties fixed by law.

The War Department in its communication recommending this bill favorably stated that though it is recognized that officers should serve as frequently as possible with troop units, it is believed that duties performed as instructor with the Organized Reserves, the National Guard, and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps are equally important in providing the prospective General Staff officer with a well-rounded experience. The enactment of the bill under consideration will make available for selection to General Staff duty a large number of officers who are not now available.

It has become necessary, therefore, to modify existing laws in order to facilitate the selection of General Staff officers.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, how does it modify them?

Mr. SHEPPARD. It modifies them by enabling officers to be selected for the General Staff without having met the requirement for actual troop service during 6 years immediately preceding such selection.

Mr. CLARK. Let me ask the Senator from Texas if the removal of that prohibition would not permit officers to serve indefinitely on the General Staff.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Not at all. This bill applies to the nature of the duties officers must perform before they are detailed to the General Staff.

Mr. CLARK. I understand, but what is to prevent an officer from serving on the General Staff for the term for which he is assigned to it, then serving with troops for 1 week or 1 month, and then starting on another tour of duty on the General Staff?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Because the prohibition under existing law is unqualified as to the time officers may serve on the General Staff.

Mr. CLARK. But that is for one tour of duty.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Yes; except as to the Chief of Staff.

Mr. CLARK. And, as I understand, the purpose of the present law is to provide that they must have served with troops for 2 years prior thereto.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Not immediately prior thereto, but within the 6 years immediately prior thereto.

Mr. CLARK. But, as I understand this bill, under it an officer might serve one tour of duty on the General Staff, then go back to troops for a week or a month or 6 months, and then start another tour of duty on the General Staff. That is precisely what the present law was designed to prevent.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Texas yield to his colleague?

Mr. SHEPPARD. I do.

Mr. CONNALLY. Let me ask my colleague a question. I greatly dislike to disagree with my distinguished colleague, but I think it is highly desirable that officers who are detailed to the General Staff shall have served with troops immediately before such detail.

There is a disposition in all these bureaus for little cliques and little crowds to get in control and stay in control and stay here in Washington. All of these generals and everybody else want to come to Washington. As the amendment to the existing law is proposed, the officer has to have served with troops not less than 2 years out of the preceding 6. If he served 2 years with troops and then served 4 years on the General Staff——

Mr. CLARK. And served a week with troops.

Mr. CONNALLY. Why could he not then serve another 4 years' term on the General Staff?

Mr. SHEPPARD. This is a War Department bill. I am sure it was not the intention of the War Department to bring about, as a result of this measure, the situation the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] and the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] have suggested. It may be that the measure has not been framed with sufficient clearness. On account of the fact that so many officers are being required for detail with the Organized Reserves, the National Guard, and the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, it is becoming increasingly difficult to secure officers for General Staff duty.

Mr. CONNALLY. If the War Department cannot get officers to go to the General Staff who have been with troops, they are going to get them for staff duty or training service somewhere else. The point I make is that they should take officers who have been with troops. What is the use of learning staff duty, if you do not know anything about troops and the command of troops?—because that is what you learn staff duty to do.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I call for the regular order.

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not like to object, but I do not like the bill at all.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I am of the opinion that the suggestion of the Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY] should have serious consideration.

Mr. CLARK. I think the objection of the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. CONNALLY], that an officer ought to serve with troops, is extremely valid. I recall very well that during the World War there was a very distinguished officer who had served on the General Staff for many years, and had written several Army manuals and many books on military training; and by seniority he came to be a brigadier general, and was put in command of a brigade in the front line. He drew a beautiful order for attack, but unfortunately he did not know where his front line was, and he put the jumping-off line something over 2½ miles inside the German lines. [Laughter.]

It seems to me that officers ought to serve with troops, and that the provision of law which is now sought to be amended, while it might be relaxed, is in itself a very meritorious provision. Therefore I will ask the Senator from Texas to let this bill go over until we may have a chance to examine it.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I shall be glad to let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection being made, the bill will be passed over.

MRS. C. G. EIDNES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2120) for the relief of Rev. C. G. Eidnes, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,000 to Mrs. C. G. Eidnes, of Gonvick, Minn., widow of Rev. C. G. Eidnes, in full settlement of all her claims against the United States for the death of her husband resulting from injuries received by him on the night of October 14, 1936, when he was attacked and beaten by two intoxicated Indians from the Red Lake Reservation as he sought to prevent their entry into his home in pursuit of his wife: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 25 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any creditor. It shall be unlawful for any creditor to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated by this act in excess of 25 percent thereof, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Mrs. C. G. Eidnes."

PERMANENT AGRICULTURAL PROGRAM

The concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 19) favoring the consideration of a permanent agriculture program on the coming of the next session of Congress was announced as next in order.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, a joint resolution on that subject was passed yesterday. There is no use of proceeding with this one.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The concurrent resolution will be passed over.

SALE OF VIRUSES, SERUMS, TOXINS, ETC.

The bill (S. 1629) to amend the act entitled "An act to regulate the sale of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products in the District of Columbia, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes", approved July 1, 1902, to make it applicable to surgical ligatures and sutures, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the first section of the act entitled "An act to regulate the sale of viruses, serums, toxins, and analogous products in the District of Columbia, to regulate interstate traffic in said articles, and for other purposes", approved July 1, 1902, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"No person shall sell, barter, or exchange, or offer for sale, barter, or exchange in the District of Columbia, or transport for sale, barter, or exchange from any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia into any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or from any foreign country into the United States, or from the United States into any foreign country, any surgical ligature or suture unless (a) such ligature or suture has been prepared at an establishment holding an unsuspended and unrevoked license, issued by the Secretary of the Treasury, to prepare such ligature or suture for such sale or transportation and (b) the package containing such ligature or suture is plainly marked with the proper name of the article, the name, address, and license number of the manufacturer, and the date beyond which the contents cannot be expected beyond reasonable doubt to yield their specific results: Provided, That the suspension or revocation of any license shall not prevent the sale, barter, or exchange of any ligature or suture which has been sold or delivered by the licensee prior to such suspension or revocation unless the owner or custodian thereof has been notified by the Secretary of the Treasury not to sell, barter, or exchange the same."

SEC. 2. Sections 2, 3, and 4 of such act of July 1, 1902, are amended by inserting after the word "antitoxin", wherever it appears, a comma and the following: "ligature, suture"; and by inserting after the word "antitoxins" a comma and the following: "ligatures, sutures."

SEC. 3. The amendment made by the first section of this act shall take effect 6 months after the date of its enactment.

CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS IN THE DISTRICT

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2339) to amend the act entitled "An act to provide for the construction of certain public buildings, and for other purposes", approved May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 630), as amended, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia with an amendment, on page 2, line 15, after the word "Provided", to strike out "That before any streets or alleys within the areas herein described are closed and vacated, the Secretary of the Treasury shall request the recommendation of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia as to the advisability of closing and vacating such streets or alleys" and to insert "That no street or alley shall be closed and vacated within the areas herein described unless the closing and vacating of such street or alley is mutually agreed to by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That to enable the Secretary of the Treasury to acquire adequate sites for public buildings to be located within the areas hereinafter described, including suitable grounds, parking, and approaches necessary to a proper grouping of such buildings, the areas defined in the act of May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 630), as amended, within which sites or additions to sites for public buildings in the District of Columbia may be acquired, are hereby further extended, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized, empowered, and directed to acquire, pursuant to the provisions of said act, as amended, for the use of the United States, by purchase, condemnation, or otherwise, in addition to the areas already authorized, any land and buildings, including properties belonging to the District of Columbia, which he may determine should be acquired, within the area west of Nineteenth Street NW., bounded by New York Avenue NW., E Street NW., and the Potomac River; also squares 122, 104, 81, 58, 59, 44, and 33; and there is hereby authorized to be appropriated from time to time, in addition to the amounts heretofore authorized to carry out the purposes of the act of May 25, 1926, as amended, such amounts as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act: Provided, That no street or alley shall be closed and vacated within the areas herein described unless the closing and vacating of such street or alley is mutually agreed to by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REGULATION AND LICENSING OF REAL-ESTATE BROKERS, ETC.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6563) to define, regulate, and license real-estate brokers, business-chance brokers, and real-estate salesmen; to create a Real Estate Commission in the District of Columbia; to protect the public against fraud in real-estate transactions; and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on the District of Columbia, with amendments.

The first amendment was, in section 2, page 3, line 25, after the word "guardians", to insert "trustees", so as to make the paragraph read:

The provisions of this act shall not apply to receivers, referees, administrators, executors, guardians, trustees, or other persons appointed or acting under the judgment or order of any court; or public officers while performing their official duty, or attorneys at law in the ordinary practice of their profession.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in section 12, page 26, line 6, after the word "association", to insert "insurance company", so as to make the section read:

SEC. 12. It shall not be necessary for any trustee or auctioneer acting under authority of a power of sale in a mortgage, deed of trust, or similar instrument securing the payment of a bona-fide debt nor any bank, trust company, building and loan association, insurance company, or any land-mortgage or farm-loan association, organized under the laws of the United States, when engaged in the transaction of business within the scope of its corporate powers and provided by law, to obtain a license under this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

PUNISHMENT OF MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE

The bill (S. 2892) to amend section 798 of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, relating to murder in the first degree, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 798 of the act entitled "An act to establish a Code of Law for the District of Columbia", approved March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. 1189), be amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 798. Murder in first degree: Whoever, being of sound memory and discretion, kills another purposely and either of deliberate and premediated malice or by means of poison, or kills another in perpetrating or in attempting to perpetrate any offense punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, is guilty of murder in the first degree."

JURISDICTION OF UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS TO TRY CERTAIN CIVIL SUITS

The bill (S. 2893) to confer jurisdiction upon certain United States commissioners to try certain civil suits wherein the United States is plaintiff, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any United States commissioner specially designated for that purpose by the court by which he was appointed shall have jurisdiction to hear, determine, and render judgment in civil actions at law, wherein the United States is plaintiff and wherein the amount demanded does not exceed the sum of $500, unless either party demands a trial before the court. Such judgment shall be docketed and enforced in the same manner and shall have the same force and effect as judgments of the district courts of the United States. An appeal shall lie from the judgment of the commissioner to the district court of the United States for the district wherein such suit is brought. The Supreme Court shall prescribe rules of procedure and practice for the trial of such cases before commissioners, and for the taking of appeals to the district courts of the United States.

SEC. 2. United States commissioners specially designated under authority of section 1 of this act shall receive for services rendered under this act the same fees, and none other, as provided for like or similar services in other cases under section 21 of the act of May 28, 1896 (29 Stat. 184; U. S. C., title 28, sec. 597).

RIO GRANDE AND PECOS RIVERS

The bill (S. 2688) to provide for preliminary examinations and surveys for run-off and water-flow retardation and soil-erosion prevention on the watersheds of the Rio Grande and Pecos Rivers was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized and directed to cause preliminary examinations and surveys for run-off and water-flow retardation and soil-erosion prevention on the watersheds, including all tributaries, of the Rio Grande and Pecos Rivers, above the point of their confluence, in the same manner and to the same extent as is provided for those localities named in section 6 of the act entitled "An act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and for other purposes", approved June 22, 1936; the cost thereof to be paid from appropriations heretofore or hereafter made for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of such section.

UNEMPLOYMENT FUNDS OF STATES AND TERRITORIES

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8174) to make available to each State which enacted in 1937 an approved unemployment-compensation law a portion of the proceeds from the Federal employers' tax in such State for the year 1936, which was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated for payment to the unemployment fund of each State or Territory which was not certified by the Social Security Board under section 903 of the Social Security Act on December 31, 1936, but which enacted in the year 1937 an unemployment-compensation law approved by the Social Security Board under such section, an amount equal to 90 percent of the proceeds of the tax paid on or before January 31, 1938, with respect to employment in such State or Territory during the calendar year 1936 under title IX of such act. Out of the sums appropriated therefor, the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay such amount, through the Division of Disbursement of the Treasury Department, to each such State unemployment fund. The terms used in this act shall have the same meaning as identical terms in title IX of the Social Security Act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like an explanation of the bill.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, this bill has to do with the provisions of the Social Security Act. Title IX of the Social Security Act, without any particular reason for the arbitrary limitation, set an arbitrary limitation of December 31, 1936, as the dead line by which States should pass legislation to comply with the provisions of that act satisfactorily to the Social Security Commission. Many States—35 States, in fact—did pass such legislation; but the States of Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Florida, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, North Dakota, Washington, Wyoming, and the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska, either by reason of constitutional limitations or for other valid reasons, were unable to have legislation passed by special sessions of their legislatures in time to comply with the act.

As to the States which passed complying legislation, 90 percent of the taxes collected were paid into the State unemployment pension fund. As to the other States, the taxes were collected, but, under the terms of the existing act, they were impounded in the Treasury, and did not inure to the benefit of the State's unemployment funds. The effect of that action was to penalize not only the States but also the unemployed insured under the act.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. CLARK. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. Am I correct in my understanding that the enactment of this bill would not react unfavorably on States that have unemployment-compensation laws?

Mr. CLARK. The bill does not deprive the States which did comply with the act before the dead line of a single penny, and it does not in any real sense deprive the Federal Treasury of a single penny. It simply provides for permitting the States involved which failed to comply with the act before the dead line to be put on an equal footing with the other States.

Mr. LODGE. I thank the Senator.

Mr. CLARK. I may say that this measure passed the House of Representatives by unanimous vote.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I desire to ask the Senator from Missouri a question; but before doing so, in order to give my question meaning I wish to make the statement that I know of at least one State which went to the expense of holding a special session of the legislature in order to "get under the wire" and comply with the law. Therefore, I am sure that discrimination has already taken place between that State and any State which would have the benefit of this bill, if I understand the bill.

Now I wish to know whether these States must hereafter conform to the law in order to get the benefits of the bill.

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator from Vermont that my impression is, and I am quite certain it is correct, that every State involved has already complied with the law.

Mr. AUSTIN. Then I have no objection.

Mr. PEPPER. Mr. President——

Mr. CLARK. I yield to the Senator from Florida.

Mr. PEPPER. I wish to call to the attention of the able Senator the fact that the only States which will get the benefit of this bill are those which, during the year 1937, have complied with the act. In other words, it is not necessary to say that they will comply in the future. They have already complied.

Mr. CLARK. As I understand, every State has already complied. It is simply a question of permitting them to come in and use the taxes which they have already paid, to be applied under the purposes of the act.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President——

Mr. CLARK. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. As long as the question of discrimination has been raised, I should like to point out the situation so far as my own State is concerned.

The legislature met in the spring of 1935, and we made the best efforts we could to get some information as to what the Social Security Act was going to contain. Acting upon that information, the legislature passed a law attempting to comply with the act. Later the Congress passed the Social Security Act, but made certain changes in the original measure which made ineffectual the law which the Legislature of Washington had passed; and our supreme court said that we could not collect the tax in the State of Washington because we had not properly guessed what the Congress was going to do.

Mr. CLARK. I will say to the Senator from Washington that a very similar situation existed in my own State; and the process of calling an extra session of the legislature in my State is so very complicated that it was deemed better to wait until the regular session of the legislature in 1937, which did comply with the provisions of the act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TAXICAB INSURANCE IN THE DISTRICT

The bill (H. R. 7084) to provide that all cabs for hire in the District of Columbia be compelled to carry insurance for the protection of passengers, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, the Senator from Utah [Mr. KING], a question concerning this bill.

I am, of course, as is every other Senator, interested in seeing that liability and other types of proper insurance are carried by vehicles which operate for hire in the District of Columbia; but I have been told that as the bill passed the House it contained a provision which would have enabled a large association in this city to qualify under the bill by creating a $75,000 indemnity fund.

Mr. KING. That was eliminated.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. All smaller associations, or individual operators, would be at a great disadvantage, since they would have to pay for insurance many times the rate which the members of the large association would have to pay. The Senator informs me that that provision has been eliminated.

I wish we could have an understanding that in case the House should prove to be at all obdurate in this matter, the Senate conferees would return to the Senate for further instructions, because the Senator realizes we are approaching the close of the session, and from the little I know about the matter—and I confess I do not know as much as I should—it has seemed to me that by the language contained in the House bill a grave injustice would be perpetrated on the small associations, and particularly on the individual cab operators in the District of Columbia.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I took the precaution, before the bill was reported to the Senate, to confer as to the attitude of the House with respect to the provision to which the Senator refers, and I was informed that they had no objection to its elimination.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Then, I have no objection.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, is it true that if this bill were enacted, before the individual cab operators could get insurance they would have to pay a premium of $300 a year?

Mr. KING. I do not think so. I was not a member of the subcommittee, but the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] was, and he assured me that after hearings had been conducted in the House committee and by the subcommittee of the Senate committee, the bill met the situation, and that the taxicab drivers were in accord with the bill.

Mr. CONNALLY. A great deal of complaint has been made to me by taxicab drivers about this particular bill. The same objection which the Senator from Wisconsin suggested has been made to me by individual operators.

Mr. KING. The provision to which they objected has been eliminated.

Mr. CONNALLY. I have not been able to read the bill, and while, of course, I know that what the Senator says is accurate, there may be some other provision that would equally tend toward hardship on the individual operator. If the big companies, that is, those operating the yellow cabs and checkered cabs, can arrange their affairs under the bill so that they have an advantage over the man who owned his own cab, or one who belonged to one of the voluntary associations, I do not think that would be right. The individual drivers also claim it would cost them $300 a year to take out insurance.

I can suggest to the Senator from Utah one regulation which would obviate the necessity for this measure, that is, one making pedestrians in the District of Columbia observe the traffic lights. In my State, when a light turns red, pedestrians have to stop; but here they walk right on, among trucks and in general traffic, and when one is struck and injured he wants to sue some taxicab operator who perhaps has nothing but three children and one automobile. [Laughter.]

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, would not the enactment of the bill cause a great many now in the taxicab business to leave it because they would not be able to pay for the insurance required, and would it not virtually result in turning over the taxicab business in the city of Washington to the large companies?

Mr. KING. My information is just to the contrary. In fact, I came to the Capitol in a cab yesterday, and the driver said he had been driving here for 17 years, and he insisted that this measure should be passed, because, he said, it was imperative that they should have some insurance. He said he felt those who were driving taxicabs ought to take out insurance so as to protect people who might be injured. If there is any objection to the bill—the Senator who reported it, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS], being absent—I have no objection to its going over.

Mr. CONNALLY. In rebuttal of what the Senator from Utah suggests, the present Presiding Officer (Mr. MCGILL in the chair) and the junior Senator from Texas last night went home in a taxicab driven by a man who has his own little car, and who insisted that this kind of a bill would ruin him and his brother taxicab operators.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, if we are to find out which testimony is the most current, the Senator from Texas will have to give the hour when he and the Senator from Kansas were in the taxicab. [Laughter.]

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, I should like to ask the chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, by which committee the pending bill was considered, whether the committee took into consideration at all the question of requiring insurance on all automobiles using the streets of the District?

Mr. KING. Private cars?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Yes.

Mr. KING. I do not think the subcommittee did, I will say frankly. I was not a member of the subcommittee, but elaborate hearings were conducted, and the chairman of the subcommittee, the Senator from Maryland [Mr. TYDINGS] told me that a large number of witnesses were present, and that they worked out a bill that was satisfactory.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Is not the Senator of opinion that if some cars are required to be insured by mandate of law, and others are not insured, a degree of inequality will be permitted to exist?

Mr. KING. I do not think I would be willing to vote, at this time, at any rate, to require every owner of a car who drives it only for his own use and the use of his family to take out insurance; but if the Senator desires to offer a bill to carry that idea into effect, I am sure the committee will consider it.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I was considering the desirability of offering an amendment to the pending bill to carry out that idea.

Mr. KING. I hope the Senator will not do that, because it would have to go to conference.

Mr. CONNALLY. No doubt we will have another call of the calendar, and I should like very much to have the Senator from Maryland here to explain the bill in a little more detail.

Mr. BARKLEY. Let the bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

OIL WORLD EXPOSITION AT HOUSTON, TEX.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 385) authorizing the President to invite the States of the Union and foreign countries to participate in the Oil World Exposition at Houston, Tex., to be held October 11 to 16, 1937, inclusive, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INTER-AMERICAN RADIO CONFERENCE

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 197) authorizing an appropriation for the expenses of participation by the United States in the Inter-American Radio Conference to be held in 1937 at Habana, Cuba, which was read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That there is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $15,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the expenses of participation by the United States in the Inter-American Radio Conference to be held in 1937 at Habana, Cuba, including personal services in the District of Columbia and elsewhere without reference to the Classification Act of 1923, as amended; stenographic reporting, translating, and other services by contract if deemed necessary, without regard to section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., title 41, sec. 5); rent; traveling expenses; purchase of necessary books, documents, newspapers, and periodicals; stationery; official cards; printing and binding; entertainment; and such other expenses as may be authorized by the Secretary of State, including the reimbursement of other appropriations from which payments may have been made for any of the purposes herein specified.

Mr. ADAMS. Mr. President, I wish to call the attention of the Senator from Tennessee to the fact that apparently there is a series of bills authorizing appropriations for the expenses of expositions, and I wondered whether the Senator had considered how far we were going to follow this course, and what it would add to the governmental appropriations if we continued.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I think this is a good place to stop them; and if the Senator will ask that the joint resolution go over, I will join in the request.

I wish to say that there have been a great number of authorizations; and, of course, as soon as an authorization is made, an estimate is sent to the Congress, and we are required to appropriate the money. We are appropriating for expositions a great deal of money which ought not to be appropriated.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, the authorization for the expenses of participation of the United States in the radio conference should be passed by the Senate. It is contemplated that the conference will be held the coming November, and unless authority is given for the appropriation and the money is made available, I do not see how the United States can participate.

It has been recognized by everyone who knows anything about radio that we cannot confine the radio impulses to a particular State, and it has been necessary so far to have the waves regulated within the United States. It is equally true that the radio waves and energy traverse the boundaries of countries, as well as of States, and most troublesome questions have arisen between Cuba, Mexico, and the United States, and between Canada and Newfoundland and the United States.

It seems to me it is vital if we are to have any orderly radio communication within the United States that there should be orderly protection against the outside interferences coming from other countries.

The conference is to be held with the purpose of working out orderly communication between the nations on the North American Continent, and I think it would be a calamity and might result in disaster to the whole broadcasting system of the United States if we were not able to work out happy arrangements with these nations.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I will object for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

PACIFIC MERCADO EXPOSITION

The Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 186) providing for the participation of the United States in the continuing international exposition to be known as Pacific Mercado, to be held in the city of Los Angeles, Calif., commencing in the year 1940 and in the year 1942, commemorating the landing of Cabrillo, and for other reasons, which had been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations with an amendment to strike out all after the preamble and to insert the following:

Resolved, etc., That the Government of the United States hereby extends its official recognition to the Pacific Mercado (International Exposition) and authorizes the executive departments, independent establishments, and agencies of the Government to participate therein. Any expense incurred by such participation is to be met from any funds which may legally be used for that purpose and which may be available to such executive departments, independent establishments, or agencies.

SEC. 2. That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and respectfully requested by proclamation, or in such manner as he may deem proper, to invite foreign countries to such proposed Pacific Mercado (International Exposition) and to such proposed world's fair to be held in connection therewith, with a request that they participate therein.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The preamble was amended so as to read:

Whereas there is to be held in the city of Los Angeles, State of California, commencing in the year 1940, a continuing international exposition to be known as the Pacific Mercado, designed to promote closer relations and better understandings among the countries and nations of the world through the furtherance of trade, industry, and cultural arts, by gathering, arranging, and exhibiting the varied cultures of such countries and nations and the origins, progress, and accomplishments in science, the arts, education, industry, business, and transportation of such countries and nations, and by other appropriate means; and

Whereas there is to be held in said city, in the year 1942, in connection with said Pacific Mercado, a world's fair commemorating the landing of Cabrillo; and

Whereas the holding of said Pacific Mercado and, in conjunction therewith, said world's fair, will further the purposes of certain conventions and treaties signed at the Inter-American Conference for the Maintenance of Peace, held in the city of Buenos Aires, capital of the Argentine Republic, in December 1936; and

Whereas the city of Los Angeles, by amendment to its charter, approved by the electors of said city and by the legislature of the State of California, has been authorized to issue, through its department of water and power, bonds for the acquisition of a site for such continuing international exposition and world's fair; and

Whereas the State of California on May 21, 1937, enacted assembly joint resolution no. 47, chapter 106, memorializing the President of the United States to extend to the governments and dominions of the world invitations to participate in the Pacific Mercado in 1940 (reference CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, May 26, 1937, p. 5047; and

Whereas the State of California on May 25, 1937, appropriated $1,500,000 for the State's participation in the Pacific Mercado and exposition; and

Whereas such continuing international exposition and world's fair are worthy and deserving of the support and encouragement of the United States, and the United States has aided and encouraged such world's fair and celebrations in the past: Therefore be it

JOINT RESOLUTION PASSED OVER

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 199) to authorize an appropriation for the expenses of participation by the United States in the Eighth International Road Congress in 1938 was announced as next in order.

Mr. McKELLAR. Let this go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be passed over.

INVESTIGATION OF BANKRUPTCY AND RECEIVERSHIP PROCEEDINGS

The Senate proceeded to consider the resolution (S. Res. 15) continuing certain resolutions relating to the investigation of bankruptcy and receivership proceedings in Federal court, which had been reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate with an amendment, on page 1, line 9, to strike out "Congress; and be it further" and to insert "Congress, for the purpose of enabling the said committee to complete its work and prepare and file reports of its investigations, and for such purpose is authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate not to exceed $5,000", so as to make the resolution read:

Resolved, That Senate Resolution 78, agreed to June 13, 1933, authorizing an investigation of the administration of receivership and bankruptcy proceedings in the courts of the United States, and other matters pertaining thereto, and supplemented by Senate Resolution 72, agreed to February 15, 1935; Senate Resolution 170, agreed to July 25, 1935; Senate Resolution 282, agreed to June 6, 1936; and Senate Resolution 308, agreed to June 5, 1936, is hereby continued in full force and effect during the Seventy-fifth Congress, for the purpose of enabling the said committee to complete its work and prepare and file reports of its investigations, and for such purpose is authorized to expend from the contingent fund of the Senate not to exceed $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

LT. V. BALLETTO AND OTHERS

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 2022) for the relief of Lt. Lorimer E. Goodwin, which has been reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment on page 1, line 4, after the word "Treasury" to strike out "not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $911.15 to Lt. Lorimer E. Goodwin" and to insert "allocated by the President for the maintenance and operation of the Civilian Conservation Corps, to Lt. V. Balletto the sum of $166.17, to Lt. Robert B. S. Barney the sum of $15.75, to Lt. W. D. Beattie the sum of $306.17, to Capt. Edward E. Benson the sum of $351.75, to Capt. William G. Brill the sum of $145.14, to Capt. Chester T. Brown the sum of $597.21, to Capt. Lindsey C. Brown the sum of $248.55, to Lt. Walter L. Doerty the sum of $323.94, to Capt. Patrick L. Dolan the sum of $1,612.71, to Lt. Joseph B. Donnelly the sum of $930.32, to Lt. Ralph F. W. Eye the sum of $836.06, to Capt. John E. Fauber the sum of $379.48, to Lt. H. C. Garretson, Jr., the sum of $851.85, to Capt. Wellington Glover the sum of $781.05, to Lt. Lorimer E. Goodwin the sum of $775.36, to Lt. Francis J. Grueter the sum of $281.51, to Lt. Leo Guibault the sum of $68.92, to Lt. Phillips R. Hall the sum of $375.24, to Lt. Leslie F. Hart the sum of $689.10, to Lt. Norman J. Houston the sum of $341.51, to Lt. H. G. Howard the sum of $131.16, to Lt. Dixi C. Hoyt the sum of $592.63, to Lt. John J. Kennedy, Jr., the sum of $651.35, to Capt. Herbert L. Kuhn the sum of $251.60, to Capt. Joseph A. McCusker the sum of $535.96, to Lt. E. W. Mailman the sum of $173.32, to Capt. W. H. Marble the sum of $476.15, to Lt. Edward J. Norris the sum of $383.28, to Lt. Harry A. Plumb the sum of $468.54, to Lt. Thomas J. Quigley the sum of $86.05, to Lt. Warren M. Rogers the sum of $116.48, to Capt. Lewis W. Sanford the sum of $402.47, to Lt. Roger G. Seely the sum of $262.61, to Lt. F. Arnold Todd the sum of $180.10, to Capt. Edwin L. Tucker the sum of $205.61, to Lt. Carl E. E. Webber the sum of $362.24, to Capt. H. E. Whitten the sum of $1,275.67, to Camp Educational Adviser William W. Blodgett the sum of $147.23, to Camp Educational Adviser

B. W. Chapman the sum of $34.03, to Contract Physician Daniel J. Sullivan, the sum of $83.03, to Contract Physician A. A. Weinstein the sum of $628.20, and to the Officers' Club the sum of $542.42"; and on page 3, line 11, after the word "all" to strike out "his" and insert "their", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury allocated by the President for the maintenance and operation of the Civilian Conservation Corps, to Lt. V. Balletto the sum of $166.17, to Lt. Robert B. S. Barney the sum of $15.75, to Lt. W. D. Beattie the sum of $306.17, to Capt. Edward E. Benson the sum of $351.75, to Capt. William G. Brill the sum of $145.14, to Capt. Chester T. Brown the sum of $597.21, to Capt. Lindsey C. Brown the sum of $248.55, to Lt. Walter L. Doerty the sum of $323.94, to Capt. Patrick L. Dolan the sum of $1,612.71, to Lt. Joseph B. Donnelly the sum of $930.32, to Lt. Ralph F. W. Eye the sum of $836.06, to Capt. John E. Fauber the sum of $379.48, to Lt. H. C. Garretson, Jr., the sum of $851.85, to Capt. Wellington Glover the sum of $781.05, to Lt. Lorimer E. Goodwin the sum of $775.36, to Lt. Francis J. Grueter the sum of $281.51, to Lt. Leo Guibault the sum of $68.92, to Lt. Phillips R. Hall the sum of $375.24, to Lt. Leslie F. Hart the sum of $689.10, to Lt. Norman J. Houston the sum of $341.51, to Lt. H. G. Howard the sum of $131.16, to Lt. Dixi C. Hoyt the sum of $592.63, to Lt. John J. Kennedy, Jr., the sum of $651.35, to Capt. Herbert L. Kuhn the sum of $251.60, to Capt. Joseph A. McCusker the sum of $535.96, to Lt. E. W. Mallman the sum of $173.32, to Capt. W. H. Marble the sum of $476.15, to Lt. Edward J. Norris the sum of $383.28, to Lt. Harry A. Plumb the sum of $468.54, to Lt. Thomas J. Quigley the sum of $86.05, to Lt. Warren M. Rogers the sum of $116.48, to Capt. Lewis W. Sanford the sum of $402.47, to Lt. Roger G. Seely the sum of $262.61, to Lt. F. Arnold Todd the sum of $180.10, to Capt. Edwin L. Tucker the sum of $205.61, to Lt. Carl E. E. Webber the sum of $362.24, to Capt. H. E. Whitten the sum of $1,275.67, to Camp Educational Adviser William W. Blodgett the sum of $147.23, to Camp Educational Adviser B. W. Chapman the sum of $34.03, to Contract Physician Daniel J. Sullivan the sum of $83.03, to Contract Physician A. A. Weinstein the sum of $628.20, and to the Officers' Club the sum of $542.42, in full settlement of all their claims against the United States for reimbursement for personal effects destroyed as the result of a fire at the Charles M. Smith Civilian Conservation Corps Camp, at Waterbury, Vt., on December 26, 1935: Provided, That no part of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof shall be paid or delivered to or received by any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, on account of services rendered in connection with said claim. It shall be unlawful for any agent or agents, attorney or attorneys, to exact, collect, withhold, or receive any sum of the amount appropriated in this act in excess of 10 percent thereof on account of services rendered in connection with said claim, any contract to the contrary notwithstanding. Any person violating the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined in any sum not exceeding $1,000.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I recall some circumstances that are the foundation for these claims. My colleague [Mr. GIBSON] appears to have been the author of the bill. I have not seen it before this time. I know of the fire that is referred to in the bill. Waterbury is only a short distance from Burlington, Vt., and I knew of the loss that occurred to these officers and Civilian Conservation Corps employees. When the fire occurred, in midwinter, they had to get out through the windows of the barracks which the Government provided for them to live in, and left everything they possessed.

The bill, as amended, provides for the payment of damages to 37 Army officers, 4 Civilian Conservation Corps employees, and the officer's club, by way of reimbursement for personal effects destroyed as the result of a fire at the camp.

I think there is a very clear explanation of the bill in the report.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator why there were so many officers in a C. C. C. camp, and why they should have personal property there of the value, in one case, of $2,000.

Mr. AUSTIN. Because the project was a very large project, and employed a great many men.

Mr. McKELLAR. Is not a claim for $1,984 quite a large claim on the part of a man who is in a C. C. C. camp?

Mr. AUSTIN. To what does the Senator refer?

Mr. McKELLAR. I refer to the claim of Patrick L. Dolan for $1,984.50. It seems to me to be a very large claim for a man in a C. C. C. camp.

Mr. AUSTIN. Where does the Senator find that item?

Mr. McKELLAR. On page 4 of the report.

Mr. AUSTIN. It does not appear to be in the bill. The bill is what the Senate is concerned with passing. Dolan's claim in the bill is allowed at $1,612.71.

Mr. McKELLAR. Yes; it was cut down to some extent.

Mr. AUSTIN. I venture to say that no Senator would carry around in his mind the items of personal property owned by each one of these men that were destroyed in the fire; but I think it is safe to trust the Claims Committee, which handled the matter, to examine into each one of the claims in detail. The committee has made its examination and has made its report. It seems to me no special reason exists for turning down the claims.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I regret that the Senator has not furnished me—probably it is my fault because of the form of my question—sufficient reasons why such a large number of officers were in a C. C. C. camp. My understanding is that the C. C. C. camps are for young boys who are without employment, and that only two or three officers of the Army are in a camp to exercise supervision. There must have been 15 or 20 officers in the camp.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Let me say that the officers were not responsible for being there. The Government sent them there. Whether there was 1 there or whether there were 15 there, they could not help it.

Mr. AUSTIN. I may say, in explanation, that the situation was peculiar. Probably Senators will find only rare instances like it. Certain rivers in Vermont had been examined years before the relief policy was begun. Therefore, it happened that certain projects of flood control in that region had already been prepared for, so that when the Federal Government desired to move out of Camp Hunt and other places near Washington the army of men who needed work, the Federal Government found a place in Vermont. So we received from Washington the legacy of all the poor men who were sent up there, and the number was very large. They went to work upon a huge earth dam, and upon other projects. I do not know how many officers were required for it, and I am not undertaking to explain why so many were there; but they were there, and they evidently established facts which justified the committee in favorably reporting the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended so as to read: "A bill for the relief of Lt. V. Balletto and others."

BENEFIT PAYMENTS TO COTTON PRODUCERS

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 205) providing for benefit payments to cotton producers with respect to cotton produced in 1937 was announced as next in order.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, I desire to make a statement in connection with the joint resolution which the junior Senator from Texas introduced several days ago.

The joint resolution was referred to the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, and it was amended in substance to carry out what is known as the 1935 plan of handling cotton loans. It is believed that the Executive has power under existing law to do what is proposed to be done under the joint resolution. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO] and several other Senators called at the White House some days ago and reported to the Senate that the Executive had agreed in effect to do by Executive action exactly what this joint resolution proposed to have done, and it is believed that the Executive has that authority. So I am perfectly willing to have the measure go over, temporarily at least, until the question can be finally decided; and if it is found that the Executive does not have the authority, I shall then ask that the joint resolution be taken up, considered, and passed.

I ask the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. BILBO] if I have made a correct statement as to the situation?

Mr. BILBO. Mr. President, the statement made by the Senator from Texas is correct. The request from the White House is that the matter be left "as is", and the White House would prefer to issue an Executive order rather than to have a statute controlling the matter. The terms of the Executive order will be in line with the joint resolution introduced by the Senator from Texas.

In this connection, I ask unanimous consent that Calendar No. 1220, being Senate Concurrent Resolution 19, favoring the consideration of a permanent agricultural program on the coming of the next session of Congress, be indefinitely postponed and taken off the calendar, because what is provided in the concurrent resolution has been taken care of by Senate Joint Resolution 207.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, Senate Joint Resolution 205, being Calendar No. 1235, will be passed over.

Without objection, Senate Concurrent Resolution 19, being Calendar No. 1220, will be indefinitely postponed.

LEWIS HAZARD

The bill (S. 2316) to authorize the award of a decoration under certain conditions to Lewis Hazard for distinguished conduct was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President is hereby authorized to cause the recommendation for the award of a decoration to Lewis Hazard, formerly a private, Company C, One Hundred and Ninth Machine Gun Battalion, United States Army, for distinguished conduct on or about August 10, 1918, in the Fismes section in France, to be considered by the proper boards or authorities, and such award made to the said Lewis Hazard as it is found his said conduct merits.

EXTENSION OF AGRICULTURAL CREDIT PROVISIONS

The bill (H. R. 7909) to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act, to amend the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, to amend the Farm Credit Act of 1933, to amend the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, to amend the Agricultural Marketing Act, and for other purposes, was announced as next in order.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may we have an explanation of the bill?

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, the bill originated in the House, and after hearings before a subcommittee of the Committee on Agriculture of the House it was finally passed by the House. The bill came to the Senate, and a subcommittee of the Committee on Banking and Currency was appointed, of which our leader [Mr. BARKLEY] was the chairman. Open hearings were had upon the bill, and its provisions were fully explained to the subcommittee. The subcommittee reported it favorably to the full committee, and the provisions of the bill were then explained to the full committee; and the full committee has made a favorable report, without any change in the bill.

The bill is a long one, but that is principally caused by the fact that many small changes were made by its provisions, largely relating to the machinery provided for the operation of various credit acts, some of which were found not to be working well in practice. One of the main things involved was to provide authority which had long been needed and which those charged with carrying out the provisions of the various acts had as a matter of fact been exercising, to extend the time for making payments on the principal of certain loans. The plan of deferring payment on Commissioner loans for 3 years was adopted. The bill gives discretionary power to the Administration to defer payments on such loans for longer than 3 years, for whatever time is necessary, depending on the necessities of the cases that arise.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HUGHES. I yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Will the Senator state what the general effect of this measure if passed will be? Will it be to liberalize the policies of the various farm-credit organizations, or to make them more stringent?

Mr. HUGHES. The effect will be to liberalize them, to make them more workable.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HUGHES. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is it not true that this bill, while a lengthy one, is recommended by the farm-credit organizations in order to strengthen and at the same time liberalize the law in ways which they have found to be advisable and desirable through the experience they have had in administering the laws which have been on the statute books?

Mr. HUGHES. The Farm Credit Corporation has charge of administering several plans that have been adopted from 1933 on. It may be said that three of those plans are to continue. One is an emergency plan and is going out of existence. Three plans have been liquidated. In the work of liquidating and closing out some of them, and also the continuance of the ones that are to be continued, defects were found in the law and questions had arisen as to their right to do this and that, for instance, to have a receiver appointed for those that had ceased operating or were in liquidation. There were three of those, I believe. So that really it does not affect the work of the Farm Credit Administration—that is, they are to be just as liberal and just as broad and are going to do just what they have been doing—but the machinery was found not to be quite sufficient to carry out the purposes.

While this is a long bill, and there are a number of small amendments here and there in it, the committee went into all of them very carefully. They were explained to us and we investigated them. We had an open hearing, and I remember that the Senator from Oregon [Mr. STEIWER] was very much interested and asked a great many questions. It is all printed, and I have a copy of the printed hearings.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HUGHES. I yield.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. May I ask how many members of the committee were present when the bill was under consideration?

Mr. HUGHES. I could not tell the Senator how many members were present at different times, but the same number we usually have, seven or eight.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. How many at one time?

Mr. HUGHES. I think on the day of the hearing we had seven or eight.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. HUGHES. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Not only did the subcommittee have a hearing—I happened to be chairman of the subcommittee—but there was a majority of the subcommittee present during the hearing. Then, when the subcommittee made its report to the full committee we had a hearing of the full committee, all the items were gone into in detail, and there was a larger attendance of the full Committee on Banking and Currency on that day than usual, more than a majority, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. May I ask the Senator, the chairman of the subcommittee, since this bill covers a large number of pages, and apparently goes in great detail into the reorganization of the farm-credit system, whether in his opinion it is such a measure as should be passed under the unanimous-consent rule on the call of the calendar?

Mr. BARKLEY. So far as I am individually concerned, knowing the bill as I do, I would be perfectly willing to pass it under that condition, but if any Senator objects to that I can realize it is a valid objection, although I think it is very important that this bill be enacted into law at the present session of Congress. It passed the House, I think, without a dissenting vote, came here, and has been given as careful consideration—I will say as detailed consideration—by the Committee on Banking and Currency and by the subcommittee as any bill with which I have been familiar in recent months.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. Mr. President, the Senator will realize, of course, that those of us who represent agricultural States are constantly receiving communications from our constituents with respect to the operation of the farm-credit system. It is one of the most important financial phases of the Government.

Mr. BARKLEY. That is absolutely correct.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. It is a matter of the greatest importance to a large number of citizens in every State in the Union, and particularly in those States west of the Mississippi.

I have a great deal of respect for the Committee on Banking and Currency, and of course a great deal of respect for any subcommittee that would be headed by the Senator from Kentucky; but I want to feel sure that there are no controversial matters in this bill and that it deals with clarifying amendments of the present structure and will not cause any difficulty to those who are utilizing the farm-credit system.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think I can assure the Senator of that. There are too many amendments to go into them in detail but, as a sample of what this bill does, the Senator will recall that at the beginning of 1933 when the Government invested a large amount of money in the Farm Credit Administration the law was so amended as to give the Government a majority of the directors, four out of seven. This bill liberalizes that by allowing the Government to name three, the farm loan associations three, and then from a list of three submitted by the farm associations a seventh is named. That is just one of the liberalizing provisions of the bill which restores to the farm organizations more power, and more authority and to that extent takes away authority even from the Governor and the other officers of the Farm Credit Administration. That is one of the things that I think is a fair sample of what the bill does. It clarifies and it liberalizes; the bill consists of amendments that the committee have found desirable and in some cases necessary in view of the experience in the administration of the act during the last 4 years.

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I have no desire to make objection to the consideration of the bill, but I do want to emphasize the fact that a great responsibility rests upon the Senate in the consideration of measures of this kind. When the calendar is called for the consideration of unobjected-to bills, a wise course would urge us to consider only those simple bills as to which there is no danger of any controversial features being involved.

Mr. BARKLEY. I approve the Senator's statement.

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. O'MAHONEY. I yield.

Mr. WHITE. This is a bill of 42 pages. It passed the other body only on the 2d day of August, 11 days ago. It was reported to the Senate from the committee only yesterday. The members of the committee having jurisdiction may be familiar with it, but I submit that a single day is not a sufficient time to enable Members of the Senate generally to give proper consideration to the bill, and I am going to ask that it go over.

Mr. BARKLEY. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD at this point a detailed analysis of the bill, so that by Monday Members of the Senate may be able to study it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The analysis referred to is as follows:

ANALYSIS OF THE FARM CREDIT ACT OF 1937

Section 1: Title of the act.

Section 2: Authorizes the extension of land-bank commissioner loans.

This section confers upon the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation powers similar to those vested in the Federal land banks under paragraph "tenth" of 12 U. S. C. 781. It authorizes the Corporation to extend, in whole or in part, any unpaid obligation under the terms of any mortgage for such periods as may be agreed upon at the time when the extension is made. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1020d.)

Section 3: Reduces the amount available for loans to joint-stock land banks under section 31 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933 (48 Stat. 47) and makes the reduced amount available through the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation instead of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

No loans have been made to joint-stock land banks under section 30 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, and the authority conferred upon the land-bank commissioner to make loans under this section expired on May 12, 1937. Section 31 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, providing for loans to joint-stock land banks for the purpose of postponing foreclosure of first mortgages held by such banks, is amended by cutting down the amount available for loans thereunder from $25,000,000 to $2,000,000, and by extending the authority to make loans thereunder from May 12, 1937, the present expiration date of section 31, until July 1, 1938. Under the amendment the funds will be made available through the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation instead of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. This amendment makes it necessary for any joint-stock land bank obtaining such a loan to agree that it will postpone foreclosures for a period of 1 year upon the conditions now prescribed in section 31 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act. (Amends sec. 31 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as set forth in note to 12 U. S. C. 823.)

Section 4: Authorizes the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation to make loans to Federal land banks and joint-stock land banks on the security of real-estate mortgages, sheriff's certificates, sales contracts and real estate, upon such terms and conditions as shall be prescribed by the Corporation's board of directors.

The second clause of this section is new matter and will enable the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation to make loans to Federal land banks and joint-stock land banks on the security of assets not acceptable as collateral for farm-loan bonds issued by these banks. The balance of the section reenacts existing provisions of law. Such loans to joint-stock land banks may not exceed in the aggregate $10,000,000. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1020d.)

Section 5: Provides for 12 farm-credit boards, prescribes the manner in which the members thereof shall be elected, and establishes the qualifications of such members.

This section, together with sections 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11, will promote the further integration of the Federal farm-credit system through the creation of a cooperative farm-credit board in each of the 12 Federal land-bank districts now existing. This board will be ex officio the board of directors of the Federal land bank, Federal intermediate credit bank, production credit corporation and bank for cooperatives in the district, and will, in addition, be vested with the powers enumerated in section 6. With the exception of the third district director the members of the farm-credit board will be selected in substantially the same manner as the members of the Federal land-bank board of directors are now chosen.

Paragraph (a) provides for the creation of 12 farm-credit districts to take the place of the 12 Federal land-bank districts now existing, and changes the designation of these districts in the Federal Farm Loan Act, its amendments and supplements, to "farm-credit districts." (New provision, 12 U. S. C. 671 repealed by sec. 7 (a).)

Paragraph (b) provides for a farm-credit board in each farm-credit district, to be composed of seven members. Three of the members of this board are to be elected: One by national farm-loan associations and borrowers through agencies; one by production credit associations; and one by cooperatives which are stockholders or subscribers to the guaranty fund of the district bank for cooperatives. In addition there are to be three district directors, of whom two are to be appointed by the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, and one, who will be known as the third district director, selected as provided in paragraph (d). The seventh director is to be a director at large appointed by the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration. (New provision. Substitute for 12 U. S. C. 678.)

Paragraph (c) provides that the present Federal land-bank directors shall be the first members of the farm-credit board, and establishes identity of board members for selection purposes. (New provision.)

Paragraph (d) provides that the third district director (who will be the successor to the district director now appointed to represent national farm-loan associations and borrowers through agencies) shall be appointed by the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration from among the three candidates receiving the greatest number of votes in a nomination by national farm-loan associations and borrowers through agencies. (New provision.)

Paragraph (e) sets out the procedure for nominating the three elected directors and the third district director. (Substantially reenacts 12 U. S. C. 679.)

Paragraph (f) sets out the procedure for electing the three elected directors. (Substantially reenacts 12 U. S. C. 680.)

Paragraph (g) fixes a 3-year term of office for all directors and provides for filling vacancies in the farm-credit board. (Substitute for 12 U. S. C. 681.)

Paragraph (h) prescribes the qualifications of directors; all directors must have been residents of the district for 2 years; officers and employees of any Federal land bank, Federal intermediate credit bank, production credit corporation, or bank for cooperatives are made ineligible to serve as directors; and the extent to which district directors may engage in other business is restricted. (Substitute for 12 U. S. C. 682.)

Paragraph (i) continues in effect the present disqualification on conviction of felony or court award of damages for fraud applicable to all directors and to administrative and executive officials of the Federal land bank, Federal intermediate credit bank, production credit corporation, and bank for cooperatives. (Substantially reenacts 12 U. S. C. 682a.)

Paragraph (j) provides for compensating members of the Farm Credit Board and sets certain limitations on the compensation which may be paid such members. (Substitute in part for 12 U. S. C. 683.)

Paragraph (k) is a saving clause as to 12 U. S. C. 672 and other provisions of law authorizing loans in Territories and insular possessions of the United States.

Section 6: Authorizes each farm credit board to employ joint officers and employees for the four district institutions, and to acquire and dispose of such property, real or personal, as may be necessary or convenient for the transaction of the business of these institutions.

This section will permit the appointment of a unified service staff, similar to the present general agent's staff, and the unified handling of property needed in transacting the business of the four credit units in each district. Officers and employees appointed under this section will be officers and employees of the four institutions. (New provision.)

Sections 7, 8, and 9: Make changes in the Federal Farm Loan Act incidental to the creation of the farm credit boards.

Section 7 repeals provision for Federal land-bank districts (12 U. S. C. 671) and other provisions of Federal Farm Loan Act superseded by section 5; makes members of farm credit board ex-officio directors of Federal land bank in district (new); reenacts provision of 12 U. S. C. 683, making compensation of officers and employees of Federal land bank subject to the approval of the Farm Credit Administration; and repeals 12 U. S. C. 682a (substantially reenacted by sec. 5 (i)).

Section 8 preserves power of Farm Credit Administration to readjust territories of national farm-loan associations now exercised by reference to 12 U. S. C. 671.

Section 9 amend Twelfth United States Code 831, conferring removal powers upon the Farm Credit Administration, so as to permit the director at large to be removed for cause. Under existing law (12 U. S. C. 681, repealed by sec. 7) such director may be removed by the governor of the Farm Credit Administration at will.

Sections 10 and 11: Provide that the members of each farm credit board shall be ex officio the directors of the Federal intermediate credit bank, the production credit corporation, and the bank for cooperatives in the district.

Section 10 amends 12 U. S. C. 1022, providing that the directors of the Federal land bank shall be ex officio the directors of the Federal intermediate credit bank in the same city.

Section 11 amends 12 U. S. C. 1131 and 1134, making similar provisions for the production credit corporation and bank for cooperatives in the district.

Section 12: Extends the class of eligible purposes for Federal land-bank loans to include the refinancing of any indebtedness incurred prior to January 1, 1937.

Under existing law Federal land-bank loans may be made for the purpose of refinancing indebtedness incurred for agricultural purposes, irrespective of the date of its incurrence, but may be made for the purpose of refinancing nonagricultural indebtedness only if incurred prior to January 1, 1933. This date is changed to January 1, 1937, by this section. (Amends par. 4 of 12 U. S. C. 771.)

Section 13: Restricts the class of eligible purposes for Commissioner loans by excluding the refinancing of indebtedness incurred for nonagricultural purposes subsequent to January 1, 1937, except where such refinancing is sought in connection with proceedings under chapter VIII of the Bankruptcy Act.

Under existing law Land Bank Commissioner loans may be made for the purpose of refinancing any indebtedness of a farmer irrespective of the purpose for which it was incurred or the date of its incurrence. This section restricts eligibility for refinancing loans by the Land Bank Commissioner to the same classes of debts as are made eligible for Federal land-bank refinancing loans under section 12—that is, debts incurred for agricultural purposes or incurred prior to January 1, 1937—with the one exception that refinancing loans may still be made by the Land Bank Commissioner in connection with proceedings under chapter VIII of the Bankruptcy Act without regard to the purpose or date of the indebtedness to be refinanced. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1016 (c).)

Section 14: Provides that when conditions justify it, the Land Bank Commissioner may, by provision in the mortgage, allow a borrower the right to defer payments on principal during the first 3 years his loan is in effect.

This section substitutes for the existing provision of law under which borrowers from the Land Bank Commissioner are entitled to defer all principal payments for the first 3 years their loans are in effect if not otherwise in default, a provision under which such initial deferments will be permissible only when the Land Bank Commissioner deems them to be justified in the light of the circumstances, and consents to the inclusion in the mortgage of a clause permitting the borrower to defer principal payments for 3 years if he is not in default with respect to any other provision of his mortgage. Under existing law a borrower from the Land Bank Commissioner is in effect given the privilege of turning a 10-year loan into a 13-year loan at his option, by electing to defer principal payments during the first 3 years the loan is in effect. Under this section the Land Bank Commissioner will be vested with the power of determining whether this privilege should be granted the borrower according as the circumstances of the individual case may warrant. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1016 (c).)

Section 15: Authorizes Federal land banks and joint-stock land banks to purchase Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds without restrictions as to price.

Under existing law the Federal land banks may purchase Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds, but only at or below par. Paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section remove this limitation so as to permit purchases for more than par. They also confer upon the joint-stock land banks power to purchase Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds without restrictions as to price. In addition, paragraph (c) of this section permits the proceeds of principal payments upon first mortgages pledged as collateral security for farm-loan bonds issued by a joint-stock land bank to be invested in Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds. This provision confers upon the joint-stock land banks a power already vested in the Federal land banks by 12 U. S. C. 897. (Amends pars. 8 and 15 of 12 U. S. C. 781, and the last paragraph of 12 U. S. C. 897.)

Section 16: Authorizes Federal land banks to make loans to each other upon such terms and conditions as may be approved by the Farm Credit Administration.

Under existing law Federal land banks have express power to borrow money and to give security therefor, but have no express general authority to make loans to each other. (Adds a new paragraph to 12 U. S. C. 781.)

Section 17: Authorizes Federal land banks and joint-stock land banks to accept conditional payments from borrowers, such payments to be held by the bank for future application upon unmatured indebtedness of the borrower making the payment.

The Federal land banks and joint-stock land banks do not, at the present time, have express authority to accept payments from borrowers on the condition that they be not immediately credited in reduction of the principal of the borrower's loan, but that they be held by the bank for the purpose of being applied to future maturing installments on the loan as they come due. This section, by conferring such power, will make it possible for the land banks to accept in good crop years payments in excess of the installments for that year on the borrower's loan, and to hold these payments unapplied until some future year when the borrower is unable to meet his current payments because of a poor harvest or other cause. In order to protect the banks' bondholders this section requires that when a conditional payment is accepted for subsequent credit upon a first mortgage then or thereafter pledged as collateral security for farm-loan bonds such conditional payment shall be subject to all requirements, conditions, and limitations imposed with respect to principal payments by 12 U. S. C. 897 to 899. Conditional payments made under this section are to be credited upon the borrower's indebtedness to the land bank as he may from time to time direct in accordance with the terms and conditions upon which the payment has been accepted and may, at the option of the bank, be credited upon such indebtedness as and when it matures if not otherwise paid. If at any time after 5 years from the date on which a loan was made the borrower's conditional payments equal or exceed his total indebtedness under the loan, the entire loan will become due and payable at once and such conditional payments are to be forthwith credited upon the loan so far as may be necessary to pay it in full. The bank is authorized to pay interest on conditional payments while held unapplied. (Adds a new paragraph to 12 U. S. C. 781.)

Section 18: Authorizes the Federal land bank bond committee to appoint a subcommittee of three members.

The bond committee of the Federal land banks consists of the presidents of the 12 banks or their alternates. It is desirable that the bond committee be given express authority to exercise its functions through a smaller subcommittee. This section permits the bond committee to appoint a subcommittee composed of three of its members, and provides that this subcommittee, if appointed, shall have such authority to exercise the powers and to perform the functions of the bond committee as the committee may authorize. Members of the subcommittee are to be appointed for 1-year terms but may be dismissed by the bond committee at will. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 883.)

Section 19: Permits the paid-in surplus of the Federal land banks subscribed by the United States to be converted into a revolving fund, which may be transferred from one bank to another to meet unusual conditions.

Under the authority of paragraph "Tenth" of 12 U. S. C. 781, the Secretary of the Treasury has from time to time subscribed to the paid-in surplus of the Federal land banks for the purpose of assisting these banks in granting extensions pursuant to that paragraph, and in deferring payments of principal pursuant to paragraph "Twelfth" of 12 U. S. C. 771. This section provides that all unpaid balances of the funds appropriated for these subscriptions to paid-in surplus, and all repayments of Government subscriptions to paid-in surplus, shall be held in the Treasury as a revolving fund. This revolving fund is to be used for the making of additional subscriptions to the paid-in surplus of the Federal land banks, which subscriptions may be made for the purpose of assisting the banks in granting extensions and deferring principal payments. The duty of making such subscriptions out of the revolving fund upon the request of any Federal land bank made with the approval of the Farm Credit Administration is placed upon the Secretary of the Treasury. Such subscriptions to paid-in surplus may be repaid, in whole or in part, at any time in the discretion of the bank and with the approval of the Farm Credit Administration, and the Administration may at any time require their repayment, in whole or in part, if in its opinion the bank has resources available therefor. (New provision to be added after 12 U. S. C. 698.)

Section 20: Changes the title of land bank examiners to "farm credit examiners."

Land-bank examiners appointed pursuant to the provisions of 12 U. S. C. 656 are, under the authority of other provisions of law, being used for the purpose of examining Federal intermediate credit banks, production credit corporations, banks for cooperatives, and other institutions under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration. This section brings their title into conformity with their functions. (New provision.)

Section 21: Changes the term of office of national farm-loan association directors from 1 to 3 years, and provides for staggering the election of such directors.

This section provides that each national farm-loan association shall have a board of directors of from five to seven members; that the members of the board shall be elected by the shareholders at annual meetings; that they shall hold office for 3-year terms; and that a certain number of directors shall be elected each year. It also provides for filling vacancies on association boards of directors and eliminates the reference to the National Banking Act now contained in the provision of the Federal Farm Loan Act relating to the election of association directors. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 712.)

Section 22: Permits direct borrowers from Federal land banks to transfer or hypothecate their Federal land-bank stock to the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

Under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act the stock in Federal land banks for which direct borrowers from the banks are required to subscribe may not be transferred or hypothecated. Where the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation holds a second mortgage, subject to a first mortgage in favor of the Federal land bank, it sometimes becomes desirable to take an assignment of the borrower's interest in the Federal land-bank stock in order to avoid losses which the Corporation might otherwise sustain. Due to the fact that creditors of borrowers or others may not attach, garnishee, or through any other legal process subject the stock of a Federal land bank, or any interest therein, to the payment of their claims, it was necessary to authorize the Corporation to take any legal action which might be appropriate to accomplish this purpose. After obtaining an assignment of the stock the Corporation would either hold the stock until the bank loan had been paid in full and the stock retired, when the proceeds would be paid over to the Corporation, or the Corporation would dispose of the stock to a subsequent purchaser of the property who assumed the Federal land-bank mortgage. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 723 (c).)

Section 23: Changes method of voting in stockholders' meetings of national farm-loan associations to: one member, one vote.

Present law gives each stockholder one vote per share of stock with maximum of 20 votes. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 732.)

Section 24: Provides that the favorable vote of a majority of the board of directors is sufficient to elect a prospective borrower to membership in a national farm-loan association.

Present law requires a two-thirds vote to elect an applicant to membership. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 745.)

Section 25: Provides that two or more national farm-loan associations may under an agreement between them, and with the approval of the Farm Credit Administration, elect a common board of directors which will act as the board of directors of each of the associations entering into the agreement; provides a method by which loans may be made through national farm-loan associations under certain special conditions although the capital stock of the association is impaired; provides that one association may by agreement service loans made though another association; and authorizes a method by which national farm-loan associations may, in proper cases, pay off and retire stock at its fair book value.

Paragraph (a) will facilitate the joint management program of the Farm Credit Administration under which national farm-loan associations operating in the same territory are encouraged to conduct their business at a common office and through a single secretary-treasurer for their mutual benefit and the convenience of borrowers in the territory served by them. It permits one or more members of the common board of directors to be elected by each association which is a party to the agreement and permits the balance, if any, of the directors to be elected by the shareholders of all the associations voting as a single group. Other methods of election may be used where deemed appropriate and the total number of directors may exceed the maximum of seven elsewhere fixed by law. The members of the common board of directors will be ex officio the directors of each association which has become a party to the agreement. In order to retain in the individual associations the power of approving or disapproving applications for loans, it is provided that the shareholders of each association which has entered into such an agreement shall elect the members of the association's loan committee at the annual meeting, and that the loan committee so elected shall sit in place of the association's board of directors with respect to the approval of applications for loans and the election of applicants to membership in the association. (New provision to be added after 12 U. S. C. 745.)

Paragraph (b) provides a method by which loans may be made through national farm-loan associations under certain special conditions, although the capital stock of the association is impaired. Each new borrower becomes a member of the association, subscribes to stock of the Federal land bank of the district in an amount equal to 5 percent of his loan, and pays a rate of interest one-fourth of 1 percent below the rate provided for on direct loans. When there are 10 or more of such borrowers with loans aggregating not less than $20,000 that are in good standing, it is provided that they automatically become mutually liable for each other's loans, their stock in the bank is exchanged for stock in the association, and their interest rate will be reduced one-fourth of 1 percent. The new members and old members will be in separate groups, with separate issues of stock and separate earnings and reserves, and there will be no intergroup liability. Provision is made for a termination of this segregation if and when all impairment in the capital stock of the old group of borrowers is removed. (New provision.)

Paragraph (c) authorizes any national farm-loan association, with the approval of the bank of its district, to enter into an agreement with another association operating in the same or adjacent territory under which the latter would be permitted to service loans made through the first association. The purpose of this provision is to make possible a more economical servicing of loans by associations. (New provision to be added at the end of 12 U. S. C. 761.)

Paragraph (d) authorizes a method by which impaired national farm-loan associations may, in proper cases, be permited to pay off and retire their capital stock at its fair book value upon full payment of the mortgage loans in connection with which such stock was issued originally, and to settle on the same basis the claims of any of their stockholders who have previously paid their loans in full but have not received credit for or the proceeds of their stock. The section provides for the appointment of a conservator by the Farm Credit Administration, preferably using an appraiser, who will prepare a report on the financial condition of an association. On the basis of this report and the recommendation of the Federal land bank, the Farm Credit Administration may then declare a formal valuation of the stock which will be used for this purpose. (New provision to be added at the end of 12 U. S. C. 961–966.)

Section 26: Authorizes Federal intermediate credit banks to acquire and dispose of such property, real or personal, as may be necessary or convenient for the transaction of their business.

This section is believed to be desirable so that the authority of the Federal intermediate credit banks to acquire and convey property used in the performance of their functions will be specific. Heretofore such transactions have been conducted under the general authority of the banks to exercise "all the usual powers of corporations." (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1023.)

Section 27: Authorizes the Federal intermediate credit banks to pledge as collateral security for debentures issued by them United States Government bonds and Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds.

This section authorizes the Federal intermediate credit banks to use United States Government bonds, or bonds fully and unconditionally guaranteed by the United States, as collateral security for their debentures. Under existing law, such collateral is limited to "cash, or notes or other such obligations discounted or purchased or representing loans made under section 202 (a) of the Federal Farm Loan Act." Authorization to employ obligations of the United States Government as collateral will be of advantage to the Federal intermediate credit banks, in view of the fact that a large part of their capital is now invested in these obligations. The Federal land banks have for some time been authorized to use United States bonds and Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds as collateral for farm-loan bonds. This section will extend similar privileges to Federal intermediate credit banks in respect to the collateral for their debentures. The striking out of the phrase "when chartered and established" in the provision amended is due to the fact that this phrase is believed to be surplusage. (Amends 12 U. S. C., 1041.)

Section 28: Permits the Federal intermediate credit banks to withdraw on trust receipt pledged collateral of certain kinds, subject to the approval of the Farm Credit Administration.

This section provides that warehouse receipts, shipping documents, and other similar credit instruments, when constituting the underlying collateral securing notes which have been purchased or discounted by Federal intermediate credit banks and deposited with a farm-loan registrar as collateral security for debentures issued by these banks, may be released by the registrar on trust receipt in such form and subject to such conditions as may be approved by the Farm Credit Administration. Heretofore, such warehouse receipts, shipping documents, and similar credit instruments have been delivered physically to the registrar. This has occasioned considerable difficulty and delay in handling commodities covered by such receipts and documents. It is occasionally very desirable for the owners of such commodities to be able to dispose of them without delay, due to a rapidly fluctuating market. The purpose of this section is to permit the adoption of a procedure whereby warehouse receipts and similar documents can be held so that they will be available at all times when required for quick disposition of the commodities covered thereby. (Amends 12 U. S. C., 1042.)

Section 29: Permits Federal intermediate credit banks to purchase depentures issued by them without restrictions as to price.

This section authorizes any Federal intermediate credit bank, with the approval of the Farm Credit Administration, to purchase consolidated debentures issued by the 12 Federal intermediate credit banks and individual debentures issued by the purchasing bank or by any other Federal intermediate credit bank. If a Federal intermediate credit bank purchases debentures which it has issued, or which have been issued for its account, it may retire them forthwith. If it purchases debentures issued by, or for the account of, any other Federal intermediate credit bank it may hold them until maturity. At the present time Federal intermediate credit banks are authorized to purchase debentures only at or below par. It sometimes happens that one of these banks has funds which are temporarily idle, and market conditions are such that it can use such funds for the purchase of debentures only by buying them at a price above par. The section is designed to give these banks more freedom in using temporarily idle funds advantageously. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1053.)

Section 30: Changes the procedure for determining the amount of the franchise tax to be paid by each Federal intermediate credit bank.

This section modifies and clarifies the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act with respect to the disposition of the annual earnings of Federal intermediate credit banks. It provides that after paying or providing for necessary expenses each bank shall apply the earnings then remaining: First, to restoring any losses in excess of its reserves which may have occurred during the current year; second, to eliminating any impairment in its paid-in capital and paid-in surplus which may have occurred during the year; third, to the creation and maintenance of such reserves as may be found advisable; fourth, to the payment of 25 percent of the amount then remaining to the United States as a franchise tax; and, fifth, to the payment of the residue of its net earnings into its surplus account. Under existing law the net earnings of any Federal intermediate credit bank remaining after payment or provision for necessary expenses are to be paid into the bank's surplus fund until it amounts to 100 percent of the subscribed capital stock, and thereafter 50 percent of such earnings is to be paid into the surplus fund and the residue is to be paid to the United States as a franchise tax. No franchise tax has been paid to the United States for the past several years. It is believed desirable to amend the existing law in the manner indicated above which, it is expected, will result in substantial payments of franchise taxes to the United States. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1072.)

Section 31: Amends the law relative to the furnishing of confidential information to Farm Credit Administration institutions by various Government agencies.

This section provides that the several executive departments, boards, commissions, and independent establishments of the Government, including the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, and the Federal Reserve banks, are authorized, upon request of the Farm Credit Administration, to furnish to the Administration or of any bank or corporation operating under its supervision, in confidence, information relating to the condition of any institution with which such bank or corporation, or the Administration, contemplates entering into business relations. At present such information is furnished only in connection with the affairs of Federal intermediate credit banks and it appears desirable to provide that similar information be furnished in connection with the affairs of the other institutions operating under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1095.)

Section 32: Confers upon the 12 regional agricultural credit corporations certain powers necessary or convenient for their proper liquidation.

This section authorizes each regional agricultural credit corporation to transact business in any State of the United States, in the District of Columbia, and in Puerto Rico; to borrow money from any other regional agricultural credit corporation, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, or any Federal intermediate credit bank; to lend any of its available funds to any other regional agricultural credit corporation; and to sell to or purchase from another regional agricultural credit corporation any part or all of the assets of any such corporation. The foregoing additional powers are believed necessary to enable each regional agricultural credit corporation to liquidate its business to the best advantage. (New provision.)

Section 33: Provides for the merger and consolidation of regional agricultural credit corporations.

This section will enable the Farm Credit Administration to effect the consolidation or merger of two or more regional agricultural credit corporations. It provides for granting charters to, prescribing bylaws for, and fixing the capital of, regional agricultural credit corporations formed by consolidation; and makes applicable to such consolidated corporations all provisions of law conferring powers upon, or otherwise affecting, the 12 regional agricultural credit corporations now in existence. It is believed that the foregoing provisions are necessary to permit the liquidation of these corporations in an efficient manner. (New provision.)

Section 34: Declares that nothing contained in sections 32 and 33 shall be construed as limiting the rights, powers, and authority heretofore granted to regional agricultural credit corporations, the Farm Credit Administration, or the Governor thereof.

Section 35: Authorizes the Central Bank for Cooperatives (1) to buy and sell interests in notes and other obligations, and (2) to borrow from, and discount or rediscount paper with, commercial banks.

Clause (c) of this section enlarges the power of the Central Bank for Cooperatives to buy and sell notes or other obligations by including therein the power to buy and sell interests in such notes and other obligations. Clause (d) of this section gives the Central Bank for Cooperatives power to borrow from, and discount or rediscount paper with, commercial banks, in addition to its present power of borrowing from, and discounting or rediscounting with, Federal intermediate credit banks and banks for cooperatives. Clauses (a) and (b) of this section reenact existing law. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1134J.)

Section 36: Authorizes the 12 regional banks for cooperatives (1) to buy and sell interests in notes and other obligations, and (2) to borrow from, and discount or rediscount paper with, commercial banks.

This section confers upon the regional banks for cooperatives powers similar to those conferred upon the Central Bank for Cooperatives by section 35. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1134c.)

Section 37: Authorizes the Farm Credit Administration to lease and sell properties acquired in connection with loans made from the Agricultural Marketing Act revolving fund, and to pay from this fund expenses incurred in handling acquired properties pending their sale.

This section authorizes the Farm Credit Administration to sell at public or private sale to the highest responsible bidder, after such public advertisement as it may deem necessary, real or personal property acquired in connection with loans made from the Agricultural Marketing Act revolving fund, and also authorizes the leasing of such property for a period not in excess of 5 years. It further authorizes the Farm Credit Administration to pay from the revolving fund obligations and expenses incurred for the operation, upkeep, maintenance, repair, disposition, insurance, and protection of any such property. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1141b.)

Section 38: Provides that all funds derived from the sale, lease, operation, or other disposition of real and personal property acquired in connection with loans made from the Agricultural Marketing Act revolving fund shall be covered into such fund.

The purpose of this section is to definitely establish that all proceeds from the disposition of properties acquired on account of or as a result of any loan made from the revolving fund, together with all income from such properties, shall become part of the revolving fund. (Amends 12 U. S. C. 1141d.)

Section 39: Provides that the terms "debenture" and "debentures", when used in any act of Congress, whenever enacted, except the Federal Farm Loan Act, relating to the purchase, sale, or use as security, of debentures issued by or for the benefit and account of any Federal intermediate credit bank or banks, shall be deemed to mean debentures issued by any such bank individually and consolidated debentures issued by such banks acting together.

Section 40: Provides that if any provision of the act is held invalid the remainder of the act shall not be affected thereby, and reserve the right to alter, amend, or repeal the act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On objection House bill 7909 will be passed over.

PUNISHMENT FOR TRANSMITTAL OF THREATENING COMMUNICATIONS

The bill (S. 1138) to amend the statutes providing punishment for transmitting threatening communications was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That sections 1 and 2 of the act of July 8, 1932 (47 Stat. 649), as amended (U. S. C., title 18, secs. 338a and 338b), be, and the same are hereby, further amended so as to read as follows:

"SECTION 1. (a) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, to be sent or delivered by the post-office establishment of the United States, or shall knowingly cause to be delivered by the post-office establishment of the United States according to the direction thereon, any written or printed lettter or other communication, with or without a name or designating mark subscribed thereto, addressed to any other person and containing any demand or request for ransom or reward for the release of any kidnaped person; or whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall deposit, cause to be deposited, or cause to be delivered, as aforesaid, any letter or other communication containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, to be sent or delivered by the post-office establishment of the United States, or shall knowingly cause to be delivered by the post-office establishment of the United States according to the direction thereon, any written or printed letter or other communication, with or without a name or designating mark subscribed thereto, addressed to any other person and containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, to be sent or delivered by the post-office establishment of the United States, or shall knowingly cause to be delivered by the post-office establishment of the United States according to the direction thereon, any written or printed letter or other communication, with or without a name or designating mark subscribed thereto, addressed to any other person and containing any threat to injure the property or reputation of the addressee or of another, or the reputation of a deceased person, or any threat to accuse the addressee or any other person of a crime shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both.

"(d) Any person violating this section may be prosecuted in the judicial district in which such letter or other communication is deposited in such post office, station, or authorized depository for mail matter or in the judicial district into which such letter or other communication was carried by the United States mail for delivery according to the direction thereon.

"SEC. 2. (a) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, of any foreign country any written or printed letter or other communication addressed to any person within the United States for the purpose of having such communication delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to such addressee in the United States, and as a result thereof such communication is delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to the address to which it is directed in the United States, and containing any demand or request for ransom or reward for the release of any kidnaped person; or whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall deposit or cause to be deposited, as aforesaid, any letter or other communication for the purpose aforesaid, containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter, of any foreign country any written or printed letter or other communication addressed to any person in the United States for the purpose of having such communication delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to such addressee in the United States, and as a result thereof such communication is delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to the address to which it is directed in the United States, and containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of the addressee or of another shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, with intent to extort from any person any money or other thing of value, shall knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited in any post office or station thereof, or in any authorized depository for mail matter of any foreign country any written or printed letter or other communication addressed to any person within the United States for the purpose of having such communication delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to such addressee in the United States and as a result thereof such communication is delivered by the post-office establishment of such foreign country to the post-office establishment of the United States and by it delivered to the address to which it is directed in the United States, and containing any threat to injure the property or reputation of the addressee or of another, or the reputation of a deceased person, or any threat to accuse the addressee or any other person of a crime shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both.

"(d) Any person violating this section may be prosecuted either in the district into which such letter or other communication was carried by the United States mail for delivery according to the direction thereon or in which it was caused to be delivered by the United States mail to the person to whom it was addressed."

SEC. 2. That the act of May 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 781; U. S. C., title 18, sec. 408d), be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"(a) Whoever shall transmit in interstate commerce by any means whatsoever any communication containing any demand or request for a ransom or reward for the release of any kidnaped person; or whoever, with intent to extort from any person, firm, association, or corporation, any money or other thing of value, shall transmit, as aforesaid, any communication containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of another shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than 20 years, or both.

"(b) Whoever shall transmit in interstate commerce by any means whatsoever any communication containing any threat to kidnap any person or any threat to injure the person of another shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned not more than 5 years, or both.

"(c) Whoever, with intent to extort from any person, firm, association, or corporation any money or other thing of value, shall transmit in interstate commerce by any means whatsoever any communication containing any threat to injure the property or reputation of the addressee or of another or the reputation of a deceased person or any threat to accuse the addressee or any other person of a crime shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned not more than 2 years, or both.

"(d) Any person violating the provisions of this section may be prosecuted in the judicial district from or into which such threat is transmitted as aforesaid. The term 'interstate commerce', as used in this section, shall include communication from one State, Territory, or the District of Columbia to another State, Territory, or the District of Columbia."

RESIDENCE REQUIREMENTS FOR JUDGES

The bill (S. 1691) to provide that resident requirements of judges shall not be held to apply to judges who have retired or resigned, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That no provision of law requiring any judge of any court of the United States to reside in any district or circuit shall be held or considered to apply to any such judge after he shall have retired or resigned.

BILL PASSED OVER

The bill (S. 2900) to establish a fund for the insurance of mortgages securing loans for construction or reconditioning of domestic floating property used for commercial purposes was announced as next in order.

Mr. WHITE. Let that bill go over.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be passed over.

JUDSON M. GRIMMET

The bill (S. 2773) to authorize the issuance of an unrestricted patent to Judson M. Grimmet was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior shall issue an unrestricted patent for lot 7, section 14, township 18 north, range 14 west, Louisiana meridian, to Judson M. Grimmet, of Caddo Parish, La., if in his opinion such lands are neither mineral in character nor valuable for deposits of oil or gas: Provided, That said Judson M. Grimmet shall show to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior that he has acquired all the rights which passed in said land to Riley Hamilton under patent 763165.

HEIRS OF LEWIS G. NORTON

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (S. 1327) for the relief of certain purchasers of lots in Harding town site, Fla., and for the relief of the heirs of Lewis G. Norton, which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment, on page 2, after line 6, to strike out section 3, as follows:

SEC. 3. In view of the equities appearing in the decision of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida in the case of United States against Norton, no. 2885 (14 Fed. (2d) 184), the unsold lots in said Harding town site, being lot 1 of block 4, lot 6 of block 5, lot 14 of block 7, and lots 4 and 11 of block 10, are hereby granted to the heirs of Lewis G. Norton, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to issue a patent therefor to the said heirs. This grant is made in satisfaction of all claims by the heirs against the United States in connection with said town site.

So as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue a patent to any person who, as a result of an auction sale of lots in Harding town site, Fla., conducted during February 1924 by a representative of the Department of the Interior, agreed to purchase a lot in such town site and who (1) prior to the date of approval of this act, has paid to the United States 75 percent or more of the agreed purchase price of such lot, or (2) within 12 months after the date of approval of this act makes payment to the United States which, together with payment previously made, amounts to 75 percent of the agreed purchase price of such lot.

SEC. 2. As used in this act, the term "person" includes an individual, partnership, corporation, or association.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

EVERGLADES NATIONAL PARK, FLA.

The bill (H. R. 2014) to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for the establishment of the Everglades National Park in the State of Florida, and for other purposes", approved May 30, 1934, was considered, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That section 3 of the act entitled "An act to provide for the establishment of the Everglades National Park in the State of Florida, and for other purposes", approved May 30, 1934, be, and the same is hereby, amended by striking therefrom the following words: "And provided further, That the United States shall not expend any public moneys for the administration, protection, or development of the aforesaid park within a period of 5 years from the date of approval of this act."

MAMMOTH CAVE NATIONAL PARK, KY.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 5594) to make available for national-park purposes certain lands within the area of the proposed Mammoth Cave National Park, Ky., which had been reported from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys with an amendment, on page 1, line 4, after the word "otherwise", to strike out "or which hereafter may be allocated and made available", so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That all lands purchased from funds heretofore allocated and made available by Executive order, or otherwise, for the acquisition of lands for conservation or forestation purposes within the maximum boundaries of the Mammoth Cave National Park as authorized by the act of May 25, 1926 (44 Stat. 635), be, and the same are hereby, made a part of the said park as fully as if originally acquired for that purpose, and the proviso at the end of section 1 of said act of May 25, 1926, shall not be construed so as to prohibit the acquisition of lands in said area under funds made available as aforesaid.

SEC. 2. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized, in his discretion, to exclude the Great Onyx Cave and the Crystal Cave, or either of them, from the maximum boundaries of the said park, and the area required for general development of the said park by section 1 of the act of May 14, 1934 (48 Stat. 775), is hereby modified accordingly.

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

PALM SPRINGS RESERVATION, CALIF.

The bill (S. 2888) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to lease or sell certain lands of the Agua Caliente or Palm Springs Reservation, Calif., for public airport use, and for other purposes, was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That with the consent of a majority of the adult members of the Agua Caliente or Palm Springs Band of Indians, the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized in his discretion to lease or sell, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to the Board of Supervisors, Riverside County, Calif., for a public airport and other uses and purposes incidental or appurtenant thereto, all or part of section 18, township 4 south, range 5 east, San Bernardino meridian, Calif.; such lease may be assigned with the consent of the Secretary of the Interior to the city of Palm Springs if and when said city is incorporated.

SEC. 2. Any lease executed pursuant to authority contained in this act shall be for a period of time not to exceed 25 years and may be renewable in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior upon such terms and for such a period of time as he may prescribe. The renewal period, however, shall not exceed the term of the original lease. The proceeds derived from the leasing of said lands shall be distributed in per-capita payments to the properly enrolled members of the band having rights on the reservation.

SEC. 3. In the event the land is sold as herein authorized, the proceeds from such sale shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Agua Caliente or Palm Springs Band of Indians and shall draw interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum which interest shall be distributed in per-capita payments to properly enrolled members of the band.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That completes the consideration of unobjected bills on the calendar.

BRIDGES IN CADDO PARISH, LA.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill (S. 2882) to authorize the construction of bridges in Caddo Parish, La. The bill was reported this morning favorably by the Committee on Commerce. It is purely a local bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Louisiana whether the bill has the recommendation of the War Department?

Mr. ELLENDER. It has been recommended both by the War Department and the Agricultural Department.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does it involve any burden on the United States?

Mr. ELLENDER. None whatever.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the bill (S. 2882) to authorize the construction of bridges in Caddo Parish, La., was considered, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the consent of Congress is hereby granted to the State of Louisiana, the Louisiana Highway Commission, and/or to the parish of Caddo, La., and they are jointly and severally authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a free highway bridge and approaches thereto over each of the following-named streams at the following places in the parish of Caddo, La., to wit:

1. A bridge across Cross Bayou at Shreveport, La.;
2. A bridge across Twelve Mile Bayou approximately 3 miles north of Shreveport, La.;
3. A bridge across Caddo Lake at or near Mooringsport, La.;

all to be located along the proposed relocation of the State Highway Route No. 8, between Shreveport, La., and Rodessa, La., at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, and according to the provisions of an act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters", approved March 23, 1906, and subject to all conditions and limitations contained in this act.

SEC. 2. The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGE REFERRED

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWELLENBACH in the chair), as in executive session, laid before the Senate a message from the President of the United States submitting the nomination of Edward G. Dolan, of Connecticut, to be Register of the Treasury, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

EXTENSION OF AIR MAIL SERVICE

Mr. McKELLAR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 6628, being Calendar No. 1079.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Tennessee that the Senate proceed to the consideration of a bill, the title of which will be stated.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 6628) to permit the further extension of the Air Mail Service, reported without amendment.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. AUSTIN. If the motion should be agreed to, what would be the effect on the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The present occupant of the Chair is advised by the Parliamentarian that the unfinished business has been temporarily laid aside by unanimous consent until 2 o'clock Monday. The motion of the Senator from Tennessee, if agreed to, would not displace that arrangement.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Byrnes	Lodge	Schwellenbach
Ashurst	Clark	Logan	Sheppard
Austin	Connally	McGill	Steiwer
Barkley	Green	McKellar	Thomas, Okla.
Bilbo	Hatch	O'Mahoney	White
Borah	Hughes	Pepper
Bridges	King	Pope
Bulow	La Follette	Schwartz

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty-nine Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is not present.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. BARKLEY. I move that the Senate adjourn until 12 o'clock noon on Monday next.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 4 o'clock and 17 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, August 16, 1937, at 12 o'clock meridian.

NOMINATION

Executive nomination received by the Senate August 14 (legislative day of Aug. 9), 1937

REGISTER OF THE TREASURY

Edward G. Dolan, of Connecticut, to be Register of the Treasury, to fill an existing vacancy.

SENATE

MONDAY, AUGUST 16, 1937

Rev. Anson Phelps Stokes, D. D., LL. D., canon of Washington Cathedral, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, the source of all authority and power, we humbly beseech Thee that Thy wisdom may direct and guide Thy servants here assembled as representatives of the States of this Union. Grant, we beseech Thee, that, laying aside all private interests, prejudices, and secondary loyalties, they may reach their decisions with a single thought to the safety, honor, and welfare of the people of this country and the good of mankind. Grant that, as a result of the deliberations of this week in the Senate, peace, prosperity, good government, and justice may be advanced. Make us equal to our high trust; reverent in the use of freedom; just in the exercise of power; generous in the protection of the weak; careful in preserving the priceless inheritance of our constitutional government.

And while we make our prayers in a nation at peace, we would remember before Thee those parts of the world where war is waging. Grant to the President of the United States and his advisers the highest wisdom in dealing with these grave international problems. Guide all nations into the way of justice and truth, and establish among them that lasting peace which is the fruit of righteousness. In Christ's name we ask it. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. BARKLEY, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of the calendar day Saturday, August 14, 1937, was dispensed with, and the Journal was approved.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, as we resume the morning hour I note the absence of a quorum, and ask for a roll call.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Chavez	Johnson, Colo.	Pope
Andrews	Clark	King	Radcliffe
Ashurst	Connally	La Follette	Reynolds
Austin	Dieterich	Lee	Schwartz
Bankhead	Donahey	Lewis	Schwellenbach
Barkley	Ellender	Lodge	Sheppard
Berry	Frazier	Logan	Shipstead
Bilbo	George	Lonergan	Smith
Black	Gerry	Lundeen	Steiwer
Bone	Gillette	McAdoo	Thomas, Okla.
Borah	Glass	McCarran	Thomas, Utah
Bridges	Green	McGill	Townsend
Brown, Mich.	Guffey	McKellar	Truman
Brown, N. H.	Hale	Minton	Tydings
Bulkley	Harrison	Moore	Van Nuys
Bulow	Hatch	Murray	Wagner
Burke	Herring	Neely	Walsh
Byrd	Hitchcock	Nye	Wheeler
Byrnes	Holt	Overton	White
Capper	Hughes	Pepper
Caraway	Johnson, Calif.	Pittman

Mr. LEWIS. I announce that the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. DUFFY] and the Senator from Georgia [Mr. RUSSELL] are absent on official duty as members of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France.

I further announce that the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. BAILEY] and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MALONEY] are absent because of illness.

The Senator from New York [Mr. COPELAND], the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. O'MAHONEY], and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are necessarily detained from the Senate.

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. SMATHERS] is detained because of illness in his family.

Mr. AUSTIN. I announce that my colleague the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. GIBSON], as a member of the committee appointed to attend the dedication of the battle monuments in France, is absent on that official duty.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. I announce that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] is detained from the Senate because of illness.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-two Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present.

THE LATE SENATOR JOSEPH T. ROBINSON

Mrs. CARAWAY. Mr. President, that the distinguished services of the late Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, of Arkansas, our leader and my colleague, were appreciated throughout the world is attested by the number of messages expressing to this Government sincere condolence upon his death. The principal nations of the earth have joined in these expressions; and I ask that they be preserved in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD as a testimonial of the high esteem in which Senator Robinson was held by foreign nations. Copies of these telegrams and communications were received by the State Department and transmitted to the President of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, the telegrams and communications will be printed in the RECORD.

The telegrams and communications are as follows:

[Translation]

EMBASSY OF ECUADOR,
Washington, July 15, 1937.

His Excellency Mr. CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

Mr. SECRETARY: The news of the sudden death of the distinguished public man and eminent citizen of your country, the Honorable JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, United States Senator for the State of Arkansas, has reached me [bringing] deep sorrow with [it].

His virtues as a patriot and a loyal collaborator, his knowledge, the energy displayed unceasingly within the Congress, in the service of democratic ideals, were appreciated and admired by those in my country who follow with interest the progress of this great Nation.

Permit me to express to Your Excellency, and through your worthy medium, to the illustrious Government, the Congress and the people of the United States, the sincere condolences of the Government and people of Ecuador, as well as my own, on the passing of the Honorable Senator ROBINSON.

I renew to Your Excellency the assurances of my very high consideration.

C. E. ALFARO.

[Copy]

LEGATION DE LA RÉPUBLIQUE TCHÉCHOSLOVAQUE,
Washington, D. C., July 17, 1937.

His Excellency the Honorable CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

EXCELLENCY: Upon the receipt of a telegraphic message from Dr. Frantisek Soukup, President of the Czechoslovak Senate, I have the honor to request that you kindly convey to the United States Senate, the expression of sincere condolence of the Czechoslovak Parliament upon the loss of its illustrious and esteemed Member, Mr. JOSEPH TAYLOR ROBINSON.

In the absence of the Minister, I wish to add his and my personal expressions of sympathy upon the decease of Mr. ROBINSON, whom we have always held in high regard.

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

DR. JOSEF NEMECEK,
In Charge of Affairs.

[Translation]

LEGATION OF THE DOMINICAN REPUBLIC,
Washington.

The Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Dominican Republic presents his compliments to His Excellency the Secretary of State, while acknowledging receipt of His Excellency's note informing him that the funeral of Senator JOSEPH TAYLOR ROBINSON will be held in the Senate Chamber on Friday, July 16, at 12 o'clock, noon, and extending him an invitation to attend the ceremony.

The Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the Dominican Republic thanks His Excellency the Secretary of State for the invitation and avails himself of the opportunity to express to His Excellency, in his name and in the name of the Dominican Republic his sincere condolences on the death of the distinguished Senator ROBINSON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 16, 1937.

[Copy. Telegram received. Plain. From London. Undated. Received 1:30 p. m. July 16, 1937]

SECRETARY OF STATE,
Washington:

I want to express to you and to your Government my deepest sympathy for your great loss in the person of the late Senator ROBINSON.

TROYANOVSKY.

[Copy]

JAPANESE EMBASSY,
Washington.

The Japanese Ambassador presents his compliments to the honorable the Secretary of State and has the honor to acknowledge the receipt of his note of July 15, 1937, extending to him an invitation to attend the funeral services over the remains of the late Senator JOSEPH TAYLOR ROBINSON, which are to be held in the Senate Chamber of the Capitol at 12 o'clock noon on Friday, the 16th of July.

The Ambassador takes the occasion to express to the American Government his sincere sympathy for the loss it has sustained in the passing of Senator ROBINSON.

Owing to absence from Washington the Ambassador has designated Mr. Yakichiro Suma, counselor of the Embassy, to represent him at the services.

JULY 16, 1937.

[Translation]

LEGATION OF BOLIVIA,
Washington, July 15, 1937.

His Excellency Mr. CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

EXCELLENCY: In the name of the Government of Bolivia and in my own, I perform the painful duty of expressing to Your Excellency the most sincere condolence on the lamentable and unexpected death of the Honorable Senator JOSEPH TAYLOR ROBINSON, an eminent public man of great civic virtues, whose passing plunges American democracy into mourning.

Requesting Your Excellency to be good enough to accept the condolence which I have the honor to express as a demonstration of intense and deep sympathy on the part of my country and myself toward Your Excellency's country, I repeat to you the assurances of my very high and distinguished consideration.

LUIS GUACHALLA.

[Translation]

EMBASSY OF THE FRENCH REPUBLIC IN THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, July 15, 1937.

His Excellency the Honorable CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State of the United States, Washington, D. C.

MR. SECRETARY OF STATE: The Government of the French Republic and the French Nation have learned with sorrow of the sudden death of Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, majority leader in the Senate.

In conformity with instructions that I have just received, I have the honor to transmit to Your Excellency the sincere condolences of my Government on the loss which the United States of America has just experienced in the person of Mr. ROBINSON, and I should be very grateful if you would be good enough to transmit these condolences to the members of the family of the deceased Senator, as well as to the Members of the United States Senate.

Please accept, Mr. Secretary of State, the assurances of my very high consideration.

JULES HENRY.

[Copy]

ROYAL NORWEGIAN LEGATION,
Washington, D. C., July 15, 1937.

Hon. CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

SIR: It is with deep feeling that I have the honor to convey to you, and through you to the American Government, the sincere condolences of the Norwegian Government at the great loss that has been sustained through the passing away of Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON.

The Government and the people of Norway recognized in Senator ROBINSON a great and intrepid leader in that cause of democracy and social justice in which the American and the Norwegian peoples are partners.

Accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

WILHELM MORGENSTIERNE.

[Copy]

EMBAJADA DE CUBA,
Washington, D. C., July 14, 1937.

His Excellency Mr. CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington.

YOUR EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to convey to Your Excellency, in the name of my Government and in my own, the expression of deepest condolence in the unexpected and most lamentable death of Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, a profound loss to Your Excellency's country and especially to the legislative body in which he served for so many years and where he was always one of the outstanding personalities.

Accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest and most distinguished consideration.

MARTÍNEZ FRAGA.

[Copy]

LEGACION DE LOS ESTADOS UNIDOS DE VENEZUELA,
Washington, D. C., July 15, 1937.

His Excellency Mr. CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State of the United States of America,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have heard with much regret of the death of the Honorable JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, majority leader of the Senate, in whose demise the United States loses one of its most important political assets.

In the name of the Venezuelan Government and in my own name, I have the honor to ask you to be so kind as to convey to His Excellency the President Roosevelt, our sincere sympathy and accept the same expression for yourself.

I avail myself of this opportunity to renew to Your Excellency the assurance of my highest consideration.

DIÓGENES ESCALANTE.

[Copy]

REPUBLICA DE CHILE, EMBAJADA DE CHILE,
Washington, D. C., July 15, 1937.

His Excellency CORDELL HULL,
The Secretary of State, Etc., Washington, D. C.

EXCELLENCY: I have learned with great sorrow of the death of the Honorable JOSEPH TAYLOR ROBINSON, majority leader in the United States Senate, and I beg leave to convey to you in the name of my Government, a most sincere expression of sympathy in the great loss to your people and Nation.

I should be most grateful if you would also transmit this expression of sympathy to Mrs. Robinson, to whom I venture, also, to offer my personal condolences.

Accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

M. TRUCCO.

[Copy]

IRISH FREE STATE LEGATION,
Washington, D. C., July 14, 1937.

The Honorable CORDELL HULL,
The Secretary of State of the United States,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have the honor to inform you that my Government have heard with profound regret of the death of majority floor leader, Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, and have instructed me to convey to the Government of the United States and to the family of the deceased their sincere sympathy.

Accept, sir, the assurance of my highest consideration.

M. MACWHITE.

[Copy]

LEGACIÓN DE GUATAMALA,
Washington, D. C., July 14, 1937.

His Excellency CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

EXCELLENCY: On behalf of the Government of Guatemala I have the honor to convey through you to the Government of the United States of America its expression of profound sorrow and regret at the great loss which it has been called upon to sustain in the death of the Honorable JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, senior Senator from the State of Arkansas.

Please accept, Your Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

ADRIAN RECINOS.

[Copy]

LEGACION DE NICARAGUA,
Washington, D. C., July 14, 1937.

His Excellency the Honorable CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

EXCELLENCY: I have the honor to express to Your Excellency on behalf of my Government and of this Legation the most sincere condolences on the death of the distinguished statesman, the Honorable JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, Senator of the United States, and offer my deepest sympathy to Your Excellency's Government and to the people of your country on their loss.

Accept, Excellency, the renewed assurances of my highest esteem and consideration.

C. BRENES JARQUÍN.

[Copy]

ROYAL BULGARIAN LEGATION,
Washington, D. C., July 14, 1937.

The Honorable Mr. CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

SIR: I have learned with great regret about the passing of the late majority leader of the Senate, Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON.

For his important and long-continued service in shaping the Nation's affairs, I wish to express to Your Excellency and to the American Government my participation in the national mourning and to request Your Excellency to transmit to the family of the late Senator ROBINSON my heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement.

I avail myself of this opportunity to reiterate to Your Excellency the assurance of my highest consideration.

D. A. NAOUMOFF,
Minister of Bulgaria.

[Copy]

SPANISH EMBASSY,
Washington, 15 de Julio de 1937.

His Excellency CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

EXCELLENCY: On behalf of the Spanish Government and myself I have the honor to express to Your Excellency the deepest and most sincere condolences on the death of the Honorable JOSEPH TAYLOR ROBINSON, late a Senator in Congress from the State of Arkansas.

Accept, Your Excellency, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

ENRIQUE CARLOS DE LA CASA.

[Translation]

EMBASSY OF MEXICO,
Washington, D. C., July 14, 1937.

His Excellency Mr. CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, etc.

Mr. SECRETARY: Today's press announces the unexpected death of the Senator from the State of Arkansas and the majority leader, JOSEPH T. ROBINSON.

Knowing the antecedents of the illustrious deceased, as well as the prominent role which he had been playing in Congress, and the valuable services which he had rendered to his country throughout a long political career, I wish to express to Your Excellency's Government my most sincere regret.

I avail myself of this opportunity to again assure Your Excellency of my highest and most distinguished consideration.

F. CASTILLO NÁJERA.
Ambassador.

[Copy]

The Honorable CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I wish to express to you and to request you to convey to the President and the Senate sincere personal condolences and those of my Government over the death of Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON. His passing is a great loss to the country which he has served with such distinction.

Sincerely yours,

C. OUMANSKY, Chargé d'Affaires.

[Copy]

ROYAL EGYPTIAN LEGATION,
Washington, D. C., July 15, 1935.

The Honorable CORDELL HULL,
Secretary of State, Department of State,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: On behalf of the Egyptian Government I wish to express to you sincere condolences on the death of the late Senator JOSEPH T. ROBINSON, of Arkansas.

In losing Senator ROBINSON the United States has lost a great leader and statesman and an outstanding citizen who devoted his entire life to the service of his country and his people. Egypt shares the sorrow of the American people in this great bereavement.

Accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

ANIS AZER.

NOMINATION OF SENATOR BLACK TO THE SUPREME COURT

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, I send to the desk, to be inserted in the RECORD, a letter from Hon. Jacob Weiss, of Indianapois, Ind., concerning the appointment of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] to the Supreme Court. Mr. Weiss is a distinguished lawyer and one of the leading Jews of the State of Indiana.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CHICAGO, August 14, 1937.

Hon. SHERMAN MINTON,
United States Senator from Indiana,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SHAY: According to this morning's Chicago Tribune, the opposition to the appointment of Senator BLACK are undertaking to build up a simulated disagreement with the President's nomination of Senator BLACK for the Supreme Court. It seems that the accusation will be that Senator BLACK was at some time a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Paradoxically, the methods to be employed by these defenders of racial rights and integrity are now employing the ill-famed methods of the long-forgotten Ku Klux Klan. The opposition would arouse race prejudice at a moment when this country needs most a dispassioned approach to matters of national polity

As the president of the Indianapolis Zionist district and an active Jew in all Jewish undertakings, I hurry to decry the methods of the opposition to Senator BLACK's confirmation.

It would be un-Jewish, as it is certainly un-American, to employ the methods now resorted to by those who would gain their ends through any means.

When Senator BLACK was in Indiana last summer I had the opportunity to visit with him and become acquainted with him. As an American Jew, zealous of the preservation of the traditional American ideals, and as one interested in the happiness and prosperity of the American people, I have watched with great interest every action of Senator BLACK in the United States Senate. I find that his every action has been commendable and one which every liberty-loving American, and certainly every Jew, must find to be agreeable with everything true and beautiful in the American scene.

Shay, I urge you to use your best efforts to expose the sham and insincerity of those who would now hold that Senator BLACK has a Ku Klux Klan background.

They who employ such methods to defeat the gracing of the Supreme Bench by so fine a liberal American as Senator BLACK is ought to be shamed and humiliated by exposing their lack of understanding of the fundamentals of American ideals. Certainly they are not friends of the Jewish people.

Shay, I beg you to pardon my officiousness in this particular, but after reading the article in the Chicago Tribune this morning I felt impelled to give you my reaction, and I am sure I voice the opinion of thinking Jews in this particular.

With kindest personal regards, I am,

Cordially and sincerely,

JACOB WEISS.

INDIAN LANDS IN ARIZONA

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2188) to amend section 3 of the act of June 18, 1934 (48 Stat. 984–988), relating to Indian lands in Arizona.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma. Mr. President, I move that the Senate disagree to the amendment of the House of Representatives, request a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, Mr. HATCH, and Mr. FRAZIER conferees on the part of the Senate.

ORDER TO DISPENSE WITH CALL OF THE CALENDAR

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that, following the routine morning business, the call of the calendar be dispensed with today, inasmuch as it was called on Saturday last.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE—ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. Megill, one of its clerks, announced that the Speaker had affixed his signature to the enrolled bill (H. R. 7022) to provide for the establishment of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore in the State of North Carolina, and for other purposes, and it was signed by the Vice President.

WASHINGTON AIRPORT—MOTION TO RECONSIDER

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote on the passage of House bill 7985, to promote air commerce by providing for the enlargement of Washington Airport, and I move that the House of Representatives be requested to return the bill to the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The motion of the Senator from Utah will be entered, and, without objection, the motion requesting the House of Representatives to return the bill is agreed to.

VIRGINIA DARE CELEBRATION, ROANOKE ISLAND, N. C.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is in receipt of a communication from the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. MCKELLAR] tendering his resignation as a member on the part of the Senate of the Joint Congressional Committee appointed to represent the Congress at the three hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare, at Roanoke Island, N. C., on the 18th instant, and appoints the Senator from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] to fill the vacancy.

OPERATIONS OF HOME OWNERS' LOAN CORPORATION IN PENNSYLVANIA (S. DOC. NO. 92, PT. 2)

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a letter from the vice chairman of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation, transmitting, in further response to Senate Resolution 157 (submitted by Mr. DAVIS and agreed to July 27, 1937), data setting forth the name, title, salary, and address of employees of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation in the State of Pennsylvania offices during the fiscal years 1934, 1935, and 1936, which, with the accompanying papers, was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

PETITIONS

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate resolutions and telegrams embodying resolutions from the Civitan Club, of Birmingham, Ala., the organizing committee of the Utica (N. Y.) Joint Board of Textile Workers, and the Young Democratic Club of Duval County, Fla., favoring the prompt comfirmation of the nomination of HUGO L. BLACK, of Alabama, to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also laid before the Senate resolutions adopted by a convention of the Five Civilized Tribes, in the State of Oklahoma, favoring the enactment of certain pending legislation for the benefit of members of the Five Civilized Tribes, which were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

He also laid before the Senate a resolution adopted by the executive committee of the Finnish Workers Federation of New York City, N. Y., favoring the enactment of the so-called Schwellenbach resolution, being the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 176) favoring employment by the Works Progress Administration of persons unable to find employment in private industry, which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, I present for appropriate reference a petition addressed to the Congress of the United States, signed by a group of citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., praying that they be afforded certain protection, and with it I should like also to submit for appropriate reference a letter addressed to me transmitting the petition.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The petition and letter of transmittal will be received and referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and the petition will be duly noted.

(The petition of sundry citizens, being nonstriking employees of the Apex Hosiery Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., presented by Mr. BRIDGES, prays that they be afforded protection, as guaranteed by the Constitution, and alleged to be denied them by law-enforcing officers, and also prays for a Congressional investigation to determine the facts involved in the above-referred-to strike and labor situation.)

APPROPRIATION FOR UNITED STATES CONSTITUTION SESQUICENTENNIAL COMMISSION—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. VAN NUYS submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 363) to authorize an additional appropriation to further the work of the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, and 4, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"Any funds heretofore or hereafter made available to the United States Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission for carrying out the functions imposed upon such Commission by or pursuant to law may be expended by the Commission for printing and binding outside the Government Printing Office and such objects as the Commission may deem necessary and proper to accomplish the purposes of such functions: Provided, That this provision shall not be construed as waiving the requirement for the submission of accounts and vouchers to the General Accounting Office for audit."

And the Senate agree to the same.

FREDERICK VAN NUYS,
EDWARD R. BURKE,
WM. E. BORAH,
Managers on the part of the Senate.
KENT E. KELLER,
ROBERT T. SECREST,
Managers on the part of the House.

Subsequently, on motion by Mr. BURKE, the report was agreed to.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

Mr. TOWNSEND, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon;

H. R. 4257. A bill for the relief of H. A. Montgomery (Rept. No. 1204);

H. R. 4622. A bill for the relief of Henry Clay Gibson (Rept. No. 1205);

H. R. 4875. A bill for the relief of Paul H. Norboe (Rept. No. 1206);

H. R. 4936. A bill for the relief of Charlotte Sweeney, a minor, Howard Sweeney, a minor, William Hintz, and Martha Hintz (Rept. No. 1207);

H. R. 5112. A bill for the relief of Frank Lee Borney (Rept. 1208); and

H. R. 6574. A bill for the relief of E. W. Ross (Rept. No. 1209).

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH, from the Committee on Claims, to which were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment and submitted reports thereon:

H. R. 4506. A bill for the relief of Norman E. Sherman and Banks W. Smith (Rept. No. 1210);

H. R. 4583. A bill for the relief of Arthur T. Worley (Rept. No. 1211);

H. R. 5161. A bill for the relief of the Puget Sound Bridge & Dredging Co. (Rept. No. 1212);

H. R. 5431. A bill for the relief of Cyrus M. Lasher (Rept. 1213);

H. R. 5568. A bill for the relief of Maj. William W. McCaw (Rept. No. 1214); and

H. R. 8081. A bill authorizing the Comptroller General of the United States to allow credit in the accounts of disbursing officers for overpayments of wages on Civil Works Administration projects and waiving recovery of such overpayments (Rept. No. 1215).

Mr. STEIWER, from the Committee on Public Lands and Surveys, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 195) to convey certain lands to Clackamas County, Oreg., for public-park purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1217) thereon.

Mr. THOMAS of Oklahoma, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 2326) to amend the act, as amended, entitled "An act to refer the claims of the Delaware Indians to the Court of Claims, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States", approved February 7, 1925, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1218) thereon.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 3162) conferring jurisdiction upon the United States Court of Claims to hear, examine, adjudicate, and render judgment on any and all claims which the Uncompahgre (Tabegauche), Uintah (Unita), and White River (Yampa and Grand River) Bands of the Ute Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 1219) thereon.

Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which was referred the bill (S. 2190) to protect producers, manufacturers, and consumers from the unrevealed presence of substitutes and mixtures in woven or knitted fabrics and in garments or articles of apparel made therefrom, and for other purposes, reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1216) thereon.

INVESTIGATION OF RADIO BROADCASTING—REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON INTERSTATE COMMERCE

Mr. WHEELER, from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, to which was referred the resolution (S. Res. 149) authorizing an investigation and study of the broadcasting industry, of broadcasting in the United States, and of interstate and foreign communication by radio (submitted by Mr. WHITE on July 6, 1937), reported it with an amendment and submitted a report (No. 1203) thereon; and, under the rule, the resolution was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

Mrs. CARAWAY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that on August 13, 1937, that committee presented to the President of the United States the following enrolled bills:

S. 2520. An act declaring Bayou Savage, also styled Bayou Chantilly, in the city of New Orleans, La., a nonnavigable stream; and

S. 2639. An act to authorize the Secretary of War to lease the Fort Schuyler Military Reservation, N. Y.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. BYRNES:

A bill (S. 2970) to provide for reorganizing agencies of the Government, extending the classified civil service, establishing a General Auditing Office and a Department of Welfare, and for other purposes; to the Select Committee on Government Organization.

By Mr. PEPPER:

A bill (S. 2971) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to exchange sites for Coast Guard purposes; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. MOORE:

A bill (S. 2972) to reduce the rate of interest on obligations of home owners to the Home Owners' Loan Corporation; and to allow the Home Owners' Loan Corporation to extend the period of amortization of home loans from 15 to 20 years; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. REYNOLDS:

A bill (S. 2973) for the relief of the Continental Petroleum Co. of Delaware;

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 209) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims concerning a claim of the Continental Petroleum Co. of Delaware; and

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 210) for the relief of the Continental Petroleum Co. of Delaware; to the Committee on Claims.

REGULATION OF AIR TRANSPORTATION—AMENDMENT

Mr. ANDREWS submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 2) to amend the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended, by providing for the regulation of the transportation of passengers and property by aircraft in interstate commerce, and for other purposes, which was ordered to lie on the table and to be printed.

IMPORT DUTIES ON TEXTILES

Mr. STEIWER submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 177), which was ordered to lie over under the rule:

Resolved, That the United States Tariff Commission is requested to transmit to the Senate not later than January 15, 1938, its recommendations with respect to the desirability of fixing the import duties on textiles on a basis of specific rates, subject to the limitations of existing ad-valorem rates, for the purpose of providing a more nearly equal competitive basis between countries having high costs of production and countries having low costs of production, in exporting textiles to the United States.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORPORATION

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the body of the RECORD a brief of facts concerning the activities of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The brief presents a comprehensive survey of the Corporation's activities.

There being no objection, the brief was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FACTS CONCERNING FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE

I. Organization of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation: The Corporation was organized September 11, 1933, pursuant to provisions of the Banking Act of 1933, approved by the President June 16, 1933. Mr. Leo T. Crowley, of Wisconsin, as Chairman; Mr. Phillips Lee Goldsborough, of Maryland; and Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, comprise the Corporation's board of directors. The administrative organization of the Corporation is shown graphically and discussed in the Corporation's annual report for 1936.

II. Insurance coverage: On June 30, 1937, every depositor in 13,887 commercial banks (more than 93 percent of all commercial banks in the country) was protected to a maximum of $5,000 against loss on his deposits. It is estimated that insured accounts number 55,000,000 and that 98½ percent of this number are fully protected by the $5,000 individual insurance limit. Of the $50,000,000,000 of deposits in insured commercial banks, $22,000,000,000 are protected by insurance.

III. Financial aspects: The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is capitalized at $289,299,556.99, of which $150,000,000 was subscribed by the United States Treasury and the balance by the 12 Federal Reserve banks. The Corporation's income is derived from two sources. Insured banks pay assessments amounting to one-twelfth of 1 percent of their average total deposits each year. Revenue from this source now brings in about $39,000,000 annually. Income from investment of the Corporation's capital and surplus now amounts to, roughly, $9,000,000 a year. The annual outlay for administrative expenses is only about $2,500,000. On June 30, 1937, the surplus of the Corporation, representing an excess of income over administrative expenses and deposit insurance losses and expenses, was about $75,000,000. So far the Corporation's income from investments has been more than sufficient to cover all losses and expenses. Consequently, the Corporation's capital and its assessment receipts remain intact.

In case of necessity arising through deposit insurance losses, the Corporation is empowered to issue its debentures to the extent of about $1,000,000,000. A par market to a maximum of $500,000,000 for these debentures is to be provided by the Treasury and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

IV. Closed insolvent insured banks: From the beginning of deposit insurance through June 30, 1937, 132 insolvent insured banks were placed in receivership or were merged with the aid of loans by the Corporation. The 179,601 depositors in these banks, with total deposits of $51,755,000, were protected to the extent of $47,598,000, or more than 90 percent of their claims, by insurance, pledge of security, preferment, or offset. All but 488, or less than one-half of 1 percent, of the depositors in suspended banks were fully protected against loss. Of the 132 banks, 96, with deposits of $26,358,000, were placed in receivership, and 36, with deposits of $25,397,000, were merged with other banks with the aid of loans and purchases of assets by the Corporation amounting to $11,845,000. Payment of the claims of depositors in insured banks placed in receivership has been begun by the Corporation in every case within 10 days after the receivership became final.

Under the law the Corporation must act as receiver for all insured national banks which fail, and may act as receiver for closed insured State banks when so designated by State authorities. On June 30, 1937, the Corporation was serving as receiver for 6 closed national banks and for 19 closed State banks.

V. Supervision of insured banks: By giving to the Corporation an assessment income only one-third as great as would have been required to cover losses up to $5,000 for each depositor had deposit insurance been in effect from 1865 to 1934. Congress has laid upon the Corporation a mandate to improve greatly the effectiveness of bank supervision and the quality of banking standards and practices. The Corporation attempts to fulfill this mandate through its exercise of the following powers: (a) To select the institutions composing its membership; (b) to supervise the operations of insured banks; and (c) to terminate the insured status of any insured institution for cause.

The Corporation is empowered to pass upon the application for admission to insurance of every bank not a member of the Federal Reserve System. Applying banks are judged upon the following factors: (a) The financial history and condition of the bank; (b) the adequacy of its capital structure; (c) its future earnings prospects; (d) the general character of its management; (e) the convenience and needs of the community to be served by the bank; and (f) whether or not its corporate powers are consistent with the purposes of the Federal deposit insurance law.

With respect to bank members of the Federal Reserve System, the law reads that each such bank "shall be an insured bank from the time it is authorized to commence or resume business or becomes a member of the Federal Reserve System."

The Corporation's field forces examine at least once a year each insured State bank not a member of the Federal Reserve System. The reports of examination are reviewed and analyzed in the Washington office. Summaries of the examinations of insured banks members of the Federal Reserve System are furnished by the Comptroller of the Currency and the board of governors for review by the Corporation. Amicable relations with State bank supervisors have been fostered by the Corporation's willingness to make joint or alternate examinations with State authorities in order to minimize the expense and annoyance to both insured banks and State banking departments. Regular and special examinations made by the Corporation now number about 7,900 a year.

When continued indulgence in unsafe or unsound practices or violations of law by an insured bank are disclosed by examination of that bank, the Corporation is required by law to notify the appropriate supervisory authority. The offending bank is allowed a maximum of 120 days in which to correct the criticized practice or violation. If reexamination at the end of this period indicates that the required correction has not been made, the insured status of the bank may, after a hearing, be terminated. To June 30, 1937, 41 banks had been cited to supervisory authorities and the insured status of 1 bank had been terminated.

OUR HERITAGE—ADDRESS BY DR. JOHN M. THOMAS

[Mr. AUSTIN asked and obtained leave to have printed in the RECORD an address entitled "Our Heritage", delivered by Dr. John M. Thomas, former president of Middlebury College, on the occasion of the dedication of old First Church of Bennington, as Vermont's colonial shrine, on Aug. 15, 1937, which appears in the Appendix.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business is closed.

AMERICAN TROOPS IN CHINA—ASSERTED CONSENT TO ENGLAND TO USE UNITED STATES TROOPS

Mr. LEWIS. Mr. President, with the consent of the Chair and the Senate I beg the privilege of intruding at this point and addressing the Senate for a few moments on the situation of the United States in China.

The public press informs us of a very regretful and what appears to be a very serious situation in China as to Americans as well as to the world. I have on a previous occasion taken the liberty to address this honorable body recounting what I felt was the necessity for bringing home the American soldiers now in China.

I beg to call attention that as to that some suggestions have been made by the able Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN], chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, in a late informing address to the Senate as to some necessity directed by diplomacy for retaining the troops in their present position. I am moved this morning to note that in a wireless message to the Government we are informed from London that a combination policy will be maintained by the British Government in collaboration with the United States as to China. As to Japan the open statement is made that the question of putting economic pressure on Japan is under consideration, but not until a "united front with the United States" is achieved.

Mr. President, I am moved to ask what is keeping our soldiers in China. Has it come to the point that there are those who are so audacious, whether in the Orient or in America, professing to be officers of the Government of the United States, who have pledged to England that we will keep our soldiers in China that they may participate in any conflict which may be necessary with regard to maintaining the property of England situated in China? We hope England will be able to keep her property, her rightful property, and protect her people; but we cannot understand why it should be even suggested that the troops of the United States be kept in China for the purpose of uniting with any troops of any foreign country or to enter into conflict or possibly engage in China in the war strife between China and Japan.

Mr. President, I called attention but a day or two past to what I felt was the need for moving our troops out of China—to reinstate them where American possessions may be served by them whenever necessary. I ask Senators if they will bear with me a moment to recall General Hagood, of South Carolina, late a major general of the United States Army. General Hagood was lately held up in this body as a very eminent soldier, praised by the Senate, and approved by the President of the United States. I read from his book just published, page 25:

> After the Boxer Rebellion in 1900, the allied forces, more particularly the Americans, the British, the French, the Germans, and the Japanese, left some troops in Tientsin for the purpose of guarding the railroad from that city to Peking, 150 miles to the north, thus insuring, in case of another such uprising, a safe exit for the foreign ambassadors. Since that time the Chinese have developed modern armies. Some of their officers have graduated from West Point and our service schools as well as from the military schools of other countries. They have airplanes, all of the other military appliances, and 2,000,000 men under arms. The Japanese have expanded their garrison at Tientsin until it takes a lieutenant general to command it. How many other troops the Japanese have in China would be hard to say.
>
> But our two little battalions of Infantry still hold on. America, as usual, would not take a slice of the international settlement; we even gave back the Boxer indemnity. As a result, our soldiers as well as our officers and their families, our military stores, and our weapons are billeted in rented apartments.
>
> No known military reason exists for keeping this little handful of soldiers in China. It is said that they are there for diplomatic reasons. If that be so, then the reasons are bad.
>
> At any rate, if America is going to get its mind upon its own military situation, if it wants to remove all possible causes of irritation to others, if it wants to make America safe for Americans and let the rest of the world make itself safe for itself, a good beginning would be to take these troops out of China. It will save the taxpayers a tidy sum and put these men back where they belong.

Mr. President, I offer these comments from General Hagood as expressing my own thoughts, and naturally as confirming those I have previously expressed to this body.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Illinois yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. LEWIS. I gladly yield.

Mr. CLARK. I have listened with great interest to, and very largely in complete agreement with, the remarks of the distinguished Senator from Illinois, but I should like to ask the Senator why he confines his remarks in this international crisis to the question of American military forces rather than military and naval forces?

I am informed there are at the present time in Chinese waters 39 American vessels of war, whose total cost or total value to the United States is probably in excess of the approximately $200,000,000 of investments we have in China. When it comes to a question of involvement of the United States in war it seems to me the withdrawal of this rather large naval force should go hand-in-hand with the withdrawal of the military forces which, as the Senator has already explained, there is not and never has been any real reason for maintaining in China.

Mr. LEWIS. I acknowledge with a sense of indebtedness the wise suggestion of the Senator from Missouri, but I reply by saying that as to the soldiers around Tientsin I naturally feel and greatly fear that if there should be a conflict between those soldiers and the Japanese soldiers there would be brought on a result serious to the United States. I, therefore, felt that bringing our soldiers out would rescue us from a complication which seems imminent.

As to the Navy, I join my able friend from Missouri heartily. I wish to have those waters cleared completely of the American Navy under present conditions, for that likewise may involve us in a very serious result. But I assume from the morning's reports that our naval ships are being used at the present time for the purpose of transporting Americans out of China and giving them a temporary habitation and refuge on the ships until they can be landed at some place of their own selection.

Mr. CLARK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield further?

Mr. LEWIS. Certainly.

Mr. CLARK. I think the present employment of those ships in removing Americans from the danger zones is entirely proper. The Senator is aware of the fact that we habitually maintain in those waters a very considerable naval force. I suggest to the Senator, while it is entirely true that the involvement of American troops or American marines in conflict with either Japanese or Chinese troops would be a very serious international complication; that it would be a no less serious complication if an American battleship or an American cruiser or an American gunboat should happen to be hit by a bomb from either the Japanese or the Chinese aviation forces.

Mr. LEWIS. It may be, and, of course, it must be, that there are dangers from either point of view. I have expressed my views as to the soldiers because, previously, I have spoken on that subject; and at this time I had wanted to bring to bear, in fortification and sustenance of my previous expressions, the treatise written by the eminent soldier of war, General Hagood, who served in China, as we all recall. I thank Senators for honoring me with their attention for the moment, as I invite attention to the fact that I served in a not particularly important matter in China and there beheld, as many Senators have, that our United States compound in China is not as large as the Government grounds surrounding the National Capitol. The mere suggestion that the reason for holding those soldiers is upon the theory of protecting that land and holding it there for the Government is perfectly absurd.

I conclude by asking this question: I should like to know what sources there are, in the Orient or elsewhere, that have assumed to intimate to any foreign government that the United States will hold its forces, Army or Navy, to collaborate with and conjoin any foreign country in any action in the Orient it may find necessary to itself. As much as we should like to help any country avoid trouble, I cannot conceive that the War Department here in America, or the Navy Department at Washington, or, sir, the diplomatic department, and never the President, could give their approval to those, whoever they are, that have licensed these officials from foreign nations to say from London that they are arranging and have arranged that these matters of action in China of outside nations shall await "further development and union within the United States."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LEWIS. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. I did not have the pleasure of hearing the opening remarks of my friend from Illinois. I inquire whether or not in his remarks he had occasion to advert to the Four Power Treaty, the Nine Power Treaty, and the Kellogg-Briand Pact, all of which imposed obligations upon Japan as well as upon China, and more or less of obligations upon the United States, or, at any rate, gave to the United States opportunity to confer with Japan or any other nation whose action affected the status quo in the Pacific. I was wondering if the Senator had cognizance of those matters in the observations he made this morning.

Mr. LEWIS. I answer my able friend by saying that I not only have cognizance of the matters to which he refers, but I have had occasion to call attention to the fact that the nine-power pact to which my friend alludes—a very illustrious document in its reading—has received no obedience from the countries party to it. It has not protected us in any respect. It has been completely ignored; and as far as that is concerned, sir, the administrations in power here have frankly conceded, under the various Secretaries of State, that they were impotent to carry out those provisions for lack, I may say to my able friend, of the cooperation of the very signers themselves.

Now, as to the Kellogg Pact: The Kellogg Pact, it is true, declared that war should not be the policy of nations, and prescribed the dream that we should have peace by simply notifying all nations to join in our efforts. I see that our honorable Secretary of State has lately addressed communications to the different nations of the world asking their cooperation in a similar enterprise of peace. I hope he will have success. I deplore to have to revive to his mind that Mr. Bryan, the Secretary of State under President Wilson, negotiated an apparently very similar move; and the final result was that not one paid heed to it as we approached the World War; but, as we recall, we were led further to distraction, and ultimately into confusion, and then into the conflict.

I answer my friend from Utah that instead of getting benefit from some of these agreements, I fear that we have entered into the agreements with promise, but realized literally the expression that we recall of Macbeth of the witches making the promise to the ear to break it to the hope.

I say, yes; the able Senator is quite right. There were agreements of that nature entered into, and could they be fulfilled it would be well for our land and for peace everywhere. But I ask my able friend, the Senator from Utah, does he not realize that now, while these countries are at war, and there is no manner of asking them to enforce that which we could not ourselves enforce, it would be unfair to hold them responsible for the violation of purely civil compacts? Therefore, is not this the time to take such steps as we find necessary to avoid ourselves being drawn into military confusion that may mean conflict for the United States?

I hope no one professing to be an officer of the United States, either here or in the Orient, will assume to make any arrangements with any foreign country that pledges our forces to come to the aid of any land abroad for the preservation of its possessions somewhere else in the world. America must remain America, and for that she must remain American. All hands for all for peace—no American arms to any for war.

PREVENTION AND CONTROL OF FLOODS

Mrs. CARAWAY. Mr. President, I introduced Senate Joint Resolution 57, to authorize submission to Congress of a comprehensive national plan for the prevention and control of floods of all the major rivers of the United States. Representative McCLELLAN had introduced a similar resolution in the House.

My resolution was reported favorably by the Committee on Commerce. It passed the Senate, and was amended in the committee in the House to include not only a report on a flood-control plan, but a report on a plan for soil-conservation, hydroelectric power development, and soil-erosion control.

The resolution as amended passed the House and was returned to the Senate. It was my understanding that the amendments were agreeable to the President. I made a motion to concur in the House amendments, and the resolution was again passed in the Senate. The President, under date of August 13, returned the joint resolution without his approval. The resolution provided that the plan should be prepared by the Army engineers who have heretofore been in charge of flood-control matters.

As I see it, the report of the Army engineers would in no way be binding on the Congress. In the last analysis, Congress would have to enact all legislation seeking to cover these subjects, and could take into consideration not only the reports called for by my resolution but reports from other agencies. The President feels that the Corps of Army Engineers alone is not sufficient to formulate a plan so comprehensive in scope. He does not say that the objective of the joint resolution can be attained without any legislation whatever, but he admits the need for such a broad plan; and I am much pleased that he says:

> I propose to present to the Congress in January a comprehensive national plan for flood control and prevention and the development of water and soil conservation.

That having been my idea in introducing the resolution, I am content. Immediate action for the prevention of loss of life and property is what we most want.

EXTENSION OF AGRICULTURAL CREDIT PROVISIONS

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 7909, Calendar No. 1240.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The clerk will state the title of the bill.

The CHIEF CLERK. A bill (H. R. 7909) to amend the Federal Farm Loan Act, to amend the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, to amend the Farm Credit Act of 1933, to amend the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, to amend the Agricultural Marketing Act, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY].

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceed to consider the bill H. R. 7909, which had been reported from the Committee on Banking and Currency without amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY obtained the floor.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, when this bill was reached on the calendar the other day it was passed over. I shall be glad if the Senator will explain the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, this is purely an administrative bill with reference to the Farm Credit Administration. During the past 3 or 4 years various purely technical changes have been found to be necessary in the administration of the Farm Credit Act, and they have been very carefully worked out by the Farm Credit Administration.

The bill passed the House without, I think, a dissenting vote. It came over to the Senate, was referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency, and then was referred to a subcommittee of which I happened to be chairman, and of which the Senator from Delaware [Mr. HUGHES] was a member, and other Senators whom I need not name. We had a detailed explanation of the bill before the subcommittee by the Governor and the General Counsel of the Farm Credit Administration. We reported the bill favorably to the full committee by unanimous vote of the subcommittee. Then the full committee had before them the Governor of the Federal Farm Credit Administration and the general counsel, and they again went into the details of the bill as they had done before the subcommittee, and again the full committee unanimously reported the bill out for consideration.

The bill makes certain changes of a purely technical and administrative character in the administration of the Farm Credit Act. Among them, it restores the method of choosing the directors of the farm credit associations. It allows the Farm Credit Administration to extend the time within which outstanding loans to farmers by the farm-loan banks may be paid back. It seems to me it is a very desirable bill. While it is a long bill so far as pages and sections go, I assure the Senate that the subcommittee and the full Committee on Banking and Currency gave the bill very careful consideration; and I hope it will be enacted.

Mr. McGILL. Mr. President——

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. McGILL. How does the new bill provide for the selection of the board of directors by the Federal Farm Credit Administration?

Mr. BARKLEY. Prior to the Emergency Act of 1933, the law provided for the appointment of three directors by the Farm Credit Administration, three by the farm-loan associations, and a seventh from a list to be submitted by farm-loan organizations. Under the act of 1933 the Federal Government put quite a large sum of money into the farm-loan banks in order that they might function, and it was felt that a majority of the directors, four out of seven, ought to represent the Government. That is the existing status. The bill restores the selection to the method which existed for 19 years prior to 1933, and in fact gives the farm organizations four out of the seven directors instead of the Government having four out of the seven.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator one question?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. KING. Is there any provision in the bill which would modify in any way the views recently expressed by the President of the United States in his veto message?

Mr. BARKLEY. No; the bill does not deal with that subject at all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill (H. R. 7909) was ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That this act may be cited as the "Farm Credit Act of 1937."

SEC. 2. Section 4 (b) of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1020d) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"When in the judgment of the directors conditions justify it, the Corporation shall have power to extend, in whole or in part, any unpaid obligation under the terms of any mortgage, and to accept payment of any such obligation, together with interest thereon, at a rate not exceeding 5 percent per annum, during such period and in such amounts as may be agreed upon at the date of making such extension."

SEC. 3. Section 31 (a) of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933 (48 Stat. 47), as amended, is amended by striking out all prior to the first proviso and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"(a) The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation is authorized and directed to make available to the land-bank commissioner until July 1, 1938, out of the funds of the Corporation, the sum of $2,000,000, to be used for the purpose of making loans to the joint-stock land banks organized and doing business under the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended. Loans made by the land-bank commissioner under this section shall be made in the name and on behalf of the Corporation and shall bear interest at a rate not to exceed 4 percent per annum. No loan shall be made under this section to any joint-stock land bank except for the purpose of obtaining, for a period of 1 year from the date on which the loan is made, postponement of the foreclosure of first mortgages held by such bank on account of (1) default in the payment of interest and principal due under the terms of the mortgage, and (2) unpaid delinquent taxes, excluding interest and penalties, which may be secured by the lien of said mortgages:".

SEC. 4. The first sentence of section 4 (b) of the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1020d), is amended to read as follows: "The Corporation is further authorized to purchase from time to time, for cash, such consolidated farm loan bonds at such prices and upon such terms as may be approved by the board of directors of the Corporation; to make loans to Federal land banks and joint-stock land banks on the security of real-estate mortgages, sheriff's certificates, sales contracts, and real estate, upon such terms and conditions as shall be prescribed by the board of directors of the corporation: Provided, however, That loans outstanding to joint-stock land banks under this subsection shall not at any one time exceed in the aggregate $10,000,000; to make loans to Federal land banks on the security of consolidated farm-loan bonds; and to invest its funds in mortgage loans made under section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended."

SEC. 5. (a) There shall be 12 districts in the continental United States, excluding Alaska, which shall be known as farm credit districts, and may be designated by number. The boundaries of the 12 Federal land bank districts existing as of the date of enactment of this act shall be the boundaries of the respective farm credit districts. Such boundaries may be readjusted from time to time in the discretion of the Farm Credit Administration, provided that said districts shall be apportioned with due regard to the farm credit needs of the country and no such district shall contain a fractional part of any State. The designations "Federal land bank district" and "land bank district" wherever used in the Federal Farm Loan Act, or in any act amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, are changed to "farm credit" district" and shall hereafter be deemed to refer to the farm credit districts provided for in this section.

(b) There shall be in each farm credit district a farm credit board, which shall be selected as hereinafter specified and shall be composed of seven members. Each farm credit board shall include in its title the name of the city in which the Federal land bank, Federal intermediate credit bank, production credit corporation and regional bank for cooperatives of the district are located. Three of the members of said board shall be known as elected directors of whom one shall be chosen by national farm-loan associations and borrowers through agencies, one shall be chosen by production credit associations of the district and one shall be chosen by cooperatives which are stockholders or subscribers to the guaranty fund of the regional bank for cooperatives in the district. Three of the seven members shall be known as district directors, of whom two shall be appointed by the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration and one, who shall be known as the third district director, shall be chosen as hereafter in this section provided. The seventh member of such board shall be known as director at large and shall be appointed by the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration.

(c) The directors of the Federal land bank of each district who are in office on the date of enactment of this act shall constitute the farm credit board of the district and shall serve as members thereof for the remaining portions of the terms for which they were respectively elected or appointed as directors of the bank. Except as otherwise provided by this act, the successor to each original member of the farm credit board shall be selected in the manner in which such member was selected as a director of the Federal land bank.

(d) Each third district director shall be selected as follows: Each national farm loan association and borrower through agencies in the district shall nominate, in the manner provided herein for the nomination of candidates for elected directors, one candidate for such director, and from the three persons having the greatest number of votes as nominees the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration shall appoint such director. No third district director who is removed from office pursuant to section 17 (h) of the Federal Farm Loan Act may be nominated to succeed himself.

(e) At least 2 months before an election of an elected director the Farm Credit Administration shall cause notice in writing to be sent to those entitled to nominate candidates for such elected director. In the case of an election of a director by national farm loan associations and borrowers through agencies, such notice shall be sent to all national farm loan associations and borrowers through agencies in the district; in the case of an election by production credit associations, such notice shall be sent to all production credit associations in the district; and in the case of an election by cooperatives which are stockholders or subscribers to the guaranty fund of the bank for cooperatives of the district, such notice shall be sent to all cooperatives which are stockholders or subscribers to the guaranty fund at the time of sending notice. After receipt of such notice those entitled to nominate the director shall forward nominations of residents of the district to the Farm Credit Administration. The Farm Credit Administration shall, from the nominations received within 30 days after the sending of such notice, prepare a list of candidates for such elected director consisting of the 10 nominees receiving the highest number of votes.

(f) At least 1 month before the election of an elected director the Farm Credit Administration shall mail to each person or organization entitled to elect the elected director the list of the 10 candidates nominated in accordance with the preceding paragraph of this section. In the case of an election of a director by national farm loan associations and borrowers through agencies, the directors of each farm loan association shall cast the vote of such association for one of the candidates on the list. In voting under this section each such association shall be entitled to cast a number of votes equal to the number of stockholders of such association and each borrower through agencies shall be entitled to cast one vote. In voting under this section each production credit association shall be entitled to cast a number of votes equal to the number of the class B stockholders of such association. In voting under this section each cooperative which is a holder of stock in, or a subscriber to the guaranty fund of, the bank for cooperatives shall be entitled to cast one vote. The votes shall be forwarded to the Farm Credit Administration and no vote shall be counted unless received by it within 30 days after the sending of such list of candidates. In case of a tie the Farm Credit Administration shall determine the choice. The nominations from which the list of candidates is prepared, and the votes of the respective voters, as counted, shall be tabulated and preserved and shall be subject to examination by any candidate for at least 1 year after the result of the election is announced.

(g) The terms of office of all directors shall be 3 years. Any vacancies that may occur in the farm-credit board shall be filled for the unexpired term in the manner provided herein for the original selection of such directors.

(h) Members of each farm-credit board shall have been, for at least 2 years, residents of the district for which they are appointed or elected. From and after the date of enactment of this act, no person shall be eligible for election or appointment as a member of any district farm credit board, and no person hereafter elected or appointed as a member of any district farm credit board shall be eligible to continue to serve as such, if in either case said person is an officer or employee of any Federal land bank, Federal intermediate credit bank, production credit corporation, or bank for cooperatives. No district director, excepting any third district director selected as hereinabove specified, shall, during his continuance in office, be a director, officer, or employee of any institution, association, or partnership engaged in the business of lending money or of making or selling land mortgage loans, except an institution or association under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration.

(i) No person shall be eligible for appointment or election as an administrative or executive official of a Federal land bank, Federal intermediate credit bank, or of any corporation or bank organized pursuant to the Farm Credit Act of 1933, or as a member of any farm credit board, or shall continue to hold office as such member, if such person has been finally adjudged guilty of a felony, or finally adjudged liable in damages in any civil proceeding for fraud, in any State or Federal court.

(j) Subject to the approvad of the Farm Credit Administration, members of each farm credit board shall receive such compensation as may be authorized by the board, including a reasonable allowance for necessary expenses in attending meetings of said board and directors' meetings. Such compensation shall be paid by the Federal land bank of the district, and such bank shall be reimbursed therefor by the Federal intermediate credit bank, production credit corporation, and bank for cooperatives of the district in such proportion and in such manner as may be fixed by the farm credit board subject to the approval of the Farm Credit Administration. Except with the approval of the Farm Credit Administration, no member of any farm credit board shall receive compensation or allowances for any services rendered such institutions, in his capacity as director or otherwise, for more than 30 days in any 1 calendar year, exclusive of the period for which compensation is paid for attendance at meetings of said board and at directors' meetings.

(k) Nothing contained in this section shall be construed to abrogate or repeal the second paragraph of section 4 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended, or to affect the applicability of any other act of Congress under which agricultural credit laws of the United States may be made applicable to Territories or insular possessions of the United States.

SEC. 6. Each farm credit board provided for in this act shall have power, subject to the approval of the Farm Credit Administration—

(a) To employ joint officers and employees for the Federal land bank, Federal intermediate credit bank, production credit corporation, and regional bank for cooperatives in its district. The salaries or other compensation of all such joint officers and employees shall be fixed by the district farm credit board and shall be paid by the Federal land bank of the district. Such bank shall be reimbursed therefor by the other three institutions in the district, in such amounts and upon such conditions as the board shall determine. Officers and employees appointed by the district farm credit board shall be officers and employees of the district institutions served by them.

(b) To authorize the acquisition and disposal of such property, real or personal, as may be necessary or convenient for the transaction of the business of the Federal land bank, the Federal intermediate credit bank, the bank for cooperatives, and the production credit corporation, located in its district, upon such terms and conditions as it shall fix, and to prorate among such institutions the cost of purchases, rentals, construction, repairs, alterations, maintenance, and operation, in such amounts and in such manner as it shall determine. Any lease, or any contract for the purchase or sale of property, or any deed or conveyance of property, or any contract for the construction, repair, or alteration of buildings, authorized by a district farm credit board under this subsection shall be executed by the officers of the institution or institutions concerned pursuant to the direction of such board. No provision of law relative to the acquisition or disposal of property, real or personal, by or for the United States, or relative to the making of contracts or leases by or for the United States, including the provisions set out in title 40 and title 41 of the United States Code, 1934 edition, and the supplements thereto, and including provisions applicable to corporations wholly owned by the United States, shall be deemed or held applicable to any lease, purchase, sale, deed, conveyance, or contract authorized or made by a district farm credit board, Federal land bank, Federal intermediate credit bank, production credit corporation or bank for cooperatives under this subsection.

(c) No corporation under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration, of which corporation any member of the board of directors is elected or appointed by private interests, shall be subject to the provisions of the acts of Congress approved March 14, 1936 (49 Stat. 1161, 1162) (U. S. C., title 5, secs. 29a, 30b–30m, 31a).

SEC. 7. (a) The first paragraph of section 4 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 671), is repealed.

(b) Section 4 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended, is further amended by striking out paragraphs 9 to 17 thereof (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, secs. 678 to 683), both inclusive, and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"The members of the farm credit board of each farm credit district provided for in the Farm Credit Act of 1937 shall be ex officio the directors of the Federal land bank located in that district. Any compensation that may be provided by the board of directors of any Federal land bank for officers or employees shall be subject to the approval of the Farm Credit Administration."

(c) Section 23 of the Farm Credit Act of 1935 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. II, title 12, sec. 682a) is repealed.

SEC. 8. The ninth paragraph of section 7 of the Federal Farm Loan Act (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 719) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following sentence: "The boundaries of the territory designated in the charter of any national farm loan association may be readjusted from time to time to meet the farm-loan needs of the locality, as determined by the Farm Credit Administration."

SEC. 9. Section 17 (h) of the Federal Farm Loan Act (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 831) is amended to read as follows:

"(h) To suspend or to remove for cause any district director or director at large, or any registrar, appraiser, examiner, or other official appointed by the Farm Credit Administration under authority of section 3 of this Act, as amended, the cause of such suspension or removal to be communicated forthwith in writing by said Administration to the person suspended or removed, and in case of a district director or director at large to the proper Federal land bank, Federal intermediate credit bank, production credit corporation, and regional bank for cooperatives."

SEC. 10. Section 201 (b) of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1022), is amended to read as follows:

"(b) One such institution shall be established in each farm credit district in the same city as the Federal land bank of the district. The members of the several farm credit boards of the farm credit districts provided for in the Farm Credit Act of 1937 shall be ex officio the directors of the several Federal intermediate credit banks herein provided for and shall have power, subject to the approval of the Farm Credit Administration, to employ and fix the compensation of such officers and employees of such Federal intermediate credit banks as may be necessary to carry on the business authorized by this title."

SEC. 11. The second and third sentences of section 2 of the Farm Credit Act of 1933 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1134) are amended to read as follows: "One such corporation and one such bank shall be established in each farm credit district in the city in which there is located a Federal land bank. The members of the several farm credit boards of the farm credit districts provided for in the Farm Credit Act of 1937 shall be ex officio the directors of the respective production credit corporations and Banks for Cooperatives."

SEC. 12. Paragraph "Fourth" of section 12 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 771), is further amended by striking out "incurred prior to January 1, 1933", from subparagraph (d) thereof, and by inserting in lieu thereof the following: "incurred prior to January 1, 1937."

SEC. 13. Section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supplement II, title 12, sec. 1016), is further amended by striking out so much of the sixth sentence thereof as follows the colon after the word "other", and by inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Refinancing, in connection with proceedings under Chapter VIII of the Bankruptcy Act of July 1, 1898, as amended, any indebtedness, secured or unsecured, of the farmer, or which is secured by a lien on all or any part of the farm property accepted as security for the loan."

SEC. 14. The fourth sentence of section 32 of the Emergency Farm Mortgage Act of 1933, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. II, title 12, sec. 1016), is further amended by striking out the proviso at the end thereof and by inserting in lieu thereof the following: "Provided, That when in the judgment of the land-bank commissioner conditions justify it, any mortgage made under this section may provide that during the first 3 years the loan is in effect payments of interest only may be required if the borrower shall not be in default with respect to any other condition or covenant of his mortgage."

SEC. 15. (a) Paragraph "Eighth" of section 13 of the Federal Farm Loan Act (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 781) is amended to read as follows:

"Eighth. To buy and sell United States bonds and Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds."

(b) Paragraph "Fifteenth" of section 13 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 781), is further amended by striking out, after the word "value" in said paragraph, the comma and the words "and to purchase Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds at or below par."

(c) Section 22 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 897), is further amended by inserting under the heading "In the case of a joint stock land bank" at the end thereof the following:

"(e) To purchase Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds."

SEC. 16. Section 13 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 897), is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following paragraph:

"Seventeenth. To make loans to other Federal land banks upon such terms and conditions as may be approved by the Farm Credit Administration."

SEC. 17. Section 13 of the Federal Farm Loan Act as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 781), is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"Eighteenth. To accept conditional payments from borrowers for subsequent credit upon their indebtedness to the land bank; and to allow interest on such payments. All conditional payments so accepted shall be subject to such terms and conditions, not inconsistent with the provisions of this paragraph and with any rules or regulations prescribed for its efficient execution by the Farm Credit Administration, as may be agreed upon at the time of their acceptance. If a conditional payment is accepted for subsequent credit upon a first mortgage which is at the time or is thereafter pledged as collateral security for an issue of farm-loan bonds, all requirements, conditions, and limitations set forth in the seventh, eighth, and ninth paragraphs of section 22 of this act, as amended, shall apply to such payment the same as though it were a present payment on the principal of the mortgage pledged as collateral security, and the land bank shall forthwith notify the farm loan registrar of its receipt of such payment and account to him therefor. Every conditional payment accepted by a land bank for subsequent credit upon indebtedness of a borrower shall be credited upon such indebtedness as the borrower may from time to time direct in accordance with the terms and conditions upon which the payment has been accepted, and at the option of the bank may in any event be credited upon such indebtedness as and when it matures if it is not otherwise paid by the borrower at or before maturity. If at any time after 5 years from the date on which a borrower's loan was made the aggregate of the borrower's conditional payments accepted on account of his indebtedness under such loan and not yet credited thereon equals or exceeds his total indebtedness under the loan, all unmatured indebtedness under such loan shall become due and payable at once, and the payments so accepted shall forthwith be credited upon the borrower's indebtedness under the loan so far as may be necessary to pay it in full. Any balances of conditional payments remaining uncredited when the indebtedness on account of which they have been accepted has been paid in full shall be refunded to the borrower by the land bank."

SEC. 18. The seventeenth paragraph of section 21 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 883), is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "The bond committee may appoint from among their number a subcommittee consisting of three members, to hold office for a period of 1 year or until their successors have been appointed, may from among their number fill any vacancies on the subcommittee and may dismiss at pleasure the members of the subcommittee or any of them. The subcommittee, if appointed, shall have such authority to exercise the powers and to perform the functions of the bond committee as the bond committee may authorize and shall be subject to all provisions of law relating to the duties and expenses of the bond committee. The committee shall select one of the members of the subcommittee to be chairman and one of the members of the subcommittee to be secretary of the subcommittee."

SEC. 19. Paragraph "Tenth" of section 13 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 781), is further amended by striking out in the fourth sentence thereof the following: "made prior to the expiration of 5 years from May 12, 1933", and adding at the end of said paragraph the following: "The unexpended balances of the funds appropriated by the Fourth Deficiency Act, fiscal year 1933, approved June 16, 1933 (48 Stat. 279), the Emergency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, approved June 19, 1934 (48 Stat. 1060), the Second Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1935, approved August 12, 1935 (49 Stat. 592), the First Deficiency Appropriation Act, fiscal year 1936, approved June 22, 1936, the Treasury Department Appropriation Act, 1937, approved June 23, 1936, and the Treasury Department Appropriation Act, 1938, approved May 14, 1937, for the purpose of enabling the Secretary of the Treasury to make subscriptions to the paid-in surplus of the Federal land banks, as provided for in this paragraph, and the proceeds of all repayments on account of such paid-in surplus, shall be held in the Treasury of the United States as a revolving fund, and shall be available for subscriptions to paid-in surplus made pursuant to this paragraph, as amended."

SEC. 20. Examiners appointed pursuant to the provisions of section 3 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 656), shall hereafter be designated and known as farm credit examiners.

SEC. 21. The second paragraph of section 7 of the Federal Farm Loan Act (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 712) is amended by striking out the first sentence and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The board of directors of every national farm-loan association shall consist of not less than five nor more than seven members, who shall be elected by the shareholders of the association. Elections of such directors shall be held once each year at an annual meeting of the shareholders. Every national farm-loan association shall at the first annual meeting of its shareholders subsequent to the enactment of the Farm Credit Act of 1937 elect two directors for a term of 3 years, two directors for a term of 2 years, and the remainder of its board of directors for a term of 1 year. Thereafter directors shall be chosen to serve for terms of 3 years, and the shareholders of each association shall annually elect as many directors as may be necessary to fill the places of those directors whose terms expire during the year. Any vacancy that may occur in the board of directors through death, resignation, or other cause shall be filled at the next annual meeting of shareholders by the election of a director to serve out the unexpired portion of the term, or a special meeting of shareholders may be called for this purpose. Until such election the remaining directors shall have power to fill the vacancy for the time being by appointing a temporary director to serve until the next meeting of shareholders. All directors shall hold office until their successors are elected and have qualified."

SEC. 22. The fourteenth paragraph of section 7 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (12 U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 723 (c)), is further amended by adding at the end thereof: "Any borrower's interest in such stock may be transferred or hypothecated, by him or by operation of law, to the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation."

SEC. 23. Effective 30 days after the date of the enactment of this act, the second paragraph of section 8 of the Federal Farm Loan Act (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 732) is amended to read as follows:

"Every shareholder shall be entitled to one vote, and no more, at all elections of directors and in deciding all questions at meetings of shareholders."

SEC. 24. Effective 30 days after the date of the enactment of this act, the first sentence of the fifth paragraph of section 9 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. II, title 12, sec. 745), is further amended by striking out the word "two-thirds" and inserting in lieu thereof the word "majority."

SEC. 25. (a) Section 9 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, secs. 741 to 745), is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"Any other provisions of law to the contrary notwithstanding, two or more national farm loan associations may with the approval of the Farm Credit Administration, and by an agreement not inconsistent with any rules and regulations prescribed by the said administration, provide for a common board of directors to be elected by the shareholders of the associations that are parties to the agreement: Provided, however, That each member of any such board shall be a shareholder in an association that is a party to the agreement and shall be a bona fide resident of the territory within which such association is authorized to do business: And provided further, That no such agreement shall provide for a term of office in excess of 3 years for any member of such board. The number of members of the common board of directors shall be specified in the agreement and shall be five or more. The agreement may provide that any director may be elected by the shareholders of one or more of the associations which are parties to the agreement; that in the balloting for any director an association may vote at a separate meeting of its shareholders or at a joint meeting with the shareholders of any other association or associations participating in the election of the director; and that the candidate receiving the highest aggregate number of votes at such meeting or meetings shall be declared elected. Whenever two or more national farm loan associations have entered into such an agreement, the members of the common board of directors provided for in the agreement shall be ex officio the members of the board of directors of each association that is a party to the agreement, any provisions of this act to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Whenever a national farm loan association has entered into such an agreement, the power of approving applications for loans through the association and the power of admitting persons to membership in the association shall be vested in the loan committee of the association in lieu of being vested in its board of directors. The loan committee of any such association shall be elected annually by the shareholders of the association, instead of by its board of directors, and the shareholders shall in addition annually elect two alternates to serve as members of the loan committee at such times as regular members may be absent or disqualified."

(b) Whenever it shall appear that the capital stock of a national farm-loan association is impaired, the Farm Credit Administration may authorize the Federal land bank of the district in which such association is located to make loans to applicants through such association subject to the requirements and conditions specified for direct loans in paragraphs 12 to 16, both inclusive, of section 7 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 723), except as herein otherwise specifically provided, and may authorize such association to elect to membership borrowers having loans made pursuant to said paragraphs on lands situated within the chartered territory of the association. Borrowers admitted to membership in the association pursuant hereto shall be entitled to vote and hold office in the association and the rate of interest on their loans shall be one-fourth of 1 percent per annum less than the rate of interest provided at such time for direct loans. The association shall endorse all such mortgage loans but it shall not become liable therefor except as hereinafter provided.

When there are 10 or more borrowers admitted to membership in an association pursuant hereto whose loans are in good standing, as defined by the Farm Credit Administration, and aggregate not less than $20,000:

First. The association shall become liable for the payment of said loans: Provided, however, That, any other provisions of law to the contrary notwithstanding, the shareholders who have become members pursuant to this subsection shall not be held responsible, through the amount paid in and represented by their shares or otherwise, for any contracts, debts, or engagements of the association entered into before the date on which the first member was admitted to the association pursuant to this subsection and the shareholders of such association who were members prior to said date shall not be held responsible, through the amount paid in and represented by their shares or otherwise, for any mortgages endorsed by such association on or after said date, but this provision shall not be construed to relieve any other liability with respect to stock held by shareholders who were members prior to said date.

Second. The interest rate paid by each such borrower on each such loan shall, beginning with the next regular installment date, be reduced one-fourth of 1 percent per annum.

Third. The stock in the Federal land bank held by each of said borrowers shall be exchanged for association stock in the manner provided for in paragraph 15 of section 7 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 723, subsec. (d)).

Fourth. The association may thereafter admit new members, endorse their loans, and become liable for the payment of such loans as provided in paragraph "First" of this subsection.

Fifth. At the next annual meeting of stockholders, and thereafter, the loan committee of such association may be elected by the members who become stockholders pursuant to this subsection and any loan committee so elected shall have the powers specified for loan committees elected as provided in subsection (a) of this section: Provided, however, That in the event such stockholders fail to elect the loan committee, new members shall be admitted to the association as otherwise provided in the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended.

Sixth. In accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Farm Credit Administration, the association shall maintain separate capital-stock records; shall keep all capital losses or gains, reserves (including legal reserves), and dividends received from the Federal land bank on stock owned by the association in connection with loans for which it becomes liable as provided in this subsection separate and apart from capital losses or gains, reserves (including legal reserves), and dividends received from the Federal land bank on stock owned by the association in connection with other loans of the association; and shall segregate any undivided profits of the association resulting from its business operations in like manner when so required by rules and regulations of the Farm Credit Administration. Subject to the other provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act with respect to the declaration of dividends, dividends may be declared exclusively on association stock owned by borrowers with loans for which the association becomes liable as provided in this subsection or exclusively on association stock owned by borrowers with other loans through the association.

If the loan of any borrower who was admitted to membership pursuant hereto is not in good standing at the time when there are ten or more borrowers with loans aggregating not less than $20,000 which are in good standing, the provisions of paragraphs "First", "Second", and "Third" of this subsection shall be applicable to his loan at such time as it shall be placed in good standing.

If and when all impairment is removed in the stock owned by shareholders with loans which were made prior to the date on which the first member was admitted to the association pursuant to this subsection, the holders of such stock and the holders of stock issued on and after said date may, pursuant to rules and regulations of the Farm Credit Administration and consistent with the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended, agree as to the rights, powers, privileges, duties, and liabilities which shall thenceforth attach to their respective shares of stock and otherwise agree as to the future applicability, if any, of the special provisions contained in this subsection.

(c) Section 11 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 761), is amended by adding a paragraph at the end thereof reading as follows:

"Fifth. Whenever a Federal land bank shall have empowered any national farm loan association of its district to collect and pay over to said bank the dues, interest, amortization installments, and other sums payable under the terms, conditions, and covenants of the mortgages taken from its shareholders, such association may, with the approval of said bank, enter into an agreement with another association operating in the same or adjacent territory to make such collections, for and on behalf of the association thus empowered to do so, on any or all of said loans, and immediately pay the amounts so collected to said land bank. Such agreements shall be made upon such terms and conditions and for such consideration as may be approved by the Farm Credit Administration."

(d) Section 29 of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, secs. 961–966), is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraphs:

"Upon receiving satisfactory evidence that any national farm loan association has failed to meet its outstanding obligations of any description, and that it will be to the best interest of its creditors and stockholders for the association to continue in business, the Farm Credit Administration may, in its discretion, in lieu of appointing a receiver as hereinabove in this section provided, appoint a conservator for such association and require of him such bond and security as the administration may deem proper. The person so appointed shall be a land bank appraiser appointed under the authority of section 3 of this act: Provided, however, That the Farm Credit Administration may, in its discretion, appoint some other qualified person. Any land bank appraiser appointed as a conservator shall serve without any additional compensation. Any other person appointed as a conservator shall receive such compensation as the Farm Credit Administration may authorize. Such compensation and all necessary and proper expenses of any such conservatorship shall be paid out of the assets of such association and shall be a lien thereon which shall be prior to any other lien.

"The conservator, under the direction of the Farm Credit Administration, may, when directed so to do, take possession of the books, records, and assets of every description of such association, and take such action as may be necessary to conserve such assets pending final determination of the financial condition of the association and the conditions under which it may be permitted to continue in business. Such conservator shall at the earliest practicable date make such investigations as shall be necessary to enable him to prepare an accurate report on the financial condition of such association. In preparing such report he shall value the association's assets and determine its indebtedness: Provided, That in determining said indebtedness contingent liabilities incurred by the association under the provisions of this act on endorsed mortgages shall be estimated and included as a debt. On the basis of said evaluation of the association's assets and indebtedness, the conservator shall determine the fair book value of the outstanding stock of said association and the claims of any retired shareholders based on their previous stock ownership. Upon its completion said report shall be submitted to the Federal land bank of the district and said bank shall thereupon indicate its approval thereof or note any exceptions thereto and submit such report together with its exceptions, if any, to the Farm Credit Administration for consideration.

"If said report is approved, in whole or in part, by the Farm Credit Administration, upon recommendation of the Federal land bank of the district, said Administration shall then decide whether such association shall be permitted to pay off and retire its capital stock at its fair book value, upon full payment of the mortgage loans in connection with which such stock was issued oirginally, and to settle on the same basis the claims of any of its stockholders who have previously paid their loans in full, but have not received credit for, or the proceeds of their stock in such association. At the same time the Farm Credit Administration shall also decide whether it will permit said association to admit new members pursuant to section 25 (b) of the Farm Credit Act of 1937. If the decision of said Administration is in the affirmative, it may terminate the conservatorship and turn the affairs of the association back to its board of directors. If said report is not approved or the decision of said Administration is in the negative, it may be, in its discretion, terminate the conservatorshp and permit such association to resume the transaction of its business subject to such terms, conditions, restrictions, and limitations as it may prescribe for the protection of the rights of creditors and stockholders, or said Administration may appoint a receiver for the association as elsewhere provided in this section.

"Any settlement made with a retiring or retired shareholder on the basis of the fair book value of the stock of the association pursuant to this section shall be made only on condition that said shareholder agrees to accept such settlement as payment in full. If any shareholder or former shareholder does not desire to settle on such basis, he may, in lieu thereof, be given a participation certificate which will entitle him to share pro rata, on the basis of the number of shares of stock which he owned in the association, in the distribution of any assets of the association which is made after all of its indebtedness to creditors has been satisfied. The Federal land bank of the district may pay to the association from the proceeds of bank stock retired in connection with the payment in full of loans endorsed by such association an amount sufficient to permit the association to make the settlements provided for in this section and any balance of such proceeds shall be retained by the bank and applied as a credit on the indebtedness of the association to it.

"After any determination by the Farm Credit Administration as herein provided, that the fair book value of the stock of a national farm-loan association is less than the par value thereof, periodically thereafter any increase in the fair book value of said stock resulting from earnings of the association and actual recoveries in excess of the valuations used by the Farm Credit Administration in determining the fair book value of the stock of such association, as herein provided, shall, under rules and regulations of the Farm Credit Administration, be apportioned ratably on a per-share basis to all outstanding stock or participation certificates having a fair book value less than par until the fair book value of all such stock or participation certificates is equal to the par value thereof.

"In the event that the indebtedness, as determined by the conservator, of an association which has been under conservatorship pursuant to this section increases in excess of the earnings of such association, the Farm Credit Administration may, in its discretion, again appoint a conservator for the association, or it may appoint a receiver as elsewhere provided in this section."

SEC. 26. Section 201 (c) of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1023), is amended by adding to the end thereof the following paragraph:

"Each Federal intermediate credit bank shall have power to acquire and dispose of such property, real or personal, as may be necessary or convenient for the transaction of its business, which, however, may be leased to others for revenue purposes."

SEC. 27. Section 203 (a) of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. II, title 12, sec. 1041), is further amended by striking out the comma after the word "banks" and the following: "when chartered and established,"; and by inserting after the comma which follows the word "cash," the following: "United States Government bonds, Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation bonds,".

SEC. 28. Section 203 (b) of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1042), is amended to read as follows:

"(b) The provisions of title I of this act relating to the preparation and issue of farm-loan bonds shall, so far as applicable, govern the preparation and issue of debentures or other such obligations issued under the preceding section; but the Farm Credit Administration shall prescribe rules and regulations governing the receipt, custody, substitution, and release of the cash, obligations of the United States Government, and notes or other obligations securing such debentures, the right of substitution being hereby granted, and in the event such notes or other obligations are secured by warehouse receipts, shipping documents, or other similar credit instruments, may permit the substitution of trust receipts therefor in such manner and subject to such conditions as may be approved by the said Administration. Rates of interest upon debentures and other such obligations issued under the preceding section shall, subject to the approval of the Farm Credit Administration, be fixed by the Federal intermediate credit bank making the issue, not exceeding 6 percent per annum.

SEC. 29. Section 204 (c) of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1053), is amended to read as follows:

"(c) Subject to the approval of the Farm Credit Administration, a Federal intermediate credit bank may buy for its own account any debentures or similar obligations issued by or for the benefit and account of such bank or other Federal intermediate credit bank or banks, and (1) hold until maturity any such debentures or similar obligations or (2) retire before maturity any such debentures or similar obligations issued by it or for its benefit and account."

SEC. 30. Section 206 (b) of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1072), is further amended to read as follows:

"(b) Subject only to review and approval by the Farm Credit Administration, each Federal intermediate credit bank, at the end of its fiscal year, after all its necessary expenses and costs of operation for such fiscal year have been paid or provided for, shall apply its net earnings then remaining, first, to making up any losses in excess of its reserves against unforeseen losses and assets of doubtful value; second, to the elimination of any impairment of its paid-in capital and paid-in surplus; third, to the creation and maintenance of reserves against unforeseen losses and assets of doubtful value in such amount as its board of directors may prescribe; fourth, to the payment of 25 percent of the amount then remaining to the United States as a franchise tax; and, fifth, to the payment of the remaining net earnings into its surplus account. The amounts paid as franchise taxes to the United States by Federal intermediate credit banks shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, be used to supplement the gold reserve held against outstanding United States notes, or shall be applied to the reduction of the outstanding bonded indebtedness of the United States under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. Should a Federal intermediate credit bank be dissolved or go into liquidation, after the payment of all debts and other obligations as hereinbefore provided, any surplus remaining shall be paid to and become the property of the United States and shall be similarly applied."

SEC. 31. Section 208 (e) of the Federal Farm Loan Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. II, title 12, sec. 1095), is amended to read as follows:

"(e) The executive departments, boards, commissions, and independent establishments of the Government, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Federal Deposit Insuranace Corporation, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, and the Federal Reserve banks are severally authorized under such conditions as they may prescribe, upon the request of the Farm Credit Administration, to make available to the Farm Credit Administration or any district bank or district corporation operating under its supervision, in confidence, all reports, records, or other information they may have relating to the condition of any institution to which the Administration, such district bank or corporation has made or contemplates making loans or for which it has discounted or contemplates discounting paper, or which it is using or contemplates using as a custodian of securities or other credit instruments, or as a depositary."

SEC. 32. Each regional agricultural credit corporation, created under the authority of section 201 (e) of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932 (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1148), in addition to the powers heretofore granted, shall have and, upon order or approval of the Farm Credit Administration, shall exercise the following rights, powers, and authority:

(a) To conduct, transact, and operate its business in any State in the continental United States, in the District of Columbia, and in Puerto Rico.

(b) To borrow money (other than by way of discount) from any other regional agricultural credit corporation, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, or any Federal intermediate credit bank, and to give security therefor.

(c) To lend any of its available funds to any other regional agricultural credit corporation at such rates of interest and upon such terms and conditions as may be approved by the Farm Credit Administration.

(d) To sell to or purchase from any other regional agricultural credit corporation or any corporation formed by consolidation or merger as provided in section 33 of this act, any part of or all the assets of any such corporation, upon such terms and conditions as may be approved by the Farm Credit Administration, including the assumption of liabilities of any such corporation, in whole or in part.

SEC. 33. (a) The Farm Credit Administration shall have the power and authority to order and effect the consolidation or merger of two or more regional agricultural credit corporations, on such terms and conditions as it shall direct.

(b) The Farm Credit Administration is authorized to grant charters to, prescribe bylaws for, and fix the capital of, regional agricultural credit corporations which may be formed by the consolidation of two or more regional agricultural credit corporations, and to approve or prescribe such amendments to the charter and bylaws of any regional agricultural credit corporation as it may from time to time deem necessary. Corporations formed by the consolidation of two or more regional agricultural credit corporations, as herein provided, shall have all the rights, powers, authority, and exemptions; shall be subject to the same supervision and control; and shall have their expenses paid in the same manner as provided by law in respect to regional agricultural credit corporations organized under section 201 (e) of the Emergency Relief and Construction Act of 1932.

SEC. 34. Nothing contained in sections 32 and 33 of this act shall be construed as limiting the rights, powers, and authority heretofore granted to the regional agricultural credit corporations, the Farm Credit Administration or the Governor thereof by any acts of Congress or Executive orders.

SEC. 35. Section 34 of the Farm Credit Act of 1933, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. II, title 12, sec. 1134j), is further amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 34. Subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Chairman of its Board of Directors, the Central Bank is authorized: (a) to make loans to cooperative associations as defined in the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended, for any of the purposes and subject to the conditions and limitations set forth in such act, as amended; (b) to make loans (by way of discount or otherwise) to banks for cooperatives organized under section 2 of this act; (c) to buy from, and sell to, any such bank or any Federal intermediate credit bank any note, draft, bill of exchange, debenture, or other obligation, or any interest therein; and (d) to borrow from, and discount or rediscount paper with, any and all such banks and commercial banks."

SEC. 36. Section 41 of the Farm Credit Act of 1933, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, Supp. II, title 12, sec. 1134c), is further amended to read as follows:

"SEC. 41. Subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Farm Credit Administration, the banks for cooperatives are authorized (a) to make loans to cooperative associations as defined in the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended, for any of the purposes and subject to the conditions and limitations set forth in such act, as amended; (b) to make loans (by way of discount or otherwise) to any bank organized under this act; (c) to buy from, and sell to, any such bank or any Federal intermediate credit bank any note, draft, bill of exchange, debenture, or other obligation, or any interest therein; and (d) to borrow from, and discount or rediscount paper with, any and all such banks and commercial banks."

SEC. 37. Section 4 of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1141b), is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(7) may sell at public or private sale to the highest responsible bidder, upon such terms and after such public advertisement as the Farm Credit Administration may deem in the public interest, any property, real or personal, or any interest therein, acquired by the United States on account of or as a result of any loans made from the revolving fund authorized by section 6 of this act, as amended; may lease any such property, pending its sale, on such terms and for such period, not in excess of 5 years, as the Farm Credit Administration may deem in the public interest; and may incur and pay, from the said revolving fund, obligations and expenses for the operation, upkeep, maintenance, repair, disposition, insurance, and protection of any such property: Provided, That section 3709 of the Revised Statutes shall not be construed to apply to any purchase or service on account of such property."

SEC. 38. Section 6 of the Agricultural Marketing Act, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 12, sec. 1141d), is further amended by adding at the end thereof the following: "Any and all funds derived from the sale, lease, operation, or other disposition of any property, real or personal, acquired by the United States on account of or as a result of any loan made pursuant to the provisions of this act, shall be covered into and become a part of said revolving fund."

SEC. 39. The terms "debenture" and "debentures", when used in any act of Congress, whenever enacted, except the Federal Farm Loan Act, relating to the purchase, sale, or use as security, of debentures issued by or for the benefit and account of any Federal intermediate credit bank or banks, shall be deemed to mean debentures issued by any such bank individually and consolidated debentures issued by such banks acting together.

SEC. 40. (a) If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstances, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provisions to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

(b) The right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

WATER-POLLUTION CONTROL

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 2711, to create a division of water-pollution control.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2711) to create a division of water-pollution control in the United States Public Health Service, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clase, and to insert the following:

That there is hereby established in the United States Public Health Service a Division of Water Pollution Control (hereinafter referred to as the Division). The Division shall be in charge of a director, who shall be a commissioned engineer officer of the United States Public Health Service detailed by the Surgeon General of the Public Health Service (hereinafter referred to as the Surgeon General). Such engineer officer, while serving as director, shall have the rank of an assistant surgeon general of the Public Health Service, subject to the provisions of law applicable to assistant surgeons general in charge of administrative divisions in the District of Columbia of the Public Health Service.

SEC. 2. (a) The Division shall, after careful investigation, and in cooperation with the Chief of Engineers of the War Department, and the agencies of the several States authorized by law or duly designated to deal with water pollution, and in cooperation with the municipalities and industries involved, prepare comprehensive plans for eliminating or reducing the pollution and improving the sanitary condition of the navigable waters of the United States and streams tributary thereto. In the development of such comprehensive plans due regard shall be given to the improvements which are necessary to conserve such waters and promote their use for public water supplies, propagation of fish and aquatic life, recreational purposes, agricultural, industrial, and other legitimate uses, and for this purpose the Division is authorized to make joint investigations with the aforesaid agencies of any State or States of the condition of any waters of the United States, either navigable or otherwise, and the discharges of any sewage, industrial wastes, or substances which may deleteriously affect such waters.

(b) The Division shall encourage cooperative activities by the several States for the prevention and abatement of water pollution; encourage the enactment of uniform State laws relating to water pollution; encourage compacts between the several States for the prevention and abatement of water pollution; collect and disseminate information; make available to State agencies, municipalities, industries, and individuals the results of surveys, studies, investigations, and experiments conducted by the Division and by other agencies, public and private; and furnish such assistance to State agencies as may be authorized by law.

(c) The consent of Congress is hereby given to two or more States to enter into agreements or compacts, not in conflict with any law of the United States, for cooperative effort and mutual assistance for the prevention and abatement of water pollution and the enforcement of their respective laws relating thereto, and to establish such agencies, joint or otherwise, as they may deem desirable for making effective such agreements and compacts.

SEC. 3. The Division, upon request of any State health authority and subject to the approval of the Surgeon General, shall conduct investigations and make surveys of any specific problem of water pollution confronting any State, drainage-basin authority, community, or municipality with a view to effecting a solution of such problem, and shall make definite recommendations for the correction and elimination of the deleterious conditions found to exist.

SEC. 4. The Public Health Service shall prepare and publish, from time to time, reports of such surveys, studies, investigations, and experiments as shall be made under the authority of this act, together with appropriate recommendations with regard to the control of pollution of the waters of the United States.

SEC. 5. Any State, municipality, or other public body which is discharging untreated or inadequately treated sewage or wastes into navigable waters of the United States or streams tributary thereto is hereby declared to be eligible to Federal aid in the form of grants-in-aid or loans for the construction of necessary treatment works, in accordance with plans approved by the respective State health authority and the Surgeon General. Such loans and grants-in-aid shall be made upon such terms and conditions as the Secretary of the Treasury with the approval of the President may prescribe, subject to the following limitations: (1) Loans or grants-in-aid shall be made only upon the certification of the State health authority having jurisdiction and upon approval and recommendation of the Surgeon General; (2) no grants-in-aid shall be made in respect of any project of an amount in excess of 33⅓ percent of the cost of the labor and materials employed upon such project, including the cost of preparation of plans and the carrying of same into execution.

SEC. 6. Any person discharging untreated or inadequately treated sewage or waste in character or quantity sufficient to be deleterious to the navigable waters of the United States or streams tributary thereto is hereby declared to be eligible to Federal aid in the form of grants-in-aid or loans for the construction of necessary treatment works in accordance with plans approved by the respective State health authority and the Surgeon General. Such grants-in-aid or loans shall be made upon such terms and conditions as the Secretary of the Treasury with the approval of the President may prescribe, subject to the following limitations: Grants-in-aid or loans shall be made only upon the certification of the State health authority having jurisdiction and upon approval and recommendation of the Surgeon General.

SEC. 7. (a) There is hereby established in the Division, by detail from time to time, a board of five commissioned engineer officers of the Public Health Service, a majority of whom shall be experienced in sanitary engineering, whose duties shall be fixed by the Surgeon General and to which board shall be referred for consideration and recommendations, in addition to any other duties assigned, so far as in the opinion of the Surgeon General may be necessary, all reports of examinations, investigations, plans, and surveys made pursuant to the provisions of this act or hereafter provided for by Congress, and all applications for grants-in-aid or loans for the construction of necessary treatment works made pursuant to sections 5 and 6 of this act, and all other matters in connection therewith upon which report is desired by the Surgeon General. The board shall submit to the Surgeon General recommendations as to the desirability of commencing, continuing, or extending any and all projects for treatment works upon which reports are desired and for which grants-in-aid or loans have been applied. In the consideration of such proposed treatment works and projects the board shall have in view the benefits to be derived by the construction thereof in accomplishing the purposes of this act, and the relation of the ultimate cost of such works, both as to the cost of construction and maintenance, to the public interests involved, the public necessity for such works and propriety of construction in part at the expense of the United States, and the adequacy of the provisions made or agreed upon by the applicant for the grant-in-aid or loan for assuring proper and efficient operation and maintenance of the works after completion of the construction thereof. The board shall, when it considers the same necessary, and with the approval and under orders from the Surgeon General, make as a board or through its members, personal examinations of localities where the proposed treatment works are to be located. All plans, costs estimates, information, and arguments which are presented to the board for its consideration in connection with any matter referred to it by the Surgeon General shall be reduced to and submitted in writing, and shall be made a part of the records of the office of the Surgeon General.

(b) As soon as practicable, the board shall classify the navigable waters of the continental United States into districts to be known as sanitary water districts. The board shall fix and define the boundaries of each such district and may from time to time alter such boundaries. The areas of such districts shall, insofar as practicable, conform to the areas of watersheds not wholly contained within the boundaries of one State.

(c) The board shall fix standards of purity in each such district for the navigable waters thereof and for such tributaries from which pollution may flow, be washed, or carried into such navigable waters; shall establish minimum requirements as to the treatment of polluting material before it is discharged into such waters; and shall promulgate regulations governing the discharge of any matter or materials into such waters.

(d) All special reports ordered by the Congress pursuant to the provisions of this act shall, at the discretion of the Surgeon General, be reviewed in like manner by the said board; and the said board shall also, on request by resolution of the Committee on Commerce of the Senate or the Committee on Rivers and Harbors of the House of Representatives submitted to the Surgeon General, examine and review the report of any examination, investigation, survey, or project for the elimination or reduction of water pollution or for treatment works made pursuant to any act or resolution of the Congress, and shall report through the Surgeon General, who shall submit its conclusions thereon as in other cases. The said board shall, at the discretion of the Surgeon General, make estimates of the amount of money required each year for each and all project applications for treatment works which have been approved under the provisions of sections 5 and 6 of this act, for an extension of Federal aid in the form of grants-in-aid or loans to any States, municipalities, or other public bodies or in the form of loans to persons, as provided for in said sections. The board shall recommend the order or sequence of priority for such individual projects in accordance with their estimated importance or value in the elimination or reduction of water pollution as determined by the said board as hereinbefore provided, and shall report thereon through the Surgeon General, who shall submit his conclusions as in other cases.

(e) The Secretary of the Treasury shall cause the manuscript of that portion of the annual report of the Surgeon General as is concerned with the Division, including a schedule of approved projects for treatment works and cost estimates thereof for grants-in-aid and loans, together with such supplementary reports as may be pertinent thereto, to be placed in the hands of the Public Printer on or before the 15th day of October in each year, and the Public Printer shall cause such portion of the annual report of the Surgeon General and supplementary reports to be printed with an accurate and comprehensive index thereof, on or before the 3d day of January in each year, for the use of the Congress; and all special reports of investigations of surveys which may be prepared during the recess of the Congress shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, be printed by the Public Printer as documents of the following session of the Congress.

(f) There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out such projects or portions thereof for treatment works as are authorized annually by the Congress from the schedule of approved projects and cost estimates submitted to the Congress as hereinbefore provided, and the appropriations therefor shall be included in the annual appropriation bill for the Treasury Department or in any other supplementar,' or deficiency appropriation bill. Grants and loans thus provided for shall be made by the Secretary of the Treasury under the conditions set forth in sections 5 and 6 of this act. Any moneys appropriated for such projects shall remain available for expenditure for such purpose until the expiration of the fiscal year next succeeding the fiscal year for which the appropriation is made. In case that the costs of construction of treatment works are less than the original estimates as appropriated for by Congress, the proportionate part of such moneys belonging to the United States as has not been expended shall be refunded or returned to the Treasury of the United States, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. In case that the costs of construction of treatment works exceed, or appear likely to exceed, the original estimates as appropriated for by Congress, the Surgeon General may submit to Congress, as in other cases, estimates of the additional moneys necessary to meet increased costs arising because of unforeseen contingencies, structural difficulties, or other causes, which, in the opinion of the Surgeon General, require consideration by Congress. Alterations of, amendments, or revisions to approved project plans for treatment works which do not increase the total cost of the projects may be authorized at the discretion of the Surgeon General.

SEC. 8. Pursuant to the powers of the United States to regulate interstate commerce and navigation; to extend, change, and amend the Admiralty and Maritime Act; to give due effect to the Migratory Bird Treaty; and to protect the fisheries, particularly the anadromous fish, Congress hereby declares the discharge or deposit of any waste, except the normal discharge of sewage from toilets of boats or from the galley sink drains or the normal amount of oil that may be discharged from the exhaust pipe of a motorboat, or other substance, whether in a solid, gaseous, or liquid state, into any of the navigable waters of the United States, or into any tributary from which the same may flow, be washed, or carried into any of such navigable waters, in violation of regulations promulgated by the board, if such waste or other substance is or may be injurious to human health or to any other form of life, including aquatic life, or to migratory birds as defined in the Migratory Bird Treaty of August 16, 1916, or impairs in any manner the utility of such waters for navigation purposes, to be against the public policy of the United States and to be a public and common nuisance. After the expiration of 3 years after the date of enactment of this act an action to prevent or abate any such nuisance may be brought in the name of the United States by any United States attorney, and it shall be the duty of such attorneys to bring such an action when directed to do so by the Attorney General of the United States. Such action shall be brought as an action in equity and may be brought in any court of the United States in the district where the alleged nuisance exists.

SEC. 9. Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to limit in any manner the rights of any person or public body to bring actions for damages on account of the pollution of any waters, or for the abatement of such pollution.

SEC. 10. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, the sum of $300,000, for all necessary expenses of the Division in administering the provisions of this act, including: (a) Expenses of investigations made under this act, including (1) printing and binding of the findings of such investigations, (2) the pay and allowances and travel expenses of personnel of the Public Health Service (including commissioned officers) while engaged in field investigation, (3) (upon the approval of the Surgeon General) the expenses of packing, crating, drayage, and transportation of the personal effects of such personnel and personnel of other Government departments on duty with the Public Health Service upon permanent change of station under competent orders in connection therewith while engaged in such investigations, and (4) purchases required for such investigations, without regard to the provisions of section 3709 of the Revised Statutes (U. S. C., 1934 edition, title 41, sec. 5), when the aggregate amount involved does not exceed $100; (b) upon approval of the Surgeon General, the necessary expenses of the board of engineer officers provided for in section 7 of this act; (c) the pay and allowances and travel expenses of reserve engineer officers while on active duty under section 10 (a) of this act; and (d) for the reimbursement of appropriations insofar as expended for pay and allowances of personnel detailed to the Division under section 10 (c) or 10 (d) of this act.

SEC. 11. There is hereby authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year, beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, the sum of $700,000, to be paid to the States for expenditures by or under the direction of their respective State health authorities in the promotion, investigation, surveys, and studies necessary in the prevention and control of water pollution; this sum to be allotted, under the supervision of the Surgeon General, to the States in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. The amount of any allotment for any fiscal year remaining unpaid at the end of such fiscal year shall be available for allotment hereunder for the succeeding fiscal year, in addition to the amount appropriated for such year.

SEC. 12. (a) For the administration of this act the Secretary of the Treasury may, upon recommendation of the Surgeon General, appoint such engineers, attorneys, experts, research assistants, examiners, and consultants as may be necessary, and fix their compensation, in the manner provided by law for the appointment and fixing of compensation of such personnel of the Public Health Service; and the Surgeon General is authorized to transfer, assign, or detail to the Division, from any other division of the Public Health Service, such professional and scientific personnel as may be available. Not exceeding 10 engineer officers in the reserve of the Public Health Service may be ordered to active duty for such periods of time as may be desirable, extending not more than 5 years beyond the date of enactment of this act, to assist in carrying out the purposes thereof.

(b) Such clerks, stenographers, and other employees as may be necessary to discharge the duties of the Division and for the investigations in the field shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury in accordance with the civil-service laws, and their compensation shall be fixed in accordance with the Classification Act of 1923, as amended, and he shall prescribe such rules and regulations with respect to their duties as he may find necessary.

(c) The personnel of the Public Health Service paid from any appropriation not made pursuant to section 8 may be detailed to assist in carrying out the purposes of this act.

(d) The Secretary of the Treasury, with the consent of the Secretary of any other department of the Federal Government, may utilize such officers and employees of said department as may be found necessary to assist in carrying out the purposes of this act.

SEC. 13. When used in this act the term "State health authority" means the official State health department, State board of health, or such other official State agency as is empowered with the duties of enforcing State laws pertaining to health; the term "treatment works" means the various devices used in the treatment of sewage or industrial waste of a liquid nature, including the necessary intercepting sewers, outfall sewers, pumping and power equipment and their appurtenances; the term "person" means an individual in the capacity of proprietor of an industrial enterprise, a partnership, a private corporation, an association, a joint-stock company, a trust, or an estate.

SEC. 14. If any provision of this act, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is held invalid, the remainder of the act, and the application of such provision to other persons or circumstances, shall not be affected thereby.

SEC. 15. This act may be cited as the Water Pollution Act.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have the Senator from Kentucky explain the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. I think I can explain it very briefly.

This bill passed the House of Representatives on the 21st day of April. For many years health organizations and civic organizations as well as the administrations of city governments in various States along navigable streams, have recognized the fact that by reason of the discharge of sewage and refuse of all sorts into our navigable streams the water was being polluted to such an extent as to endanger the health of the people who are compelled to consume the water. Of course, that is not true of all rivers. It is particularly true of some of the rivers in New England; it is true of the Ohio River, and it is true of other rivers contiguous to which there is a large industrial population, and large industrial enterprises are conducted.

Various efforts were made extending over a considerable time to frame a bill which would make a beginning in undertaking to clean out the polluted waters, or to prevent further pollution of the waters of navigable streams, because it has been recognized that, most of the people along the rivers being compelled to drink the water that flows down them, as population increases in the valleys and industries increase along the river banks, the health and probably the lives of millions of our people would be deleteriously affected.

The United States Public Health Service and the public-health departments of practically all the States collaborated, the medical associations of all the States in the Nation joined in the effort, and various other associations, sportsmen and others, cooperated to try to frame a bill which would make a reasonable approach to the subject.

We realized that the cities and industries should not be required overnight to cease to discharge whatever was being discharged into the rivers. So the bill as it passed the House was framed by Representative VINSON of Kentucky and by me, and introduced as a joint measure, providing for the creation of a division of stream pollution in the Public Health Service. The bill authorizes the division to make a survey of the stream-pollution situation and to recommend to the Congress and to the Executive from time to time methods by which the waters may be purified so that health and life will not any longer be endangered by the discharge of impurities into the navigable rivers.

It also makes cities and counties and States, as well as private industries, eligible for obtaining loans and grants in relief so that they may bring about the purification of the streams by the installation of the necessary modern machinery for stream purification.

The bill as it passed the House authorized an appropriation of $700,000, which the division of stream pollution might use in making loans and grants-in-aid of the purification of the streams, not only by cities and public subdivisions of States but also by private industries, so that any city or any factory that is now engaged in the manufacture of any product the refuse from which is being discharged into a river, and which pollutes it or makes it impure or unsafe for human consumption, may avail itself of this credit in order that it may proceed at once to purify the water and install such machinery and appliances as are necessary in order to protect the life and health of the people.

The bill also provides that, if at the end of 3 years the Public Health Service, through these various agencies, finds that any institution, public or private, has deliberately refused to take advantage of the opportunity and has either continued or created a public nuisance, such facts may be laid before the Attorney General of the United States, and he is authorized to direct the district attorney in the district in which the nuisance exists to bring suit in equity to abate the nuisance. No criminal penalty is attached. It provides merely a civil action for the abatement of any nuisance which may endanger the life or health of the people.

I may say that the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LONERGAN] has for several years introduced a measure along this line, differing somewhat in detail; and after the House passed House bill 2711, the Senator from Connecticut and I collaborated to see if we could not work out the differences between the bill as it was passed by the House and the bill which I had introduced and the bill which he has for several years introduced in the Senate.

The Senator from Connecticut cooperated most fully and most intelligently and most helpfully in working out this matter.

We have framed the pending measure based upon the bill which passed the House, with a provision which the Senator from Connecticut desired to have in the law authorizing the abatement of these nuisances after a 3-year period. That is the part of the bill which represents to the greatest extent the measure which the Senator from Connecticut introduced, and the remainder of the bill is that which passed the House in substance, and which I had introduced in the Senate, both at the last session and at this session.

The Committee on Commerce, before which the bill was pending, appointed a subcommittee, whose chairman was the distinguished senior Senator from Arkansas [Mrs. CARAWAY], and the subcommittee gave careful consideration to the bill. The bill was reported to the full committee, and the full committee unanimously reported it to the Senate. Therefore, I think the matter has been carefully considered, and the details worked out in conference among all those interested in the proposed legislation. The situation has become so acute in various portions of the country that it is absolutely necessary that Congress deal with the subject not in a drastic way now but make a fair beginning, so that we may in the years to come protect our people against stream pollution.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. KING. I wish to ask the Senator whether there is any provision in the bill which would clearly indicate that streams which are intrastate are to be brought within the purview of the law.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator realizes that anything of an impure nature that is thrown into a stream whose waters find their way into a navigable stream must be dealt with in order that the waters of the navigable stream may be purified.

Mr. KING. I understand that.

Mr. BARKLEY. It would be of small avail merely to provide that streams between States, or streams which run from one State into another, might be purified, if in all the tributaries of these rivers factories or towns were permitted to discharge all sorts of impure substances which in a very brief space of time would find their way down into the main stream. For that reason the Public Health Service is authorized to make a survey not only of the main streams but of their tributaries; and, in order to protect the public health and the lives of the people, the bill contains provisions which would enable the Public Health Service to take notice of the discharge of impurities into the smaller streams which find their way into the larger streams.

Mr. KING. I am not making any complaint in regard to that. My question related to instances, and I have a number in mind, where a factory was located upon the bank of a small stream which ended in a State and had no connection whatever with any interstate streams.

Mr. BARKLEY. Of course, the bill does not undertake to deal with any stream that is not a tributary of a navigable stream. It is designed to deal with navigable streams and tributaries out of which impurities may flow into navigable rivers.

Mr. KING. I first saw the bill just a moment ago, and I should like to ask whether new positions are to be created. I saw some reference to the creation of a commission of five.

Mr. BARKLEY. A division is to be created within the Public Health Service. There is to be an officer of the Public Health Service designated as director of the division, but all of this work is to be done within the Public Health Service, through the Division of Stream Pollution, and all the agencies, including the Corps of Engineers, all State health departments, and all others, are authorized to cooperate with the Public Health Service in working out a feasible, practicable, and at the same time effective plan to protect people against stream pollution.

Mr. KING. It seems to me that section 12 gives a little too much authority for the employment of a large number of officials, and makes no limitations upon their salaries or compensation. I was wondering whether that matter had received the attention of the committee. We are creating so many new offices, as the Senator knows, so many new bureaus and positions, and we have gotten into the habit of paying $10,000 a year as salary to some man who is placed in some position more or less important, that we are not imposing proper restrictions upon the number of employees and the salaries paid them.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, it is not contemplated that the bill shall provide for an office-creating agency of the Government. Had we desired to create a number of new offices we would not have set the agency up in the United States Public Health Service. Section 12 of the bill provides:

> For the administration of this act the Secretary of the Treasury may, upon recommendation of the Surgeon General—

The Public Health Service being in the Treasury Department, as the Senator knows, makes that necessary—> appoint such engineers, attorneys, experts, research assistants, examiners, and consultants as may be necessary, and fix their compensation, in the manner provided by law for the appointment and fixing of compensation of such personnel of the Public Health Service—

So the salaries of those employed in the proposed division are limited by the salaries paid in the Public Health Service—> and the Surgeon General is authorized to transfer, assign, or detail to the Division, from any other division of the Public Health Service, such professional and scientific personnel as may be available. Not exceeding 10 engineer officers in the reserve of the Public Health Service may be ordered to active duty for such periods of time as may be desirable, extending not more than 5 years beyond the date of enactment of this act, to assist in carrying out the purposes thereof.

The Senator will realize that what it is proposed to do is to create this Division within an existing, well-recognized and, I think, universally appreciated branch of our Government in the Treasury Department, to wit, the Public Health Service, and the effort all through this bill is to limit the employment to persons already in the Public Health Service.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. LODGE. Is this measure supported by the heads of various public health services throughout the country?

Mr. BARKLEY. I am not able to say that the head of the public health service in every State came to Washington or was personally consulted about it, but the national organization of State public health officers not only approved the bill, but cooperated in framing it. Many of them were here in Washington during the time when it was under consideration to help in framing it so as to coordinate our National Public Health Service with the State public health services, and many of the State officials testified before the House committee during rather extensive hearings which were held during the winter.

Mr. LODGE. That is what I had in mind. Is the organization to which the Senator referred the national organization of State public health services?

Mr. BARKLEY. The national Association of Public Health Officers approved this bill and helped in framing it.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. BONE. I have not had an opportunity to examine the bill, which was brought up hurriedly this morning, but I am curious to know about some of its aspects. For instance, water from a mine or factory containing mine tailings and discharge from certain types of mills, such as pulp mills, when poured into either fresh or salt water bodies, has a very definitely deleterious effect on marine life, fish, oysters, and the like. In what way does the bill get at that particular evil? Does it provide for terminating that sort of pollution?

Mr. BARKLEY. The bill provides a fund from which loans may be made either to cities or to private industries which may not immediately have the available funds with which to abate a nuisance that has been created which results in the pollution of streams. The Senator from Washington is eminently correct in stating that polluted streams not only have a very injurious effect upon human life, but upon marine life, and in some of the streams of the United States the pollution of the water has resulted in the wholesale killing of fish of various species. For that reason the Izaak Walton League has for a number of years been interested in securing some sort of legislation to prevent stream pollution, not only from the standpoint of human life, but from the standpoint of marine life, and it has cooperated very effectively and helpfully in the framing of this measure.

At the end of 3 years from the enactment of this bill, if any institution which cannot out of its own funds abate the nuisance, has not taken advantage of the opportunity of securing loans and grants under the act, and if at the end of 3 years the pollution is of such degree and extent as, in the opinion of the health officers of the State and of the Nation, to create a common nuisance, the bill authorizes the Attorney General to instruct the district attorneys in the districts where such a condition exists, to bring suit in equity to abate the nuisance.

Mr. BONE. Mr. President, a great many cities are now pouring their sewage into streams, and below the point of entrance other cities are taking their water supply out of the same rivers. The condition is so appalling and so tragic that something, I think, must be done to abate that sort of thing in the next few years or we are likely to have a plague in this country.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Senator is correct. I have in mind cities—I do not care to mention their names—on certain rivers the water of which has been declared unsafe for human consumption, and yet those cities are not in a position of their own volition and initiative to clear up that situation, although their chambers of commerce and their city administrations are anxious to be able to do it, and have repeatedly appealed to the Congress to enact legislation which will assist them.

Mr. BONE. Is there a provision in the bill requiring cities to put in sewage-disposal plants within a certain time? I did not hear all of the Senator's explanation of the bill, I am sorry to say.

Mr. BARKLEY. There is no provision which undertakes to require a city to do that. I doubt whether we would have authority to enact legislation to require a city to do that. However, this bill is intended to encourage cities to do it by making available funds which they may obtain through loans or grants to enable them to do it if they are not able to finance it themselves. It also applies to private industries that are not at the moment able to undertake the work themselves. They will be able to obtain and expend the money necessary to abate the nuisance referred to in the bill.

Mr. BONE. I think it is a very highly necessary piece of legislation.

Mr. WHITE rose.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the Senator from Maine ask me to yield to him?

Mr. WHITE. I do not care to interrupt the Senator now. I desire to speak on the measure in my own time.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I wanted to make an observation with respect to bills passed this morning. First we had placed before us for action a bill 42 pages in length. We passed it in 42 seconds time. I do not know the length of the bill now under consideration. How long is it?

Mr. BARKLEY. The bill is 27 pages long.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Only 27! We will pass that in 27 minutes or 27 seconds. I do not object to the bill because I do not know anything about it. That is my fault, and I am not blaming anybody at all. But we are going rather rapidly with legislation of this character and legislation of the length and of the importance of the bill now before us. I am very glad to be in favor of a bill seeking to eliminate stream pollution and to do anything that I can in behalf of such a bill. I do not object to anything that the Senator from Kentucky has said. I think I missed a considerable portion of the explanation of the first bill that was considered, and do not know entirely to what it applied, and that was by reason of my not being here Saturday last, because I understand it was discussed then for sometime.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator from California that in that connection I also had inserted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Saturday a detailed explanation of that bill, which was available to all members if they had time to examine it.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. Mr. President, we are making a record. We can act on two bills as was shown this morning, in 16 minutes; one 42 pages in length and the other 27 pages in length, in all 69 pages, and we feel that when we have done so we have accomplished a great deal and that we have done our full duty.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate what the Senator from California has said. I am in sympathy with the idea he expresses. Of course, the Senator realizes that we are not in any different situation now from that which always exists at the end of a session of Congress, when, because of what might have been thought to be more important matters, measures that are really worthy of our careful consideration get shunted over toward the end.

I will say to the Senator, however, that both of these bills were carefully considered, not only in the committees, where hearings were held on both of them, but they were debated at length in the House, the proceedings of which were, of course, available to those of us who have any time to study the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. The committees have considered the bills carefully; and while it is, I think, unfortunate that bills containing so many pages as these bills contain should come in at this late hour during the session, I do not believe that the Senator need to have any fear that the pending bill has not been given the widest and the most serious consideration.

Mr. JOHNSON of California. I agree with the Senator. I have no fear for anybody but myself, and, of course, I would not put forward that fear as a matter that should for a moment be considered by the Senate. However, I should like to know how many Senators know anything about the 42-page bill. I should not like to know it simply from asking that question. I ask Senators to think for a moment of the rapidity with which we pass bills of great volume in record time.

Mr. BARKLEY. In connection with the pending bill, I will say to the Senator that, of course, the Senate bill makes some changes in the bill as it passed the House. Request for such legislation has been made for many years. I introduced a bill dealing with the subject in the last Congress, and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LONERGAN] also introduced a bill of similar nature, and certain Members of the House introduced a bill, and hearings were held on all those measures. We have now reached a point where we can get legislation. Differences exist between the House bill and the Senate bill, and if anything is to be done at this session, the bill must be passed in time so that it may go to conference and the differences worked out in conference. I think we have reached a time in this country when we can no longer safely postpone dealing with the subject of stream pollution and the protection of life and health of our people.

Mr. ELLENDER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BARKLEY. I yield.

Mr. ELLENDER. The Senator mentioned a bill introduced by the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. LONERGAN]. What is the essential difference between the bill introduced by the Senator from Connecticut and the bill before us?

Mr. BARKLEY. The bill which the Senator from Connecticut introduced provided a different agency altogether. His bill did not set up a division of stream pollution in the Bureau of Public Health. There were very many differences between that bill and this one. The provisions for Federal enforcement were more drastic in the bill of the Senator from Connecticut than they are in this bill. The basis of the measure now before the Senate is the House bill plus the provision that was in the bill of the Senator from Connecticut providing for Federal efforts to abate the nuisance wherever a public nuisance is declared to exist by reason of insanitary conditions.

Mr. ELLENDER. As I understand, the present bill calls for more cooperation between the Federal Government and the local authorities?

Mr. BARKLEY. It does. The fact is that this is a bill designed to bring about complete cooperation between the Federal Government, States, counties, and cities and their various subdivisions. The bill of the Senator from Connecticut did make provision for such cooperation, but it also authorized the States to enter into compacts among themselves for the mutual abatement of nuisances, and in such cases, of course, it would be expected that they would be able to abate many of them and protect their own people without the intervention of the Federal Government.

Mr. ELLENDER. The reason I asked the question is that I have received a number of telegrams and letters against the so-called Lonergan bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that the Senator from Connecticut has been very generous and very helpful in undertaking to eliminate some of the provisions to which objection was made in the original bill which he presented to the Senate.

NOMINATION OF SENATOR BLACK TO THE SUPREME COURT

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, in the understanding the nomination of the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court will be before the Senate tomorrow, and because of my fear that I shall be obliged to be absent during much of the day, I desire to take this opportunity to present my views concerning that nomination.

This nomination brings to the Senate three interesting questions. These are, first, is there a vacancy in the Supreme Court caused by the retirement of Justice Van Devanter? Second, if there is no vacancy so occasioned, was an office created by the act of March 1, 1937? And, third, did the act of March 1, 1937, increase the emoluments of a Justice of the Supreme Court?

I address myself at the moment to the first question. The distinguished Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] asserts and argues with his extraordinary power and persuasiveness that the retirement of Justice Van Devanter did not cause a vacancy in the Supreme Court. Eminent students and other profound lawyers agree with him. If the Senator is right, then it is certain that an appointment can now be made only if by our legislative act we increased the membership of the Court and thereby created the office now sought to be filled. Stated in another way, if the contention of the Senator from Idaho is sound, the nomination now pending is not to fill the position occupied by the retired Justice but is to fill a recently created office.

Mr. President, I am inclined to accept the view of the Senator from Idaho that a vacancy can happen in our Supreme Court only by those means assigned by the Constitution itself; that is, by impeachment, by resignation, or by death. Neither of these events has occurred. There can, therefore, be no vacancy as contemplated by the Constitution itself.

There is support for this construction in the language in the act of March 1, 1937, itself, in the reports of the Judiciary Committees of both the House and the Senate, in past utterances of learned Senators other than the Senator from Idaho and in Court decisions.

The act of March 1, 1937, provides in words:

> Justices of the Supreme Court are hereby granted the same rights and privileges with regard to retiring, instead of resigning, granted to judges other than Justices of the Supreme Court by section 260 of the Judicial Code.

Here is clear recognition that the act does not contemplate a separation from the Court by resignation. The act further provides that the Justice so retired may be called upon and authorized to perform such judicial duties in any judicial circuit as he may be willing to undertake.

Mr. President, I assert that he can perform judicial duties only as a Justice. He can act in no other capacity.

I have said that the reports of the Judiciary Committees of the House and Senate recognize that a retired Justice is still a Justice of the Court. The report of the House Commitee on the Judiciary——

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHITE. I yield for a question.

Mr. CONNALLY. What has the Senator to say to this suggestion? Suppose that the Senator from Idaho is technically correct that there was no vacancy on the Court and that the act of Congress providing for retirement in fact created a new place. Does it not inevitably follow that the new place which was created is the place now occupied by Mr. Justice Van Devanter, because he does not occupy his old place? If he occupied his old place, there would be nothing to do. If a position was created at all, is it not true that the new status of Justice Van Devanter is the new office which Congress created; that, in assuming that status, the new status, he vacated the old place, and that the appointment that is now being made is being made through the vacancy created by the abandonment of Justice Van Devanter of the former office, the former duties and the former functions of a Justice of the Supreme Court and the assumption by him of this new status which is that of a so-called retired Justice?

Everybody knows——

Mr. WHITE. I yielded for a question, and I hope the Senator will bring his question to a conclusion.

Mr. CONNALLY. I am asking the Senator what answer he has to that question? If that is not a question, the Senator from Texas does not know how to ask a question.

Mr. WHITE. I think it is a question, and I think the answer is that we have increased the size of the Court. I will refer to that further as I go along.

Mr. CONNALLY. If we increased the size of the Court, whose place has Senator BLACK been nominated to fill—this new or retired job or the old place that Justice Van Devanter held before he gave it up? We all know that Senator BLACK has been appointed to fill the place formerly held by Justice Van Devanter and not the place now held by Judge Van Devanter.

Mr. WHITE. I disagree entirely with the Senator.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator for permitting me to ask the question.

Mr. WHITE. I think we have created an additional judgeship and that the Senator from Alabama has been named to fill that additional place.

Mr. President, the report of the House Judiciary Committee in summarizing said:

> This bill therefore, if enacted, would serve to relieve them——
>
> That is, the retired justices—
>
> of the part of their existing duties and leave them subject to assignment to the performance of duties in the circuits.

I persist in the question—in what capacity may they serve in the circuits unless it be as justices of the courts? They have no other judicial status.

The report of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary employs much the same language as I have quoted from the House report. It contains this significant statement:

> This bill, if enacted, would serve to relieve the Justices of the Supreme Court of a part of their existing duties, leaving them with full judicial investiture, subject to assignment to the performance of duties in the courts of any circut.

How may it be said that in relieving a Justice of only one part or of a part of his duties he has been removed from the Court? How may it be argued that Justices are so far removed from the Court as to create a vacancy? All that has been done, according to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, is to relieve them of a part of their existing duties, leaving them with full judicial investiture.

What did Justice Van Devanter himself have to say? He wrote to the President. I quote from his letter to the President:

> I desire to avail myself of the rights, privileges, and judicial service specified in the act of March 1, 1937.

What was the judicial service specified in this act? It is such judicial duties as he might be willing to undertake. But it is manifest that he must be a justice to perform judicial duties. Justice Van Devanter could act only as a Justice of the Supreme Court. If Justice Van Devanter is not that, he is no judge at all. If he is that, there is no vacancy occasioned by his retirement.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WHITE. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. Among those duties or services which are prescribed in the act of March 1, 1937, and which Justice Van Devanter referred to expressly in his retirement letter is the following:

> Including those of a circuit justice of such circuit.

I ask the Senator from Maine whether it is not an undeniable fact that a circuit justice is a Justice of the Supreme Court by virtue of title 28, section 215, of the United States Code, Annotated, which is the same as the Judicial Code, section 119, and again by virtue of title 28, section 217, of the same code, being Judicial Code, section 121? In order to make my question clear, I am going to read section 121, as follows:

> The words "circuit justice" and "justice of the circuit" shall be understood to designate the Justice of the Supreme Court who is allotted to any circuit, but the word "judge" when applied generally to any circuit shall be understood to include such Justice.

Now, my question is, is it not absolutely, definitely, precisely, and expressly stated in the act of March 1, 1937, that this retiring Justice is still a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. WHITE. I think the Senator answers his own question.

Mr. President, whatever may be the opinions of Senators, the views of the Supreme Court itself should be conclusive upon us. In the case of Booth v. United States (291 U. S. 339) it was held that a district or circuit judge of the United States who retires under the provisions of section 375 continues in office within the meaning of section 1 of article III of the Constitution. This section 375 is the section referred to in the Retirement Act passed by the Congress in behalf of our Supreme Court Justices. It is the section defining the rights and privileges with regard to retiring, granted to our Justices. There seems to be no possibility of escape from the conclusion that our Justices continue in office, protected by section 1 of article II precisely as do district and circuit judges.

This decision should satisfy every Senator that no vacancy was created by Justice Van Devanter.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHITE. I yield.

Mr. GREEN. I understand the contention of the Senator from Maine to be that because of Justice Van Devanter's retirement no vacancy exists. Suppose, instead of one Justice of the Supreme Court retiring, all seven who are entitled to do so should retire. Would the Senator contend that no vacancies would exist and that two Justices only were left to perform the duties of the Supreme Court?

Mr. WHITE. I shall refer to that later. I have something to say on that point a little later.

If Congress by its act and Justice Van Devanter by his election did not create a vacancy, what is the result which has been brought about?

I am persuaded that an office was created by the act of March 1, 1937, and that with the filling of the office we shall have increased our Court to 10 members. I see no escape from this conclusion.

This is the view of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] and of the chairman of the Judiciary Committee [Mr. ASHURST] unless that distinguished Senator has changed his understanding of the situation. I quote a colloquy between these Senators:

> Mr. ASHURST. Very well, suppose, during the session of Congress the President should nominate a man for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States and send his name to the Senate, and he should be confirmed and take the oath of office. We should have 10 judges of the Supreme Court, should we not?
>
> Mr. BORAH. We should.
>
> Mr. ASHURST. That is all I contend, and all anybody contends. There is no real difference between the Senator from Idaho and myself.

The Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] than whom there is no clearer thinker in this body, expressed the tentative view that we had so increased our Court and he likewise added the weight of his learning and judgment to the opinion of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] that Justice Van Devanter is still a member of the Supreme Court. Upon this and upon the question of increase in the size of the Court, the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] said:

> I am much interested in the Senator's remarks. The point I am about to mention may have been covered, but I wish to have the Senator's view upon it.
>
> I think there would be no disagreement with the main premise of the Senator from Idaho that Justice Van Devanter is still a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. I do not think there can be any doubt about that. In fact, I think the Supreme Court in one case has held, in the case of a district court judge, that he still remained a judge; and in another case the Supreme Court refused to grant a writ of certiorari, which would have reviewed that decision. So it must be taken that the Supreme Court has passed upon the question.
>
> Is it not a permissible view, however—and I submit it to the Senator without having previously explored it—that when the Congress passed the act authorizing the retirement of a Justice of the Supreme Court, and authorizing the President to appoint a successor, by necessary implication the Congress increased the number of Justices of the Supreme Court from 9 to 10, or increased the number of Associate Justices from 8 to 9, and that by necessary implication the Congress has given the Executive the power to make an additional appointment? It is not expressly so stated in the act, and of course I understand that the Senator would not favor construction of an act by invoking the doctrine of implication; but it seems to me that of necessity what we have done is to increase the number of Justices of the Supreme Court by each retirement under the terms of the act.

For the opinion of the Senator from Georgia I entertain the highest respect.

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY], the present leader of the majority, gives hesitant sanction to this construction of our legislative act. I quote the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] as follows:

Inasmuch, however, as the size of the Court is subject to congressional regulation, and if we may assume that Justice Van Devanter is still technically a Justice of the Supreme Court—though he may be regarded as a Justice emeritus, or something of the sort—I think there is much force in the suggestion of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. GEORGE] that by implication, if not automatically, we have increased the membership of the Court from 9 to 10.

Mr. President, I find the words of the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] approving the contention of the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] that the retirement of Justice Van Devanter did not create a vacancy in the Court and supporting the proposition that Congress has authorized an increase in the membership of the Court. I quote the junior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. LOGAN] as follows:

If the position of the Senator from Idaho is sound, let me ask him this question: If a Justice will not resign, and we cannot make him do so, and if Congress authorizes him to retire and he still remains a Justice, is there any way to have a Supreme Court which will function properly other than by increasing the number of Justices?

Mr. BORAH. I am not sure I understand the proposition. I start out with this: That whether we like it or not, whether we would have made the Constitution differently or not, the Constitution provides that the Justices of the Supreme Court shall remain on that bench during good behavior.

Mr. LOGAN. That is true.

Mr. BORAH. That is fundamental. There is no way to get them off that bench so long as they observe the rules of good behavior.

Mr. LOGAN. That is true; there is no doubt about that.

Mr. BORAH. What we have undertaken to do is to provide a retirement provision. I say that that does not amount to taking a judge off the Supreme Court.

Mr. LOGAN. I agree with that.

Mr. BORAH. Then he is on the Supreme Court.

Mr. LOGAN. That is true.

Mr. BORAH. And we have a Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices there, and the President has no vacancy to fill.

Mr. LOGAN. That is where I agree with the Senator from Georgia rather than with the Senator from Idaho. We have done this already, and it has been complained about so much by the people and in the Senate; we have, under the act of Congress, a Supreme Court, not of a fixed number of 9 but a Supreme Court which may vary anywhere between 6 and 18 members, under chapter 21 of the laws of the first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress. It provides that when one of the Justices retires the President shall appoint a successor. By implication, according to my interpretation of the law, that amends section 203 of the statute, or whatever section it is, providing that the Supreme Court shall consist of one Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the escape from the position is that we have now increased the Supreme Court to 10.

Mr. President, I share the belief that we have increased the membership of the Court. We have in truth created a new office under the authority of the United States. This was done during the term of office for which Senator BLACK was elected. He cannot, therefore, be regarded as eligible under the Constitution for appointment to this additional and new office.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHITE. I yield.

Mr. JOHNSON of Colorado. Does the Senator contend that if Mr. Justice Van Devanter should die the President then could appoint another Supreme Court Justice?

Mr. WHITE. Yes; that would be my impression.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, we have a special order at 2 o'clock, and I do not want to occupy too much time. I am rather reluctant to yield, but I will yield to the Senator from Washington, and after that I shall decline to yield until I shall have concluded.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Accepting the conclusion of the Senator from Maine that by this act we have increased the size of the Court, is it not also true, if that is true, that we created a position on the Supreme Court which requires additional qualifications than the qualifications of simply having been nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate?

Mr. WHITE. I should not say so.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. In order for a judge to occupy the tenth position upon the Supreme Court he must have served upon that Court a certain length of time and must have attained a certain age.

Mr. WHITE. I do not so understand at all. An original position, a new position, an additional judgeship may be filled by the nomination of the President and the confirmation of the Senate; and I know of no qualifications prescribed anywhere for a Justice of the Supreme Court.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Certainly Senator BLACK could not qualify for the position that Mr. Justice Van Devanter is now occupying in the Supreme Court.

Mr. WHITE. I agree to that.

Mr. SCHWELLENBACH. Therefore, since he could not qualify for that position, Senator BLACK is not nominated to occupy the new position, but is nominated to occupy the position left by Mr. Justice Van Devanter.

Mr. WHITE. My understanding of the situation is that there is no vacancy because of the decision of Mr. Justice Van Devanter to accept retirement privileges. He is still a Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. I think we have, however, created an additional judgeship. We have increased the membership of the Court from 9 to 10; and my contention is that Senator BLACK is not eligible to fill the new place, because that is a position created during the term of office for which he was elected a Senator of the United States.

Mr. GREEN rose.

Mr. WHITE. I must decline to yield further.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President——

Mr. WHITE. I beg the Senator not to interrupt me further.

Mr. GREEN. I beg——

Mr. WHITE. Mr. President, I decline further to yield.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator declines to yield.

Mr. WHITE. We have a special order for 2 o'clock, and I desire to conclude, so that I may not interfere with it. I do not want to be discourteous.

Mr. President, I repeat, I share the belief that we have increased the membership of the Court. We have, in truth, created a new office under the authority of the United States. This was done during the term of office for which the Senator from Alabama was elected. He cannot, therefore, be regarded as eligible under the Constitution for appointment to this office.

Still another constitutional prohibition stands in the way of Senator BLACK entering into the office for which he has been nominated. The Constitution says—and I paraphrase, that—

No Senator * * * shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time.

That the emoluments of the office of a Justice of the Supreme Court have been increased during the term for which Senator BLACK was elected does not seem to me to be open to doubt.

Let us first inquire what an emolument is. Bouvier's Law Dictionary defines an emolument as—

The profit arising from office or employment, that which is received as a compensation for services or which is annexed to the possession of office as salary, fees, or perquisites; advantage, gain, public or private. It imports any perquisite, advantage, profit, or gain arising from the possession of an office.

A study of cases, so far as I have been able to examine them, adds little to this comprehensive definition.

In an early New Hampshire case the Court held that the word "emolument", among other things, comprehended an exemption from military duty allowed to a person employed in carrying the mail. Except for this one case, I have found none enlarging the sweep of the Bouvier definition.

Let us consider, then, the effects of the Retirement Act upon the emoluments of the office of Justice of the Supreme Court. Has there been a change in the compensation amounting to an increase thereof? I return an affirmative answer to this question.

Prior to the act of March 1, 1937, by the law then in force, a Justice upon resignation was paid the same amount he was theretofore receiving as a Justice; but because after resignation he was no longer a Justice, his salary was not protected by the constitutional provision that the salary of a judge shall not be diminished during his continuance in office. It became, therefore, subject to income tax at the same rates imposed upon the salaries of citizens generally.

That this is so admits of no doubt. Moreover, the salary of a Justice who had resigned was subject to other possibilities of reduction. The illustration which immediately suggests itself is the reduction in the salary of Mr. Justice Holmes, which, following his resignation, was reduced by one-half, as a result, I believe, of the Economy Act passed by the Congress. But by the privilege of retirement now accorded the salary of a retired Justice may not be reduced. By the constitutional provision just referred to it is assured him, undiminished.

This proposition is sustained by the Supreme Court in the case of Booth v. United States (291 U. S. 339). The Court there held that a district or circuit judge of the United States who retired under the authority of section 375 of title 28 of the United States Code continues in office within the meaning of section 1 of article III of the Constitution, and that his compensation may neither be taken away nor diminished. The Court in this case further held that such a retiring judge does not surrender his commission, but continues to act under it.

He loses his seniority in office, but that fact attests that he remains in office—

Said the Court.

Mr. President, there cannot be successful challenge of the proposition that when we have given to a Justice the new privilege of retirement with a salary that may not be diminished by taxation or by other means, we have increased the emoluments of the office of a Justice.

I summon other Senators to the support of these assertions that the salary of a former Justice who is no longer a Justice because of resignation is subject to taxes or to other reduction by congressional act, while the salary of a retired Justice is beyond congressional reach because protected by the Constitution itself.

The late leader of the Senate, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, said this:

Mr. ROBINSON. If a Justice should resign, the Congress would have the power to repeal any provision of law as to his salary. A Justice who has served to an extreme old age ought not to be expected to resign from his office and take the chance of being denied any provision during the years of his life when his earning power is entirely gone.

As stated by the Senator from Nevada, the Congress has availed itself of its power very greatly to reduce the compensation of Justices who have resigned. If it saw fit, it could decline to make any provision whatever for a Justice who had resigned; and he, not being in the status of an officer, having vacated his office, would have no remedy whatever. So long as he is retired he is still in a sense a member of the Court, and his compensation cannot be reduced by law. There is a very practical difference.

Mr. President, of a truth there is, as Senator Robinson clearly stated, a practical difference. It is a dollars and cents difference. In the case of the retired Justice, the salary is $20,000 a year net, reduced neither by income-tax nor by any other means. In the case of a former Justice resigned, it is $20,000 a year diminished by income-tax and subject to the hazard of congressional whim.

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. MCCARRAN], a profound lawyer, has said of a Justice who has retired:

By his own volition in accepting the terms of this bill he places himself in the status of a judge not in active service, and thereby maintains his right to hold his emoluments as his emoluments are now paid to him, and to hold his position subject to the call of the Chief Justice.

By the legislation of the Congress there has been accorded to a Justice of the Supreme Court the privilege of retirement, carrying with it a new right with respect to salary. This is an increase in the emoluments of the office of a Justice. It is a barrier which cannot be rightfully scaled in the present instance.

There are other emoluments which have been increased; for an emolument is something more than salary. The certainty of unlimited compensation enjoyed by a retired Justice, when set against the hazard of reduced pay or no pay at all in the case of a resigned Justice, is an advantage constituting an increased emolument.

The privilege of such judicial service as a retired Justice may, in the language of the statute, "be willing to undertake", is a new right accorded; it is an advantage accruing to such a retired Justice, constituting an increased emolument. It is an advantage accruing to such retired Justice, constituting in and of itself an increased emolument.

Mr. President, it is my belief that the Congress has created an office which Senator BLACK may not occupy at this time. It is my conviction that because of constitutional inhibitions he is not eligible. It is my belief also that we have increased the emoluments of the office of a Justice of the Supreme Court. It is my profound conviction that by reason thereof, Senator BLACK is not eligible to membership upon the Supreme Court during the term for which he was elected.

Mr. President, I have taken a solemn oath to support and defend the Constitution of the United States. I cannot permit agreeable personal relations, or the customs of this body, to make more persuasive appeal to me than the supreme law of the land. I shall, therefore, vote against the confirmation of Senator BLACK as a Justice of the Supreme Court.

WATER-POLLUTION CONTROL

The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2711) to create a Division of Water Pollution Control in the United States Public Health Service, and for other purposes.

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. President, I believe that most Senators are generally familiar with the problem of water pollution. It has been a problem for many, many years. But recently, with the continued increase in water pollution, it has become an emergency problem, calling for immediate action.

Originally we were concerned with pollution because of its destruction of fish and game and other aquatic life in and along our streams. That concern is still with us; but we now face the even more important problem of national health, which is being affected by stream pollution. It is not necessary for me to relate the thousands of examples showing how water pollution affects the public health. Newspapers only a short time ago carried articles concerning the spreading of disease in Ohio as a result of polluted waters. The medical profession has also been studying closely the possible cause of cancer and of the dreaded infantile paralysis from polluted waters. I have ventured to suggest that even those Senators who have given no special attention to this problem at all are almost daily confronted with articles in their newspapers concerning the results of pollution. Many Senators have come in actual contact with the problem in health work, or in traveling about their States on official business, or by engaging in fishing or other sports activities, where the stench and odor of polluted water is obvious. Indeed, the water-pollution problem has become so important that one authority has declared that we must destroy water pollution or it will destroy us.

The bill now being considered will give the Senate of the United States an opportunity to approach a solution to this important problem. The measure represents the best thought of scores of experts and organizations who have been fighting for years for corrective measures. The measure contains all of the provisions of the Barkley-Vinson bill as it was passed by the House, together with portions of my bill, Senate bill 13, which is the same in form as a bill favorably reported in the Seventy-fourth Congress by the Senate Commerce Committee.

I am happy to state that this composite bill, which we now know as a compromise measure, can be submitted for consideration at this time. My bill, Senate bill 13, and the original, House bill 2711, both sought to approach the water-pollution problem from a Federal standpoint, and the sponsors of both measures recognized the vital need of immediate action to control pollution. The two measures did represent two schools of thought, however, a division of opinion, so to speak, among the proponents themselves, which was not ironed out until recently.

Several years ago my interest in this subject was aroused by my work on a board which sought to eliminate pollution of water in Connecticut, and along the Connecticut River. I was startled then to learn the extent and the effects of water pollution. Since coming to the Senate I determined that something should be done about it, and in 1934 I called a conference of experts in Washington with the Secretary of War. After a hearing the conference selected a committee of five persons to draft a plan for transmittal to the President. A short time later the committee divided its opinion on two principles, somewhat different in operation, but with the same objective, and to this was added a third program, of the National Resources Committee.

Out of all these plans, and suggestions of many individuals and organizations and experts throughout the country, I was finally able to draft specific legislation, which I introduced in the Seventy-fourth Congress—Senate bill 3958—and extensive hearings were held before a subcommittee of the Senate Commerce Committee on that measure.

Eventually my bill, with several amendments, was reported by the committee. At about the same time Representative VINSON in the House and the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BARKLEY] in the Senate joined in introducing a measure to establish a division of water control in the Public Health Service. At first the differences between the two bills were such that no amendment seemed possible, but after the Barkley-Vinson measure, now known as House bill 2711, had passed the House and come to the Senate, it was possible for the Senator from Kentucky and me to work out a compromise, which has been adopted by the Senate Commerce Committee, and is now before the Senate as a substitute for the original Barkley-Vinson measure.

I believe that all Senators will agree with the proposal and objective of this measure. I believe that many who were originally opposed to pollution-control measures will now agree that this compromise measure represents the best that can be accomplised at the present time. It is true that the measure represents only an approach to the problem of pollution control by the Federal Government, but it is an effective approach, which will bring results within a few years.

The measure does not create any new department in the Government. It does establish in the Public Health Service a division of water pollution control, in charge of a commissioned engineer officer of the United States Public Health Service, detailed by the Surgeon General.

The new division is authorized to cooperate with the agencies of the several States which are duly designated to deal with the subject of water pollution. The division will encourage cooperative activities by the several States in the prevention and abatement of water pollution by encouraging the enactment of uniform State laws relative to water pollution, by encouraging compacts between the several States for the prevention and abatement of water pollution, by the collection and dissemination of information, and by making available to State agencies, municipalities, industries, and individuals the results of surveys and experiments conducted by the division and other agencies. To further this objective the bill authorizes consent of Congress to the formation of agreements and compacts between the States for the prevention and abatement of water pollution.

The bill provides that any State, municipality, or other public body which is discharging untreated sewage into navigable waters is eligible for Federal aid in the form of grants-in-aid and/or loans for the construction of necessary treatment works, subject to certain limitations. Business establishments, industries, and individuals who are responsible for pollution are also eligible to obtain Federal aid in the form of loans for necessary treatment works.

The bill sets up a board of five commissioned engineer officers of the Public Health Service to meet at various times and generally supervise the projects undertaken by the division. The board members will be regular Public Health officials, detailed from time to time to serve on the board. The board will act upon recommendations submitted by the boards of health, in behalf of applicants for loans and grants, and will consider the public necessity for such projects, and the propriety of construction in part at the expense of the United States.

In order more effectively to handle the problem on a cooperative basis, the board is directed to classify navigable waters of the continental United States into areas to be known as sanitary water districts, and to fix standards of purity in each such district for the navigable waters thereof and for such tributaries from which pollution may flow, be washed, or be carried into such navigable waters. Thus, there will be established some uniform basis by which the State agencies may operate.

In addition, the board shall make reports to Congress, and shall determine the amount of money that will be necessary from time to time for grants-in-aid or loans under the various abatement projects. Before any money whatever is expended for such projects the board must submit a report to the Public Printer, to be submitted to Congress, so that Congress may authorize the projects in somewhat the same manner as the Congress acts upon rivers and harbors projects.

The only authorization for an appropriation in the bill is in section 10, authorizing the appropriation of the sum of $300,000 for each fiscal year beginning with the fiscal year ending June 30, 1938, for all necessary expenses of the division in administering the provisions of the act, and an additional annual appropriation of $700,000, as provided in section 11, to be paid to the States for expenditure by or under the direction of their respective State health authorities in the promotion, investigation, surveys, and studies necessary in the prevention of water pollution.

The remainder of the bill provides for the employment of personnel, to a large extent by transfer, assignment, or detail from other divisions or departments of the Government. Clerks, stenographers, and others in the routine classes of employment are to be appointed in accordance with civil-service laws and in conformity with the Classification Act of 1923 as amended.

The measure merely provides for Federal supervision of cooperative efforts with State agencies in the work of abating pollution. It goes beyond this in only one respect, that of enforcement, which is provided for in section 8. There are some who object to this section, which is taken from my pollution-control bill, S. 13, and slightly modified here, but I believe that if the provision is now studied carefully, the objections will no longer exist. The section clearly asserts the Federal jurisdiction over commerce and navigation; to extend, change, and amend the Admiralty and Maritime Act; to give due effect to the migratory bird treaty; and to protect the fisheries by declaring the discharge or deposit of waste within certain limitations to be a public nuisance, if such waste, whether in solid or gaseous or liquid state, shall be injurious to human health or to any other form of life, including aquatic life or migratory birds, or if it impairs in any manner the utility of such water for navigation purposes. It provides that after the expiration of 3 years after the enactment of the bill an action to prevent or abate such nuisance may be brought in the name of the United States by any United States attorney, at the direction of the Attorney General. Such action shall be brought as an action in equity, and may be brought in any court of the United States, or in any district where the alleged nuisance exists.

Please note, Mr. President, that enforcement is provided in a court of equity. It is intended to take care of a few recalcitrant polluters whose activities are not unknown even to those persons who have had no experience at all with the subject of water-pollution control. For instance, there have been many cooperative efforts in various areas to abate pollution. Usually about 80 percent of the polluters of the waterways recognize the necessity for abating pollution and agree to cooperate in an abatement program. The other 20 percent fail to cooperate, or openly refuse to cooperate. Some of them openly assert that they do not want to be bothered with efforts to abate pollution. Many of them regard Nature's waterways as open sewers. There are a few who, I believe, would refuse to cooperate on a voluntary basis regardless of all cooperative effort and assistance which might be offered to them. No amount of education has been able to change the view of a small minority, and unfortunately this small minority can usually demoralize the whole effort of cooperation. Those who cooperate ask, "What good does it do for me to abate the pollution from my establishment, if my neighbor up the river refuses to cooperate, and continues to pollute the waters above me"?

The same question is often repeated by industries in different States. A waterway is no respecter of State boundaries. When it flows from one State into another, the efforts of the industries of one State to clear up polluted waters are often entirely nullified by failure of polluters in the neighboring States to cooperate.

In addition to the willful polluters, there are many, of course, who fear that there is no known method of treating the pollution from their plants. By expert assistance, however, the Public Health Service will be able to determine some method of pollution control, if possible, and offer a remedy. It has actually been found in many cases that the method of treating pollution in various industries has converted the pollutants into useful byproducts, which more than pay for the cost of installing a treatment process.

The important point to keep in mind regarding the Federal enforcement provision is that the division of water pollution control of the United States Public Health Service would, first of all, cooperate with the agencies in making surveys of their sources of pollution in given areas. Remedies would be sought, and this information would be furnished to the polluters, who would also be informed of the provisions for loans and grants by the Federal Government to install the necessary equipment. Every effort would be made to assist the polluter in a voluntary cooperative manner. On the basis of past experience it is regarded as fairly certain that at least 80 percent of the polluters would be willing to cooperate on this basis. The others, if they continued to refuse all cooperative assistance, would be subjected to the enforcement provisions, and in cases of open, willful pollution of waters affecting public health, and marine life, and navigation, the Attorney General could direct the district attorney in the area to institute an action in equity to prevent or abate pollution by the violator. If the polluter violated the court order, he would be subject, of course, to the penalties provided for contempt of court, which are the only penalties provided. Some Senators and many Members of the House have urged me to include a penalty as severe as a heavy fine or imprisonment to take care of such polluters, but I believe that when the polluters are offered information and financial assistance, and in many cases are shown how to obtain salable byproducts from the installation of pollution treatment works, they will want to cooperate, and will not be violators. The very existence of this enforcement provision itself, and the knowledge on the part of willful polluters that they can be restrained, will tend to make them more willing to accept the cooperative facilities of the measure.

Mr. President, this is not the time for temporizing with such an urgent problem. Now is the time for the Congress of the United States to act. The principles of my bill as inserted in this substitute measure have been endorsed by the water-pollution meeting of the American Wildlife Conference, which met in Washington at the call of the President, and by the Delaware Tri-State Anti-Pollution Conference, the antipollution committee of the American Fisheries Association, the American Game Conference, the Pennsylvania Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs, the West Virginia Affiliated Sportsmen's Association, the Kanawha Game and Fish Association of West Virginia, the Norfolk, Va., chapter of the Izaak Walton League, the American Game Conference at its convention in New York, and by practically all conservation organizations to which it has been presented.

I understand that the other provisions of the bill have not only the endorsement of the State boards of public health, which met in conference in Washington, but also the endorsement of many manufacturers and organizations that for a long time were opposed to most Federal plans of water-pollution control.

This problem cannot be solved on the basis of State action alone. Like flood control, it must be approached from the Federal viewpoint. Without Federal agencies the problem of water pollution will never be solved. The States have valiantly endeavored to solve the problem, but so long as there are streams flowing from one State to another, and so long as there is a lack of uniformity in water-pollution control, and until some financial assistance through loans and grants may be offered to help the polluter, there can be no really effective result. The tragic feature of pollution-control work is its incompleteness; the very fact that some polluters will not or cannot cooperate demoralizes the whole cooperative effort of those who do.

Congress should be aware also that the loans and grants provision in this measure will afford a certain amount of employment. The projects are in effect public-works projects. In fact, the Public Works Administration has been making loans and grants for this type of projects, and some consideration was given to an authorization permitting the handling of the loans and grants feature by the Administrator of Public Works. It was decided, however, in view of the necessity for a long-time, permanent program, and also because of the limitations placed on the expenditure of emergency funds by the Public Works Administration, that it would be more proper to grant special authority to the Public Health Service. I appeal to the understanding of Senators to support this measure and to them I also present the following Appeal of a Polluted Stream, a poem which I believe effectively presents this problem.

I am but a little stream
Flowing through your town for years,
Doing daily just your will,
Suff'ring patiently your jeers.

When I think of bygone days
And recall what I had been,
Thoughts of sorrow fill my breast
At the dirty deeds of men.

I was once the purest streamlet
That e'er blazed a mountain trail,
And God's sunshine smiled upon me
As I lingered in your vale.

And my bosom was so laden
With the speckled trout within,
That no fly nor a mosquito
Ever lived—to enter in.

How the goddess and her graces,
And the nymphs and naiads, too,
Sat and watched my crystal surface,
Knowing they were mirrored, true!

And the winged one from the heavens
Came to rest upon my banks,
Dipped into my limpid waters,
Sipped of them and sang me, "Thanks."

Too, the wild deer of the forest,
And the kine from neighboring farm,
Plunged into my friendly bosom,
Knowing I'd not do them harm.

I was mother to the redskin,
And I bore him on my breast
As he skimmed my placid waters
With a nature lover's zest.

But he went one day, forever,
With his tepees from my side,
And he left me to the white man
Whose impurities I hide.

Is there not a nature lover,
Or some man of civic pride
Who will plead my cause of justice
With the fathers who preside?

—Ambrose Greelis.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I have discovered in the bill three different authorizations for money. One authorization is for the appropriation of sums for the building of projects on the basis of contribution of one-third by the United States and two-thirds by the States or subdivisions of States. The second authorization is for $300,000 annual appropriation for administration. The third authorization is the $700,000 appropriation for promotion and study purposes. Are other authorizations for money contained in the bill?

Mr. LONERGAN. No. However, the authorizations about which the Senator inquires have been taken from the House bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. I am looking at pages 24 and 25 of the Senate amendment to the House bill. Apparently the authorizations are made in connection with the Senate amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator from Connecticut yield?

Mr. LONERGAN. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. Action by Congress is necessary to carry out the projects. It is necessary that they be recommended to Congress by the division of stream pollution which is set up in the bill, and, of course, they will be subject to congressional action.

On page 24 the $300,000 item is simply an authorization for the administration expenses of the division of stream pollution. The $700,000 item is the fund set up out of which loans and grants may be made to cities or to private industries which desire to abate the nuisances of which complaint is made.

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes; but are other authorizations contained in the bill?

Mr. BARKLEY. No. That is all.

Mr. AUSTIN. There is no limit upon the amount of money that may be expended under this bill, is there?

Mr. BARKLEY. The limitation in the two items on pages 24 and 25 in the aggregate is $1,000,000 per year.

Mr. AUSTIN. According to the terms of the bill all unexpended balances are carried over from one year to the other.

Mr. BARKLEY. Unexpended balances might be available for the succeeding years. The other authorizations, which are more or less in blank, depend entirely upon the action of Congress each year. Congress may approve these projects or turn all of them down, or it may approve some of them and reject others. Action on them is always, however, in the control of Congress.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, one further question. Was any evidence offered in committee as to the probable immediate cost under the provisions of the bill?

Mr. BARKLEY. The House committee hearings went into more detail with respect to that matter. The probable immediate cost is not even as much as the amount authorized in the two items of $300,000 and $700,000. The institutions in question have 3 years in which to try to do away with the condition with which the bill deals. Many of them, of course, probably would not be in a position the first year to do so, and probably not the second year, but during the whole 3-year period there would be no more than $1,000,000 a year appropriated by Congress if all the money authorized under the terms of the bill should be appropriated. So that during the 3-year period, before any Federal action would be taken toward abatement of nuisances, the total amount appropriated would be only $3,000,000.

Mr. KING. Will the law expire by limitation within 3 years?

Mr. BARKLEY. No. It is permanent law, but the 3-year period is the one which must elapse before the Federal Government will take any steps to bring about the abatement of the nuisances.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, while the objective is praiseworthy, it is, in my opinion, projecting the Federal Government into activities that do not belong to it. I feel that we should not pass the bill until we have further considered it.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, I am wondering if $300,000 is not a very large administrative fund to be used for the expenditure of $700,000?

Mr. BARKLEY. I will say to the Senator that the bill authorizes the Public Health Service to make a Nation-wide survey of all streams and stream pollution, and I do not think that is a large amount when we consider that the investigations they must make cover the entire country. It seems to me that although the amount may seem in proportion large compared to $700,000, those charged with carrying out the terms of the bill must do this preliminary work before they actually begin to loan the money covered by the $700,000 authorization.

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, the remarks made by the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE] earlier in the day induce me to feel that at this time I should make one or two observations.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. By a previous order another matter is to be taken up at 2 o'clock, and I am very anxious to get this bill passed by 2 o'clock. The Senator can make his remarks in connection with the other bill.

Mr. STEIWER. I should be very happy to cooperate with the Senator.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the Senator from Oregon after action has been taken on the bill.

The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill is still before the Senate and open to further amendments. If there be no further amendment, the question is on the engrossment of the amendment and the third reading of the bill.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill (H. R. 2711) was read the third time and passed.

JAMES O. COOK

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 854) for the relief of James O. Cook, which were, on page 1, line 8, after "Cook", to insert "of Valier, Mont.", and on page 2, line 1, to strike out "1 year" and insert "6 months."

Mr. WHEELER. I move that the Senate agree to the amendments of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

REGULATION OF AIR TRANSPORTATION

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 2 o'clock having arrived, under the unanimous-consent agreement entered into on Saturday last, the question now before the Senate is the motion of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill No. 2, having to do with the regulation of air transportation. The Senator from Oregon [Mr. STEIWER] is recognized, if he desires to speak, under the agreement previously made.

Mr. STEIWER obtained the floor.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield.

Mr. AUSTIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will call the roll.

The Chief Clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Adams	Berry	Brown, Mich.	Byrnes
Andrews	Bilbo	Brown, N. H.	Capper
Ashurst	Black	Bulkley	Caraway
Austin	Bone	Bulow	Chavez
Bankhead	Borah	Burke	Clark
Barkley	Bridges	Byrd	Connally

Dieterich	Holt	McKellar	Shipstead
Donahey	Hughes	Minton	Smith
Ellender	Johnson, Calif.	Moore	Steiwer
Frazier	Johnson, Colo.	Murray	Thomas, Okla.
George	King	Neely	Thomas, Utah
Gerry	La Follette	Nye	Townsend
Gillette	Lee	Overton	Truman
Glass	Lewis	Pepper	Tydings
Green	Lodge	Pittman	Van Nuys
Guffey	Logan	Pope	Wagner
Hale	Lonergan	Radcliffe	Walsh
Harrison	Lundeen	Reynolds	Wheeler
Hatch	McAdoo	Schwartz	White
Herring	McCarran	Schwellenbach
Hitchcock	McGill	Sheppard

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ELLENDER in the chair). Eighty-two Senators having answered to their names, a quorum is present.

NOMINATION OF SENATOR BLACK TO THE SUPREME COURT

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, the remarks delivered earlier this afternoon by the junior Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE] induce me to add a few observations concerning the eligibility of the senior Senator from Alabama [Mr. BLACK] for appointment to the United States Supreme Court.

In order to make the language available to all those interested, I read into the RECORD the act of March 1, 1937. It is as follows:

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Justices of the Supreme Court are hereby granted the same rights and privileges with regard to retiring, instead of resigning, granted to judges other than Justices of the Supreme Court by section 260 of the Judicial Code (U. S. C., title 28, sec. 375), and the President shall be authorized to appoint a successor to any such Justice of the Supreme Court so retiring from regular active service on the Bench, but such Justice of the Supreme Court so retired may nevertheless be called upon by the Chief Justice and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties, in any judicial circuit, including those of a circuit justice in such circuit, as such retired Justice may be willing to undertake.

Under the authority of the act just read, a Justice of the Supreme Court submitted to the President a letter in which he announced his retirement. An interesting question now develops concerning the status of the Justice who has availed himself of the privileges and rights of this act.

The argument has been made here, and was made upon an earlier day, that Justice Van Devanter remains a Justice of the Supreme Court, even in retirement; that he possesses the judicial powers of a Justice and that he may be called upon to perform certain services which can be performed only by a Justice.

I will not attempt to retrace the ground covered by others in behalf of this question as to the status of the retired Justice. I do, however, wish to call attention to one or two things in the act to which I believe no reference has yet been made.

Relative to judges of the circuit and district courts, the language of section 260 of the Judicial Code makes a clear distinction between resignation and retirement. The language of that section of the code with respect to the matter of resignation is as follows:

Resign his office.

The language with respect to retirement is as follows:

May retire upon the salary of which he is then in receipt from regular active service on the bench.

The distinction in the two propositions is obvious. However, if there were any disposition to argue with respect to that distinction, let me call attention to the further language of the statute which makes the provision under discussion perfectly clear. I am still referring to section 260 of the Judicial Code, which I now read again, as follows:

But instead of resigning, any judge other than a Justice of the Supreme Court who is qualified to resign under the foregoing provisions may retire—

And so forth.

When the Congress enacted the act of March 1, 1937, the distinctions in the earlier act were retained. The language which I read a little while ago in the act of March 1, 1937, provides:

That Justices of the Supreme Court are hereby granted the same rights and privileges with regard to retiring, instead of resigning, granted to judges other than Justices of the Supreme Court by section 260 of the Judicial Code—

And so forth.

It may be seen, therefore, that Congress, in enacting the law, set up the distinction and made it perfectly plain that the act of March 1, 1937, created a retirement status, plainly distinguishable from the status resulting from resignation.

It is argued, and I think with great force, that because the Justice on such retirement status retains certain of his judicial powers, he is not entirely separated from the Court. The decision of the Supreme Court in the Booth case supports this contention. It is there held, referring to a circuit judge, that he does not relinquish his office.

In this regard, I want to call attention to the case of Maxwell against United States, reported in volume 3, Federal, Second, at page 906. I know many Senators are familiar with this case, but I think the RECORD ought to show just what was determined by it.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SCHWELLENBACH in the chair). Does the Senator from Oregon yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. Does the Senator know whether a writ of certiorari was applied for in the Maxwell case? I have forgotten. I intended to look it up. Will the Senator give me the information?

Mr. STEIWER. I am not sure. I have been told that the case was taken to the Supreme Court on a writ of error and was affirmed. I know, however—and it provides a very important answer to the Senator's question—that the Maxwell case was cited in the Booth case, apparently with approval.

Mr. HATCH. It was merely cited in the Booth case, but there was no comment on it in the Booth case.

Mr. STEIWER. It is true there was no comment, but it was cited in the opinion to support the argument which the Justice of the Supreme Court was making and upon which the Booth case was decided. So I feel we are justified in saying that it was cited with approval in the Booth case.

I wish to read briefly from one paragraph of the Maxwell decision by the Circuit Court of Appeals of the Fourth Circuit, as follows:

The surety says that the late Judge Smith, before whom the case was tried below, had not been properly designated to hold the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of South Carolina and what was there done was a nullity. At the time Judge Smith was a retired district judge of that district, having the status defined and regulated by section 260 of the Judicial Code as amended by the act of February 25, 1919. The surety's contention is that a special authorization is required before such a judge can discharge any judicial function. If he is to act in the judicial circuit to which he formerly belonged, that authorization must come from its senior circuit judge. If what he is to do is to be done outside of that circuit, the authority may be given by either the Chief Justice of the United States, or by presiding, or senior judge of the court in which he is to sit. It is admitted that the senior circuit judge of this circuit did not designate Judge Smith to hold a district court in the eastern district of South Carolina. The short answer to all this is that Judge Smith, under his original commission, was entitled to hold the court of that district and required no designation from anyone to do so. He was still a district judge of that district, as the act itself clearly recognizes by directing, "The judge so retiring voluntarily * * * shall be held and treated as if junior in commission to the remaining judges of said court." Such is the construction which the act has universally received in practice in this circuit and, so far as we know, in all the others. Moreover, it may be said, in passing, it was the one given to it in the congressional debate which preceded its enactment. Mr. Steele, who spoke for the committee which reported it to the House, said: "The merit of this provision is that instead of resigning, the judge simply retires and is still enabled to perform such judicial service as he is capable of performing when the business of the district demands it. The district receives the benefit of such service without any additional expense to the Government." CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, Sixty-fifth Congress, third session, 368. During the course of the debate, Mr. Dyer said: "If this bill becomes a law it will still permit the other judge, that is the judge who is being given this assistance, but who still remains on the bench, to be a judge in fact, not a supernumerary, and if anyone appeared before him for a writ of any kind, he would have full authority to issue that writ.

In other words, the new judge would not be the only judge of the court."

Comment upon the quoted language seems unnecessary except to say that its significance lies in the fact that the district judge was permitted to resume his seat upon the bench without being assigned or designated by any other or higher authority. The circuit court of appeals sustained his action in trying a case in his own court; and, in the Booth case, the Supreme Court cited that decision with apparent approval. These cases support the conclusion that no vacancy exists merely by reason of retirement. Inasmuch as there is no vacancy caused by retirement, there can be no appointment except upon the theory that a new office has been created.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEIWER. I am glad to yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Will not the Senator concede, however, that there is a difference in the statute referred to in the Booth case and the statute which was enacted at this session of Congress?

In the Booth case, the retirement statute provided a district or circuit judge might retire, but it also provided that he could be called back to service to perform the same functions he had always performed. The Court held, of course, that he was still a judge, because he could not perform those duties unless he was a judge.

But in the instant case, we have enacted a statute which provides that a Justice of the Supreme Court may retire, and it does not contemplate that he can ever go back on the Supreme Court bench and perform the functions which as a Justice of the Supreme Court he had once performed. He may be assigned to duty on a circuit court.

Is is not also true the Booth decision hinged entirely upon an act of Congress? I read from the syllabus in the Booth case as follows:

1. A district or circuit judge of the United States who retires pursuant to section 260 of the Judicial Code, as amended, continues in office within the meaning of section 1 of article III of the Constitution, and his compensation may not be diminished.

2. In the light of the evident purpose of the act that a retiring judge shall continue to hold office and perform official duties, its provision for the appointment of a "successor" cannot be construed as vacating the office.

It all hinged on the intent of the Congress. On the one hand, the intent of Congress was that he should still be a district judge though on a retired basis and could be recalled to perform the regular duties he had theretofore performed; while in this case, the intent of Congress was that he shall never perform the duties he relinquishes as a Justice of the Supreme Court. He gives them up voluntarily and retires, and such duties as he may thereafter perform are not the duties of his old office, but the duties of a circuit judge.

Mr. STEIWER. Has the Senator concluded his question?

Mr. CONNALLY. Yes. I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. STEIWER. I am glad the Senator interposed the question because it brings me very abruptly to a matter which must be considered. I may say most respectfully that I am not in accord with the views just expressed by the Senator from Texas and I should like to state the reasons why I am not in accord with those views.

The act of February 25, 1919, under which numerous district judges and circuit judges have been retired, provides as follows:

But a judge so retiring may, nevertheless, be called upon by the senior circuit judge of that circuit and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties in such circuit as such retired judge may be willing to undertake, or he may be called upon by the Chief Justice and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties in any other circuit as such retired judge may be willing to undertake, or he may be called upon either by the presiding judge or senior judge of any other such court and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties in such court as such retired judge may be willing to undertake.

In all three of the alternative propositions which I have just read from the act of 1919, the retired judge may be called upon to perform such duties as he may be willing to undertake, all within his previous authority and power as a judge.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. STEIWER. Not if it is such a long question as the previous one, but I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. Is there anything in the retirement statute which we enacted recently that contemplates the recalling of Justice Van Devanter to perform duties on the Supreme Court bench?

Mr. STEIWER. I shall come to that in a moment.

I was pointing out that under the act of 1919 the judge may be called back to perform such duties as he may be willing to undertake within his judicial powers as a judge. He might never be called upon to perform all of those duties. He is not obliged to perform any of those duties, but he may, when called upon, and according to the Maxwell case he may without being called upon, perform a certain part of the judicial functions which he had previously been authorized to perform.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEIWER. I shall yield in just a moment. I want to complete my answer to the question propounded by the Senator from Texas.

When we come to the act of March 1, 1937, we find a similar provision which I read:

But such Justice of the Supreme Court so retired may nevertheless be called upon by the Chief Justice and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties, in any judicial circuit, including those of a circuit justice in such circuit, as such retired Justice may be willing to undertake.

I very respectfully suggest to the Senator from Texas that under either act the judge in retirement who is called back to service may, as a matter of fact, not be called upon to render all of the duties which he had previously performed as a judge. There is this difference, that under section 260 of the Judicial Code he may be called upon to perform all his duties as judge and if he is willing to undertake them he may perform such duties. Under the act of March 1, 1937, the Justice may be called upon to perform only the duties in the judicial circuits including those of a circuit justice. But those duties, as we all know, by traditional acception are duties of a Justice of the Supreme Court.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President——

Mr. STEIWER. I want to go a little further before yielding.

The difference between the two statutes is that the judge under the earlier act might be called upon to perform all the duties he formerly performed, and under the latter act he may be called upon to perform only a part of the duties which he had formerly performed. I believe the Senator will not quarrel with that proposition; and I submit, in connection with it, as an answer to his question, that the difference between the two acts is a difference in degree only, and that there is no difference in principle, because under either act the judges are subject to call and may perform judicial acts which cannot be performed except upon the theory that the judge is still a judge. Therefore retirement by itself does not create a vacancy. It follows that authority to appoint creates a new office when retirement occurs.

I yield now to the Senator from Texas.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator's answer, as I understand, is that there is nothing in the retirement act recently passed which contemplates that the retired Justice may be recalled to sit on the Supreme Bench.

Mr. STEIWER. Yes. The Senator from Texas states the matter correctly.

Mr. CONNALLY. I thank the Senator. I am through.

Mr. HATCH rose.

Mr. STEIWER. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I do not want to interrupt the course of the Senator's argument at all, but I wonder if he would object to reading from the statute, which I presume he has before him, that provision relating to the lower court, where it refers to the retiring judge as being junior in commission. I wonder if he would attach any significance to that language, and also to the fact that neither that language nor anything similar to it is included in the act of March 1, 1937.

Mr. STEIWER. There is no provision relating to seniority included in the act of March 1, 1937. There is good reason why it was not included. In the very nature of things the matter of seniority on circuit courts is of importance. It determines who shall be the presiding judge of the circuit court.

Mr. HATCH. It also applies to the district courts.

Mr. STEIWER. Yes. It is important in relation to the district courts. With respect to the United States Supreme Court, the law provides for a Chief Justice and eight Associate Justices. The Associate Justices are equal, one with the other. There is no reason for providing seniority as among them or as between them, and for that reason it was not added when the act dealing solely with Justices of the Supreme Court was passed.

Mr. HATCH. Would it not be the extreme view to hold that perhaps the framers of the act had in mind the Maxwell decision, a decision which pointed out the significance of those very words as indicating that the judge had remained a judge and possessed all the powers he had ever possessed and, from that line of reasoning, those words were omitted from the act of March 1, 1937?

Mr. STEIWER. I should doubt that, Mr. President. As a matter of fact, as I recall the Booth decision, which is the expression of the Supreme Court of the United States upon the question as to the status of a retired judge, this matter of seniority was not referred to in their argument. It was referred to in the Maxwell decision, and in the Maxwell case the United States Circuit Court of Appeals attached some little significance to it, but the Supreme Court, in the unanimous decision arriving at substantially the same conclusion with respect to the status of a retired justice of the Circuit Court of Appeals, did not even refer to the matter to which the Senator from New Mexico now refers.

Mr. HATCH. Unless, if I may again interrupt, they did approve the Maxwell decision, and therefore approved that line of reasoning.

Mr. STEIWER. I thought a little while ago the Senator from New Mexico had some little doubt about it.

Mr. HATCH. I was inquiring of the Senator whether they actually had done so.

Mr. STEIWER. They did approve the Maxwell decision.

Mr. President, let me hurry on. I do not want to interfere longer than is necessary with the unfinished business. I am speaking at this time chiefly because I want the RECORD to include some citations and discussions of these cases which may be very helpful to some Senators in reaching their conclusion respecting the eligibility of this appointee.

I desire to refer very briefly to the history of the act.

Section 260 of the Judicial Code was, as I remember, amended in 1919. Since that time numerous judges of the District bench and numerous judges of the circuit court of appeals have been retired under it; and in each case where retirement occurred the President availed himself of the authority to appoint a successor, just as the President is now availing himself of the authority given by the act of March 1, 1937, which permits him to appoint a successor in case of retirement from the Supreme Court. In every instance where a successor has been appointed to the District bench or to the circuit court of appeals, it has resulted in increasing the membership of that court, just as it does now; and, so far as I am advised, the question whether the appointment increases the size of the court never has been raised in 18 years of our experience under that act. The Presidents have uniformly sent up the nominations of successors. The Senate in every case, so far as I know, has confirmed those nominations, and appointments have resulted. The judges have assumed their offices under those conditions and have performed the work of the judiciary in the inferior courts.

I do not want to labor this phase of the matter unduly; but I desire to make the point with respect to it that the act of March 1, 1937, was passed by Congress with full knowledge of 18 years' practice and experience under the earlier act. It seems to me that when the Congress substantially reenacts a statute, as in its enactment of March 1, 1937, which was substantially the act of 1919, it adopts the construction which the administrative officers of the Government have placed upon it. It would seem, therefore, that the President, the Congress, and the Supreme Court are at one upon this entire proposition, and that in no case has there been failure to make the appointment merely because that appointment results in the enlargement of the Court.

What I am now saying relates in a way to what was said in debate by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] some days ago. I could concur with the Senator's view that Justice Van Devanter retains his judicial powers and that there is no vacancy, except for the provision of the recent act approved March 1, 1937, in which there is a plain, explicit direction or authority to the President to name the successor for a Justice who has retired.

So, in summary, Mr. President, it would seem to me that the Justice in this case, having retired, still retains his judicial powers, and is still a member of the Court; that in the constitutional sense there is no vacancy, but that the act of March 1, 1937, by implication increases the size of the Court, and that a vacancy has resulted.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEIWER. Yes; but I desire to say one word before I yield.

My attention has just been called to certain language in the Booth case with reference to the matter of seniority.

I find on page 351 that the Supreme Court in its decision does refer to the loss of seniority, and that I was in error a little while ago in answering the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. HATCH] in saying that the Supreme Court, although it had cited the Maxwell case, had not specially or explicitly referred to the loss of seniority. I hope this statement corrects my error.

I now yield to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. MINTON. Mr. President, suppose Chief Justice Hughes had retired, and the President had nominated Mr. Justice Stone as Chief Justice, and had then nominated Senator Black as Associate Justice. How many Chief Justices would we then have?

Mr. STEIWER. I cannot answer that question; and unless the Senator from Indiana has more imagination than possibly I should give him credit for, I am not sure he could answer it. I have given consideration to it. It seems to me there is an incongruity in the act of March 1, 1937.

Let me change the Senator's question a little. Suppose the Chief Justice had retired, and someone else entirely had been named by the President as his successor; and then suppose the Chief Justice should seek to emerge from retirement, under the theory, which a great many people hold, that he is still a member of the Court. A very pretty question might be presented as to who was Chief Justice and as to who would exercise the authority that is exercised by the Chief Justice. I shall not attempt to answer that question. Under any construction of this law which has come to my attention, unfortunately, many incongruities creep into being. I shall not attempt to resolve them in this debate.

Mr. MINTON. May I ask the Senator one more question about a matter that seems incongruous to me? If the President should appoint Senator BLACK in the instance to which I have referred, would he not necessarily have to take the vacancy created by the moving up of Mr. Justice Stone?

Mr. STEIWER. I should think so; but I may say in that connection that in case Mr. Justice Stone would be nominated, the Senate would act upon his confirmation, and subsequently the Senator from Alabama would be nominated, and the Senate would act upon his confirmation; and thus in both cases the appointment, if made, would be made by the constitutional means of nomination and confirmation by the Senate.

I will say to the Senator from Indiana that, in my humble judgment, it is an entirely different question from the question now presented, when it is suggested by some that Senator BLACK is to be nominated and confirmed for one position, and that the retiring Justice, by some legerdemain, is slipped out of one position into another position without nomination, without confirmation, and without constitutional appointment. To me the two propositions are utterly dissimilar.

Mr. GREEN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield to the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. GREEN. Under the construction which the Senator from Oregon places upon this law, is it not true that if there is no vacancy when one Justice retires, there would be no vacancy when seven Justices retire? Therefore, there would be seven vacancies to be filled if all the Justices of the Supreme Court now eligible to retire do so.

Mr. STEIWER. I think, if the Senator will permit me, there are only five left.

Mr. GREEN. Whatever the number is.

Mr. STEIWER. Let us say five, to be accurate.

Mr. GREEN. Five, or whatever the number may be. There would be five Justices retiring, but not five vacancies. Nevertheless, the President would have power to appoint five new Justices.

Under the construction of the law which I assume the Senator from Oregon follows—it was followed by the Senator from Maine [Mr. WHITE]—if there is no vacancy now, the vacancy will occur when the retiring Justice dies. If Mr. Justice Van Devanter should die, there would be a vacancy. The President could make an appointment to fill his place at that time. Therefore, the President would have the power to appoint five Justices upon the retirement of the five now eligible for retirement, and five more Justices as these old gentlemen die.

In other words, under the construction which the Senator places upon the act, the President is given power to appoint 10—or whatever the number may be—12 or 14 new Justices. Is not that a rather extraordinary position for the Senator to take now in justifying an act for which I believe he voted, authorizing the appointment by the President of 14 new Justices, when he made such a hullabaloo against giving the President the power to appoint 2 additional Justices?

Mr. STEIWER. Is that the Senator's question?

Mr. GREEN. That is the Senator's question.

Mr. STEIWER. I should say there is nothing extraordinary in the position of the Senator from Oregon. I am merely trying to construe the act. There is something extraordinary, and that is in the act itself. I confess that I did not realize its implications when the act was passed through this body, and I do not think any Senator realized them. I shall not quote from anything that was said in the Judiciary Committee this morning; but in that discussion a great variety of viewpoints were offered by different members of the committee. Viewpoints were so numerous that I entertained a doubt whether there was a member of that committee who understood this act at the time it was considered in this body.

Mr. GREEN. But that would be the conclusion the Senator from Oregon reaches, that the President was under this act given authority to appoint 10 new Justices.

Mr. STEIWER. That is a result which might happen. However, it is not my conclusion.

Mr. GREEN. Was that what was in mind when the opposition Senators almost unanimously stated that they would be in favor of confirming the nomination of the late Senator Robinson?

Mr. STEIWER. Mr. President, I think the expressions as to the confirmation of Senator Robinson were based largely upon the affection which Senators held for that great colleague. Certainly, without investigation of the legal question involved, I would have voted for the confirmation of Senator Robinson, but with my present understanding of the meaning and effect of this act, I could not, under my oath, vote for the confirmation of any Senator nominated at this time.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield.

Mr. HATCH. I merely wish to get the Senator's position entirely clear in my own mind. If I understand his position, it is that the Retirement Act provides for the appointment of additional Justices to the Supreme Court.

Mr. STEIWER. That is correct.

Mr. HATCH. And when another Justice is appointed and confirmed by this body the Court will consist of 9 Associate Justices and 1 Chief Justice, 10 altogether?

Mr. STEIWER. It would consist of the Chief Justice and eight active Associate Justices and the inactive Associate Justice.

Mr. HATCH. One Chief Justice and one inactive retired Justice——

Mr. STEIWER. He may be called a retired Justice, I suppose, very properly.

Mr. HATCH. The Senator does not think that perhaps that was the office which was created, the status of retired Justice of the Supreme Court?

Mr. STEIWER. I do not think so. I know that question will have to be met and solved, but I shall not deal with it today; I have no doubt but that will be thoroughly debated when the matter is before the Senate formally for action. To my mind that is one of two real questions involved here. I think all the rest may safely be answered along the lines I am suggesting. My opinion is that the present nomination is not made to the old position, but is made to the new. I did not intend, however, to debate that question today.

I desire to yield the floor, but before doing so, I wish to submit the final conclusion to which I arrive, namely, that the act of March 1, 1937, makes a potential increase in the size of the court; that an appointment is now authorized by reason of the retirement of Justice Van Devanter; that the appointment is made to the new position and not to the old, and that under section 6, article I of the Constitution, Senator BLACK is not eligible to this appointment. He cannot be appointed to the new office because it was created during the term for which he was elected. He cannot be appointed to the old office because its emoluments have been increased.

I would not make this argument except for my belief that a great constitutional question is involved. The provision of the Constitution against the eligibility of Members of Congress was one created by the framers of the Constitution, not for the protection of the court, nor for the protection of the Congress, but was for the protection of the people. It is an integral and highly important part of the Constitution of our country. I am more than loath to become a party to any violation of its express prohibitions.

Mr. HATCH and Mr. CONNALLY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Oregon yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield first to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. HATCH. My inquiry relates to the question of whether we created additional judgeships or whether we created the office of retired Justice of the Supreme Court; and I have this in mind, and I say it in all seriousness: That the Congress of the United States and the whole country for 6 months past have been giving attention to what has been called a historic debate, and that debate revolved about the question whether or not the appointment of additional Justices of the Supreme Court should be authorized. The Senator from Oregon, the Senator from Texas, the Senator from Nevada, all of us, joined in a majority report refusing to authorize the appointment of six additional Justices of the Supreme Court.

When the plan was changed on the floor of the Senate, almost the entire membership of this body—all with the exception of 20—voted to send a bill back to the committee authorizing the appointment of one additional Justice of the Supreme Court each year. The facts were all before us, the events were occurring during the time the act of March 1, 1937, was under consideration, the debate was proceeding, and men were saying on the floor of the Senate and throughout the country, "Not one additional position on the Supreme Court shall be created, and the size of the Supreme Court shall not be enlarged." Men on this floor made that statement vehemently and emphatically. Have we not the right to consider that debate and those conclusions in deciding whether or not we did increase the size of the Supreme Court?

Mr. STEIWER. Let me answer the Senator's question with a question, and I know the Senator will give me a frank answer. In the discussion of the act of March 1, 1937, which we call the Sumners-McCarran Act, did the Senator ever hear any reference made to the case of United States versus Booth? I never did.

Mr. HATCH. Yes, it was discussed in the committee.

Mr. STEIWER. I never heard it discussed.

Mr. HATCH. I do not know whether the case was discussed in the committee or not, but it was handed about on the floor of the Senate. Many Senators read it, and read the Maxwell case, before the Sumners-McCarran bill was passed.

Mr. STEIWER. I asked the Senator the question because I did not hear the Booth case discussed in the committee, and I was present during the greater part of the time the bill was under discussion.

Mr. HATCH. I do not believe it was discussed in the committee.

Mr. STEIWER. I did not hear it discussed on the floor, and I was under the impression that the act had been passed by the Senate without a full realization of the significance of those holdings by the Court.

Mr. HATCH. Many Senators were fully aware of the significance of the holdings.

Mr. STEIWER. If they were, I do not see why they were urging any other bill providing for the enlargement of the Court.

Mr. HATCH. They may have thought it did not enlarge the Court.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. STEIWER. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. The Senator has said that the Congress has created a new office. Let me ask the Senator this, if Justice Van Devanter had not retired, would there have been a new office? Did not Congress by this legislation simply give Justice Van Devanter the privilege of changing his status when and if he desired to? If he had not retired, we would not have created any new office. So, can it be said that Congress, and Senator BLACK, by participating in the action of Congress, actually created a new position, because, unless and until Justice Van Devanter decided to retire and assume this new status, there was no vacancy, and therefore no new office. So, after all, the moving cause and the real vital force which created this situation was not the act of Congress, but the voluntary act of Justice Van Devanter in relinquishing his former position as a Justice of the Supreme Court and accepting a new status, call it what you may, but it is stated, and that is the position that has been created, if any, the new status into which Justice Van Devanter willingly put himself.

Mr. STEIWER. My answer to the Senator is that I agree with him that the act of March 1, 1937, did not immediately create a new office, it created one only conditionally, and the condition was the retirement of a Justice of the Supreme Court. Upon the happening of that condition, the President was authorized to send up the name of a successor. The authorization to send up the name of a judge in the very nature of the thing creates an office, for otherwise it would be utterly vain; and even though the nomination submitted is confirmed, the confirmation would not result in a judgeship. There could not be a legal act performed by the appointee; the whole thing, in short, would be a nullity, except upon the assumption that Congress, in authorizing the appointment, actually created the office, for without the office there could be no appointment.

Mr. HATCH. I think the Senator from Oregon has made clear the point about which I was going to ask him. I thought the Senator said that when the name was sent over by the President that created the new office.

Mr. STEIWER. I did not intend to say that.

I ask unanimous consent to have added at the end of my remarks a memorandum on the retirement of Justices of the Supreme Court prepared by the Legislative Counsel of the Senate. I ought to say, in fairness to the Legislative Counsel, that this was not prepared after the nomination of Senator BLACK had been sent to the Senate but had been prepared sometime prior to that upon the question of proposed amendments to the act of March 1, 1937. It had been prepared largely for the purpose of suggesting escape from some of the difficulties which seemed to inhere in that act. I mention this in fairness to the Legislative Counsel because I am sure those gentlemen would not want to take a partisan stand on a question of the sort with which this body is confronted.

There being no objection, the memorandum was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

MEMORANDUM IN RE RETIREMENT OF JUSTICES OF THE SUPREME COURT

Under the Sumners-McCarran Act of March 1, 1937, Justices of the Supreme Court who have had at least 10 years' service as members of the Federal judiciary, and who have attained the age of 70 years, may retire voluntarily from regular active service on the bench at full pay for life. This does not expressly appear on the face of the act itself, but it may be fairly inferred from the fact that the act grants to Justices of the Supreme Court "the same rights and privileges with regard to retiring, instead of resigning," as are granted to other Federal judges by section 260 of the Judicial Code.

After providing full pay for life for any judge of any court of the United States who "resigns his office" after having had at least 10 years' judicial service and having attained the age of 70 years, section 260 of the Judicial Code then provides that, instead of resigning, any judge "other than a Justice of the Supreme Court" who is qualified to resign "may retire, upon the salary of which he is then in receipt, from regular active service on the bench." The general purpose of the act of March 1, 1937, is, therefore, quite obvious when it is read in connection with section 260 of the Judicial Code, but certain complications may arise from the fact that a distinction is made between resignation and retirement, and the further fact that the President is authorized under such act, as well as under section 260 of the Judicial Code, to appoint a "successor" to a retired Justice or judge, as the case may be.

In the case of the Supreme Court, for example, a question may arise as to whether a Justice who voluntarily retires from "regular active service on the bench" is still to be counted as a member of the Court for the purposes of the statutory limitation upon the number of such members.[1] At least two arguments may be advanced in support of the view that a retired justice should not be overlooked in determining the membership of the Court. One is that the act of March 1, 1937, specifically provides that any retired Justice may be called upon by the Chief Justice "to perform such judicial duties, in any judicial circuit, including those of a circuit justice in such circuit, as such retired Justice may be willing to undertake,"[2] and it is difficult to believe that if a retired Justice should attempt to perform such duties his acts would be held invalid or that he would be acting in any other capacity than that of a Justice of the Supreme Court. Otherwise, the statutory provision would have to be construed either as granting authority to perform judicial duties to a person who did not hold the office of judge at all, or as creating a new type of judgeship to which no appointment need be made as provided by the Constitution but which would be filled automatically upon the retirement of a Justice of the Supreme Court.

The second argument for treating a retired Justice of the Supreme Court as still being a member of that Court is based upon the recent decision of Booth v. United States ((1934) 291 U. S. 339), where the status of retired district and circuit judges was considered. In that case, in answer to the question whether a United States judge, upon retirement, relinquishes or retains his office, the Court said:

---

[1] Section 215 of the Judicial Code reads:

"The Supreme Court of the United States shall consist of a Chief Justice of the United States and eight associate Justices, and six of whom shall constitute a quorum."

[2] In passing it might be noted that in the report of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary accompanying H. R. 2518 it was stated that upon retirement a Justice would not thereafter exercise any functions in connection with the Supreme Court itself. (See Senate Report No. 119, 75th Cong., 1st sess.) In view of the decision in Booth v. United States ((1934) 291 U. S. 339), a certain amount of confusion might result if a retired Justice should emerge from his retirement for the purpose of participating in the work or decisions of the Court.

"By retiring pursuant to the statute a judge does not relinquish his office. The language is that he may retire from regular active service. The purpose is, however, that he shall continue, so far as his age and his health permit, to perform judicial service, and it is common knowledge that retired judges have, in fact, discharged a large measure of the duties which would be incumbent on them if still in regular active service. It is scarcely necessary to say that a retired judge's judicial acts would be illegal unless he who performed them held the office of judge. It is a contradiction in terms to assert that one who has retired in accordance with the statute may continue to function as a Federal judge and yet not hold the office of a judge. The act does not, and, indeed, could not, endue him with a new office different from but embracing the duties of the office of judge. He does not surrender his commission but continues to act under it. He loses his seniority in office, but that fact in itself attests that he remains in office * * *.

"The Government argues that the holding of an office involves the performance of duties, and since no duties are obligatory on one who has retired under the act, he cannot be said to hold any office. But Congress may lighten judicial duties, though it is without power to abolish the office or to diminish the compensation appertaining to it" (pp. 350, 351).

In view of the above statement and the evident purpose of the act of March 1, 1937, it is believed that a Justice of the Supreme Court who retires from "regular active service on the bench" still retains his commission and holds office under it, and that therefore he should be counted at all times as a member of that Court.

In the Booth case also the Government contended that the provision of section 260 of the Judicial Code authorizing the President to appoint a "successor" to a retired judge indicated that the act of retiring created a vacancy which must be filled, and that there was no need to make provision for or against the appointment of another judge upon the death or resignation of the one who had retired. In this connection the Court said:

"Some reference is made to the fact that under the act a successor to the retiring judge is to be appointed, and it is claimed the direction is inconsistent with his retention of office. The phraseology may not be well chosen, but it cannot be construed to vacate the office of the retiring judge in the light of the evident purpose that he shall continue to hold office and perform official duties" (p. 351).

There is no reason to suppose that the Court will place a different construction upon the corresponding provision of the act of March 1, 1937, that "the President shall be authorized to appoint a successor to any such Justice of the Supreme Court so retiring from regular active service on the bench." Consequently, if upon the retirement of a Justice under that act he is still in office and there is no vacancy to be filled until his death or resignation from office, it necessarily follows that any appointment of a so-called "successor" to a retired Justice prior to his death or resignation will have to be made to a new office, which did not exist on March 1, 1937. It also follows that the number of Justices on the Supreme Court will be increased when any such appointment is made, for the so-called "successor" will in effect be an "additional" Justice, and if such appointment is valid it will only be because the act of March 1, 1937, will have been construed as amending by implication section 215 of the Judicial Code which fixes the number of Justices at nine. This construction would seem to be a logical one for otherwise the provisions of such act relating to the appointment of a "successor" to a retired Justice would have to be interpreted as having no effect whatever. As a result, it would seem that the membership of the Court may vary from time to time depending upon the number of Justices who take advantage of the retirement provisions.

It should also be borne in mind in this connection that the act of March 1, 1937, is silent upon the question of the filling of vacancies. Upon the assumption that some effect is to be given to the provision authorizing the President to appoint a successor and that a new office is created upon the retirement of any Justice pursuant to such act,[2] a vacancy will occur upon the death or resignation of the person appointed to such office. A vacancy will also occur in the office of a retired Justice upon his death or resignation. In view of the fact that no limitation is imposed by the act upon the filling of a vacancy in the office of any Justice, retired or otherwise, it is difficult to make a distinction between these two types of cases. If one such vacancy may be filled it would seem that the other might also be filled. If, on the other hand, the statute should be construed as preventing the filling of either vacancy, the result would be that upon the death or resignation of both the retired Justice and his so-called "successor" the membership of the Court would be permanently reduced. This would also amount to an implied amendment to section 215 of the Judicial Code, but it is not believed that any such reduction in the membership of the Court was contemplated.

The only other possible construction of the statute would be that one such vacancy might be filled while the other would not be, but there is no indication on the face of the statute as to which one should be selected. It might, of course, be argued that it was the intention not to fill the vacancy caused by the death or resignation of a retired Justice, but any such argument would seem to have no other basis than the assumption that it was not necessary to make any provision in the statute for such a case because a vacancy was created in the office of the retired Justice upon his retirement. As already pointed out, however, if the Booth case, supra, is applicable and controlling, no vacancy exists when a Justice retires. On the other hand, although there is nothing in the statute to indicate specifically that the vacancy in the office of the so-called "successor" is to be filled, it seems reasonable to assume that such office was considered as being permanent and that there was no intention of merely providing for an appointment to a temporary position on the Court.

In passing it might be noted also that, regardless of the interpretation of the act of March 1, 1937, with respect to the status of retired Justices or the number of members of the Court, no change was made by such act in the provision relating to the number of Justices to constitute a quorum. Under any interpretation of such act and regardless of the ultimate size of the Court it would seem that six members of the Court would be a quorum as is now provided by section 215 of the Judicial Code. A certain amount of confusion might be caused as a result of this if such act should be construed as providing for an increase in the membership of the Court or if retired Justices should be subsequently held to be eligible to participate in the work of the Court.

In any event it is believed that some of the potential difficulties which have been discussed may be avoided by amending the act of March 1, 1937, and with this in mind the following suggestion is submitted for consideration:

"A bill to amend the act entitled 'An act to provide for retirement of Justices of the Supreme Court', approved March 1, 1937.

"Be it enacted, etc., That the act entitled 'An act to provide for retirement of Justices of the Supreme Court', approved March 1, 1937, is amended to read as follows:

" 'That section 215 of the Judicial Code, as amended (U. S. C., 1934 ed., title 28, sec. 321), is amended to read as follows:

" ' 'SEC. 215. (a) The Supreme Court of the United States shall consist of (1) a Chief Justice of the United States and eight Associate Justices, on regular active service, and (2) the Justices who have retired from regular active service as hereinafter provided. A quorum of the Supreme Court shall consist of any six Justices on regular active service.

" ' '(b) Any Justice of the Supreme Court who has held a commission or commissions as judge of any court or courts of the United States at least 10 years, continuously or otherwise, and who has attained the age of 70 years, may retire, upon the salary of which he is then in receipt, from regular active service on the bench. Any Justice so retiring may be called upon by the Chief Justice and be by him authorized to perform such judicial duties, in any judicial circuit, including those of a circuit Justice in such circuit, as such retired Justice may be willing to undertake. A vacancy occurring in the office of any such retired Justice shall not be filled."

" 'SEC. 2. Any Justice of the Supreme Court who has retired pursuant to this act prior to the date section 215 of the Judicial Code, as amended by this act, takes effect, shall be deemed to have retired pursuant to such section 215, as amended by this act.' "

REGULATION OF AIR TRANSPORTATION

The Senate resumed consideration of the motion of the Senator from Nevada [Mr. McCARRAN] that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Senate bill 2, having to do with the regulation of air transportation.

Mr. McCARRAN. Mr. President, in connection with the regular order of business, being the motion to consider Senate bill 2, Calendar No. 702, I remind the Senate that last Saturday I discussed the bill at some length. I shall not hold the Senate for any great length of time this afternoon. However, I wish to draw the Senate's attention to the fact that this proposed legislation comes before this body under the sanction of two messages from the President of the United States. First of all, I desire to draw attention of the Senate to what is known as the Black-McKellar Act, or the Air Mail Act of 1934, and especially to section 20 of that act, in which it is provided:

SEC. 20. The President is hereby authorized to appoint a commission composed of five members to be appointed by him, not more than three members to be appointed from any one political party, for the purpose of making an immediate study and survey, and to report to Congress not later than February 1, 1935, its recommendations of a broad policy covering all phases of aviation and the relation of the United States thereto. Members appointed who are not already in the service of the United States shall receive compensation of not exceeding the rate of compensation of a Senator or Representative in Congress.

Mr. President, pursuant to the Black-McKellar bill and pursuant to the particular section I have just read, a

[2] It might be contended that as many new offices were created on Mar. 1, 1937, as there were Justices who were eligible to retirement on that date, but it seems more logical to say that each new office comes into existence only when the appointment to it may be made, namely, upon the date a Justice who is eligible to retire from regular active service on the bench elects to do so.

special commission was appointed by the President of the United States to carry out the investigation and to report to Congress, and pursuant to that investigation a report was filed. I have in my hand a copy of the message of the President of the United States sent to the Senate on January 31, 1935, in which the President said:

As I have suggested on many occasions, it becomes more and more apparent that the Government of the United States should bring about a consolidation of its methods of supervision over all forms of transportation. When the Interstate Commerce Commission was created in 1887 the railroad was practically the principal method of rapid interstate transportation. Since that time this monopoly of transportation enjoyed by the railroad, to a very important degree, has been limited by the development of the automobile and good interstate roads. Recently water transportation by lake, by river, by canal, and by oceans has, largely through the construction of the Panama Canal and our inland waterways, definitely brought ships and shipping into the general interstate field. More recently still, air transportation has become an element. All of these developments have changed the general problem of transportation and the concern of the Government with them.

Following that statement in the message, the President further said:

There are detailed questions, however, that require early action. Our extended mail contracts with air lines expire on or about March 1, and existing legislation dealing with primary and secondary routes should be revised before that time. The Commission suggests that the Interstate Commerce Commission be given temporarily the power to lower or increase air-mail rates as warranted in their judgment after full investigation.

Further on the President said:

I concur in this recommendation of the Federal Aviation Commission provided always that the grant of this duty to the Interstate Commerce Commission be subject to provisions against unreasonable profits by any private carrier.

Later, on June 7, 1935, the President sent another message to Congress in which he said:

I have already recommended to the Congress my views with regard to the relations that should exist between the Federal Government and air carriers. Legislation has been introduced for the purpose of carrying out these recommendations. I am in general accord with the substance of this legislation, although I still maintain, as I indicated in my message on that subject, that a separate commission not be established to effectuate the purposes of such legislation. Air transportation should be brought into a proper relation to other forms of transportation by subjecting it to regulation by the same agency.

Mr. President, I draw these matters to the attention of the Senate because I want the Senate to understand that this bill comes here in the light of two messages from the President of the United States, and in view of that fact, together with the protracted study to which the measure has been submitted, as set out in my statement to the Senate on Saturday last, I am going to submit the matter to the Senate with the hope that we may have a vote to bring the bill before the Senate of the United States for final passage.

NOMINATION OF SENATOR BLACK TO THE SUPREME COURT

Mr. BRIDGES. Mr. President, the President of the United States on Thursday, August 12, submitted to the United States Senate, this body, the name of a nominee for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. At that time a motion was made for action upon the Black nomination without referring the nomination to a committee, and the discussion was led by the able chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. Objections were made by the able Senators from California [Mr. JOHNSON] and Nebraska [Mr. BURKE]. The nomination was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. The chairman of the Judiciary Committee appointed a subcommittee headed by the distinguished Senator from West Virginia [Mr. NEELY]. The subcommittee, after a brief session, voted to report the nomination favorably to the full committee. The full committee today, I am informed, again took favorable action, and has reported the nomination to the Senate for action.

On this occasion I desire to raise my voice and state my views relative to the action of the Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate in taking action upon this nomination without an extended investigation and without full public hearings.

If Senators will examine the records in connection with those who have been nominated to the Supreme Court of the United States by various Presidents, I think it will be found that with but few exceptions the nominations have all been subject to extensive investigation, and that, with few exceptions, public hearings were had in connection with the nominations.

I have been in this body but a short time, and I realize what Senatorial courtesy means, and I do not care to violate Senatorial courtesy, so-called; but I call the attention of this body to the fact that Senator BLACK's name is before this body, not as a United States Senator, but as a nominee to the highest judicial tribunal in this country; and for that reason his public record, his public acts, and his general fitness for a judicial position are of public interest, and the public has a right to be heard. In my judgment we are denying that public right when the Judiciary Committee of the United States Senate fails to hold open and extended hearings.

Mr. CONNALLY. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BRIDGES. I yield.

Mr. CONNALLY. I do not disagree with what the Senator has said up to this point. The Senator says the public has a right to a voice in this matter. Who is the public, except the constituents of every Senator on this floor? If we do not represent the public, who does? Does the Senator mean that we shall be obliged to have long and protracted hearings, and let everyone who wants to come before the committee make a stump speech on the subject; or should the committee, when it has satisfied itself with respect to the nomination, report to the Senate?

